alp 'Em, Seminoles

Just how good are these Seminoles? A timely and ghtful question, that one. And one that a great many dstand quarterbacks — including this one — is try- o figure out

However, we may not have to rack our upper strata much long- guse a band of Christians from Abilene, Tex., may well pro- he answer here tomorrow night—one way or the other.

They call the Texas team the "Singing Christians and are pposed to actually sing on their trips. A Christian College, it is not a church school in the true sense, although it is op- ated by individual members of the Church of Christ. Sev- al of the Abilene gridders are ministerial students.

However, we don't suspect that Coach Tom Nugent's Indians ake too Christian an outlook toward Abilene when the Nuge. he Tribe loose tomorrow night. In fact, it may be most en if you can draw any parallels from the Louisville massacre. 'em Seminoles.

rnstiles Aren't Turning

Seminole athletic officials are disturbed over the poor at- nce figures that have been registered on the Campbell Stad- urnstiles for the past two or three seasons. While last sea- brought more fans into the 17,500-seat arena than ever before, hasn't been enough.

The effect, of course, has been felt in trying to schedule mes Scheduling difficulties have plagued FSU officials for veral seasons now and it doesn't figure to get any better un- s the turnstiles turn faster on Saturdays here.

The scheduling difficulty boils down to this: "Name" teams simply asking too big a guarantee to strut their stuff on the pbell turf and the Seminoles are just unable to meet the de- ds, which in most cases have been downright outrageous. So. stands now, only three definite home games have been lined or '54 — Mississippi Southern, Davidson and Furman, and the ok for others is not good at all, at least with the "names."

However, there are better days ahead. Athletic Director, Haward Danford and Charles Davis, athletic committee ember were supposed to huddle with Auburn athletic affi- als at Auburn yesterday concerning plans for a home game th the Tigers here in 1955.

FSU has played a heap 'o home football for the past three and with the completion of the current campaign they will performed here 12 times in the past two seasons — a mark many teams fail to attain in three or four years.

Football still costs money and it still takes those dirty 'ole dol- to run a team, especially a big-time outfit which the Seminoles definitely pointing toward, so maybe a good road season would some wampum back in the pot.

ftovers From Louisville

was probably only incidental, of course, but Louisville Ath- Director Roy Mundorff's resignation Tuesday, seemed ill- d Or was it? Mundorf who came to Louisville after thirty at Georgia Tech had expressed the desire to resign before start of the current season, according to Card officials. One undorf's objectives at the Kentucky school was to build a foot- power, a job which he never quite accomplished, although the ol's grid stock did certainly rise.

Bobby Fiveash's three touchdown jaunts the other night was ex- one more than any Seminole ball-carrier could muster along ground all last season. In fact, it equaled Stan Dobosz' win- output last year, and if the Bainbridge, Ga., ace can continue pace he's liable to rewrite several new marks . . . Here's an od-

Ten of the backs are averaging better than five yards per n the rush department. Rookie halfback Junior Metts of San- has carried only four times but has gone for 42 yards for a 10.3 average Dobosz and Carl Grenn, sport averages of 6.6 6.1 respectively . . . Another record in danger is the individual receiving mark established by Bob Whitmer in 1951. Whit's age totaled 330 that year but Jimmy Lee Taylor has already up 109 with six catches.

Wonder how the Miami insurance executive feels who offered ine Tom Nugent's shoes every day for a year if the Seminoles four games? Nugent commented at the time of the offer that dn't want anyone shining his shoes but that he would like to me eligible for the offer. Could be that a Miami insurance utive will spend a busy year.

pponents Fared Better

Upcoming FSU opponents fared a trifle better this past week- than the previous one. Save for the Mississippi Southern- mpa affair in which the Southerners rode herd on the Spartans was a break-even Saturday.

Here's how it went:
Memphis State 13, Louisiana Tech 7.
Richmond State 13, VMI 7.
Abilene Christian 13, Midwestern 7 (get's monotonous, don't it)?
Stetson 16, Western Kentucky 7.
George Washington 20, N. C. State 7.
Furman 27, Citadel 0.

The lineup for this week:
VMI at Citadel.
Miss. Southern at S. W. Louisiana.
Stetson at Florida.
Furman at South Carolina.
N C State at Davidson.
Tampa at Miami Marines.

Louisiana Tech is idle this week. The Bulldogs dropped their one last Saturday—to Memphis State—13-8, although they ran gh-shod over the Tennesseeans statistics-wise.

Pigskin Pickin's

By BOB TAYLOR

This business of prognosticating ain't what it's cracked to be. Now who in the world would have predicted FSU nine touchdowns over Louisville?

ot even Nugent is that op- stic. We did, however, score 73 per cent of our picks, to t our overall average to a 661.

onight we see: Miami over nson in a squeaker . . . UCLA Wisconsin, in another toss- . SMU over Missouri . . . Ocala over Leon, but blood be spilled.

After the Louisville slaughter, can't go against FSU, so the minoles will whip Abilene istian, but it will be much her than last week . . . A & ourneys to Fort Valley, where will cop their third straight hout trouble.

Elsewhere in the South, it's: bama over Tulsa, the Tide ls at last . . . Mississippi State er underrated Auburn . . . Ten- see over Chattanooga, not en close . . . VMI over the adel . . . Duke over Purdue.

Maryland over Georgia, but e'll give 'em trouble . . . Mis- ppi Southern over SW Louisi- in a mismatch . . . North olina over Wake Forest . . . ssissippi over Vanderbilt . . . ginia over George Washing-

Florida over outclassed, but me Stetson . . . LSU over k-horse Kentucky . . . Geor- Tech over Tulane, but the gineers' day of reckoning is ming soon . . . South Caro- a on top of Furman . . and C State over Davidson.

The East has some real cork- this week. Take the Pitt- braska game for example. Anybody could win this one, but we give it to the Panthers on the basis of their fine showing against Oklahoma last week.

Also: Army over Dartmouth, don't run it up too high Earl . . . California over Penn, they came too far to lose . . . Yale over Columbia, the Eli could go undefeated . . . Navy over Cornell, but man, it will be close . . . Holy Cross over Bucknell.

Princeton over Rutgers . . Villanova over Boston C., Filipski on the loose . . . Penn St. over Boston U. . . . Colgate over Harvard . . . West Va. over Wash. and Lee . . . and Syracuse over Fordham.

Notre Dame is idle this week, but otherwise in the mid-West, Ohio St. over Illinois, we told you to watch those Buckeyes . . . Kansas St. over Iowa St. . . . Michigan over Iowa, Oosterbaan's boys on the uprise again.

Northwestern over Minnesota . . . Cincinnati over Toledo, 'ja see what the Bearcats did to William and Mary? . . . Michigan St. over TCU . . . and the upset of the week, Marquette over Indiana.

Down in the Southwest, that Texas-Oklahoma game should be the battle of the week. Records go by the boards in this one, and we give a shaky edge to the Sooners, could be wrong though

Besides this, Baylor should whip Arkansas . . . Oklahoma A & M over Wichita . . . Rice over Hardin-Simmons . . . and

First Meeting Between Two

High-Scoring Battle Seen For Saturday

Texas football—a la Florida—is on the menu here tomorrow night as Florida State and Abilene Christian lock horns in an intersectional affair that stacks up as wide-open, high-scoring battle.

Fresh from their 59-0 rout of Louisville here last week Coach Tom Nugent's Seminoles will be after victory No. two, having dropped the season opener to Miami.

Tomorrow night's tilt will be the first gridiron meeting between FSU and the Wildcats, defending champions of the Texas Conference.

If game experience is a deciding factor in a team's favor then the Wildcats have it. Abilene has four games under its belt.

BROKE EVEN

The Wildcats opened up with a win over Southwest Texas lost by a single point to strong East Texas 28-27, dropped a 19-7 decision to Arkansas State and last week topped Midwestern 13-7.

The man the Indians will have to watch is quarterback Leondus Fry, a fine all-around back who can pass and run with the best.

Up front, ABC has a couple of grid giants in guard Sonny Cleere and tackle E. J. Moors. And in Paul Goad, an ace defensive back, the Christians have one of the finest linebackers in the South.

Despite last Saturday's decisive win, there's been no let-up on the practice field for Nugent's squad. A couple of rough two-hour scrimmage sessions topped off by long pass defense drills occupied most of the gridders time.

Practice sessions this week also produced some punting surprises, a department in which the Seminoles are woefully weak.

Nugent had handyman Bobby Fiveash and freshman Junior Metts working out at the deep slot and both boys were booming kicks around the 50-yard mark.

FSU CHANGES

In addition, the week also saw another major personnel change—Eddie Johnson moving from footback to right end where he is slated to start tomorrow.

Harry Massey who showed to advantage against Louisville will occupy the No. one quarterback spot. Lee Corso, frosh dandy from Miami still has not thrown off effects of a bruised side and is a "doubtful performer" according to Nugent.

Otherwise the Tribe is in good physical shape save for Jimmy Messinese who will have to sit this one out same as last week. Messinese is still favoring and injured shoulder.

Another bright note is the fact that big Jim Olsen, 220-pound tackle, out since the start of the season with a shoulder ailment, will be ready.

Nugent, the eternal optimist, predicted a high scoring game. "Tomorrow's game should be a high-scoring affair." he said.

"You know, those Texas teams have scoring ways," he continued. I hope we can match them."

Elementary junior high, and high school students will be admitted to Florida State University home football games for 50c, the FSU athletic committee has decided.

'We desire to make FSU football games available to all," Dr. Howard Danford, director of athletics announced.

LEADS FSU BACKS

Bob Fiveash Rates As Most Improved

Bohby Fiveash, the bounding bomber from Bainbridge, Ga., rates as the most improved player on the FSU squad.

Fiveash reeled off three touchdowns in just 11 minutes of action to touch the 59-0 massacre of Louisville last Saturday. The week before, the Florida Sportswriters Association named him Florida's "Back of the Week" for his 58-minute all-purpose performance against the University of Miami.

Bobby's top-caliber play hasn't come as a complete surprise to the Seminoles, though. Way back in August Head Coach Tom Nugent predicted the 5-11, 180-pound left halfback would have a tremendous season, barring injury.

"He's the most improved player on the squad," Nugent says of Fiveash. And the shy, unassuming junior was no flash-in-the-pan last year, when he was the Indians' leading passer and third leading ground gainer.

In 19 offensive plays this season, Fiveash has rolled up 123 yards, or 6½ yards every time he's touched the ball. He's rushed for 80 yards in 15 carries, a ground average of 6.4 yards per try.

The most valuable Fiveash assets are his constant alertness and his ability to get off to a fast start. Bobby is in the secondary almost before you realise the play is under way.

Like UCLA's modest All-America candidate, Paul Cameron, 20-year-old Fiveash can't understand why there is so much commotion over him. He believes he's lucky to be playing on the first eleven.

Seminole followers feel fortunate to have him there, too.

Improved Fadigan Should Aid Florida State's Gym Champs

By BOB GUTTING

Strange things are happening! Not only is my roommate studying Voodoo, but the fifth member of the gym team I interviewed is also a Yankee and hails from the land of board walks and voluptuous bathing beauties. I refer to none other than Jim Fadigan of Atlantic City, N. J.

"Big Jim," as he is affectionately called by his teammates, graduated from Holy Spirit High of Atlantic City in 1950.

During his High School days Jim lettered on the diving squad, swimming team and track team in addition to lettering for three years on the football team. In 1950 Jim also went out and set the pole vault record for Atlantic City.

After graduation Jim was awarded a scholastics scholarship from St. Francis College of Loretto, Pa. Attending St. Francis as a freshman, Jim lettered on the football team and was then awarded a football scholarship.

However, a desire to participate in gymnastics, especially trampoline, led Jim to forego the football scholarship in favor of a gymnastics scholarship from FSU.

Instrumental in persuading Jim were Dr. Hartley Price, FSU gym coach and Dick Gutting, national trampoline champ.

Jim entered FSU in February, 1951, and immediately after arriving won the Intra-mural diving meet. Gymnastics was still foremost in Jim's mind, however, and he set about to develop good form in tumbling and trampoline.

In 1953, during his first competition for the Garnet and Gold, Jim placed fourth on the trampoline in the Florida AAU meet held at FSU.

Following this meet Jim next saw action during the Southern Intercollegiate meet at Hattiesburg, Miss., placing second on the tramp.

Much sweat and many workouts later found Jim in Syracuse, N. Y., at the national intercollegiate meet. The many months of training had paid off and Jim placed among the top ten trampoline men of the nation!

That was the last meet of the spring season before vacation rolled around, but Jim is back this year in better shape than ever.

Not only is he working hard to improve his trampoline form but he is also general chairman for the "Gymkana" production in addition to handling the dance program for the spectacular show.

In summary you might say Jim is a very versatile fellow! Glad to have you back Jim.

'Mural Footballers To Play Tuesday

By ART KENNERLY

While Florida State University's intercollegiate footballers take on outside opposition on the varsity gridiron, some of the other Seminoles spend their time battling and bludgeoning each other on the campus.

Next Tuesday the intramural athletes begin their annual war. Six games are on tap for the fraternity leaguers. Playing on the new grass fields across the road from Campbell Stadium, the events will have something different: one night game every Tuesday and Thursday.

TUESDAY'S SCHEDULE

Tuesday's schedule features Delta Tau Delta against Sigma Phi Epsilon, Sigma Nu colliding for Lambda Chi Alpha, Alpha Tau Omega butting with Pi Kappa Alpha, Kappa Alpha reveling against Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Chi playing a night rumpus with Pi Kappa Phi, and Phi Delta Theta fighting against Theta Chi.

Two days later, Oct. 15, the Greeks continue the contests. The games then: Sigma Alpha Epsilon will go for Lambda Chi Alpha at night. Sigma Chi will battle Delta Tau Delta. Sigma Nu will slug with Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta will squabble with Pi Kappa Alpha. Kappa Sigma and Pi Kappa Phi will duel, and Lambda Chi Apha will scratch and claw with Kappa Alpha.

Last year the Phi Delts scampered off down the championship trail toward the football crown. They got the football cup. And eventually they hit the jackpot by taking enough points to become the overall champs of the Greek games.

The dormitory league is slow on the take off this year. So far the dorms have not been organised to the point where they can begin to play Intramural Director Ed Williamson says the league should begin to function by about Oct. 19 The dormitories will have games on Mondays and Wednesday of each week.

TENNIS SINGLES

Within about a week after football begins, the fraternities will start tennis singles duels. Very soon after the dorms start football, they will be faced with bowling battles.

The overall winner of the dormitory athletic games last year was the Air Force Meterology crew.

And that's it—tennis, football for the Greeks, and bowling, football for the dormitories. Nothing else is scheduled until after Christmas.

Statistics Show Tribe Ahead

Bobby Fiveash, tops the Seminole leather-luggers through the first two games with a total of 79 yards in 15 carries.

That adds up to a neat 5.3 average per try along the ground for Bobby But that's not all. He is also the leader in total offense and scoring.

Fiveash has completed only one pass in four attempts—a 44-yarder to Jimmy Lee Taylor in the Louisville rout—but it ran his total offense to 123 yards to put him in front.

His three scoring dashes against the Cards gave him 18 points and the leadership in the scoring category.

Taylor, the durable end from Tampa, sets the pace in pass receiving and is all alone in that department having hauled in six aerials for 109 yards.

The husky Tampan is also the punting leader despite having booted only once—a 52-yard beauty in Friday's encounter with Louisville.

Musical Artists Cramer, Forman Study At L'Ecole Monteux

Two men of the F.S.U. School of Music faculty went to one of the few places in the world where genuine and sincere regard for the Musical Art is found, L'Ecole Monteux in Miane.

William Cramer, for the third time, and Robert Forman for the first time, attended Mr. Pierre Monteux' master musicians school in August. They regard their experience as a "once in a lifetime opportunity."

Fifty-five conductors from every part of the world attended the classes $3\frac{1}{4}$ hours, six days a week for four weeks.

Applicants make known their qualifications to the director of the school, Dr. Joseph Barnes, of the Bryn Mawr College. Out of 500 applications, 50 persons are selected to attend the session. This selection is made not only on their conducting ability, but their ability to perform well on an orchestral instrument.

In addition to the daily rehearsals, the classes in baton technique, the seminars dealing with all aspects of musical knowledge, and the chorus rehearsals, there is a weekly concert each Sunday afternoon. This concert has nothing to do with the weekly routine but is prepared in a $1\frac{1}{2}$ hour rehearsal prior to the concert.

The audience comes from as far away as 200 miles and many times only standing room is available. These concerts are under the direction of Madame Monteux and are given for the purpose of providing funds for the numerous charities of community and state.

There is no time for parties or bull sessions, so most of the visiting is done at dinner time when all the men gather at the same restaurant. Despite the year-long preparation which goes into preparing ones self for conducting an orchestra, there is so much to observe, record, discuss, and assimilate, that every moment is filled with some aspect of making music.

Noted Educator To Visit Campus

Dean R. L. Eyman of the School of Education and Dr. M. L. Stone, associate dean, have announced that on Monday a group of well known educators will visit FSU for three days to conduct a study and evaluation in the School of Education. For the past year committees in the school have studied, discovering strength and weakness in the professional phases of the teacher training program. Now an outside group is coming to make recommendations for any improvements deemed advisable.

The committee will hold meetings in the Longmire Clubroom Monday, beginning at 8 a.m. and continuing through until 6 p.m., to discuss each phase of the study.

COMPOSING the delegation will be Dr E. B. Robert, dean of the College of Education at Louisiana State, serving as chairman; Dr. John Dotson, College of Education at the University of Georgia; Dr. C. P. Smith, president of the State Teachers College, Troy, Alabama. Dr. Florence Stratemeyer, professor of Education, Columbia University; Dr. T. M Stinnett, National Commission on Teachers Education and Professional Standards of the National Education Association; Miss Marguerite Morse, representing the Florida Education Association's Committee on Teachers Education and Professional Standards; Dr Waldo Lessenger, dean of the College of Education at Wayne University; and Dr. J. T. Kelley, associate director of Instruction in the Florida State Department of Education.

Dr. Ernest W Cason of the School of Education at FSU served as general chairman of the study groups this past year, assisted by eight sub-committees. Phases studied were: Objectives of the School of Education, Dr. Richard Gross, chairman; Student Personel Services, Dr. Donald Loucks, chairman; Preparation of the Faculty, Miss Ann Lankford, chairman; Curriculum, Dr. Grace Fox, chairman; Professional Laboratory Experiences, Miss Fay Kirkland, chairman, Advanced Professional Programs, Dr. Louise Smith, chairman; Library, Dr Dwight Burton, chairman; and Teaching Loads for Faculty, Dr. Virgil Strickland, chairman.

THE VISITORS will make recommendations to the faculty of the School of Education on Wednesday afternoon.

ROTC Cadets Benefit From Training Camp

Florida State University AFROTC cadets have returned from McDill Air Force Base in Tampa, where they spent part of the summer, with a much broader knowledge of B-47 Stratojets.

As part of the AFROTC program at FSU, students are required to spend four weeks at a summer training camp on one of the Air Force's bases before receiving their commissions.

UP AT DAWN, rush through calisthenics, meals, classes, drill, athletics, lectures, tours, inspections—FSU men in the MacDill program got a first hand look at some of the latest jet type aircraft and the methods used to put and keep them in the air.

They were drummed through technicalities and theories, practicalities and facts. In four weeks they learned what they didn't know—and had to learn.

THE MISSION of the AFROTC all over the nation is to train men who lead: officers of the United States Air Force.

Florida State University men who attended the MacDill encampment were: Floyd S. Risley, Stephen M. Bailey, James H Bowen, Richard Gutting, James A. Ball III, Klyne D. Nowlin, Robert T. Althauser, D. L. Williams, Robert E Strane, Gerald R. McClelland, Kenneth A MacPike, Hugh G. Campbell, Gordon W. Tyrrell, James L. McKeown, Jerry L. Parker, James R. Beasley, John J. Campbell Addresses Annual Conference

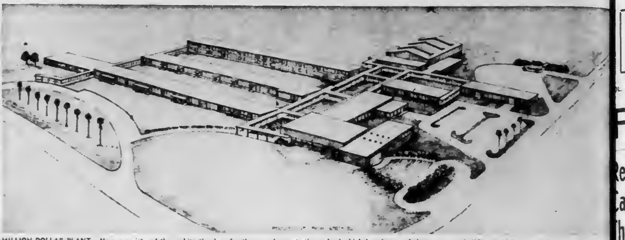
Dr Doak S Campbell, president of Florida State University, addressed the annual Agricultural Extension Conference recently at the University of Florida on "Qualities of a Good Teacher."

The three day conference brought together state home demonstration agents, county agents, members of the Florida Agricultural Council and others associated in the work. Dr Hazel Stevens, head of the FSU department of clothing and textiles, took part in a workshop on home furnishings. She discussed "Better Service from Decorative Fabrics."



MILLION DOLLAR PLANT—Here are pictured the architect's plans for the new demonstration school which is only one of the many new buildings which seem to be growing up over all over campus. The school building has already been started just south of the new men's dormitory, West Hall. The plans have been set up to accommodate 750 pupils and, fully equipped, it will be valued at close to one million dollars. According to the Fifty Year Building Plan, the old school building will be remodeled for use as classrooms.

Southern Biologists Progress In Teaching and Reseach

Biologists of the South are making remarkable progress in teaching and research and should intensify their efforts because the region offers limitless opportunities.

That is the opinion of Dr. Samuel Lewis Meyer, who has just returned to his post as head of the Florida State University botany department after a year's leave of absence.

"YOUNG SCIENTISTS trained in the South can now take part in the development of the area they represent," Dr Meyer said, explaining how the scientific age has vitalized the South and given it an unfilled demand for young people trained in all branches of science.

Dr Meyer spent his year's leave from FSU in Washington on a "double header" job as Executive Secretary of the Division of Biology and Agriculture of the National Research Council.

HE WILL SERVE on committees of both the institute and division this coming year while resuming his administrative, lecture and laboratory work at FSU.

Three thousand nationally prominent biologists will come to Florida next year to attend an annual meeting for biological societies arranged by AIBS according to Dr. Meyer. He said the meeting is scheduled for September 1954 at the University of Florida and will be the first of its kind to be held in the South.

WHILE ON leave Dr. Meyer was impressed because scientists generally are alert to developments at FSU. They know about its fast transformation from a top women's college into a big co-educational university, its maintaining high traditional standards and at the sametime adopting new high standards. The men of science expect FSU to take the initiative in many fields because it is an old-new state institution.

Back at FSU Dr Meyer has new ideas he plans to incorporate in his teaching. He will use excerpts from the AIBS quarterly bulletin which he has been editing the past year, in lecturing to general biology courses. The bulletin is sent out to 12,000 biologists, and features articles and guest editorials by outstanding biologists—a recent one on the support of biological research by such government agencies as Atomic Energy Commission and National Institutes of Health is a sample.

DR. MEYER said he is enthusiastic about the annual Science Camp launched last summer at FSU for junior and senior high school students. It attracted 66 students for a 10-day participation program in zoology, botany, physiology, bacteriology, mathematics meteorology, geology, physics, chemistry, psychology and marine sciences. A majority of the campers became interested in scientific careers as a result of the experience. Dr. Meyer will be in on the planning and directing of next summer's similar but expanded Science Camp at FSU.

Commenting on the current trend for science education in the South, Dr. Meyer said college and university staffs have been strengthened and expanded. "Programs of study at both graduate and undergraduate levels have been reevaluated or constructed anew. New faculty names appear among the institutions of the region which offer work leading to advanced degrees. There is a fresh interest in research and a marked increase in the funds used to support it."

DR. MEYER said he was delighted to be back in academic life at FSU and back in the community of Tallahassee although he found his year in Washington interesting and inspiring.

Johnson Speaks On Art Education At Orlando Meet

Florida State University's arts education department will be represented by a group of faculty and students today through tomorrow at the Florida Art Teachers' Conference in Orlando.

Ivan Johnson, head of the FSU department, will speak at the opening session on "Potentialities of Arts Education in School and Community Life."

Ralph Hurst, instructor, will demonstrate sculpture techniques at the conference. William Watson, associate professor, will demonstrate ceramics, and Fred Metzke, instructor, will demonstrate jewelry.

Paul Edmondson, art instructor in the FSU Demonstration School, will be in charge of all exhibits at the conference.

Among FSU students planning to make the trip to Orlando for the conference are Pat Renick, Shan Shannon, Nelda Fielding, Frances Rumbley, Pat Gabriel, Sue Graff, and Nancy Butler.

About 300 adults from all parts of the state, representing universities, colleges, high schools and various art clubs are expected to attend the conference.

FSU Professor Elected To Head Recreation Group

Dr. William Tait, director of Florida State University recreation curriculum, was elected president of the College Recreation Association at the National Recreation Congress held in Philadelphia recently.

Membership in the association includes recreation educators from colleges and universities in the United States.

Dr. Tait has served as chairman of the research committee of the ARS during the past year. At the Philadelphia meeting he presented the committee's report on research now under way in the field of recreation.

Dr. Tait joined the FSU faculty in 1951 as associate professor of physical education and director of the recreation curriculum. Before coming to Tallahassee, he was superintendent of recreation in Uelham, N. Y., and assistant professor of education at the University of Denver.

He is a graduate of the University of Denver and received his master's degree at the University of Colorado and his doctor of education at New York University.

Twenty Receive ROTC Promotions

Twenty Army ROTC cadets at Florida State University have been promoted, Capt. Rex. T. Henry, assistant professor in military science and training at FSU, has announced.

FSU has four-year training programs in Army and Air Force ROTC with a total enrollment of more than 500.

The cadets and their new grades are:

CADET FIRST LIEUTENANT—Charles Biersborn, and Douglas Scott.

CADET SECOND LIEUTENANT—Milton S Carothers Robart H. Bennett, Earl R Chandler, Charles B. Clark, George N. Cornelius, Frank R. Eddy, Charles T. Mock, Aubrey J. Odom and John A. Webster.

FSU Alumni Office Plays Big Role

Just as industry is interested in the product it produces, so is Florida State University interested in its graduates. The University's product—the Alumni—may be found in every county in the state, every state in the nation, and every continent in the world.

To keep up with and determine the success of its graduates, the University maintains an office which acts as a registrar of some 15,000 alumni — who can be found in professions, industry, and the all important job of homemaking. And this number increases by more than a thousand yearly.

ALTHOUGH ITS main function is with the completed product, the Alumni Office is concerned with the total operation of the University. Actually, the work of this office begins with trying to get the best students possible to develop them into the leaders of the communities of the nation.

Consequently, the Alumni Office works to interest students of the highest morals, character, and scholastic standing as the University's entering freshmen. It administers some ten loan and scholarship funds and encourages the establishment of others to be administered by the University.

LAST YEAR A worthy student from Chipley was financially assisted by alumni of Washington County, and the scholarship has been re-established this year along with a new one by Hillsborough County alumni for a student from that area.

Believing that every eligible young man and woman should have the opportunity of a higher education, the alumni office cooperates with high schools by providing materials showing the offerings and facilities of the University. When requested, it arranges for alumni to appear on high school programs, and it fills many other requests in an effort to assist high school students enter the university of their choice.

AFTER THE student is enrolled, the Alumni Office works with him again in various functions and campus events. Homecoming is a good example. For three months prior to the actual date, the office staff helps class presidents plan their reunions and mail out letters to those classes, notifies all alumni by letter of the Homecoming Program, makes reservations for alumni, and serves on campus committees in carrying out the planned program. Last year the FSU program for Homecoming was considered by the American Alumni Council to be one of the best in the nation.

After graduation this office helps to keep the graduates informed as to the activities on campus through the Alumni Issue of the FSU Bulletin, published quarterly. This issue is prepared by the office staff and mailed to all graduates and includes not only news of the campus, but news items and features about other alumni, as well as any changes of address which have been received from alums.

IN MANY WAYS, the Alumni Office acts as a liaison between the University and its graduates. From serving as speakers at county club meetings to making hotel reservations for visiting alumni, the staff works to keep the alumni informed so that they may, in turn, keep the citizens of the state up-to-date on the happenings at FSU. Through this office, the alumni are assisted in securing their yearbooks, class rings, and addresses of friends who are also alumni. It bridges the gap between graduates and the administration, faculty and staff.

Another function is making recommendations to the administration concerning alumni to represent FSU at other universities in the Southeast.

Each person who has graduated from FSU has a file established in the Alumni Office, and from year to year, his or her accomplishments and activities are listed in this file. Consequently, the office serves business firms who request information concerning a graduate wh seeking employment at establishment, and furnishes sonal histories to civic grou

'Operation Information' Gives Assistance To All Services

By NANCYE J. CLARK

Operation Informatioo is perhaps the greatest untold story on the FSU campus today. The Office of Personnel Records, directed by John T. Flournoy, carries out this task.

Not many students know about this office and what it does. Yet the OPR knows all about studente and what they do; for here are kept the complete records of every student enrolled at FSU.

RECORDS ARE kept of every phase of the studeot's life—his academic work, his social life, his health, his part-time employment on campus and assist job placement upon graduation.

These records play an important part in the university counseling program. Information is available to counselors at the rate of 30 data files a minute if necessary. These files are confideotial and only available to a few people whose job it is to counsel atudents.

THIS OFFICE renders assistance to graduate studeote in their work if approved by their department head and the Deao of the Graduate School. Here also are made confidential summaries for university honoraries. The OPR is often called upoo to clarify the ideotity of a studeot away from the campus. It is through this office that the ID card is issued.

The FBI and the armed forces often call upon the OPR for necessary information. This office previously handled all Selective Service interviews. A distinct office, nowever, was set up this summer. Mr Flournoy estimates that 1,800 men atudenis were interviewed and counseled last year from one to three times each.

SOME 22 TYPES of records are kept in this office. They range from personal data cards to student active files; from student withdrawal files to address and schedule cards; from sorority and fraternity files to psychological and placement test records. A manual for interpretation of all information is available.

This set-up in the OPR is almost unique among colleges and universities. Many schools have visited and made a study of the personnel records office.

OPERATION INFORMATION of the Office of Personnel Records saves time and money by securing, assembiing and dissembling esseotial data from a centralized source.

Any student unable to take the first test for any reason shall take the test at this time.

Jewish Students' New Application Considered by IFC

Inter-Fraternity Council, at its meeting last week, appointed a committee for next fall's rush period and took into consideration the applications of three fraternities.

The Rush Committee, composed of Ernest LaRoche, Fraok Bean and Robert Upton, will decide upon the exact date, sometime in the fall of 1954, which will mark the opening of Rush Week. They will also draw up a complete set of rush rules which will go into effect at that time.

Three Jewish fraternities have submitted applications for organization on the FSU campus to the IFC. The council has appointed a committee, consisting of Bill Suttlemyer and Frank Bean, to study the background of the fraternities and expects to make its decision within the next two weeks.

The last Jewish fraternity on campus was organized in 1947, but dwindled out soon thereafter due to lack of Jewish enrollment. However, enrollment has increased recently and the Jewish students once again feel the need for their organizations.

IFC has set the date for its next meeting for Wednesday night, Oct. 14, at 9 p.m.

Library Modernization Results In Temporary Student Difficulty

By SYLVIA PARRISH

Along with other University-wide changes, tha library is doing a little modernization of its own, according to Miss Merle Souter, assistant in charge of the Reserve Room. This new policy is responsible for the difficulty many studente hava been experiencing in obtaining required books when they need them.

Any re-shuffling of policy and methods results in a change of procedure and makes necessary an orientation of new ideas and practices among those affected. Thus, the library is attemptina to explain the sources of difficulty and show studente how the newly inaugurated system will ultimately benefit all.

Owing to the increased demand by professors and students alike for reference books, more books have had to be put on the shelves, stepping up the pace of cataloging by tha present staff. Bottle necks hava resulted, not easily surmounted by librarians.

Those books to be put on reserve, have to be catalogued, renumerated, and have a set of four cards typed on them before they are even placed on the shelves. Miss Merle Souter asked co-operation of students and faculty alike to giva them the chance to place all the required books on the shelves and put them through their due processes.

Miss Souter explained the new system and how they will benefit those using the library.

The new self service system will feature books that may be checked out for two days as well as for one week. The books found on these shelves may also be used within the reserve room without having to be signed for at the counter. These books will be those which are used primarily for supplementary readina and in less demand. Those books which are required reading for all members of a particular class will have to be asked for as before and will be subject to the same procedure as always.

For the convenience of the students, the library has attempted to supplement the supply of scarce books with more volumes. When an instructor desires to have a book placed on reserve; he is asked to submit, if at all possible, a report on the number of students who will be required to read it.

The books which are used in tha reserve room now may be left on the tables for collection instead of returning them to the counter.

It must still be stressed that books on room use and overnight use must be returned to the library by 9:30 p.m. Books that are checked from the open shelves may be returned any time during the day on which they are due.

It will be a few more days before things are in order in the reserve room, but the librarians hope to be functioning smoothly by next week.

LEATHER LUNGS AND NIMBLE FEET—Grouped above are the cheerers who are sparking the rooting section at Florida State games. World Famous Hypnotist Presents Show Tonight

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

Dr. Polaar's appearance tonight at Leon High School Auditorium has been labeled as "strictly entertainment" by Florida State University Psychology professors.

"There is no scientific explanation of such so-called feats of mind-reading, mysticism, and mental telepathy," stated Dr. Glenn Terrell, Jr., Asst. Prof of Psychology, when asked if psychologists could offer any explanation for the powers claimed by Dr. Polgar.

WHEN ASKED his opinion on hypnotism, Dr. Terrell explained that only one out of every five persons can be hypnotised. He went on to say that there is an element of risk involved in hypnotism of the entertainment variety as the reaction of the person in hypnosis may affect his behavior favorably or unfavorably.

Dr. Terrell believes Dr. Polgar's appearance and others like it are adverse publicity for psychology for the general public seems to think that psychology is concerned with mind-readina, mental telepathy, and hypnosis. He said he would like the department of psychology to be completely disassociated with anything of this sort. "People have the mistaken impression," he said, "that psychologists can look into their minds and know what they are thinking."

Mr. Marcus Caldwell, Asst. Prof. of Psychology and Dr. Terrell aareed that most hypnotists and mind-readers will not submit to any rigorous tests of their powers. Dr. Terrell explained that psychology is a science, and science is based on observable facts only. This leaves such powers as mental telepathy and mind-reading without scientific explanations.

Hypnotism has its place if used as a therapeutic treatment by the elinical and medical professions, said Dr. Terrell. "Science is using hypnotism as a means of medical treatment, and it should have no place in the entertainment world."

He suggested that entertainment hypnosis could be compared to alving someone a shot of insulin or some other shock-producing serum and letting the audience watch reaction.

"Science does not know enough about the behavior of hypnotism yet since our knowledge of it is fragmentary, and there is a considerable element of risk involved in it," said Dr. Terrell.

"Mind-reading, mysticism and such are no more a part of psychology than are chemistry and physics," he concluded.

Pres. Carothers Announces Plan Of Organization

4 Representatives From FSU Attend Atlanta Conference

Plans are goins forward for FSU to affiliate with a new association of university student governments, according to Student Body President Milton Carothers, who returned Sunday from a planning conference held at Emory University in Atlanta.

Carothers was accompanied by Vice President Gene Lawler, Senator Phoebe Jackson and Sylvia Parrish, representina the Flambeau, at the sessions attended also by delegates from Emory, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Alabama and Miami

Accordina to Carothers, tha new organization will attempt to fulfill a need falt by univarsitias in this area by cooducting an annual conference with workshops in tha fields of student aovernment, publications and campus activities, by publishing a bulletin for the interehanae of campus news, and by serving tha member schools on an intercampus leval by schedulina band toure and so forth.

The organisation, tentatively dubbed the Southern University Student Government Association, will be limited to stata universities and large privately-endowed colleges and will attempt not to overlap or compete with similar organizations, such as tha Great Southern Region of tha National Student Association.

Miss Connia Curry of Agnes Scott, NSA regional chairman, told the conference, "I'm sure that NSA will welcome this student association in the southeast," and wished the conferenca well. At least two schools, Georgia Tech and Emory, will probably hold membership in both SUSGA and NSA. Miami, another NSA school, will probably not affiliate with SUSGA, for financial reasons.

According to a resolution passed at the Emory Conference, the schools invited to be charter members will include FSU, Florida, Miami, Mississippi, Mississippi State, LSU, Tulane, Alabema, Auburn, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Emory, South Carolina, North Carolina, North Carolina State, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, Washington and Lee, Duke and Vanderbilt.

Said President Carothers, "I know that membership in this association will benefit us greatly, much more so than the Florida Intercollegiate Student Government Association, from which we hava withdrawn."

Carothers will attend a meeting at Gainesville, December 12, at which a committee of Student Body Presidents will draw up a constitution for the organization, to be ratified at Emory in late March or early April.

Cast For Big Production Is Announced

The Florida State University Speech Department yesterday announced the cast for it's first major production of the year, "Lifa With Father."

The plot concerns a late-Victorian family in tha United States by Father, who has very mid-Victorian ideas on how to raise his children.

HUMAN situations and family uprisings presented in a down-to-earth, typically American manner make "Lifa With Father" one of the outstanding stage productions in the contemporary history of American theater, it has been said by many staga critics.

The play, to be directed here by Dr. Paul Darce, has had the longest run on New York's Broadway of any similar production.

IT STARTS Oct. 23, 24, 26 and 27 at 8:15 p.m. in the Conradi Theater. Scenery and lighting have been designed for the FSU production by Charles I. Reimer and costumes are designed by Douglas Russell.

Trieste Zone Stands Today As Number 1 Trouble Spot

The body of world peace seems to be breaking out almost daily with new sores. British Guiana, Indo-China, Egypt, and of course the long drawn out problem of Korea.

But the potentially most most disruptive trouble spot on the globe today is the disputed city and territory of Trieste. If conflict should break out there, it would be particularly embarrassing to the United States, because both of the contestants for the area are more or less allies of this country.

The various stands the United States and its leaders have taken on the Trieste problem in the last ten years only point more conclusively to the lack of any manifest logic in the situation. Rather it only serves to show how "logic" follows the necessities impressed upon us by world politics.

During World War II when Italy was one of the Axis and "brave little Yugoslavia" was our ally, there were many in this country who were all in favor of turning Trieste, heavily populated with Slavs, over to Yugoslavia outright. Later, when Tito took over and the Slavic nation had close ties with Moscow, sentiment naturally swung in the other direction. After Tito's defection from Stalin and the Soviet block, however, American feeling, while hardly chummy toward a Communist nation, none-the-less was that Yugoslavia would be a valuable ally in the game of pressure against the USSR.

Since the end of the war, for one reason or another, we have stuck to an agreement whereby Trieste is divided into two parts. Zone A, including the vital city of Trieste, is occupied by the United States and Britain; Yugoslavia holds the rest.

It is not at all our purpose to take sides in this dispute. Reasons are far too much obscured by personal and national sentiments already to see the issues clearly. Rather we want to call to the attention of our readers to developments of the last few weeks and put them on guard for the possible trouble that may come.

A few weeks ago the whole thing was in the rumor stage. Italy accused Yugoslavia of massing troops and preparing to occupy Trieste. Tito replied that this was nonsense. The troops were having "maneuvers."

Things came to a head recently when the United States and Britain announced they were withdrawing their troops from zone A and it looked as though Italy were going to march in.

Charges and counter-charges have flowed wildly since. We reprint just a few statements made by President Tito in the last few days to point up the gravity of the situation.

"We are watching the Italian moves closely, and we will do so in the future. And, at that moment, when the Italian soldiers enter, we will enter also. There cannot be peace between us and the Italians because this proposal is not the foundation for cooperation with Italy. They Think we will cool off in a few days. They do not realize that we are cold-blooded and will do everything that is necessary to be done."

"Present Italian policy is just like that of Mussolini. They are trying to get as much as they can of foreign territory and foreign people. Here today stands strong Yugoslavia, ready to oppose any further expansion in the Balkans."

Such pronouncements can only signal trouble. Students who are interested in tomorrow as well as today will do well to follow the matter closely.

● CO-ED HOURS

Sometimes the shift from a women's college atmosphere to that of a co-educational university "grinds exceeding small." Last week a change that had seemed painfully slow in coming, came about with a pleasant bang. Dr. H. G. Hathaway, chief physician of the FSU infirmary, announced co-ed visitation for the first time in the institution's history.

The effort to get co-ed visiting hours presumably goes back to 1947, when FSCW became FSU, but each attempt reached a stalemate one way or the other. Therefore last Friday's announcement came with such ease as to surprise almost everyone involved.

Particular credit, other than to Dr. Hathaway, goes to the Senate committee, which negotiated the new ruling with such efficiency. Members were Senators Frank Shaw, Joan Haiford and chairman Gordon Gaster.

● MISTAKE REGRETTED

As acting editor, I owe a real apology to Beverly Lacayo for allowing an incorrect word to be placed into her column last Friday. It was a completely unintentional error on my part, but the effect was to change the entire meaning of one section of her column.

What read ". . . Greek-non-Greek relationships, which have never been in very good shape on this campus, will really hit a low . . . " should have read ". . . which have always been in very good shape . . . "

The mistake was almost inexcusable, but to Beverly and to the students I want to explain that the change was an honest error in proof-reading. The unfortunate political turmoil which has been injected upon us has not helped much in giving us time to be thorough and careful. I sincerely hope no such error will be repeated.

Some Hollywood Notables Believe 'I do's' Are Followed by Adieux

By DAVID DREIS

Some crazy mixed up thespians in movieland today, have the screwiest idea that a wedding ceremooy begins with "I do," and ends with "Adieu." At any rate, the sideline quarterbacks are getting that impression.

This past summer was a hectic one for the divorce courts and also for screenland's reporters who were covering them

Donald O'Connor and his spouse of almost a decade, Gwen, have called it quits. Neither seems to be sobbing about it. Don's been dating blonde Marilyn Erskine and Gwen's been dating one or two male heart-failures Annyhoo, that's divorce number one

Good ole Sosie Hayward was married to Jess Barker for a blasted long time and then, nine years to the day she said, "Okay with me," she celebrated and announced divorce plans. The colomnists starting hitting at Sue's reasons and then when all that had been exploited, began giving "the real reason behind the split-up." The good sucker fans must be lapping this up.

They had a zany game at the home of Lex Barker a year ago He was married to Arlene Dahl and guests were Lana Turner and Fernando Lamas Well, as the rumor goes, Arlene pops up and says, 'Let's play 'switch.' You take my busband, Lana, and I'll take your boy friend" So after a year Tarzan found a new mate in Lana and Arlene went around with Fernando

Sweet, inocent Janie Powell got married, had two kids and got a divorce. It so happened that Janie was making a movie with Gene Nelson on the verge of a divorce, and flipped her goldilocks over him Hubby wasn't around He was baby sitting Janie started dating Gene and hubby protested He couldn't afford to feed another mouth at the dinner table each evening Janie charged "mental cruelty" and got her decree. (By the way, there's not one columnist in Hollywood who takes the singer's side in this battle . . . ex-hubby Gearry Steffen is known as a gentlemen of the first degree who literally got the shaft . . . elevator and all)

Of course, the presently married ones have their side to all this divorce talk. For instance, Jane Russell has read in the daily papers that she's going to divorce footballer Bob Waterfield. Jane's been married to Bob since high school days and besides that, the sultry one . . . (hold on men . . . this is a shock) . . . she teaches a Sunday school class.

Added to the above fact, the Spencer Tracye, Dan Duryeas and George Murphys have been married for at least a quarter of a century just to name a few, but those screwball stars who insist on beating around the bush . . and in the bush . . . blast them all. The question nowadays is not "Who is she married to," but who was she married to?" A good question, darn it.

Only Youngster Asks Gymkana, Who's He?

By DOT THOMASSON

"Gymkana who's he?" Only as a very young Freshman do you have the right to ask this question. Since you are rapidly passing this state you had better become familiarized with Gymkana if you expect to be in the know at FSU or elsewhere.

Gymkana is a famous group of Gymnastic stars, tots, and coeds, working together to make one of the main events of the school year here and at other cities and states The show this year is "Seein' Is Believin'," a comedy which will top them all, according to Hartley Price, director. It will have six performances here from Nov. 30 to Dec. 5 after which the troupe will go on the road.

IN THE PAST each performance has had a full house so you'd better get your tickets early if you want a seat.

A few of the reasons for its success and fame are skill, assistance to one another, and spirit. Many of the gymnasts have been at it from six to ten years. They provide experienced coaching to beginners. Jim Fadligan has mastered the trampolene in one year through hard work and coaching. The nationally famous Tallahassee Tumbling Tots also benefit from this skilled direction under their student director Mary McNatt and her assistants and adagio dancing are taught by the students themselves from the bottom up. Of the acts which can be learned in a short length of time are juggling and magic tricks. Put behind all of them the able coach, Dr. Hartley Price, and you have really got a show

To become identified with this group one only has to show interest and willingness to work—they do the rest. Work-outs and practices, held every afternoon in the East Gym, are open to all who wish to develop this skill and/or become a member of Gymkana.

Letters to the Editor

Bad System

Dear Editor,

As a freshman I am forced to say that my first impression of campus politics is not a good one

The recent political maneuver in which a capable man was deprived, perhaps permanently, of the full editorialship of the Flambeau, does not strike me as good politics at all Personal feelings have been allowed to sway the voting of a duly elected and open-minded governing body

The question of whether or not Mr Bruce Galphin is anti-fraternity or not is so assinine as to be ludicrous. Whether he is or not (and I strongly doubt that he is) he has nevertheless given the fraternities and sororities on campus the best possible coverage, often waiving his deadline to print the entire pledge lists

The real issue is not so trivial as the eternal conflict between the Greeks and the non-Greeks. The issue is this Shall politics be allowed to dominate a newspaper?

I can remember my distinct surprise when, before coming here, I learned that the Flambeau editor must be elected thereby putting him in a position where he must play politics and often the spoils system

It has been the priceless heritage of our American newspapers, of which the Flambeau can boast few superiors, that they should be free and independent of any political or government supervision, so that they may be free to carry on their dedicated mission of watching out for the welfare of the people. Only when they fear a newspaper do legislators attempt to run it

How, I ask you, how can a newspaper be independent, fair just and impartial when it is subject to the politics the kind of which were demonstrated last week? How can entering freshmen be persuaded to work for a newspaper when they see that whatever their policy—whatever their talents, they will not be free to run their newspaper as they see fit with the most capable person as editor. How can they muster sincere interest in such an endeavor when they plainly see that even politics have been so debased that a person's social affiliations are the deciding factor in an election.

I call on the students of FSU to seriously reconsider the system of government which places the newspaper in such an unpleasant situation contrary to all the ethics of journalism. It is not fair, it is not just, it is anti-democratic and, by far the most important it is a standing crime against the students themselves

Martin Dyckman
Class of '57.

Obligations

Dear Sir:

I believe I reflect widespread feeling when I express highest praise of Bruce Galphin's temporary editing of the Flambeau and deepest doubt of the Senate's motives in rejecting his bona fide nomination for the permanent office.

Surely it has not been forgotten that he ran a hard race for this office in the last elections and as runner-up lacked only a few votes of being elected. Can the Senate overlook the moral obligation implied?

If I read the FSU Constitution right, the Senate is there obligated also The relevant section runs as follows:

> The offices of Editor-in-Chief of a student publication shall be filled upon recommendation of the senior staff of the publications, with confirmation by two-thirds vote of the University Senate

There is implied an obligation to give full weight to the recommendation, just as the United States Senate must give full weight to presidential nominations. In the latter case rejection is almost always for reasons of personal or political enmity. If this is true of the present instance here at FSU, then in the famous words of Dorothy Parker, I shouldn't be at all surprised.

In view of the above arguments I would recommend choice of one of the following actions:

(1) Let the Flambeau staff stand its ground, renominate Galpin, and await the development and expression of student opinion, or

(2) Let the Flambeau staff assert that Galphin is the only candidate able and willing to serve, or

Congrotulotions

Dear Flambeau Staff and Students,

I would like to add a few words to those written by Joanne Setzer, June Winters and Beverly Duperrousel

It should be quite evident to the many students here at school that the Flambeau this year has been in the best in many years. Bruce Galphin has done an excellent job as acting editor. I personally don't think there is another person on campus capable of doing the job as well as he is doing now, and hope he will be doing in the future. As far as the pro-Greek, anti-Greek situation is concerned, I think it was a pretty low thing of one member of the UGA to pull as low a stunt as he did. It isn't the first time this person has pulled such low blows.

The entire student body should get behind Bruce Galphin for a bigger, and I know, a much better Flambeau than ever before Congratulations for the fine work and thanks for enjoyable reading

Sincerely yours,
Betty Anna Nasrallah

Democratic

Dear Editor,

We have just finished reading the story concerning the Senate's vote and reactions to the nomination of Bruce Galphin as editor of the Flambeau. Although we are only freshmen and are not well informed as to who is best qualified to fill the capacity of editor, we definitely do not feel the Senate made a fair or democratic decision on this question.

The statement, supposedly made in confidence by Bruce Galphin, that he was against Greek organizations might have been made jokingly or in haste There's no positive evidence that this statement was even made.

We feel that if anyone is being prejudiced, as Bruce Galphin is accused of being, it is the Senate. As there is no place on student publications staffs for pro- or anti-Greek prejudices, there certainly is no place for them in student government. Representatives in student government should be as unbiased in their opinions as is expected of student publications staff members. The editorial policy of the paper has been clearly defined and no editor, regardless of whether he is Greek or non-Greek, could defy this policy without the support of his staff

We believe that after the Senate reconsiders their hasty decision, they will vote more democratically.

Sincerely yours,
JOYCE POTTER

New Books Deal With Alcohol, Art

By BOB FOLSOM

DRINKING IN COLLEGE, published by the Yale University Press, is called the long awaited report from the Yale Center for Alcohol Studies. It seemed pertinent, and since "this Kinsey-type report gives the facts for the first time" based on a survey of 17,000 men and women students in 27 representative American colleges, we decided to have a look at it.

The book was compiled by Professor Selden D. Bacon, Director of the Yale Center of Alcohol Studies, and Professor Robert Straus, formerly of the Yale Center and now of the College of Medicine, Syracuse, New York, over a period of six years

Among the question it attempts to answer with percentages and facts are: How many students drink? How much, what, and why do they drink? There are different figures for different religious groups, different sexes, and so forth. The book is filled with facts, not opinions, as very wisely, the authors are hesitant to read too much in ALL the percentages and figures quoted.

The report also discloses, according to the numbers interviewed, how much drinking will affect the sexual conduct of students, quoting the percentages that link alcohol with petting and love-making. Interesting is the fact that both sexes believe girls who drink may appear to be more popular with men, but often are not taken "seriously" or "respected" But actually this is nothing new.

In this respect, opinions and the like do not run rabid among students, but generally keeps a solid path. It is very likely, even with the small number of students interviewed, that this report is the general consensus of all students in college.

Most students realize "the moral pressures of society," and know how much to drink and when to stop. They'll make the nine o'clock class after a rough weekend. Parents and others can heave sighs of relief. It is unlikely, in fact, almost unbelievable, that your son or daughter will fall because of excessive alcoholism. It will be, as it has been since the doors were first opened, because he or she doesn't want to study.

'Moon is Blue' Is a Little Too Slick

By RICHARD STEVENS

To say that the majority of U S. inhabitants are unfamiliar with "legitimate" theatre would be, I feel, a safe assumption. However, in recent years, the general public has become acquainted with theatre productions in a vicarious manner via Hollywood adaptions of some of the better Broadway plays. Such a situation bespeaks a lack of merit in original screenplays, on the other hand it shows a certain amount of good taste.

Some of the more creditable (all of the motion pictures mentioned in this column are, with a few reservations, offered with the heartiest recommendation) adaptations of the past few years were: All My Sons; The Glass Menagerie; The Fourposter; Detective Story; Death of a Salesman; The Member of the Wedding; A Streetcar Named Desire; Come Back, Little Sheba; Stalag 17; and The Moon Is Bloe.

The latest of Hollywood's imports from Broadway is F. Hugh Herbert's sophisticated comedy, The Moon Is Bloe, which opens a run at the local State Theatre tomorow.

Mr. Herbert's screenplay has been condemned by the Catholic Church and banned in the state of Maryland, because of its "racy" dialogue This has undoubtedly been a factor in making it one of the year's most popular movies.

The Moon Is Blue has some definite virtues of its own, not the least of which is that it happens to be very amusing at times.

The plot is somewhat old-hat and seems a little cornbellish at times. It concerns a virginal young would-be actress whose most impressive performance has been stepping out of a beer receptacle on TV. She is picked up on top of the Empire State Building by a red-blooded American boy architect. There ensues a verbose conversation on virginity, seduction, and various other aspects of sex in general.

In the course of their talk, demure Patty O'Neill manages only to surprise but also to ca tivate our boy Don Gresha They ara interupted by Da Slater a wall-to-do fellow w has amone other things a year-old daughter and a pass for whiskey and women. The is quite a bit of talk, but virt of course, wins out in the end.

The motion picture cast is capable one and the pie really comes off very well. William Holden gives his usua workmanlike performance Don. Newcomer Maggie MacNamara registers soundly the role of Patty. But it is David Niven who almost steal the show as David Slater. The role seems admirably suited to him, and he plays it with delightful air.

The Moon Is Blue is a sli article, and it is a rather pleasant evening's diversion. However, after seeing it, you may fee compelled to ask yourself, "Wh have I seen?" The answer, I fea is "Very little."

Visceral Newsmen Outshine Sobriety

By GENE LAWLER

Hail to the American news commentator — the well-voiced man who doesn't know what he thinks until he says it, then infatigable propagandizers and analyzers of the ever-present "situation."

Hail, for instance, to Walter Winchell, foremost hysteric and formidable opponent of the New York "Compost."

Hail to Fulton Lewis, deceptive voice of reason and outstanding proponent of "the American Legion, the Chinese Nationalists, investigating committees, and motherhood."

Hail to Paul Harvey, fearless ferret of subversive activities and "subversable" people.

Hail to Gabriel Heatter, George Sokolsky, Edwin C. Hill, Henry J. Taylor and H V Kaltenborn.

H - - l to them all. We prefer men who address the mind, rather than the viscera. Luckily there are some of this sort, and readily available in Tallahassee

We speak of the CBS news programs and of the 11 p.m. one particularly. It is then that Eric Sevareid, supported by Bill Costello, Bill Downs, Griffin Bancroft, et al, broadcast interesting, accurate and reasonably impartial news and analysis.

Eric Sevareid explains this in the preface to his recently published book, In One Ear, (Alfred A. Knopf) says he, "The CBS idea is that people should be persuaded to listen and think because the broadcaster says what he says, not because he is who he is. One doesn't always win fame and fortune that way, but there is a certain grubby satisfaction to it, just the same."

Sevareid's book, incidentally, makes excellent reading. In the book are 107 of his radio news analyses, or "quick snapshots taken of the American situation from various angles over the last couple of frantic years, in which commentators had to pretend they were not as confused as senators"

Included are such whimsical pieces as "Peace, It Makes Me Nervous," "The Pre-Pentagonians," "McCarthy and the Cookie-Pushers," "The Old Bull and How to Throw It," "Seven Delighted StockMarket Operators Sent for Copies of This Script," and "How to Confuse a Commentator." Our favorite is "Senator Pooh and the Communist Woozles" in which Senators McCarthy and Hickenlooper act out the third chapter of Winnie the Pooh.

Besides Sevareid, CBS can boast of Murrow, Collingwood Burdett, Morgan, Trout, Hollenbeck, LeSueur, Jackson and Edwards, all familiar names to listeners of WTAL. Other networks, though not equaling CBS in consistent quality, do have their compensating commentators: Clifton Utley of NBC, Martin Agronsky and Elmer Davis of ABC.

Some day, perhaps, when people like to think as well as to feel, we shall have more Utleys Davises and Sevareids. In the meantime, the Hooper ratings of Winchell and Lewis will reflect the popularity of the viscera commentary

RECITATIVE

Tebaldi's Tosca Perfomance Rates With Such Greats as Muzio, Ferrar

By ROBERT STRANE

Puccini's throbbing operatic setting of Victorian Sardeu's gruesome tragedy, Tosca, demands of the soprano diva exceptionally brilliant tone, broad range, expansive reservoir of intense emotion, and mature sensitivity. Few sopranos may justly name Floria Tosca as their great and best role. In the annals of opera there is fullsome praise of Muzio, Jeritza and Farrar in the role ennobled by Sarah Bernhardt upon the legitimate stage, but these bygone prima donnas have left sparse few disks and no complete treatments.

Today's Met offers several aspirants who succeeded in shrieking through the three acts, stamping feet in juvenile affectation without wrinkling a blouse, tossing loose a hair or dripping mascara . . . true, Tosca is a polished Diva, prominent at courts of sophistication and the toast of Rome, but she is also feline when provoked to despair or jealousy, and frenzy-stricken when ensnared in Scarpia's bloody throes . . she must execute the slaughter of the satyr with the viciousness of a trapped tigress. Tosca must be a creature of warm, seductive charm and diametrically, of violent impulsiveness and ALL woman.

Among the striving ones, I have heard one soprano who approaches a recreation Puccini might well have loved. Renata Tebaldi of the London FFRR release . . . thru her artistry, that set ranks as the finest in circulation To those who drop jaws and stammer "but . . . Kirtsten . . . ": I have on tape her performance in the Dec. '52 broadcast with tenor Tagiavini, and before Geo. London, the permanent fixture upon the Met TOSCA stage, Scarpia Paul Schoeffler . . . she has her moments of course but her ill-controlled delivery mars with shrieks some of the opera's most lyrical moments, "Vissi D'arte" for example, and her misled exclamations upon the goring of Scarpia make me wince and shake . . her Italian is good, but the musical line is often unsteadily attacked . . . and she simply won't let her hair down and "give out." Yet let me not defame this artist generally . . . her Butterfly is fascinating and her Mimi of the '52 Atlanta season melted all of us . . . by the way, certain fanced critics have stated or implied that her Tosca renders a most creditable Mimi . . . damn extreme, I opine . . . kindly feast yourself upon the little aria from Puccini's La Rondine, "Chi il bel songo di Doretta" as recorded by Kirste on 45 rpm . . . it's golden in m shelves . . .

Director of the London FFRR performance, Alberto Erde had long been raputed by highest authority to be one of the world's foremost Puccinian conductors . . . let that be sufficient to recommend him . . . I detect a sensuous profundity in his esquisite balance and timing unequalled by any other within my recollection.

The opening three chords, delineating Scarpia's sensual brutality, are thundered forth followed by curtain revealin Angelotti scampering with "diffused attire" toward the concealed key to refuge from the police . . . thereupon the comica Sagristan enters the chapel (of the Church of Sant' Andrea dell Valle) complaining of the choirboys' unduly soiled garments . . . this amusing characteriza thanks be, did not come abo thru Abbott and Costello slapstick. It is not wanton ma that lends humor to the custodian but an excessive, benign sobriety with Cavarados gay, nonchalant mood.

Entering and stepping to the night-completed Madonna upon the dais, Mario Cavaradossi calls for paints and forthwith co

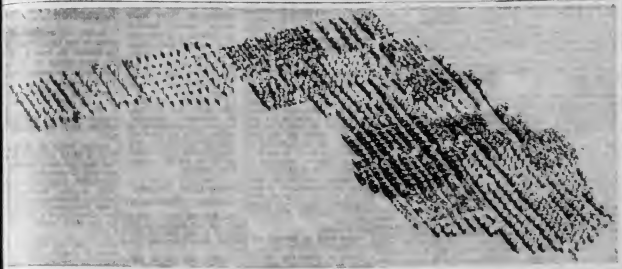
Abliene Christian's Fast Team Downs FSU 20-7



"You see before you seventeen-hundred musicians . . ." the loudspeaker at Doak S. Campbell Stadium blared as the Florida State University Marching Chiefs and high school bands from 21 Florida and Georgia towns and cities formed a huge panoramic map of Florida at the half-time period of the Saturday night game between FSU and Abilene Christian. Colorful uniforms bristling with gold and silver, glistening batons twirling in the brilliant light of the area, and vibrating, pulsating music swelled to fill the 15,000 capacity bowl with high entertainment and a sensation of greatness. The combined bands honored "March King" Henry Fillmore of Miami as he stood on the raised podium before them, with several of his own compositions played in perfect harmony and cadence, while twirlers and majorettes "strutted their stuff" before the 10,000-odd people in the stands.

Texans Kill FSU's Hopes For 2nd Straight; Leaky Defense, Fumbles Hurt Seminoles

By DAVE KENNEDY

A fast, hard-charging Abilene Christian College football team bumped Florida State University's hopes for their second straight win by defeating the Seminoles 20-7. It was a hard loss for likeable Tom Nugent's boys who defeated Louisville so decisively last week by a 59-0 margin.

A leaky pass defense, poor punting and costly fumbles caused the Seminoles' downfall. The fast Texans took every advantage given them and used them to break up the Seminole attack.

ABILENE was forced to come from behind after FSU had struck quickly for seven points.

Abilene won the toss and elected to receive the ball. Bobby Campbell threw a pass to end Von Morgan on the second play from scrimmage. After Abilene got into FSU territory, their attack was stopped and Hirth of Abilene was rushed and got off a desperate kick of five yards.

THE SEMINOLES took over on their own 47 and marched 53 yards to score. Fiveash started the fireworks off with a 17-yard dash to the Abilene 37. Then, Fiveash again carying the ball went for 15 more yards down to the Abilene 22-yard line. Billy Graham in two tries then took the ball on down to the Abilene 13. Harry Massey, taking the Abilene defense by surpise threw a bullet pass to Bobby Fiveash which resulted in a touchdown for FSU, the only one of the evening for the Seminoles. Graham kicked the extra point and FSU led 7-0.

FSU then kicked off to the Wildcats but the Christians attack bogged down and Fry was forced to kick. The kick was good to their own 48 where it was taken by Lee Corso who ran it back to the Abilene 38.

CORSO led the Seminoles to a first down on the Abilene Christian 9-yard line. However, the Seminoles were pushed back to the 32, where the Wildcats took over on downs.

Abilene fought to their own 45 and then Fry quick kicked to the Florida State 28 yard line.

DOBOSZ came up to the FSU 38-yard line but fumbled and Abilene recovered. Jimmy Lee Taylor's exceptional defensive work caused Abilene to kick once more. This one caried only 19 yards to the FSU 23-yard line.

Fiveash, Massey, and Holt worked the ball to the Abilene 47, but Fiveash fumbled and the Wildcats recovered once again.

AFTER another punting exchange Abilene had the ball on the Florida State 30-yard line.

Fry of Abilene shot a pass to Von Morgan at the four-yard line where he was all alone. FSU was completely fooled on this particular play. Fry kicked the point and the score was all tied up at 7-7.

THEY SPARRED out the remaining minutes before halftime without any broad incident.

Twenty-five bands gave a sparkling, ear-splitting demonstration on the art of sound during intermission.

FSU HAD out first-downed the visitors, eight to three, outrushed them, 119 to 83. But passing and punting was keeping Abilene in there and the scoreboard was stuck solidly on 7-7.

FSU was obviously steamed up as it got a new start. Fiveash whipped 25 yards to the FSU 26.

Abilene Christian scoring Touchdowns: Morgan, Boyd, Morris. Conversions: Fry 1, Hirth 1.

Florida State Scoring Touchdowns: Fiveash. Conversion: Graham.

A penalty put the Seminoles back on the 24. Fiveash, with a 40-yard scamper, made up the deficit as he was downed on the Abilene 8. Holt struck for nine to the 23. Abilene abruptly took the starch out when Massy fumbled and Morgan recovered for ACC at the 25.

ON THE FIRST play, Boyd grabbed the handoff, hit the middle for a 75-yard scoring jaunt. Hirth made it 14-7.

After an exchange of punts the Wildcats again scored, but an offside penalty nullified the score. Fry then punted to the FSU 25.

CORSO'S pass attempts met with disaster each time and Metts punted 39 yards to the Abilene 22.

Fry's mixture of passing and running plays got the Wildcats down to the FSU 15 but to no avail as Fry himself fumbled and Don Powell alertly pounced on the oval.

CORSO'S pass was intercepted at the FSU 40 and again the Wildcats were knocking at the Seminole door. However the threat was erased with a fumble at the three, Fiveash recovering.

FSU started to march but the pitfalls were too many. A roughing penalty cut things short and ACC took over on downs at the 41.

WITH MORGAN blocking, Hirth powered to the 5 where Fry on a reverse sneaked to the two. Morris, with 20 seconds left darted over for the final score.

A hoard of FSU Seminoles ploughed through to block the extra point attempt.

That was it! FSU had time for just one more play after the kick which was an intercepted pass eturned to the Seminole 38, which is where it was when the inal whistle blew.

Agent Interviews Seniors For CIA

Mr. William J. Crawford, who represents the Central Intelligence Agency of the U. S. government, will be at F.S.U. on October 19th and 20th to interview Seniors who might be interested in securing positions on his agency.

Secretarial positions are open for both men and women, along with a few positions in allied fields. Seniors who are interested should arrange for an appointment at the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement, at their earliest opportunity. Persons who are interviewed by Mr. Crawford and secure positions would work as Secretaries for about eighteen months in Washington D. C., and then would have the chance to apply for overseas work, probably in Europe.

asts the four features of his ect to the dark beauty of enamored Tosca—"Recondita Armonia" (Strange harmony of contrasts) . . . the delivery here young Giuseppe Campora eks not to "roust out" the mice peanut heaven" but begins ensively easy building to a reverberating climax . . . particularly competent rendition, though del Monaco's seems finer, he being tenor on record singing the -portion "e te beltade' with eeping sostenuto.

Soon Tosca strides in, piqued by jealousy, having heard another voice (Angelotti's) than Mario's. Discreetly witholding matters of state and Angelotti, Mario quiets her fancies and the two arrange to meet that evening 'neath the orange blossoms by her villa . . . Tebaldi's depiction of the sultry scene of the rendevous is by far the most bewitching upon record . . . the two voices blend to a singular oneness at the duo's finale . . . after Mario's balmy persuading Tosca to depart and leave him to urgent tasks, the painter vows selfless aid to revolutionist Angelotti and the two run out shouting "Liberty from the tyrants:"

Interrupting a church festival celebrating Napoleon's defeat, impetuous police-chief Baron Scarpia stalks in glowering like an envenomed hound, orders the Te Deum chanted in preise of the Deity for rout of Napoleon, whose cause is naturally disdained by the Roman aristocracy, and dispatches agents to search for escaped Angelotti. Enzo Mascherini, the Scarpia of the set, is frowned upon by some by reason of his light rather small voice . . . it seems to me, however, that a mellow limpid voice as of this noted baritone contributes to a more cunning, erotic characterization . . . Scarpia is a trifle more interested in sex than in crime—he is a master seducer, a fact diminished by a harshly metallic, coldly brutal timbre (as of Paul Schoeffler, veteran of the Ring, in which the voice must axe thru titanic orchestration) . . . a "big man" with a small, unctuous baritone . . . rather striking.

Act II—Scarpia, alone in his suite-torture-chamber, is mincing over a meal, with indigestion thru anxiety over Angelotti's apprehension and moreso racking lust for Tosca's body. He has commanded his diminutive knave Spoletta to follow Floria and thus uncover Cavaradossi and Angelotti . . . Spoletta enters squealing that though Angelotti is yet at large, Cavaradossi has been bound and brought thither . . . the artist is marshalled in and submitted to a fierce interrogation by Scarpia . . . he denies any knowledge of pertinent affairs and is hurled to the hands of executioner, Roberti for purge. Tosca is invited to Scarpia's quarters for a bit of wine, whereupon she is informed that her lover is being tortured in the off-chamber. Tosca snaps "your price, man!?" . . . Scarpia chuckles sardonically and launches into a collosal aria of sensuality, "Gia mi dicon venal' (true, some call me venal, but I do not sell myself to fair women for paltry sums of filthy lucre) . . . Sig. Mascherini compensates for smallness of volume by the most in animal lust and fierce accents . . . one can visualize the crimson in his eyes, heaving frame, moist, swellen features . . . Mascherini is calculatingly cruel in politics but a mad wolf in love . . . the baritone's passage "go, be free, purse, but a Queen's pardon is hardly potent for a cadaver," speaking of Mario whose execution he has ordered, bears a horrid sneer . . . Tosca is provoked to plea to God, "Vissi D'arte," rightly the most popular aria in the opera . . . and Madame Tebaldi's work here is the splendid epitome of intensity of despair, contrite grief and vocal control . . . this aria commends the album to any opera-lover . . . Scarpia offers freedom to the two lovers in exchange for "her honor" . . . she nods consent but when he lunges at her, she plunges a table-knife between his ribs. Mascherini's enaction of Scarpia's writhing agony and death is horrifying . . . Tebaldi divests all reserve panting "die, fearful wretch" . . . the entire scene as performed by these artists leaves the listener exhausted by stark barbarity.

Act three quietly opens revealing the watch upon the parapet of prison Castel Sant'Angelo . . . the time is 4:00 a.m. . . . warm, serene early morning, bright stars scintillate above St. Peter's Cathedral nearly obscured by the cool, undulating mist . . . sheep-bells are heard tinkling near, and a shepherd-boy sings a plaintive ditty, one of authentic Tuscan origin . . . in the London, the boy is sung by a capable young treble. . . Matin Bells are rung from afar, blending with an orchestral melody, almost oppressive with sweet agony of lost love . . . the theme of remorse "Elucevan le stelle" moans low and somberly in the basses as grey traces of dawn streak the horizon . . . the vapors lift and the stone structures glare as tombstones on an efulgent sunrise.

Cavaradossi is led in and abandoned to write a farewell note to Tosca. . . the pain of doom devastates him as he sings the famous "E lucevan le stelle" (brightly shone the stars) . . . Campora's treatment is passionate, sincere and devoid of blubbering and melodic distortion. Tosca surprises the condemned . . . she tells him of the plan of liberation . . . he must simulate death, await the squad's departure, and flee with her to France . . . the firing squad arrives, levels fire and wends down the steps . . . Tosca hovers urging Mario to rise . . . Scarpia had tricked Tosca . . . real bullets had been used . . . she throws herself upon her lovers' body in a paroxysm of grief just as Spoletta and agents leap in to arrest the murderer of their chief.

In bitterest irony, the orchestra peals the melody to "O dolce bacio, languide carezze' (sweet kisses, langorous embraces) as Tosca leaps from the wall to death.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test
"Go bury your head in the sand," shrieked Sheedy's chick. You'll never put a wing on my finger until you start using Wildroot Cream-Oil on that messy hair. It's America's favorite hair tonic. Keeps hair combed without any trace of greasiness. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Helps you pass the Finger-Nail Test." Paul looked so good the very first time he used Wildroot Cream-Oil, his pigeon egged him on until he proposed. So why don't you buy a bottle or tube today at any toilet goods counter. And next time you have a haircut, ask for Wildroot Cream-Oil on your hair. Then no gal will ever give you the bird.

Betty Jane Grimm Sings In Faculty Recital

By GARY J. CAMPBELL

Miss Betty Jane Grimm, contralto, and assistant professor of voice will be the spotlight in the School of Music's faculty recital to be held in Opperman Music Hall Friday, October 16th at 8:15 p.m. Miss Mary Esther Winslow will be the accompanist.

The program arranged by Dr. Warren Allen will be composed of four parts.

PART ONE.

DIVINITIES DU STYX (Ye God of night profound) by Christopher von Gluck from opera Alceste. Euripides' Alcestis inspired Lully to write his first lyric tragedy in 1674. Gluck treated the same theme a century later. In Greek mythology the devoted wife of King Admetos offers herself as a sacrifice to Apollo to save her dying husband. She addresses the inexorable divinities of the River Styx, but sings in anguish, "I do not appeal to you; you know not pity, only cruelty." But in ecstasy her voice rises to a climax as she goes gladly to death. The happy ending convention of 18th century opera decrees, however, that Apollo relent amid general rejoicing.

IO TI LASCIO, a cara (I must leave thee now, beloved) by Wolfgang A Mozart. In contrast to the Gluck aria which emphasizes word meanings faithfully, this could be effectively transcribed for clarinet and string quartet

Fac ut portem by Gioacchino Rossini from opera Stabat Mater Rossini quit tha field of opera at the age of 38, after his greatest success, William Tell. He was persuaded, on a visit to Spain in 1831, to compose a Stabat Mater for Good Friday, but it was not finished until ten years later. Purists have condemned the work for its theatricality (justly, in spots) but in this cavatina Rossini has caught the power and pathos of this somber sequence hymn from the 13th century with the eloquence of Gluck and the purity of Mozart.

PART TWO.

Song cycle without interruption: Frauen-liebe und Leben (Woman's life and love) by Robert Schumann. In 1840, his great "song year," Schumann wrote 138 Lieder, the finest possible evidence of his long-delayed happiness. After clearing all obstacles, the worst of which was the stern opposition of Herr Wieck, Clara's father, Robert was able to open up the flood-gates and pour out songs which made him "laugh and cry with delight." Without Frauenliebe, Leben had been incomplete. This cycle illuminates both with a radiance which defies technical analysis

PART THREE.

Ah Rendimi mio core (Ah give back to me my heart) by Francesco Rossi from opera Mitrane. As was the custom in the late Broque era, F. Rossi wrote out only the melody and the bass expecting the harpsichordist to "realize," i.e., to fill in the harmonies. With no detriment to the musical effect, the editor of the version heard on this program, has harmonized the song in the style of Pergolesi, who flourished in the Rococo period about 50 years after Mitrane was produced.

PART FOUR.

Bitter Fruit by Howard Wilson (words by Audrey Wilson).

Desire by Albert Hay Malotte (poem by Sydney King Russell).

MINIVER Cheevey by John Duke (a satire in the form of variations).

Luke Havergall by John Duke (poem by Edward A. Robinson)

Rule on, King Jesus arranged by Gant.

Tully Advises No Frosh Jobs First Semester

Glover E. Tully of the Florida State University Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement said today he doesn't advise first semester freshmen to work outside their regular curricular duty. "I do not think that Freshmen should work the first semester," he said, "since getting adjusted to classes is far more important."

The placement office director went on to say that freshmen should start working this soon only if there is no other way of obtaining money enough to support them. Tully said policies for administering financial aid to students here are made by the Student Help Committee of which he is chairman. The help committee is made up of six other University officials, he said, and meets every week to consider scholarship grants, loans for needy students and policies of student employment.

A SECRETARY of Labor office was inaugurated into the Student Body last year by student legislation. Named by the President of Student body, the Secretary of Labor serves as a liason man between the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement and all those students working on campus. Presently holding this office is Roy Staton, a senior.

Wednesday evening

Mr. Carver, also president of the Jacksonville Advertising and Sales Club told listeners of the advantages and problems one finds in handling "one of the largest mediums used today in selling a product." Senate Makes Confirmations For Positions

Salary For President Discussed By Group, Referred to Trio

Confirmation of various officials to student organization positions and an issue concerning whether or not Milton Carothers should be paid compensation for his work as President of the Student Body highlighted the University Senate meeting on Tuesday, October 13.

Phoebe Jackson brought up the fact that in many schools in the South Student Body Presidents are paid for their role in student government, and she recommended that Carothers should also be compensated in this way. The University Senate appointed a special committee, consisting of Jackson, Frank Shaw and Ann Hayes to investigate further in this matter and report on it.

ISSUES BROUGHT up by the Women's Senate Committee, and on which further investigation is being taken are: Changing of the ten-minute late entry time for women students to fifteen or twenty minutes; placing of washing machines in women dormitories; and revision of the Women's Sophomore Constitution.

Warren Cobb spoke on the controversy which had arisen concerning the Editorship of the Flambeau, student newspaper. Cobb supported the Senior Staff's renomination of Galphin.

Voting Begins To Nominate Soph Royalty

Nominating by the Sophomore Class for King and Queen of the Sophomore Hop begins today, ending Mondy at 8.

All names nominated will be placed on a ballot, to be voted on by members of the Sophomore Class on the following Friday. The first vote will act as an elimination primary, with the ten highest couples being chosen for a second election.

THE OUTCOME of the final vote will remain a secret until the night of the Sophomore Hop when the royalty will be crowned.

Members of the Sophomore Class are urged by Nancy Vaughn, elections chairman for the Hop, to turn in the names at one of the following stations, Student Center, Westcott and the Cafeteria.

AN IMPORTANT announcement concerning the Hop was made this week by Barbara Yost, chairman, in regards to the new policy of opening the Hop to everone. This new policy has had to be dropped due to the impractibility of the plan, since a larger dance floor than the Student Center could not be obtained for the event.

The annual Hop, featured this year as a "black and white masquerade" formal dance, is to be held at the Student Center on Oct. 30, with dancing from 9 to 12.

JOHNNIE BAXLEY and his twelve piece orchestra will provide music, while numerous talent from the Sophomore Class will be on hand to lend an air of festivity.

Articles By Earl Vance Indicate Need for Current Reading Study

Two articles by Earl L. Vance, professor of journalism, appear in the current issue of Education, a magazine devoted to the science, art, philosophy, and literature of education, published in Boston.

The articles entitled "Periodical Reading Courses: Their Place and Function in American Education" and "Practical Procedure in Teaching Magazine Reading" were requested by the editor because of Professor Vance's long experience in teaching magazine reading as a serious course at the college level. The October issue of the magazine is antirely devoted to the use of mass media in the classroom.

EDUCATIONAL journals have requested articles of Professor Vance on magazine reading courses before. The Journalism Quarterly, leading journal in the field of journalistic studies, published his "The Place of Reading Courses" in 1948. His articles on educational and other subjects have appeared in about twenty different magazines and journals, exclusive of strictly timely or occasional articles which have also appeared in Time magazine, The New York Times, and numerous other newspapers.

"For over twenty years I have been teaching current periodical reading," writes Professor Vance in the current article. "Throughout this period, all signs we teachers have to appraise the effect of our work on student minds have underlined strongly the value of the current periodical reading course.

"I HAVE been puzzled, therefore to understand why more teachers and schools have not come to see the very great possibilities of such courses. As I have come more and more to realize that personal and public opinion, and hence social action, are in great measure merely the synthesizing of current reading—that we call 'opinion' is but an expression of what we have been led to believe the facts are—I have been troubled as well as puzzled. For I have known how little schools and colleges are doing to improve the situation.

"The fact that newspapers and periodicals are universally read suggests they might serve as a powerful agency of individual and social enlightenment. But they may just as well serve as a misleading agency. As in other types of reading matter, the quality of magazine articles varies from the scholarly and authentic to the blatantly inaccurate and the consciously false."

SCHOOLS and colleges are doing little to improve current reading habits, Professor Vance continues "In a survey, R. E. Kimball found high school pupils had 'a pitiful acquaintance' with magazines which are universally

Stokes Named To Head 1954 Sandspur Production; Winning Script Announced

Precedent-Setting Move Puts First Woman Producer Here

Theme Is Musical Without Dialogue; Includes Large Cast

Frances Bailey Stokes, a junior at Florida State University was appointed today Chairman and Producer of the 1954 Sandspur production Milton Carothers, President of Student Body announced.

Ronald Martin, Chairman of the Sandspur Script Reading Panel concurrently announced that the final script for this year's traditional, all-student production has also been chosen. First choice of the reading panel made up of Martin, Miss Stokes, Herbert Holcomb and Claire Keyton is "Panorama," by Leo Andrews. Andrews will also direct the production.

MISS STOKES, who has done the choreography and starred in principal dance roles in the past two Sandspur productions, will take office immediately. She will prepare for the stagings and overall production of "Panorame" slated by the University Calendar for February 17, 18, 19, and 20 with the annual Sandspur Dance climaxing the production.

Martin said the winning script is unusual and at the same time promising "Panorama," he said, "is a complete musical comedy with songs and dances but has no dialogue at all. He went on to say that there are also no leading roles in the overall production, as the theme of 'Love' is broken into several sequences. "Love in various situations is presented," Martin said, adding there are scenes from love in New York, love in the French quarter, love on the campus, and so forth. "Each scene has its own leading characters," he said.

MARTIN SAID he spoke for the committee, saying they are grateful for the five scripts turned in. "We're sorry everyone couldn't win," he said, adding, "Scripts looked promising on the whole, and we hope those submitting them will consider rewriting them for the future."

Questioned on the uniqueness of the plot and general theme, Martin said Sandspur will take a step out of the ordinary in attempting such a production. He said the panel realizes the past scripts have always been the musical comedy type; however, "with the introduction of a musical panorama," he said, "we hope to combine comedy numbers with serious dance, coming up with a production worthy of professional criticism."

MARTIN STRESSED the need for a greater number of workers than ever before in Sandspur's history here. He said the production's running time will be approximately 1½ hours and will require a cast of about 30 to 40 singers and dancers. "Besides the cast, however," he added, "we badly need people on the stage crew, lighting, makeup, and publicity." He said a general meeting has been slated for all interested in working on "Panorama" for this coming Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in 303 Westcott.

"We urge all those people, whether they have any experience or not, to attend this meeting, as there are many jobs they can fill," Martin said, adding that Sandspur is a learning and proving ground for every student who takes an interest in it.

RYAN EDWARDS, outstanding young student in the music field sits at the organ and prepares to exercise his talents. Edwards, organist at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Quincy, since the age of 14, will perform Sunday night in a special recital at Canterbury Club's Ruge Hall Chapel, West Jefferson St. Edwards will receive the Ruge Hall Award of Culture, a coveted award by the Episcopal Diocese here for his program Sunday.

Reporter Looks Backstage On 'Life With Father'

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Life With Father—the perennially popular play taken from Clarence Day's book of the same name—will open here at FSU October 23.

The student body and general public will not see Life With Father, the Speech Department's first major production of the year, until that date, but a newspaper can never wait, so this writer was assigned to cover a typical rehearsal and report on it.

Life With Father will indeed be a lively production, judging from the enthusiasm with which all the actors inject themselves into their roles. Leading man Charles Bogdahn who plays Father, is particularly noteworthy on this score. The "Damn!'s" and "Damnations!'s" called for by the script are put forth naturally by him. He is able to act the role without calling attention to the singularity of those words.

After two weeks of rehearsals each member of the cast, which co-stars Ellen Driggers in the role of Mother, has his lines memorized and at Wednesday's rehearsal needed only occasional prompting.

THIS REHEARSAL, like any other, was a tedious thing. Director Dr. Paul Davee showed through his constant attention that no detail which could affect the quality of the play will be allowed to escape unnoticed.

The only two non-college students in the cast, Walter Richards, as little Whitney, and Billy Reynolds as little Harlan, bore up well in spite of the tedium and could very well steal the show.

DRESS REHEARSALS begin next week. Outfitting a show of this kind, which deals wtih an American family during the late Victorian period, is no easy task.

As Douglas Russell, costume designer and instructor in the Department of Speech, put it, "It's hard to get volunteers for costuming. They'd rather act."

THE COSTUMES are designed by beginners in Russell's costume designing class and by members of the cast. No actor, however important his role, is exempt. It's difficult to reconcile the pompous, self-righteous aFther with the real-life actor who is, at the present time, making one of the maid's costumes for the play. Lee Hildman, who plays The Rev. Dr. Lloyd, an Episcopalian minister, is also wielding the needle on a maid's costume.

Finding an outfit for the minister was a job in itself. Few are around who can reach into a nearby closet and pull out formal minister's garb dating from the 1890's. However, the Rev. Mr. Mortey, local Episcopal minister, dug into his old wardrobe and produced a formal garment which he hadn't worn in years. It is not from the 1880's, true, but

Contest Will Offer $1000 Prize For Winning Essay

A lucky Florida State University student may win from $300 to $1,000 this year if he places in an essay contest, the FSU placement office said today.

Sponsored by the Highway Research Board of the National Academy of Sciences, the essays are to be written on some phase of the subject, 'Better Highways' and should deal with either economic, financial or administrative improvements for America's highways. Those participating are required to be legal residents of the state of Florida.

PRIZES RANGE from $1,000 for first place; $700 for second place; $500 third and $300 for fourth place. This prize money applies to each of the 48 states in which the contest will be held, the Placement Office said. All entries must be postmarked by March 31, 1954, they added.

Applications can be secured from major professors in the departments, the head of the student's department or the office of Vocational Guidance and Placement. After filling out the blank, the entering student should send it to the National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., Washington 25, D. C. An official entry blank will be sent back from that office with further instructions, and suggestions.

BULLETINS have been posted in each classroom building and information can be gotten from the Placement Office, Westcott.

Enthusiasts of Campus Radio Attend Meet

The Seminole Broadcasting Association had a turnout of thirty-five students at their first staff meeting which was held October 14. The primary purpose of the meeting was to familiarize the station personnel with the plans for the re-opening of Florida State University's campus radio station.

Station manager, Rick Hutto, opened the meeting by explaining the purpose of SBA and its connection with the proposed naw station. The meeting was then turned over to the Director of Public Relations, Mr. Roy Flynn Mr. Flynn, in cooperation with the executive members of SBA, is in charge of making arrangements for the new station. He announced that the new station will be on FM and will broadcast under the call letters of WFSU-FM. In response to numerous questions, Mr. Flynn explained the advantages of FM broadcasting. He said that the old WFSU's broadcasting range very often extended beyond its limits and was, for this reason put off the air by the Federal Communications Commission. With FM broadcasting, Mr. Flynn pointed out, the broadcasting limits would be expanded to reach all of Tallahassee.

AS AN FM STATION, WFSU-FM will be associated with the National Association of Educational Broadcasters, which will give the staff an opportunity to participate in an exchange of tape recordings with other commercial and non-commercial stations throughout the state. This will enable the station to expand its program schedule, as well as giving it an opportunity to be recognized over a wider area.

WFSU-FM is to be a non-commercial, educational station with a program schedule that will appeal to college students and adult listeners. Such programs are designed to be educational, informative, entertaining, and cultural. In keeping with this policy, disc jockey shows will not be featured. In their place will be programs of Broadway musicals, classical music, and "pops" records. Re-broadcasts of outstanding concerts, lectures, speeches, and recitals will also be included as special features The station already has on hand a tape recording of the last concert of Spaulding and Dohnanyi.

IN CLOSING THE MEETING, Mr. Flynn reminded the staff that their first main problem is to catch the interest of the students and townspeople and to hold it throughout the year.

Orr Tells Students Stubs Are Needed For Speech Plays

Reserved seats will be sold to Florida State University students upon presentation of the No. 4 stub from Student Activities Booklet and 40 cents, it was announced today by the FSU Department of Speech.

Tickets for the Speech Department's first major production of the year, Life With Father will go on sale at the Conradi box office starting next week, October 21 and 22, Dr. Lynn Orr of the Department said. Dr. Orr stressed a new system for selling student tickets has been inaugurated to replace the previous ID card set-up. He said presentation of the coupon will eliminate to a great extent the long lines in front of the box office, specially at curtain time. He added that tickets to Life With Father will be sold on performance days to students and outsiders alike.

Dr. Orr added a final note urging all students planning to attend Life With Father to get their tickets at this advance sale to assure better seating.

Keeley Announces Board Members At Dames Club

The first regular meeting of the Florida State University Dames Club was held Wednesday evening in the main lounge of the Longmire Building. All new members and visitors were welcomed with a short talk on the purpose of the Dames Club and its plans for the coming year.

Mrs. Dean Keeley, newly elected president, introduced her board members, Mrs. Al Strickland, vice president; Mrs. Anthony Bacarella, secretary, and Mrs. Noah Johnson, treasurer. The sponsors for the year will be Mrs. Stanley Asplund, Mrs. Eugene Lawler, and Mrs. Hugh Hinley There will be four interest groups Book review, headed by Mrs. Clark Allen; homemaking, with Mrs. Francis Hunter as chairman, canasta, and bridge instructed by Mrs. Russell Kiers.

The chairmen discussed plans for each interest group and encouraged everyone to participate in one or more groups.

Paper Suggests Two Ways To Fill Publications Post

The events of the past few weeks indicate one thing clearly: a new system of succession is needed to fill vacancies in student publications.

It was wise last year when [illegible] drew up a provision for succ[illegible] n fact, as things turned out, it wa[illegible] most prophetic. It was fortunate th[illegible] there was some sort of procedure set forth, or there would have been utter chaos.

How ever good the present system may have seemed at the time it was drawn up, though, it has proved to be one of those things that is good on paper only. In practice it has lead to many difficulties.

For instance, the question naturally rises, "Who is more qualified to select an editor: the Senior Staff or the Senate: Who is more familiar with possible candidates: staff or Senate?" And, pretinently, what happens if the staff chooses one person and the Senate another? Does the possibility exist that there will be a long-lasting stalemate, with the staff continuing to nominate and the Senate continuing to reject? Nearly everyone, from many diverse points of political view, agrees that a change is in order.

The nature of a preferable system is in dispute, of course. Here we discuss the two most widely mentioned solutions, along with the relate merits of each.

First of all, a definite line of succession could be established by amendment. Such an action certainly has precedent both in national and state government in presidential and gubernatorial succession laws.

An editor is elected in the spring by the majority vote of the student body, and presumably he is elected on a certain platform. In naming his managing editor (second officer) he takes into consideration both ability and the platform on which he was elected. Thus in many senses the managing editor is the logical successor.

On the other hand, these hypothetical assumptions may not be fulfilled, and another system stands as the answer. A new editor may be elected by a referendum, a new election.

The advantage of such a method is that it puts the selection of the editor more directly in the students' hands. Possible disadvantages are that until the election is held, there is no succession outlined, and further, that the incoming freshmen would know none of the candidates.

We recommend neither of these methods above the other, but we do seriously suggest the Senate consider them. We know there is much popular support for a change.

Now that the succession has been settled for this year, we are pleased and want to let the feelings engendered during the past few weeks die a natural death. We did feel that this last footnote needed to be appended to the story, however.

● HONOR SYSTEM ?

The Honor System has been in some disrepute on this campus, receiving disparagements from many students and faculty members alike. Its failure to be effective in some classrooms has led instructors to reinforce it with the standard procedures of rigid surveillance during tests.

The disappearance of books from the University Library has led to a revamping of the former policy of unwariness on the part of the library staff. Now a checker at the door provides added insurance against theft.

One place, however, where the Honor System has apparently been found completely adequate is the University Bookstore.

We have the statement of Gordon Wheeler, manager of the bookstore, to confirm this contention. According to Wheeler, "No one has ever been apprehended attempting to steal books, and there is no evidence that any have been stolen."

Wheeler attended the National Association of College Stores held in New York City last April; he served as head of the panel on self-service.

George Cole, manager of the Harvard Cooperative Bookstores, asked Wheeler, "How do you control pilferage?"

Wheeler's answer to the effect that pilferage has not presented itself as a problem at FSU is a credit to this university.

It is unfortunate that his assertion is not applicable to every phase of university life. All too often, however, the dishonor of a few serves to discredit the achievements of an otherwise praiseworthy group or enterprise, as the case may be.

So long as this is true at Florida State University, we cannot say that we have a working Honor System, and we are indulging in hypocrisy if we do.

● COURT NOTES

The Flambeau today will reprint what will be the first in a series of legal notices.

Today's include the decision of the University Court on the Hill disqualification case and is reprinted under chapter 300 of the University Statutes, in which the court is required to have the entire official opinion reprinted in the Flambeau.

Klyne "Pinky" Nowlin, chairman of the Traffic Court, has requested that the Flambeau print a list of traffic violations with names withheld, and the paper begins this service today also.

The Flambeau will print all constitutional amendments which are placed for approval of the student body.

Hollister Spins His Phantasmagoria, Unorganized Confusion Over WTNT

By BOB FOLSOM

Rick Hollister, who just may be the best disc-jockey in these parts, usually rules the 8 to 8 a.m. Timekeeper and 3 to 8 p.m. Bandstand spots weekdays over WTNT, delivering his "embroglio, phantasmagoria, and unorganized confusion" on "round-square, rectangular, sextangler, octangler, trapezoidal and hexagonal" records

We caught him a few minutes before he went on the air with his afternoon show. He was dressed in a brown and white checked sport shirt, brown flannel slacks, and brown suede shoes

"I've been out to Wakulla Springs practically all day. Dr. Kellogg of the university and I are doing research work for the Oceanographic Institute, studying the sonar system of porpoises. It's Dr. Kellogg's belief that porpoises swim under water by sending out signals, little beeps, which echo back and give them bearings." He laughed. "I'm more at home under water than on the land. Oh—." The engineer motioned him, he turned in the swivel chair, flicked on his theme song, Dixie a jazzed up version by Sammy Kaye, and Bandstand for Thursday afternoon was on the air.

Rick is a solid-looking, self-assured young man of 25, who is gifted with a virile and husky voice, as many of his listeners will confirm.

"Ever heard this?" he asked. The first bars of a wierd melody came on. Rick suddenly threw his arms up and clawed the air with his fingers, while his face assumed a ghastly expression. "Real crazy," he said.

He told us of the happenings he saw that morning. "There's a movie crew out at Wakulla filming the first 3-D underwater picture. You know in other water pictures they've dived in a bell to photograph scenes, but in this one the cameraman skin-dives with an aqua-lung, and swims around to make the shots. The camera is in a pressurized case. We were testing our own pressurized still camera. We took some shots, of the movie people, and of each other, and of the fish," he laughed again.

What is the movie about? "I heard that it's with Richard Carlson. It's about a frog some scientists discover — a real, wierd, gruesome looking thing. Big green scales on the stomach, webbed and claw feet. Real monstrous. I asked one of the make-up man if it had a lethal weapon. And he said 'super-strength it eats people.' Actually it's only a sponge model. Wait a minute—" He read a commercial, chatted about some "original flesh-colored, protoplastic, globular, perforated mass," flapped the turnstile, and another tune came over the air.

"Most requested record? 'Ebb Tide' with the poetry. The one where I read the words I hate to admit it. It sounds awful conceited." He paused for a minute to glance at the time and check the dials, and then went on. "I cut a commercial record in Atlantic City of Poes' Annabelle Lee, and I don't have any more now. I'm going to send up after some. If I get about twenty-five requests for "Ebb Tide" I'm going to cut a disc, and sell it for the price it cost us to record it."

Rick came to Tallahassee from Miami and has been here about a month and a half. His interest started in skin-diving and spear fishing in Miami where he was working a disc jockey show. He came here to do more study on it at the university. And when he's out flipping with the word and music, you'll likely find him underwater.

He did a stint with WOND in Atlantic City, working a midnight to 2 a.m. show, where he interviewed the great names in the music world—Laine, Sinatra, et al.

Was Tallahassee a big change for that? "No," he said, seriously. "The important thing is playing the kind of music they want, and having the type of show and personality to go with it. We're trying to get clearance now to have telephone interviews with the well-known personalities. We've got a sponsor, and everything is about ready to spring."

If you have heard his show, you know about Jerry, the character that is usually always talking back to Rick. How about him? "I've always left him as an entity. A little creature who lacks finesse but he's crazy about girls. Jerry was particularly impressed and excited by the head majorette at the last FSU game. The one that wears the long feathers. And he's been begging me to have her on the show to meet her. I promised him I'll have her up on the show sometime."

Since it seems to be in the spotlight at the moment, we asked Rick what he thought about the latest craze—St. George and the Dragonet. "Freberg was a genius to do that. Writes all his own stuff, does it, he's the greatest."

The time was approaching the "gaping, bloody, precipice of 8 o'clock" when we bid Rick goodbye and took our leave.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

Letters to the Editor . . .

Congratulations

Dear Editor Galphin:

Congratulations upon receiving the staff and senate approval for Flambeau's editorship. We are confident that you can and will be a competent and worthy officer of the newspaper.

It is comforting to both your staff and the student body to know that another leader has been chosen to fill the office vacated by Marcia Morris.

No one knows better than we, how important and necessary it is to have a staff that has the utmost confidence in its editor.

On behalf of the staffs of Tally Ho and Smoke Signals, we wish you every measure of success as you officially "take the reins" of our student newspaper.

Very sincerely,
Becky Brown

Appreciation

Dear Fellow Students:

Now that the anxiety and tensions surrounding the selection of a Flambeau editor are over, I want to express my deep appreciation to a number of people.

First of all, I thank the Senate for the Flambeau itself, for ending an unworkable situation on the paper's staff. Their prompt action in the third meeting was a great help to the Flambeau.

To President Milton Carothers I extend my thanks for his patience, and his understanding of the importance of a line of authority.

To Warren Cobb, my managing editor, I express my thanks for his magnanimous Senate speech, his honesty and his sensibility.

To those who took such an interest in the outcome of the situation, both those who wrote letters and those who expressed interest otherwise, go my heartfelt thanks.

Sincerely,
Bruce M. Galphin.

RAT CAPS

Dear Editor:

The incoming Freshman often asks of the Sophomore why he should have to wear the little beanies known as "Rat caps." I can remember when I was asking the same question. But, Freshmen, though it may seem silly and even unfair now, when you have progressed to the status of upperclassmen, the answers will long have been clear to you. Perhaps I can help answer some of the questions now, since I have reached this "know it all" state.

In the first place, rat caps help distinguish persons in your own class from the lowly and mis guided upperclassmen. You can always count on a person being your friend, if he sports a small red dinkie on his crown. As time goes on, you will come to recognize the cap as a nastolgic memento of your Freshman days, supposedly the happiest of your college life. Perhaps at this time next year you will feel a pang of envy when you see the new crop of rat caps.

Then, too, rivalry between the Freshman and Sophomore Class, symbolized by the caps, grown until the Freshmen, (O happy day) triumph over the Sophomores in the field day. Then you will all join together in happy union over the event. So you see, the caps really build up class spirit.

Also, there are many reasons why you should have to say hello to every upperclassman you see, such as to create a more friendly atmosphere, and so to meet new people. We Sophomores for the most part will answer your greetings, and I feel like I can say the same thing for the other upperclassmen. I myself, like to hear the cheery hellos uttered by the Frosh as they pass by, and you may feel the same way next year. Remember, it will be your turn next year.

The rat court's function is to see that the requirements are carried out, so do not harbor any malicious feelings toward them, since they are only doing their duty, and you may be on the Court yourself next year.

Sincerely yours,
Name Withheld by Request

School of Business Fetes Organizations With Reception

Presidents of all Florida State University business and professional mens' and women's fraternities met yesterday afternoon to make arrangements for the traditional School of Business Reception. It was decided to hold the affair Thursday night, October 22 from 8 to 10 p.m. in the main lounge, Longmire Building.

In speaking of the proposed reception, Dr. J. Frank Dame, of the School of Business, noted that the growth of the traditional affair has directly paralleled the growth of the School of Business on this campus. Mr. Dame also lauded all of the professional organizations for the progress which they have made in the past few years. He feels that these groups are a real credit to the school.

Committees named for the reception are: refreshments, Scullions and Baking Club; promotion, Alpha Delta Sigma and Gamma Alpha Chi; hostesses, Pi Omega Pi, invitations, Alpha Kappa Psi; reception line, Delta Sigma Pi, Insurance and Real Estate Club, and Pi Omega Pi.

A Missouri man celebrated his 75th birthday by swimming a mile. Never too late to strike out for yourself.

University Court Decisions

October 8, 1953
George Hill v. Bill Stancik
Secretary of Elections
I U C I

George Hill was declared ineligible to run for Freshman Office by the Secretary of Elections on the grounds that his summer school grades disqualified him under Art. V, Section 1, Parts A & B. The Constitution reading in part:

> "A. Major Offices
> All candidates for major offices shall be required to maintain a 1.3 scholastic average for the semester preceding their election, or a 1.3 overall average. The following offices shall be designated as major offices
> The Four Class Presidents.
> B. Minor Offices
> All other offices and appointed officers in the Student Body, class offices, and the staffs of the three publications shall be designated as minor offices and shall require a 1.0 average for the semester preceding their elections, or a 1.0 overall average."

Mr. Hill entered Florida State University during the summer session of 1953. Failing to make the 1.3 average by the Constitution, he was informed that he was ineligible to run. He then appealed to this court, his appeal being heard on the eighth of October, 1953.

Admitting that Article V, Section 1, Part A & B requires the candidate for any office, other than first semester freshman elections, to qualify under this Section we nevertheless feel that it doesn't apply to freshman entering school during the summer and desiring to run for office in the fall.

The fact was brought before this court that summer school grades do not make upper classmen eligible or ineligible to run for office just on the basis of summer school grades.

Therefore this court orders that the decision of the Secretary of Elections, in this case be reversed, and that no person in the freshman class shall be declared eligible or ineligible on the basis of summer school grades.

Traffic Violations

Four students received citations for traffic violations and were hailed into the Student Traffic Court this week.

Two students were apprehended for parking overtime in the 15 minute zone of Westcott; they were given warnings.

One student was apprehended for parking overtime in the 15 minute zone of Westcott and failure to display University car sticker, fined 50 cents.

One student was apprehended for parking in no parking place and outside of white lines, fined 50 cents.

Four students did not appear before the court. They will be notified to appear next Tuesday at 8:00 in the University Senate Room of the Longmire Building or will be considered guilty for failure to appear.

Polgar Arouses Doubt About Series

By BRUCE GALPHIN

From all I have heard, the Polgar show Tuesday night was widely enjoyed, but I feel the appearance of such a man on the Artist Series indicates a need for re-examining the governing principals of the program.

For years the Artist Series has brought artists and lecturers of top quality to the campus. Doing so is consistent with the first two points in the policy stated by the Artist Series Committee last year:

"1. To supplement and enrich the student's cultural and artistic experience.

2. To bring top quality artists to the campus, within the limitations of the budget."

Other programs scheduled for this year also adhere to this credo: Cornelia Otis Skinner, the Don Cossack Chorus and the First Piano Quartet are all recognized for excellence in their respective fields. Miss Skinner is not only a lecturer of note but has an admirable reputation as an actress and author (OUR HEARTS WERE YOUNG AND GAY, etc.). The Don Cossack Chorus has for years been recognized as one of the leading national singing groups. The First Piano Quartet has established an enviable reputation for itself both in recording and concert work.

Polgar seems peculiarly out of place on such a roster. He was at best entertaining, but to many he is considered a charlatan. Trained professionals who use hypnotism as a tool of science and medicine, and then only with great care, have decried his commercial exploitation of the skill. Many sober scientists resent his claims of telepathic ability. His press-book is full of fantastic assertions, such as those that minds send out "vibrations" and that he gained his telepathic ability after a bomb blast. His appearance on the Artist Series might be likened to a circus in an Opera House.

Actually, bringing Polgar here was conceivably consistent with the third and fourth points in the Artist Series Committee's policy, however:

"3. To present programs which reflect the interests of the student body as a whole.

4. To keep in mind the entertainment value of the program."

Thus it is basically the policy which needs reconsideration rather than any one selection. As far as I can see, points one and two might often conflict with three and four, if the latter are carried to extremes. Certainly bringing a man whose claims are so dubious does not supplement and enrich the student's cultural and artistic experience, even though it reflects the interests of the student body as a whole.

Choosing a few programs for a cultural series must of needs be rather arbitrary, and not everyone is going to be satisfied with the choices, whatever they may be. However, I think the Series should be devoted to broadening the students' cultural and artistic experiences, i.e., that it should attempt to "uplift," rather than appeal to undeveloped tastes. Thus it would be preferable for a committee of experts to concern itself with the best available than to worry about appealing to "popularity." Popularity in the end might wreck the prestige and value of the Artist Series.

THE SPECTATOR

Obligations Versis The Spoils Systom

By WARREN COBB

When the smoke has cleared from the present political controversy involving Acting Governor Charley Johns and his "spoils system," it may be found that he has inadvertently committed political suicide.

Johns' statement that all members of the governor's "Little Cabinet" should offer him their resignations so that he may decide whom he wants to keep has not set so well with Dan McCarty's administration, and what was perhaps planned as a routine housecleaning has now developed into a damaging political harangue.

Johns has said that "if the ones I think need to be replaced don't turn in their resignations, I'm going to ask for them."

Three of McCarty's appointees have indicated that if Johns wants their resignations, he will have to ask for them and give reasons.

Presumably, he will do just that.

The whole affair began last week with the submission of the resignation of Motor Vehicle Commissioner E. V. Fisher. Johns rejected Fisher's resignation with the statement that Fisher was "rending an efficient and honorable public service to this state" and has "demonstrated administrative ability, aptitude, efficiency, and integrity."

Well and good. But on what grounds will Johns be able to maintain that a man such as Richard Simpson, Chairman of the State Road Department, is NOT "rending efficient and honorable service" — except those that Simpson was a strong supporter of Dan McCarty, the man who didn't want to see Johns in the governor's seat?

Said Simpson: "Any voluntary resignation at this time would be a betrayal of the confidence placed in me by the late Dan McCarty and the thousands of people who supported him for governor.

"I feel that after the governor is elected to succeed McCarty all appointees should offer their resignations for consideration of the new governor who has been before the people with his program."

This is a clear allusion, of course, to the fact that Johns has not been before the people with his program.

Johns is planning to run for the office next year in the special election for the unexpired two-year term — if he is eligible. This column previously stated that he was not. It was assumed that he was disqualified because of the pay increase given the governor by the 1953 Legislature, of which Johns was a member.

But Supreme Court Justice Mathews has recently said that the pay raise was improperly granted and should be invalidated. This would clear the way for the acting governor's ambition to run.

These gubernatorial aspirations are the key to Johns' intended housecleaning. As he has said, he wants loyal supporters around him for that campaign.

As things are now shaping up, it is likely to be a rough one.

Brailey Odham, who has said he will probably run next year, has not missed the chance to make political capital out of Johns' present predicament.

"Johns has a moral obligation to carry forward the program that Dan had started with the appointees of Dan McCarty's," asserted Odham. "If Johns has a program of his own and political friends he feels obligated to favor, he can run for the office in May and present his program to the people for acceptance or rejection."

It also appears likely that John McCarty, brother of the deceased governor, will enter the race. He says that Dan McCarty's program will have a champion in the coming election. Obviously he was not referring to either Johns or Odham. Perhaps if McCarty does not run himself, his forces will rally behind either Sen. Leroy Collins of Tallahassee or Simpson, whose resignation Johns is now seeking.

An added feature to the picture is the recent statement of availability by General James Van Fleet.

Complicating the situation is the danger facing a potential candidate that, should he be elected for the unexpired term, the Supreme Court may rule that he cannot succeed himself. The Constitution is ambiguous on this point, and there is no precedent on which to base a decision.

In the meantime, Johns is faced with the problem of how best to deal with the appointments of the man the state elected by such an overwhelming majority.

He wants to run the office in his own way—but he has an eye on November, 1954.

It is a good bet that the repercussions of the recent upheaval will make themselves felt when Charley Johns carries his program before the state electorate for the first time next year.

CAMPUS CARAVAN

Kids, Idiots, Physicists Prefer Beauty

By BEVERLY LACAYO

A couple of weeks ago we attempted a campus poll on the question of which is more valuable: brains or beauty? There were approximately 14 responses, mostly verbal. The men voted for beauty . . . so did children, idiots, and physics professors. There was one vote from a Phi Beta Kappa for brains, and one from public relations, stating that neither mattered providing you had a good press agent. For additional information on this topic contact Tom Woods at the Theta Chi house. He is well equipped with advertisements, leaflets and photographs which prove that a million men can't be wrong (about beauty that is).

One of the numerous professors and fathers-of-students who have been reading the Flambeau of late accosted me in the hall last week saying, "What is this silly survey on brains and beauty, young lady? Do you realize that a certain type of lowbrow column can ruin an otherwise excellent paper?"

Being of a generous, public spirited nature, I took this slight criticism in earnest and relayed the message to the staff, with the suggestion that they remove Bob Strane's record column immediately—before more people start complaining.

Speaking about the quality of the Flambeau—a group of debaters were doing just that in the Amber House one night, when an attorney general lifted his nose from the coffee cup and expounded, "I like this intellectual stuff: It makes me feel good when I read it."

All's well that ends well and many people are glad to hear of the senior staff's renomination of Brue Galphin as editor and the confirmation of the appointment by Senate. Yours truly was thankful for the explanation given in Tuesday's edition about this misquote on Greek-Independent relations in our last column.

I was getting ready to throw a "tomato and egg" party from the missiles I collected over the weekend.

Actually, this campus is distinctly superior not only in the friendliness which exists between Fraternity and non-Fraternity students, but also in the advantages for the independent students and in the contributive nature of the greek organizations—which use the group ties, not as a hindrance to individuality, but as a more effective means of adding to the campus life.

Tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock the organizations committee is sponsoring an organizations convention at the music building auditorium (Opperman Hall) for instructive purposes. The secret of having a going concern is really hard work, but M. J. Parham as Secretary of Organizations is in business to help that hard work count for more. This year they will feature expert speakers and experienced students on financial problems, campus projects, public relations and promotion, leadership, and other phases of group activity. Any organization would find it very worthwhile to send two or more members to the convention tomorrow afternoon (refreshments also).

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Paramount Is Truly Outshining U-1

By DAVID DREIS

If you're a constant moviegoer, you've probably been astonished at the really good pictures coming from Paramount Studios and the really bad ones coming from Universal-International. Why this is and what can be done about it is something that is baffling movie reviewers and the general ticket holder.

For instance, in the past few months Paramount has released: Stalag 17, Shane, Roman Holiday, Little Boy Lost and Forever Female. Universal can chalk up: Battle of Apache Pass, Gunsmoke, Column South and All I Desire.

Paramount, we believe, was the first to realize that quality was much better than quantity. U-I releases more films than Paramount, but Paramount comes up with a better product. This is not a paid political announcement, but I believe that credit should go where it's due.

Universal-International works on the strict star system complete with buildup, glamour and regular star treatment. Tony Curtis wasn't good until he played Houdini for Paramount. He was appearing in Son of Ali Baba and is currently in a football picture. Jeff Chandler had to go to Columbia for Because of You and Tyrone Power, Barbara Stanwyck and James Stewart had to be borrowed to act in some of U-I's better stories.

Universal was once considered the best company in Hollywood and copped the Oscar quite a number of times. In 1931 they took a clean slate for All Quiet on the Western Front. There was only one problem; Universal was in the red and a new policy had to be established. Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride were given the Ma and Pa Kettle series and Donald O'Connor was given Francis, the Talking Mule. Donald recently asked for release from U-I and got some good roles at M-G-M. He signed though . . . at Paramount.

The executive department are high-class boys at Paramount. Starting with Frank Freeman we can go down to producers like: C. B. DeMille, Perlberg and Seaton, Billy Wilder, Irving Asher, William Wyler and Pine and Thomas.

Oh sure, Paramount sometimes produces duds, but Martin and Lewis still can ride over Abbott and Costello in any race at the box office.

Coming up on the Paramount roster is WHITE CHRISTMAS with Bing Crosby, Rosemary Clooney and Danny Kaye. On Universal's side they're going to make! SIX GUN SHOWDOWN. Aw, c'mon. Put that in yellow letters for Marian.

In the next issue, we're going to answer some suggestions and talk about the trend in popular recordings. We'll mention the newest releases and also some of the top recording stars.

nd today the Seminoles are riding a notch higher llege football's totem pole.

actually makes you feel old when you stop for a moment, ack the calendar to 1947 and remember Ed Williamson and Haskins trying to piece together a football team from a World War II veterans and a bunch of kids fresh out school Williamson is now intamurals director and Hask- of course, is the man behind Florida State's nationally- circus But they did piece together a football team. And well considering. They didn't win a game—they played out they had put the show on the road.

Hey, ae think we feel old. Wonder how Buddy Bryant, Nuge's number one right end feels? He played center on first Seminole team. Let's see now, he musta been about then. That'd make him about . . . no offense Buddy.

Then in 1948, Dr. Don Veller brought himself and his cock- "T" down from Indians, and the grid wheis really began

Dr. Doo then proceeded to click off 31 wins, 12 losses and in addition to producing Florida's first undefeated white team and a Cigar Bowl Champion. Last season, after a record he stepped down and gave way to Tom Nugent.

And here we are, ready for the big time. Maybe not as as we'd like to be, but still ready. From here on out, it's eat of the big time.

Some Nice Words For Bobby

With eight games in the fold for '54, it's reasonably safe to ne that FSU officials will try to schedule two more. In fact, emotely possible that one of the two remaining foes will be ucky but only remotely so. At any rate don't check the ats off yet Seminole officials want another home game. e Kentuckians turned thumbs down on coming here. Seems was a question of some green, folding stuff called money the possibility remains for a tilt in Lexington next Fall.

Abilene Christian is definitely out for next year. Why, don't know. They were supposed to be available for mpbell Stadium come next season. Then there was the mor that FSU would land Georgia but at this stage that seems to have lost weight.

When Villanova trots out into the confines of Campbell m next Oct. 8, we suspect every nook and cranny of the 500 seat plant will be filled and running over. But to the vanis visitors it will probably seem like small change. Wildcats, you remember, drew 94,000 into Philadelphia's n Field when they lost to Georgia in their opener this

Kentucky For 1954?

Walter Harless, sportswriter for the Abilene Times-Reporter red last Saturdays game here, had some nice words to about Bobby Fiveash, the Tribe's leading groundgainer. s had nothing but praise for Bobby in the Pressbox after day night's tussle. "Why that Fiveash is one of the best I've seen al' year, and can he so defense. Man, he hits Here's a sampling of Harless' game account when the oles scored their lone TD:

"The tally came when FSU's All-America halfback candidate Bobby Fiveash took the ball on the opening play from rimmage and galloped around the right side for 17 yards the ACC 37. From here, the flying Floridan sipped through guard for 15 more yards for the first down on the ACC Four plays later Mr. Fiveash took a pass off the arm of uarterback Harry Massey on the two and dived across te ore."

Some nice words from the typewriter of Mr. Harless. And seen some of the Southwest's best. Fiveash incidentally, was e nominating list again this week for Florida's ack of the along with Al Pacifico who received a line nomination. Pac the squat 200-pounder from Altoona, Pa., won from Abilene Coach Beaucamp as well as from Nugent for in the middle of the line the other night. We counted assists and three tackles for Pacifico from the pressbox. ash had another great night with five tackles and two assists.

Texas Scribe Predicts Split

Wonder how Southern athletic heads are taking the predic- week by a Houston, Tex. sportswriter that the 12-team eastern Conference will split up into two groups at ite mber meeting.

According to the writer, John Hollis of the Houston Press, ne group would be composed of Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, eorgia Tech and one or two "border schools." The other roup would then be made up of LSU, Mississippi State, Mississippi, Tulane, possibly Tennessee, Auburn, Vanderbilt and aybe Arkansas if the latter is invited.

In such an event a flock of other rising Southern schools din Mississippi Southern and Miami would probably ask admittance. Both have expressed the desire to hook up with But two Mississippi schools already are members, and a wouldn't seem to feasable And the S.E.C. and Miami exactly buddy-buddy. Wonder how FSU would fit into situation, if there was one. Just wondering, of course.

Several months later at the Georgia AAU meet, Dr. Price was impressed by Benny's tumbling and asked him to come to FSU The inevitable happened and Benny appeared on campus September of '51.

Benny first entered competition for the Garnet and Gold during 1953 at the Tri-State meet held at Hattiesburg, Miss., and although comparatively new at gymnastics, placed second on the parallel bars and third in the rope climbing event.

NOT SATISFIED

Although Benny had placed in all the major events he entered he still was not satisfied with his showing Then followed an intensive period of hard training and in March, 1953 at Hattiesburg, Miss., Benny won the Southern Intercollegiate rope climbing championship.

Not one to rest on his laurels, Wallace continued his intensive training and at Atlanta, Ga. in April, walked away with the Georgia AAU tumbling championship plus a second place in rope climbing.

Tribe Attains Major Status

Oct. 9 Game Set For Campbell Stadium

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

After eight seasons in football's "minor leagues," Florida State University became a full-fledged "major" college team yesterday when Athletic Director Howard Danford announced that Villanova would play here neat season. The tilt is set for Oct. 8.

However the Seminoles will not actually achieve the status until the current season is completed. Under the Strength of Formula Schedule put forth by the strong Football Writers of America Association, a team cannot be classified as such until it schedules five major opponents. FSU has four on this year

EIGHT GAMES

Signing of Villanova brought to eight the number of schools lined up for 1954—four at home and four away.

Furman, Auburn, VMI, and Davidson constitute the other "major teams on the FSU schedule for next year.

In addition to Villanova, Furman, Mississippi Southern, and Davidson will appear in Campbell Stadium next season. Road games are with Louisville, VMI, Auburn and Stetson.

While it was no secret that FSU had been dickering with the Philadelphia school for several weeks, yesterday's announcement took most Tallahasseeans by surprise.

Dr. Danford flew to Philadelphia two weeks ago and met with Villanova officials but no announcement was made and the negotiations had apparently fallen through.

'ARE HAPPY'

Said Danford yesterday: "We are happy that our schedule has improved to the point that our football team is playing a major college schedule."

When told of the news Coach Tom Nugent, who will have the responsibility of tackling the ambitious card, said: "Naturally, I'm pleased, but I only hope we're not moving ahead to fast."

"We have the fundamentals of a major team," Nugent continued, "but we need linebackers, ends and several fast backs. Two more solid years of competition may enable us to meet our opponents on a fairly even basis."

"We have confidence that we should hold our own in about two years," he concluded.

Here is the schedule as it stands now, for '54. Seminole officials hope to add two more games.

Oct. 2—Louisville (there).
Oct. 9—Villanova (here).
Oct. 16—(Open.
Oct. 23—Auburn (there).
Oct. 30—VMI (there)
Nov. 6—Davidson (here).
Nov. 13—Furman (here).
Nov. 20—Stetson (there).
Nov. 20—Stetson (there).
Nov. 27—Mississippi Southern (here).

Better Week For Indian Opponents

Four of the Seminoles six upcoming opponents came out on top last Saturday for the best showing of the season. One, tomorrow night's foe—Louisiana Tech—was idle.

Unbeaten Mississippi Southern, of course, led the way by romping over Southwest Louisiana 41-14. Tampa won over Jax Navy 28-7. N. C. State dumped Davidson 26-7 and VMI showed strength by whipping the Citadel 14-0.

On the losing side, Furman took it on the chin 27-13 from South Carolina and there was Stetson's 45-0 loss to Florida.

This week will find VMI at Virginia, S. E. Louisiana at Mississippi Southern, Tampa at Stetson, and Wake Forest at N. C. State. Furman is idle.

The Detroit Lions of the NFL have 11 ex-Big Ten players on their roster. The schools represented are Ohio State, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Michigan State.

Fraternities Open Intramurals Play

By ART KENNEBLT

Hot tempers, foxy footballing, and pepped-up onlookers got the Florida State intramural show off to a right good start last Tuesday. The Greeks were the only ones to play. The dormitories begin next Monday.

The scores were small, the tactics were a little rough. But it was worth watching.

Thete Chi pulled the most surprising trick of the day. They strained by Phi Delta Theta in a narrow win, 6-0.

Alpha Tau Omega was the score builder. The ATO bunch slapped down Pi Kappa Alpha 12-0.

KA'S WIN

Phi Kappa Tau lost a battering, butting game 13-6 to Kappa Alpha. Sigma Phi Epsilon rambled squeekingly over Delta Tau Delta, 6-0. And Lambda Chi Alpha whipped Sigma Nu by the same tally, 6-0.

Sigma Chi triumphed 6-0 over Pi Kappa Alpha.

Yesterday's battles: Sigma Alpha Epsilon-Lambda Chi Alpha, Sigma Chi-Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Nu-Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta-Pi Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma-Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon-Kappa Alpha.

NEXT TUESDAY

Neat Tuesday, the fraternity schedule is like this: Thete Chi and Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Alpha Tau Omega, Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu, Kappa Sigma and Delta Tau Delta, Kappa Alpha and Sigma Chi, Phi Kappa Tau and Sigma Phi Epsilon.

On Monday the dormitories, adorned with flashy names, will go to war. The Tigers meet the Methodist Student House. Air Force flys against the Wildcats, Senior Hall bumps with Magnolia Hall and the Penthouse Gang leap to the Rebels drawl. The Tornadoes play the Newman Club crew

Skip the FSU game, and a few mid-Western upsets, and we came close to hitting them all last week.

But laying that average on the line in today's games, it's: West Virginia over George Washington . . . Boston College over Fordham . . . and upset number one, Leon over Panama City.

Tomorrow's FSU's hot and cold Indians try again at Ruston, Louisiana. And after several futile trys, we can think of nothing harder than to pick the outcome of an FSU game. They'll fool you every time. But sticking to our colors, we're going to give it to the Seminoles over La. Tech by a shade.

Tough Morris Brown invades A & M tomorrow, in what is always a top-notcher. But MB came at the wrong time this year, it's A & M's homecoming.

Touring the U. S. quickly, in the South we see: Alabama over Tennessee, but closer than you think . . . Mississippi St. over Kentucky, though they're rated even . . . Wake Forest over N. C. St. . . . Tampa over Stetson.

Georgia Tech over Auburn, the Plainsmen won't pull this one out . . . Mississippi Southern over SE Louisiana, don't they get tired of playing those setups? . . . Maryland over North Carolina, but no runaway . . . Virginia over VMI.

Florida over Citadel, but the Gators have it rough after this week . . . Louisiana oevr eGorgia, I'm betting on it . . . William and Mary on top of Virginia Tech . . . and upset number two, Tulane over the solid favorite, Mississippi.

Up East: Duke over Army, but watch the fur fly . . . Villanova over Detroit . . . Navy over Princeton . . . Columbia over Harvard . . . Penn St. over Syracuse . . . Colgate over Dartmouth.

ta.f

Ohio St over Penn, the Bucks were derailed last week, but they'll get back on the track here . . . Rutgers over Brown . . . and upset number three, Cornell over Yale.

Pointing to the Midwest: Surprise Illinois over Minnesota . . . Missouri over Iowa St. . . . Miami over Nebraska, the 'Canes are stronger than you think . . . Wisconsin over Purdue . . . Iowa over Wyoming

Notre Dame over Pitt, avenging last year's upset . . . Michigan St. over Indiana, poor Hoosiers . . . Michigan over Northwestern in a real headliner . . . Kansas St. over Colorado . . . and Cincinnati over Xavier.

Out Texas way, it's: Texas over Arkansas, they play for keeps out there . . . Baylor over Vanderbilt, too much power . . . Oklahoma Aggies over Houston.

Oklahoma over Kansas, but they won't make shredded wheat out of 'em . . . Texas A & M over dangerous TCU, by one point . . . and upset number four, SMU over Rice.

Over on the other coast: Southern Cal over scoreless Oregon St. . . . Washington over Oregon . . . California over San Jose St. . . . Washington St. over Idaho . . . and mighty UCLA over Stanford, this could be Chuck Taylor's last year.

Almost forgot: Slippery Rock over Indiana St., those doggone Rockets haven't been beaten yet.

Stetson Preps

ORLANDO — Two of Florida State University's upcoming foes meet head on here tomorrow night—Tampa and Stetson.

The Hatters will be trying to break a tie-jinx against the Spartans Saturday night. The two teams have tied for the past two years. The 1951 game ended in a 14-14 tie and they fought to a 6-6 deadlock last year.

Tribe Still Leads On Statistics Chart

Despite last Saturday's loss to Abilene Christian FSU still maintains a wide edge over it's three opponents in the statistics column.

In fact, the Seminoles lead in 25 departments, due for the most part to the fine performance turned in against Louisville. And if the Tribe continues at its present clip, several new marks stand to be rewritten by the end of the season.

The chief records in jeopardy, of course, are the total offense, and rushing marks besides numerous individual records.

FIVEASH LEADS

Jet-heeled Bobby Fiveash, Nugent's fine all-around halfback tops the Tribe's individual leaders in four departments—rushing, total offense, kickoff returns and scoring

The blond bomber has rolled for 179 yards in 29 attempts along the ground for a splendid 6.2 average. Add 44 yards and his total offense shoots up to 223 yards and the leadership.

Fiveash has hauled back four kickoffs for 93 yards and tops the scoring parade with 24 points on four TD's. He is second in pass receiving with five catches for 43 yards.

Harry Massey, rapidly developing into the team's Number one quarterback has thrown nine strikes in 24 attempts including one TD. He is also the leader in yards gained with 88.

Jimmy Lee Taylor is the top pass receiver with seven catches for 129 yards and an 18.4 average per catch while Lee Corso is the punt return leader with 93 yards in four runbacks including one scoring dash.

Here are the team totals and the individual leaders (first five in each).

Seek To Even Season Mark

Tech Favored to Hand Indians Third Loss

The Florida State's footballers, seeking to even their season mark at 2-2 are scheduled to leave here by plane at 1 p. m. today for Rushton, La., where they clash with tough Louisiana Tech tomorrow night.

Smarting from last Saturday's 20-7 setback at the hands of Abilene Christian, the Seminoles may well find themselves in for an even rougher night than the previous one.

But if revenge is a motive, an it should be in this case, tomorrow's battle could stack up as a real humdinger, although the Louisianans have been established as favorites.

LAST YEAR

For it was the Bulldogs that started the Tribe on last year's disastrous season by upsetting Coach Don Veller's club 33-13 in the season opener here last year.

From that start, Tech went on to roll up an impressive record of six wins, two ties, against a single loss while the Seminoles could salvage only one win and a tie out of ten starts

And this season, Coach Joe Aillet's Techsters are off to another fine start. They opened up with a 20-6 win over Louisiana College, lost to Memphis State 13-7 and ran roughshod over N.E. Louisiana State 61-6.

Last week the Bulldogs had an open date and hence have had two weeks to point toward the Nugent-coached Indians

In the FSU camp this week the Seminoles came face to face with a problem which has stayed away from their door most of the season—injuries.

Joe Holt, who had blossomed forth as the Tribe's top fullback turned an ankle in the Abilene tilt and has been at half speed all week.

Then Ronnie King the number two bucker aggravated an old knee injury and was forced to the sidelines

To fill the gap Nugent moved in John Griner at Full.

Finally on Tuesday disaster struck again when first-string center Steve Kalenich went on the shelf with possible bone chips in his knee. He is expected to be out three weeks

To fill the gap, Nugent shifted large George Boyer to the pivot post where he and Bob Crenshaw will carry the load tomorrow night.

The remainder of the lineup will probably find Buddy Bryant and Jimmy Lee Taylor at the ends, Don Powell and Al Makowiecki at the tackles, and Jerry Jacobs and Al Pacifico at the gaurds.

In the backfield it will be Harry Massey at quarterback, Stan Dobosz and Bobby Fiveash at the halves and Griner at fullback.

there's no need to be quite that accurate

MOST OF the women's costumes are being made while the men are having old suits remodeled.

Producing a play in a late-Victorian setting is the bane of their existence for property and scenery men also.

"IT'S SOMETIMES quite hard to produce a play dealing with with the Victorian Era because all the properties and furniture of that time have either been lost to us or are now antiques and hard to get," commented Charles Reimer, in charge of scenery and lighting

He noted that this difficulty is quite often surmounted through the generosity of several Tallahassee furniture stores, which lend valuable lots to the Department of Speech productions.

SURPRISINGLY, a play such as Romeo and Juliet would be easier to produce, from Reimer's standpoint, since he said, Shakespeare wrote most of his plays calling for little or no stage settings and properties

Life With Father demands numerous stage properties, most of which are being made by Reimer's students. Among these props is the plaster dog which figures prominently in the plot.

REIMER'S stage and prop crews are the unsung heroes of any play

Ordinary paper towels are a favorite tool of Reimer's group This writer, while browsing around in the properties workshop, noticed what appeared to be wax fruit The "fruit" turned out to be not even wax, but light bulbs sheathed in paper towelling and covered with a convincing coat of paint.

WITH A LITTLE more rehearsing, the cast will have worked out the forced nature of some of the dialogue and actions Some of it does sound a bit strained, but progress has been commendable, and a top-flight production is foreseen.

recognized as the most reliable from the standpoint of literature, such as Harpers or the Atlantic Monthly.

"Since little is being done in high schools to remedy the situation it is not surprising that when students come to college we find them, generally speaking, reading about what they read when they entered high school And since little is being done in college to remedy the situation it is not surprising to find the periodical reading of college graduates not significantly different from that of non-graduates."

STUDIES have shown that schools and colleges do materially influence tastes in book reading but not in magazine reading. The reason, says Professor Vance, is very simple Schools and colleges makes little or no effort to cultivate good magazine reading habits.

"Taken together," he writes, "these facts tell their own story The amount and character of current periodical reading is an educational and social phenomenon of first importance. Present tastes and habits leave much to be desired. Schools can influence reading habits but are not significantly influencing periodical reading habits Obvious conclusion: schools need to give some real attention to this area"

THERE ARE two basic reasons why schools have not given more attention to this area. Professor Vance says "The first is traditional. The past, mastery of settled fact, still is widely regarded as the province of education Events in flux, things not even yet born, like next month's magazine article, schools have not considered their business.

"As a natural consequence, we have developed no techniques for dealing with the present. We teachers are slaves to textbooks and current reading can't be taught out of a textbook Teachers who see the great need in this area must pioneer in finding their own materials and techniques.

"FOR SOMEWHAT more than 20 years the author has been pioneering in this field This doubtless represents more experience in teaching current periodical reading than anyone in America has acquired and perhaps entitles me to speak briefly ex cathedra.

"In a word, what I have done is choose what are fairly generally considered among educated persons to be the best general magazines and had students read them—regularly and extensively. I emphasize the last two words. If the aim is to create reading habits there must be considerable and there must be regular reading And there must also be reading over a considerable period of time

"FOR THIS reason, I run my course through a full year Ideally, I think it should run through two years The idea must be abandoned that a hit and miss assignment now and then in a good magazine can significantly influence reading habit.

"I also emphasize that the reading chosen — at whatever maturity level — must be the best available for that level Since all periodical reading material is controlled to greater or lesser extent by commercial considerations, even the best available will often be dishearteningly mediocre but the task of a teacher, I take it, is to lead the student to prefer the good over the bad, the better over the good.

"I HOPE THIS shocks no educational pretenses of grand impartiality The literature teacher makes no effort to conceal that he asks students to read some things rather than others because he thinks they are more worth reading—they are better

"The truth is that teachers in every subject must constantly make value judgments. How could music appreciation be cultivated without some choice as to what is better and worse? In any subject, the mere choice of a textbook represents a value judgment Choosing values among present-day newspapers or magazines, it is true, presents additional problems, but schools cannot evade the issue if they are to undertake to cultivate better reading habits."

"IN A WORD, what is needed but largely missing in American education is a forthright study of this day in history. That is what a good course in current periodical reading or rather a course in reading good periodicals would be. It would be a study of the ever-moving now, to discover what we know, what we don't know, and what we need to know as a basis for this day's action. It would provide experience in following a moving culture It would serve to launch the young person into the stream of his culture and to provide him with a method of keeping abreast of it.

Campus Able to Boast Many Honor Societies

Recognition for academic excellence at Florida State University, accumulated through the years, has grown and in no known instance has shown any decline, President Doak S. Campbell said in his last biennial report.

"National honor societies in the various fields of study have recognized the university by establishing chartered groups on the campus," he reported, adding that it has full recognition by regional and national bodies which accredit universities.

FSU WAS AWARDED the first chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in the state of Florida. It is the oldest academic fraternity recognizing high scholarship and breadth of cultural interests. Membership is considered the top academic honor for a graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences to which it is confined.

Campus Chest Organizes Here; Plans Activities

By ORCHID ALONSO

The campus version of the community chest drive, the Campus Chest, got on its feet last week when Student Body President Milton Carothers appointed Shirley Traxler and Charlie McDaniel as co-chairmen.

The Campus Chest, which started here three years ago to eliminate the various drives by the Red Cross and other such organizations over the school year by incorporating it into one big drive, will begin on November 1 and run until November 7.

LAST YEAR'S Campus Chest Drive, sparked by Margsret Krauseman, a German exchange student, collected an all-time high, but still fell short of the expected goal of $3,000 by about $700.

Plans for the Chest are not immediately known, but it is supposed that the drive will be even bigger and better than last year's, with all efforts being made by the various members of the committee to overtake the 1952 record.

COMMITTEE members, still freshly appointed, are at work with ideas and slogans to start the campaign. Last year's slogan of "Got a Match—Light the Campus Chest" was inaugurated at a football game when university President Doak S. Campbell explained the slogan that had been puzzling the students.

He illustrated the slogan by asking that everyone light a match when the stadium lights went out, showing that just a little from everyone contributed to a big thing, as the stadium lighted up with several thousand little flickers.

THE CHEST committee is still unsure whether there will be a cup presented to the organization contributing the most per member, towards the fund. Last year, the P Club won the cup by contributing $238 with a membership of 49.

First entry in this year's Campus Chest drive is Ruge Hall, Episcopal Student Center. Members of that religious group have announced a smorgasbord as their part in raising funds. Sunday night, November 1 at 7 p.m. the affair will start at Ruge Hall, West Jefferson Street.

Test Gives Men Good Chance For College Deferment

Male students who are eligible for Selective Service should take advantage of the opportunity for deferment offered by a passing mark on the Selective Service College Qualification Test, Charles H. Walker, Registrar, stated today.

In order to take the test, an application blank must be obtained from one of the Selective Service Local Boards. Local Board No. 11 in Tallahassee is located at 319 East Gaines Street and is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:20 p.m. Monday through Friday. The last day for picking up application blanks in November 2, 1953.

The test will be given at Florida State University on November 18, 1953, in Longmire Auditorium under the direction of Dr. M. H. DeGraff.

Mr. W. C. Holt, Supervisor of Selective Service Affairs, pointed out that the Selective Service Qualification Test can be taken only once by a student. He emphasized the fact that there is a definite advantage in taking the test, and that there can be no disadvantage even though a passing grade is not attained.

Detailed information concerning the test can be obtained from Mr. Holt at 307 Westcott.

Dr. Neel Addresses Seniors At Meeting

Following his talk, Neel introduced the class sponsors, Dr. Ralph Dreger and Miss Daisy Parker.

Current Events Being Studied In Courses By Kobre, Roady

Florida State University is now offering courses related to current events. The Political Science department and the Journalism department have given current affairs courses which will be repeated during the coming semester. Dr. Elston Roady of the Political Science Department will teach a one-hour course, "The Background of Current Affairs," which will be open to all students including freshmen.

One major news event will be discussed each week, and if possible, the event will relate to political and party issues.

Dr. Roady said, "We hope that students taking this course will better understand the political implications of current, national and international affairs. We are not especially concerned with how the news is gathered. However, we are, of course, prepared to evaluate known truth from falsehood. We also find it impossible to handle political interpretation without recourse to economic, social and other factors involved."

THE JOURNALISM School offers a course in "Interpreting the News" taught by Dr Sidney Kobre. This course tries to link up courses in social science and psychology with the news. Crime news on page 1 is studied and students learn how crime news is reported; what the strengths and weaknesses are, and how such news might be backgrounded and the causes and means of prevention understood.

Strike news is also examined by this class. The causes of strikes are studied and methods of reducing them are surveyed.

WHEN DISASTERS, such as fire, flood, or famine, occur these are studied in the class. The problems connected with coverage and the difficulty of getting the news is

Play on Broadway for 3224 Performances, Runs Here 4

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON
Feature Editor

Life with Father, Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse's humorous play based on Clarence Day's book, has quite a history in the theatre world. The original production, which ran for more than 10 years, numbering 3,224 performances, is unsurpassed. Even Oklahoma and Tobacco Road did not equal this long run.

The Day family, being redheaded, presented a problem for casting students in FSU's "Life With Father" being presented October 23, 24, 26, and 27 in Augusta Conradi Theater at 8:15 p.m.

DR. PAUL DAVEE, director of the student production, found a natural red head, Charles Bogdahn, senior speech major, for the title role. He chose a couple of black haired students, Eb Thomas and Lloyd Kay for Father's two oldest sons, Clarence and John—he has promised they will have red hair for the play. Possibly food-coloring or bronzing powder will be used to dye the characters into their parts.

The first production of "Life With Father" opened on Broadway on November 8, 1939, featuring Howard Lindsay as Father, Dot Stickney as Mother, and Theresa Wright, now a screen star, as Mary Skinner.

BROOKS ATKINSON, critic for the New York Times, described "Father" as being "logical from an unreasonable point of view." The charm and humor in the play lies in its perfect relationship between Father and Mother Day in the period of the late 1880's.

In the play, Father insists that he dominates the Day household, and Mother and the four red-haired boys, aged six, ten, fifteen, and seventeen, allow him to believe this.

THE FAMILY budget and Mother's extravagances, the eldest son's love life, and the uproar caused when Mother discovers that Father has never been baptized, create a series of events and climaxes filled with laughter and warmth.

During its 10-year run on Broadway, the boys who acted in the play had to be replaced several times as they outgrew their parts. Dr. Davee had to go outside FSU into a Tallahassee elementary school and a junior high school for Father's two younger boys. He selected eight-year-old Billy Reynolds, son of Dr. Paul Reynolds, dean of College of Arts and Sciences, and Mrs. Reynolds, for the role of Harlan.

Walter Richards, son of William A. Richards, assistant professor of business education, and Mrs. Richards, was chosen to play Whitney. Both boys are blondes and soon-to-be red heads for the play.

ELLEN DRIGGERS will have the roe of Vinnie, the mother. In the supporting cast, all with major parts, are Nancy Dickinson, Annie; Dorothy Womble, Margaret; Bert Hollander, Cousin Cora; Joanna Watts, Mary Skinner.

Lee Hildman, the Rev. Dr. Lloyd; Joanne Williams, Delia; Suzanne Alford, Nora; Gerald McClelland, Dr. Humphreys; Franklin Adams, Dr. Sommers; and June Misell, Maggie.

ANSWERS TO the problems regarding the setting and costuming of the period play have been worked out by Mr. Charles Reimer, FSU instructor in stage craft, and Mr. Douglas Russell, FSU instructor in speech, who directed the designing and constructing of costumes, all representative of the 1880's.

Tickets for this three-act production will go on sale in the box office at Conradi Theater beginning tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will continue on sale those hours throughout the run. Reservations may be made by calling 28000, extension 2311. All seats will be reserved.

The A.P.O. has over $400 in the B. X. fund which belongs to students who have left books there this year. Students are reminded that if they do not bring their claim check down and cash it in before Friday, they will forfeit their money.

THE CLEARING of the B. X. is part of a re-organization of the entire book handling system by the A.P.O.

The students are urged to hold their books and sell them directly to other students through the Book Exchange which is operated solely for the benefit of the student body by the Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity.

THE STUDENTS are assured of more efficient service in the future if the student body cooperates with the A.P.O. by trading their old books. The student management would like the students to know that this service is limited only by the number of students who support it.

Freshmen to Vie For Top Positions In Class of '57

Official qualification of candidates for all Freshmen offices begins today, said Bill Stancik, Secretary of Student Body Elections.

Active campaigning will not begin until October 27 at 5 p m, at which time, campaign literature and posters may be posted. Stancik emphasized that candidates must not post or distribute literature, nor solicit votes within 50 feet of the polling places. Polling places have not been announced yet.

THE VACANT offices are: President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, Social Chairman, and six University Senators, three men and three women.

Freshmen who meet the following qualifications will be declared elegible for candidacy:

2. Been found to be constitutionally qualified to hold the office for which they declared their candidacy.
3. FILED, in good order, an Expense Estimate with the Secretary of Elections.

Any group of students may form a political party for their candidate, provided the general purpose of the organization is for the election to office of qualified students, and the determination of student issues under the accepted democratic processes of the government of the Student Body.

WRITE-IN VOTES are legal in both the primary and the final or run-off elections.

Local Sentiment Beclouds Point of Hutchins' Article

It was unfortunate for Dr. Robert M. Hutchins that he made passing blows at FSU's beloved and revered campus circus in his article "University for Utopians" appearing in the October 17 issue of SATURDAY REVIEW.

For if Dr. Hutchins hoped to put across a point about education to the students and faculty of FSU, he reckoned without the rage that two phrases would stir up. Few people, among either those who have read the article or those who have not, know any more than that it said: ". . . The award of college credit at Florida State University for being a clown is in my view as great a disservice to higher education and academic freedom as any of the carryings on of Senator McCarthy or Congressman Velde.

"Unfortunately, these gentlemen would have no objection to the clowning program of the Florida State University, because that does not involve thought, still less independent thought and criticism . . ."

Most FSU students and faculty members are proud of their circus. It's entertaining to those who watch and fun to those who participate (as well as being a lot of work).

Moreover, it is felt Dr. Hutchins borrowed the trick of the sensational example from journalism in singling out the circus clown. "What if you can get an hour's credit for being a clown?" the question is asked. "You have to work for it. Is it any worse than credit for football or baseball or track?" Circus people, in fact, are reputed to have higher scholastic standing than any other team as a whole.

We do not believe Hutchins holds any particular grudge against the FSU circus, despite his highly colored statements; rather, he was taking a highly illustrative case to put across his major point: that universities have wandered a long way from their original ideal of scholarly, free inquiry.

Whether or not this trend from scholasticism to a democratized educational-trade school-country club atmosphere has been on the whole a good or bad influence, we shall not attempt to argue here. Hutchins considers it bad, and his article certainly makes a good case of showing that the change HAS taken place.

He points out that medieval universities were bands of students who were interested primarily, almost exclusively, in learning. They were free to do so without interference from church or state. Speaking of America today, however, Dr. Hutchins says:

"In religious, economic, and political controversy one side or another has often tried to take over the American university . . . If a university is to inculcate doctrines endorsed by common opinion and to shun doctrines not so endorsed, those who seek to teach, or even to express, unpopular doctrines must be disposed of. Academic freedom is thus disposed of, too.

"This attitude helps to transform an educational system into a custodial system, and a custodial system tends to confirm this attitude. Thus we come to the view of a university as a place in which the young are familiarized with the tribal mores and in which other activities immediately useful to the community are carried on."

Hutchins believes that intentionally and unintentionally, the move has been toward this custodial system, and that one of the major ways to effect the transformation is to pad college curricula with non-academic courses which distract students' attentions.

It was in this light that Dr. Hutchins made his comments about the FSU circus. He was not singling it out as particularly bad in the light of present-day educational techniques but as an example of a trend he considers unfortunate.

Although we may not necessarily agree with Hutchins' thesis, we feel he deserves a hearing, both on his reputation as an educator and on the basis of the article itself. We regret that his flamboyant statements have beclouded the issue.

● CLASS POLL

The Junior Class officers are now in the process of devising ways to bring pertinent campus issues before their class and the entire student body.

The intention prompting this, the Junior Class's project for the year, is a laudable one. These officers feel that their class can work toward a better informed student body, thereby providing a maximum of expression and action on various matters by student and government alike.

One method by which they are going to attempt this stimulation of progress is the selection of an eight-member Junior Class panel. This panel will consult students for opinions through polls and personal contacts in an effort to find and phrase important issues.

THE FLAMBEAU will publish some of these issues in the form of a questionnaire which is to be filled in by students and returned to the panel. The panel will then analyze and tabulate the answers and, in turn, present them to the university Senate for consideration. This will afford the senators with a more tangible contact with the students.

The Campus Survey Questionaire which was filled in last year will be used as a source of information. Platforms of elected student officers will also be examined.

THE FLAMBEAU concurs with the Junior Class in its feeling that too often there is a lack of interest because of ignorance. We commend them on their proposed endeavor to overcome this barrier to campus progress.

● SANDSPUR STAFF

Sandspur, FSU's big musical production with big plans and big headaches, is on the roll now. With Frances Stokes as director-producer and Bob Gutting as publicity chairman, Sandspur is putting out a plea for the enormous cast and stage crew it will need to function smoothly.

A news story in today's issue calls attention to a meeting of all interested students tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in 303 Westcott. We repeat the announcement and urge students to take part. The experience will be good and the work will probably prove to be enjoyable.

'Lavender Hill Mob' Typical Guinness In Showing Actor's Mimicking Ability

By BOB FOLSOM

The next offering of the Florida State University Film Club brings to mind a Britisher who has become recognized in the past two or three years as a remarkable actor, whose gift is his 'uncanny ability to merge his own identity with whatever role he may be playing."

This ability is especially shown by Alec Guinness in the Film Club's Thursday showing, Kind Hearts and Coronets, a 1950 British film which first spotlighted Guinness to the American theatergoers. Since Kind Hearts, Guinness has made Lavender Hill Mob, The Man in the White Suit, The Promoter and his latest, now making the rounds practically everywhere but here, The Captain's Paradise. Each of these flickers are in a special class if only through the finely comical portrayals given by Guinness. Bosley Crowther calls him "perhaps the most skillful and clever actor making comedies these days." Mr. Crowther, the N. Y. Times reviewer, makes it a habit to say "perhaps" in his casual way of heightened understatement, so take it for what its worth.

Those who have been Guinness's movies will have noted the special and rare qualities he puts into a role. As the meek bank clerk who steals a million in gold bullion (Lavender Hill Mob), the meek chemist who discovers a cloth material that withstands the forces of nature (White Suit), or the meek bill collector who becomes rich, primarily through his brashness (Promoter), we see him at the beginning, always timidly, and as the plot revolves with him, towards the end he overcomes this factor, each time in a particular way, while sustaining a crisp approach to every role.

To dwell on Kind Hearts a moment, for this may be the first opportunity for some who have not seen his superb acting — Guinness is seen in eight different roles, ranging in character from a hardened sufragette to a philandering fop. Guinness is permitted the priviledge of having full script approval with the J. Arthur Rank organization, and he can be credited with increasing the number of roles he plays in Kind Hearts from three to eight. This film is probably the springboard on which Guinness projected himself into the position he holds today—that of a man who is regarded by many as being the most talented actor on the screen today.

But it is not a film in which he seems to hit his peak, though he plays eight altogether different parts a job which would seem to task anyone's abilities. He actually seems fresher each time in each new vehicle. In his latest, Captain's Paradise of which we can only interpret what the reviews have said, all of the critics have pretty well fallen over themselves expressing superlatives of Guinness.

As one review said, he plays two opposite personalities within the frame of a single individual and using no make-up to do it.

That of a contented sea captain plying his ship between Gibraltar and a port in North Africa. At home in Gibraltar he is the serene and homely individual, with the ideal wife. In North Africa, he changes to the "raffish roue" and another wife who is temperamental and likes the night club life. He likes it too.

Guinness claims he is ever on the prowl for new types, for different gestures, attitudes, voice mannerisms that he can store up in his memory until a script calls for just such a character. He seems to be both the artist and actor who not only tries, but achieves the final end to his work. It is always a treat, too, to see the true artist in action.

Whenever you have the chance, don't miss a movie with Guinness.

State of Florida, FSU Share Burdens of Constitution Mess

By GENE LAWLER

Florida's state officials are in a legal tangle: "Can Johns run for governor?" "Was the governor's salary raise valid?" "What will the Supreme Court rule?"

Florida State's student statesmen are also tearing their locks: "Can Revell run for President?" "Is the Election Code valid?" "What will the Honor Court rule?"

We offer this parallelism neither to indicate that Florida officials are as incompetent as college students nor to dignify FSU's Student Body by comparing it with a bona fide government. Rather, we wish to point out that a slovenly constitution can make a bodacious mess of any organization, whether sublime or ridiculous.

Both the State of Florida and Florida State deserve better Constitutions. They are poorly composed, frequently ambiguous, sometimes contradictory, and loaded with unessentials. Both have been amended a multitude of times by an electorate that rarely knew the significance of the amendments it voted on.

The primary requirement of a student constitution is that it be easy to read and easy to understand. Cognizance should be taken of the old saw "A Constitution should be short enough to be memorized and flexible enough to be forgotten."

Three years of amendments have succeeded in putting the first three articles of the old UGA Constitution, adopted in 1950, into fairly acceptable form, and in making a more tolerable mess out of some of the remaining portions. But separate amendments are a poor way of doing a major revamping. The best approach to FSU's Constitutional problems was offered by the University Senate late last May when it succeeded in proposing, somewhat hurriedly, an entire new document.

The new Constitution at present lies in the hands of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. Student leaders will be wise to urge prompt action and the new Senate Constitutional Committee will be wise to begin studying the document immediately. The Faculty Committee is certain to voice several objections, particularly to the Financial Article, and it will be fortunate if the Senate and the Constitutional Committee can be prepared to answer and make further suggestions.

We started this column with reference to the current dispute being handled by Honor Court. A routine appeal by freshman Walter Revell and has now proceeded to the stage where the President, the Vice-President, the Attorney General, and the Secretary of Elections have been called on to testify to the constitutionality of the Election Code this Thursday night.

Chief Justice Richard Jackson explains this turn of events by saying, "this year the members of Honor Court have started to think." This is undoubtedly a good thing. However, a thinking court and a porly-thought out Constitution make an intolerable combination. One or the other must go.

'Life With Father' Begins Run Friday Night In Conradi Theater

By RICHARD STEVENS

This week a comment on theatre should strike very near home: for on Friday night, the Speech Department's production of Life With Father begins a four-night stand in Auguste Conradi Theatre.

Life With Father is probably the most popular play of its kind. At least, it had a longer run on Broadway than any other similar production. As a local offering, it promises to provide its audience with an abundance of laughter.

Some twenty-odd years ago a fellow named Clarence Day was writing warmly humorous sketches about his father, Clarence Day Senior, in The New Yorker. After the death of Clarence, Jr., Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse, who had been known before as musical comedy collaborators made a play from these sketches. Exercising great skill, they were able to their redheaded temperament humor of the piece.

The play revolves around Father. He is the prototype of the head of the American family in the 1880's. Father is comic, but a real person. He is industrious, logical, and devoted to his wife and sons. On occasions he is hot-tempered; but never is he bad-tempered. The entire family is redheaded, and thir redheaded tempramnt manifsts itself in the action of the play.

Dr. Paul Davee, recent addition to the Speech Department staff, is directing the production which plays October 23, 24, 26, 27. Davee's choice for the role of Father is Charles Bogdahn, a very competent performer who has been seen in several Conradi productions in the past three years. Ellen Driggers, transfer student from Stetson, will play his wife, Vinnie. Eb Thomas and Lloyd Kay will be seen as the two older sons, Clarence and John. The younger boys, Whitney and Harlan, will be played by Walter Richards and Billy Reynolds, who are sons of F.S.U. faculty members.

Bert Hollander is the flighty Cora, and her young side-kick, Mary, who provides Clarence's first female interest will be played by Joanna Watts.

Others in the cast are:

Nancy Dickinson, Suzanne Alford, Joanne Williams, and June Mizell as the four maids, Annie, Nora, Delia and Maggie, who just don't see into last very long in the Day household; Lee Hildman as the Reverend Dr. Lloyd; Gerald McClelland as Dr. Humphreys; and Frank Adams as Dr. Somers.

Douglas Russell is in charge of costumes for the show, and the sets and properties are by Charles Reimer.

Letters to the Editor . . .

Dear Editor,

I would like to know the criteria for selecting new members for Garnet Key. Why is it that girls who are serving their fellow students on Judiciary, Honor Court, and in other important campus organizations fail to get in, while girls who have never been in student government are tapped? Why is it that some of the Junior Counselors who are officers in freshman dorms are tapped, while other J. C. officers who have participated in many more campus activities are left out?

The Pow-Wow says that the purpose of Garnet Key is to "recognize women students for their contribution of leadership, service and spirit to the University," but in my opinion it has degenerated into a social club where the members are interested only in "getting in" their best friends, whether they've ever contributed leadership and service to the university or not. I have even heard it said on campus that all a girl has to do to get in Garnet Key is to know the "right people." I think such a situation is very unfair, to say the least, to girls who really get out and work in student government and other campus activities, but who don't know the "right people," and I think something should be done about such a situations.

Yours for a better University,

Name withheld by request.

Editor's note: The Flambeau according to its editorial policy, will be glad to devote equal space to Garnet Key to make whatever reply it desires.

No Time Left For Digesting Facts

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Alas for the lost art of studying!

Amongst the wholesale gobbling of textbooks, parties, assignments, honoraries, publications, homework and the like, there is no time left for the great digestive process known as thinking.

Without wanting to bring down upon my head the wrath of the FSU Circus, which I admire highly, I still want to say I agree with Dr. Robert Hutchins that there is far too much going on in colleges these days to allow for the forgotten principal of learning.

Our whole college system is geared at a level which almost entirely ignores the important psychological factors necessary to studying.

Professors seem to think that piling on homework to such an extent that it takes up all the student's time is the way to teach. This is a sad fallacy.

Studies in the mechanics of learning show that the process consists of at least two steps: a taking in of facts and rearrangement of those facts into a pattern. Roughly, this might be compared to eating and digesting ideas.

The trouble is that we are all suffering from indigestion. In swallowing asignments whole we don't even have time to chew them, and if professors should let up sometimes by accident, organizations, functions and parties are waiting to devour our precious time.

One of the most beautiful and enjoyable things I can think of doing is going off for a day or two—or a week—and thinking. Not necessarily thinking about school studies, but just thinking — collecting my thoughts, planning for the future, building dreams and ideals.

I can picture—well night taste—a quiet country scene: a grassy bill by a lake, with myself lying lazily on the ground—and thinking. I can picture it, I can taste it, I can want it, but it's as far away as Timbucktu.

It seems that we are faced with a paradoxical situation if what we want in college is an education, for college and education seem to be contradictory these days. The alternatives seem to be that either one must become a Trappist monk or lose oneself on some tropic isle.

So, Dr. Hutchins, if you can refound one of those medieval universities where students came and went as they pleased; thought and spoke as they pleased; didn't have grades to shackle them and text-books to 'dull' them, let me know. I'm all for it.

THE SPECTATOR

Stage Is Set For Political Combat

By WARREN COBB

"Lay on, MacDuff, and damned be him that first cries, 'Hold, enough!'"

The state politicos are choosing sides, weighing opportunities, preparing for mortal conflict. The stage is set—and behind the curtain there is, from outward indications, a frenzy of activity.

Patronage, pressure and intrigue are the stage props.

And the questions the audience are waiting to have answered are these: (1) Is an appropriations act the same as a Legislative act? (2) Who will carry the McCarty banner in the gubernatorial election next year? (3) Who will afford the opposition?

The first of these questions involves the recurring question of Charley Johns' eligibility to run for governor. As has been mentioned before, Johns was a member of the last Legislature that granted the $3,000 pay raise to the governor, and the State Constitution prohibits any member of the Legislature from being appointed or elected to any civil office that has had the salary raised during the time for which he was elected. Johns was elected for a six-year senate term in 1952.

This column stated originally that Johns would therefore be ineligible to run for governor until 1960.

Since then, however, State Supreme Court Justice Mathews has stated that the raise was improperly granted because it was in the form of a general appropriations act rather than as a specific act. The implication is, of course, that the raise should be invalidated. This contention would clear the way for Johns.

But an appropriations act cannot, under any circumstances, become effective unless passed by the Legislature. It is, therefore, in effect if not in technicality, a Legislative Act.

With all due respect to Justice Mathews, it would seem that his reasoning on this point is unsound.

But the audience will have to wait for the final verdict of the Supreme Court. And there is also the problem of how to bring this issue before the court between now and the campaign. In order for the court to rule, there must be concrete issues and cases on which to rule.

As to the second question—Who will carry the McCarty banner? — there is still considerable conjecture. John McCarty will not commit himself beyond the statement that his brother's supporters will have a candidate to back for the two-year term. He could mean himself. He could mean Senator LeRoy Collins or State Road Chairman Richard Simpson. Or this candidate could turn out to be someone else. Whoever he may be, he will most assuredly be in a strong position.

Who will afford the opposition to this candidate?

One candidate seemingly willing to step upon the stage is Brailey Odham, Sanford businessman. His talkathons last year brought him a substantial grass-roots backing.

Another possibility is Comptroller Clarence Gay, who has thus far served the state very competently.

The Orlando Sentinel has mentioned the possibility of Franca Whitehair, formerly Under-secretary of Navy and currently practicing law in DeLand.

And in the wings, not yet in the political spotlight, is General James A. Van Fleet, famed Korean commander, who is now living in Auburndale. Odham has asserted that "the Battle of Korea and the Battle of Tallahassee are two entirely different problems."

At any rate, it is becoming apparent that a battle is imminent.

What the state of Florida needs on stage now is a man with the character and leadership of Dan McCarty, a man who can rise above petty problems and politics.

RECITATIVE

Met Singers Turn Out Good Trovatore

By ROBERT STRANE

As unimpeachable proof that Il Trovatore can be sung, rather than chronically ranted and raved, five of the Met's most reliable artists have conjoined to record this extinction-defying early Verdi for RCA, under the baton of Renato Cellini: Jussi Bjorling, whose distaste, the "unfill'd can", plaguing often deprives us his peerless tenor, sings troubador-warrior, Manrico . . . after hearing his treatment of the music I did an introverted penance for having lauded certain renditions which in far-stretched comparison, bump and bleat like an organ-grinder's baboon with a post-nasal drip. . . . Zinka Milanov, as frustrated Leonora, offers for rapt admiration her consummate control of enormous soprano from a compatibly prodigious corporal . . . consistently-competent Leonard Warren deepens his almost tenorish timbre to voice a suggestively lecherous (pardon if, in this column, I use such words excessively, but opera reeks with that sort of revolting thing) Count diLuna . . . this villain, unlike Tosca's Scarpia, is the mesamorph, a non-erotic, who acts upon the thought, upon the spot with little elaborate weaving about. . . . Fedora Barbieri, who of late bested the voluptuous Rise as Carmen, to my ear, sings gypsy Azucena without the oft-heard steel-wool parrot-cries. . . . Azucena is her best role, and she acquits herself supremely. . . . Nicola Moscona, the Met's first basso profundo, completes the principal-quintet cum laude. . . .

My gratification in this set stems primarily from the fact that the cast effects a "concert" performance—that is, little attempt is made at the usual cartooning of passion and "fire" (even caricatures are so often abominably aborted) within a now ludicrous plot-framework. . . .

Travatore fascinates me as an enacted affair when I listen to just such a precise recording and projecting my fancy to the "golden age" and tarnished-brass era of the Met, watch phantoms of Scotti, Journet and Campanini stride thru the Spanish melodrama . . . but seen with open eye today, the plot, action offends our "super-adult" selves. . . . combining opera's inherent confounding of acting foundations with a struggle to render credible and "realistic" an undigestible "hassle" proves a bit too much . . . and I am a trifle amused by certain few nostalgic commentators who, writing aside their conjured-up fantasticoes, unctously try to persuade readers to welter in the licking flames of the stage's anvil-faggots . . . and rail oft that we, within our steel chambers, have waxed emotionally petrified. . . .

Hearing Trovatore's chronicle of song-hits and torrid dance-tempi gratifies us rather similarly to wearing an old suit or a worn bill-fold . . . but most enjoyment comes thru isolating the tunes from plot particulars . . . for many sinister satiry anxious moments are supported by music of infectuous gayiety, lilt. . . . Trovatore is a singer's paradise . . . what other opera can satisfy the demands of tenor, alto, baritone, soprano, basso as this one?

Even during the vast early years of development, years of wretched liberetti and corrosive political wrangling, Verdi possessed a feeling for the beauty of the human voice, a gift for its ennobling, and a knack for means of its emotional vibrance which were to irridesce unsurpassed in Otello, Aida, and Falstaff (libretti by his Muse-sent Boito). . . .

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Present Pace Cools Fears on Records

By DAVID DREIS

If you're one of the people who is beating his gums about the death of radio, how about taking into mind the supposed death of phonograph records which has never come although Doggie In the Window did a lot to further the cause.

When radio was feuding with record companies back in the twenties and early thirties, they refused to use phonograph records and each radio station had its own musicians. If they found themselves in a predicament where it became necessary to use these discs, the announced made it quite clear that the sounds the audience was to hear was "ahem—on a phonograph record."

And so the years pass and we find that with the invention of the deejay, records are a big business.

Record companies have subsidiaries or li'l record companies. Decca brought to the fore Coral which has produced enough best-sellers and big stars to earn equal status with the major firms. Teresa Brewer, Don Cornell, Johnny Desmond, Eileen Barton and Karen Chandler each have scored for Coral. Naturally Crosby, Danny Kaye, the Andrews Sisters and the Four Aces are in the Decca stable.

Moving quickly in big-time discs is Dot Records, a record company which harbors itself in Gallatin, Tennessee and which has hit twice with the Hilltoppers. This company bases its success to keen distribution of deejays. The company was one of the top named in Billboard mag's poll for the friendliest company.

The top disc company is RCA VICTOR and while his group doesn't depend on disc jockeys for sales, they do depend on radio and television for their stars. EDDIE FISHER, PERRY COMO and ERTHA KITT are rated top ether performers.

Running a close second to RCA Victor is Columbia and whether you realize it or not, the race really got hot when the NBC network was losing their stars to CBS. CBS climbed above NBC in listeners and RCA got even in the disc department. (To the uninitiated, NBC and RCA Victor are blood brothers; ditto with CBS and Columbia.) Columbia stars are: Frankie Laine, Jo Stafford and Johnnie Ray among many others who have dipped their tootsies into the limelight's loot.

LOUIS B. MAYER'S MGM pictures started producing MGM records so that they could sell the fine production tunes from their films. When they found they had buyers, but not enough tunes from productions to sell, they decided on getting exclusive record artists. ROBERT Q. LEWIS and JOEL GREY filled the comedy market through MGM; JONI JAMES went four times to the top through MGM and the firm started a subsidiary: LION records. So far the Lion's roar has been pretty loud.

Capitol records went on an all-out brigade to "bring back the band" and ten years after its founding (1952) they had one of the most potent sources of music-making. Ray Anthony, Pee Wee Hunt and Jackie Gleason have been helping in the crusade. The organization was started by John Mercer, who may go places with his orchestra. Besides orks Gordie McCrae, Dean Martin and Kay Starr are members of the Capitol bandwagon.

Now check these new companies which are vying for honors: Kem, Oreco, Rialto, Modern, Cadillac, King, and several others which are moving up, but which escape my thoughts.

Mercury records gave way so many of their stars and snatched a few up to build on. Damon, Draper and Page score in the best-sellers and swing-harpist Bobby Maxwell has shown that in the near future, he'll be the one to beat.

At any rate, the record industry is far from dead. In fact, more phonographs and records are sold today than in the years before the radio. If history repeats itself, it looks like radio will still be around even with teevee. No, I don't consider 3-D a threat.

Desperate Rally Fails as Seminoles Lose 32 to 21

From The Stands

by Dave Kennedy

Flambeau Sports Editor

Up to date the Seminoles sport a 1-3 record, not too atifying in won and lost standards but non-the-less impressive when you consider the array of talent, the hard-ghting spirit of the Indians and the undying confidence the FSU coaching staff.

The hi-note of the team this ar is their fine showing even in eat An excellent example of s is the statistics of last week's me with Louisiana Tech which that FSU outplayed their ponents:

Tech		FSU
330	Net Total Yardage	328

The over sized headache that is ing the coaching staff this sea- seems to be the leaky pass protion very deftly shown by the passes intercepted by the opposition

Next week the Seminoles have an open date, presomably to rest up for the game with VMI, Coach Nogent's old boys. This is one game I'm sure the entire team and coaching staff will be putting farth their all in the hopes of emerging victorious

The week following the VMI game comes the big test (there's always a possibility) the game with Mississippi Southern who last week was hard pressed for their victory over Southeastern Louisiana 7-0. VMI, incidently trounced Virginia [illegible]

Next on the agenda will be Furman followed by the "Homecoming game" with Stetson, who downed Tampa U 14-7.

North Carolina State and Tampa complete the rough and tough schedule of FSU.

N C State lost to Wake Forest [illegible] This gives you an idea of the condition Coach Tom Nugent must have his boys in to win their remaining games.

I'll stick my big, fat neck out in predicting that FSU will win the remainder of their games with the exception of Mississippi Southern and who knows . . . ? ? ?

The prayers and best wishes of all go out to Bob for a quick recovery.

Pitchford Coaches FSU Tennis Team

By DAVE KENNEDY

Keith Pitchford, who joined the FSU Physical Education Staff this year, was named as the new tennis coach for the Seminole netters. He succeeds Dr. Donald Loucks who now has charge of all undergraduate Physical Education students at FSU. With this important role Dr. Loucks would be unable to contribute enough time to the FSU varsity.

While tennis coach at FSU Dr. Loucks has never had a losing team. Last year, his team won 15 matches while losing only two. Much of Dr. Loucks success must be given to his ebility to get the most out of his boys.

COACH PITCHFORD will inherit a team which Dr. Loucks' has brought along since 1951. In 1951 this predominent freshman team copped 8 matches while coming out on the short end 5 times. Last year with a 15-2 record this same team showed much more improvement. With the same team back things look mighty bright for congenial Coach Pitchford and FSU chances for a fine season.

Back from the 1953 squad are Hal Schaus, a junior from Mansfield, O., who possesses a fine all around game. Tom Cundy, hard-hitting 200 pounder, an ex-Kentucky State High School Champion. Joe Harris from Memphis, Tenn., possesser of one of the most powerful serves in college tennis. Jack Egan, last year's captain from Bradenton, Fla who along with being a fine singles player also excells at doubles.

OTHER RETURNING members are Don Wyly, Tom Morgan and Dave Kennedy.

The only loss the Seminoles suffer from last year is Don Boda, who won 18 matches while losing only 1 last year. However, Shelby Creigh, former FSU star, before going into the service has returned to strengthen the team.

EVERYONE is wishing Coach Pitchford and his team a successful year.

And some loquacious freshmen

While Jim Tanka did da swings
On his specialty, the flying

(With humble apologies to Omar Khyyam).

Dig that crazy introduction to Jack Tanaka, ambitious young Junior from Philadelphia, Pa. Jim—who is only 19 years old—graduated from Central High of Philly in 1951 and is another of the great athletes that have been so prominent in high school sports.

Not only was Jim captain of the Central High gym team for three successive years, but he was also active on the track team, cross country team, football team and in pole vaulting and diving, activities which won recognition for him early in his athletic career.

AFTER GRADUATION his high school coach wrote Dr. Price a short history of Jim's capabilities and requested a berth for him on the Seminole gym team. Dr. Price's was not long in returning and soon Jim was moving south among the Spanish moss and palm trees.

Misfortune was riding with Jim on his journey south, for soon after his arrival at FSU he fractured a finger and was unable to compete during most of 1951. Before this misfortune occurred, however, Jim took first place in the all around event at the freshman inter-mural meet.

AFTER HIS RECOVERY Jim entered the dual meet with Syracuse, N. Y., held here during December of 52 and in his first showing for the Garnet and Gold took third place on the flying rings. Later after spending many gruelline hours working out on the rings, Jim entered the Florida AAU meet and walked off with first place in both the Jr. still and flying rings championships. At the Georgia AAU held at Atlanta during April Jim lost his stride but still managed to place fourth in the flying rings division.

This was Jim's last meet of the spring season, but the coming winter competition will find him in there swinging for FSU.

Thursday provided another exciting day in the Fraternity touch football league. In the feature contest the ATO's slid past the Sigma Nu's 7-8. El Willis and Bob Adams were the big factors in the Tau win.

In another thriller the Lambda Chi's downed the SAE's 8-0. Dave Graham lead the winners by grabbing a pass from Don Hassferder early in the second half. A fine defensive game was also turned in by Jack Kerzan.

In other contests the Phi Delts led by big Tom Overstreet trounced the Pi Kappa Alpha's 25-0 The Delta Tau Delta's downed the Sigma Chi's 12-6, the Pi Kappa Phi's, led by the passing of Alan Sundberg defeated the Kappa Sigma's 8-0, and Coach George Boyer's Kappa Alpha's overpowered the SPE's 6-0. The undefeated Theta Chi's and the Phi Tau's remained idle.

Jimmy Lee Taylor

By DAVE KENNEDY

Jimmy Lee Taylor is a 5-foot, 10-inch, 185-pound junior from Tampa, Florida. Taylor was an all-state end for Plant High in Tampa before coming to FSU in 1951. He was the only freshman to win a letter in 1951 and was outstanding as a defensive end. In 1952 Taylor played blocking back, but at the beginning of this season was back at his old end post. He is an outstanding tackler with great anticipation, an excellent pass receiver and better than average blocker.

You can usually identify Taylor on the field by watching number 31 making incredible tackles, grabbing off circus-like catches and in general playing outstanding ball for the Seminoles.

Taylor is considered to be material for all-state and little all-American honors this year.

He is a member of Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity and is majoring in Physical Education.

FHSA Slates Volley Tourney

The first high school volleyball tournament ever sanctioned by the Florida High School Activities Association will be held on the Florida State University campus Saturday, October 24, beginning at 9 a. m.

The tourney, sponsored by FSU, will be limited to high schools within a 65 mile radius of Tallahassee.

BILL ODENEAL, of the FSU department of physical education, who is handling details for the meet, said the tourney will be one division, and all teams will play according to the United States Volleyball Association rules.

A double-elimination system will be used, and trophies will be awarded first and second place team winners.

TOURNAMENT judges will be FSU physical education department staff members and varsity volleyball team members. The FSU volleyball team has won the state AAU tournament five out of the past six years and was placed fifth last year in the National Intercollegiate Volleyball Tournament, fourth in 1951 and third in 1950.

This year two of the team members were chosen for the All-American national collegiate team. They are Ronald Hambrock, Terre-haute, Ind., and Howard Gould, Chicago

ENTRIES may be mailed to Odeneal.

Two Instructors Join FSU Faculty

Two new appointments have been announced by President Doak S. Campbell and Dr Wilson Doyle, dean of the school of public administration.

As a health education officer with the Office of Inter-American Affairs, Oliry was sent to Peru, S.A. to assist in a national program of health education.

Southern Pushes To Win By 7-0

HATTIESBURG, Miss.,—Mississippi Southern pushed over a touchdown in the third period tonight to down stubborn Southeastern Louisiana 7-0.

The heavily favored Southerners, who upset Alabama in the season's opener, were hard pressed to keep their undefeated, untied record intact.

Halfback Jimmy Mason climaxed an 84-yard drive with a three-yard buck over tackle for the touchdown. Bucky McElroy added the extra point from placement.

Southeastern threatened to score in the second quarter after recovering a fumble on the Southern 9 yard line. Southern played without injured ace halfback Laurin Pepper and Jimmy Brashier.

Fellowship Winner Returns From Study In New York City

Dr. W. Bruce Weale, associate professor of marketing, has returned from New York City where he was assigned to a six weeks comprehensive study of the National Biscuit Company, under a fellowship awarded by the Foundation for Economic Education, Inc.

Others making the study were a certified public accountant, an investment specialist, and an economist.

Their study included every major department of the company. They interviewed all major personnel and took field trips to outlying plants and sales distribution branches.

"It was a two-way street," Dr. Weale said in evaluating his experiences and studies. "The fellows gained in close contact with big business, and the company had some of its practices and procedures challenged."

Dave Bachman, son of University of Florida's Band director, is president of Sigma Chi social fraternity pledge class.

Other officers of the pledge class include Bobby Fallin, vice-president; Jerry Gunderson, secretary-treasurer; Bill Parker, scholarship chairman; and Bobby Temple, social chairman.

Two Last Period Touchdowns By FSU Shave Tech Margin

By DAVE KENNEDY

FSU's up-and-coming Seminoles fell short on their attempt to "pull the game out of the fire," as a heavier, grounded-minded Louisiana Tech won a hard-earned 32-21 decision.

Trailing 28-7 by the end of the 3rd period, the never-say-die Seminoles fought back savagely. Seemingly undaunted by the margin that separated the two teams, FSU roared back by scoring early in the fouth, and again minutes later on a brilliant 52-yard pass from Quarterback Leonard Swantic to end Jimmy Lee Taylor. The Seminoles had reduced the margin to 26-21 with eight minutes and thirty seconds left to play in the final quarter

FSU FRANTICALLY tried a passing attack but a Swantic pass was intercepted by Milford Andrews, who raced over for final score of the night with exactly 35 seconds left to play.

In the early stages of the game the FSU line was treated roughly, a spot where previous opponents had gained the precious yardage. The Seminoles caught on, however, to the Tech running game and in the latter part of the game the 'Dogs ground attack was bottled up.

A corps of hard driving backs was Tech's most potent weapon.

HALFBACK RUSS RAINBOLT, Gayle Wise and Jackie Martin were constant threats around end. Fullbacks Ray Manchester and James Oliver did the heavy up-the-middle work for the Bulldogs.

FSU's stellar alignment up front included tackle Al Mackowiecki and ends Jimmy Lee Taylor and Buddy Bryant.

Plaudits go to John Griner, who in his first game at fullback was probably the most outstanding runner for the Indians. Stan Doboss also sparkled.

CRENSHAW SHARP

Tech's Rainbolt returned the opening kickoff to his 26 and Tech came out passing. Andrews found Rainbolt who lunged for a first down on the State 47. The Louisiana Tech Bulldogs picked up another on Jim Oliver's running attack, then an offensive holding penalty forced them to punt.

Massey returned the punt to his 12. Doboss and Griner combined for a first down. Massey Hit Fiveash on Tech's 40 There the attack was stymied.

ON THIRD AND TEN, Tech's center intercepted a Massey pass and landed on FSU's 46. Against a sharp defense sparked by Bobby Crenshaw, the 'Dogs picked up only five yards. Andrews took to the air again, spoting Gordon clear in the end zone. Andrews bullet-like pass found it's mark Anderson converted and Louisiana led 7-0, the half-time score.

As the half ended, the Seminoles were throwing up a mild threat at mid-field.

Another touchdown was the outcome of a Billy Graham fumble on his own 27. Jimmy Brown quarterbacked Tech to their TD and Anderson converted.

FSU TRIED to come back but their 2nd down pass to Taylor, who stood among four defenders, was intercepted by Brown on the Seminoles 38. This, too, resulted in a TD. Anderson missed the conversion.

Louisiana's Brown fumbled on his 32 and Pacifico recovered. Swantic went over for the score and Grahm converted FSU trailed 26-14

AT THE 47 SWANTIC passed to Taylor at the Tech 25 and Jim Lee went all the way. Graham converted and FSU trailed only 26-21 with some 7 minutes left to play.

Thus ended State's scoring for the night.

On Tech's last score Griner and Pacifico broke through to "block that kick." That was it: Louisiana Tech 32-FSU 21.

Chest are allotted to several worthy institutions, among which are the American Red Cross, the American Cancer Society, the Florida Heart Association and the World Student Service Fund. The Polio people could not accept monetary contributions from the fund.

IN A LETTER written to Margaret Krausman last year, they explained that their laws prohibited taking money from a drive of this sort, but that all monies collected for them would have to be done by their own organization on an individual basis They explained, however, that they could accept much-needed equipment for hospitals in the area.

The bulk of the funds collected last year, seventy per cent, went to the World Student Service Fund, which not only sponsors exchange of students, but gives aid to students in foreign countries where conditions are impossible. Food medicine, clothing and books are given to those students that need them, and which without, they would not be able to continue their studies

Alpha Council Taps Freshmen Leaders

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON
Feature Editor

"Alpha Council?" "Is it animal, mineral, or vegetable?"

For the benefit of the Freshmen who might ask the above questions, Alpha Council is neither animal, mineral nor vegetable; it is an organization in which the male members of the Freshman class should be vitally interested.

Alpha Council is an honorary service fraternity whose purpose is to recognize and develop potential leadership abilities in freshman men.

ITS PROJECTS include aiding in the university's orientation program, promoting the honor system, and furthering the development of school spirit.

Only freshmen men are tapped into this organization, and they remain in membership until the end of the first semester of the sophomore year. Every boy in the freshman class is considered for membership in the organization

THE FIRST tapping of new members will occur in the middle of November, giving the freshmen a chance to show their abilities in campus activities.

Freshmen are taken into the organization gradually, not on a percentage basis, and not all at once. They are offered membership as they prove their leadership abilities throughout the year. Members of Alpha Council must maintain a one-point average or drop out of the organization.

PRESIDENT COYLE Moore has announced that Alpha Council will hold monthly dinner meetings this year to allow new and old members to become better acquainted.

Alpha Council is a goal and a challenge to any boy in the Freshman class who is seeking to move a step forward in his college life.

By JIM JINDRA

Cavalier, men's honorary dance group at Florida State University announced today the names of eight men tapped in a special session recently. Cavalier President Ed James said this action was taken to refill "many vacancies left in the organization after last June's graduation."

This year however, James said, the constitution has been revised to read that the ratio must be 50-50

Sr. Investiture Ceremony Held Wednesday In Amphitheater

Dr. Martin Speaks On Responsibility To Senior Group

To the strains of organ music the class of 1954 filed solemnly into the Music Amphitheater Wednesday night to take part in the ceremony which would invest them formally with the sacred name of Senior.

Vice-President Martin greeted the assembled group of seniors and their sophomore sisters and brothers and brought the greetings and regrets of President Campbell, who was unable to attend the program. Dr. Martin then went on to give a brief history of the origin of the ceremony of Investiture. He said that the tradition went back to the first universities which required that a student prove his worth before he could be invested with the title of scholar. He then called Colin English, president of the senior class, to the platform and capped him, as representative of his class: simultaneously, the sophomore brothers and sisters placed the mortar boards on the heads of the class of '54.

IN HIS invocation, Dr. Neel, the University chaplain, reminded the class of the many responsibilities that go with the title of Senior. He took his scripture reading from the story of the Good Samaritan.

Vice-President Martin then introduced the main speaker of the evenina, Dr. William Martin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Tallahassee.

DR. MARTIN SPOKE on the thesis, "Education requires that a man understand himself first." He explained that to be truly educated a man must know his weaknesses as well as his strengths, and must make good use of them both. He also cautioned that it is necessary to know at what point to stop taking oneself too seriously. He feels that only the educated man is big enough to step back and laugh at himself. He closed with the thought, "Knowledge is the ability to know oneself, and I hope that if you do not already know yourself, you will soon learn."

After the address the faculty filed out followed by the newly-capped seniors.

Group Sets Chest Goal; Plans Program

With a goal still undetermined, members of the Campus Chest Committee are still working to reach a point of maturity for the campaign, usually planned and gotten underway during the summer months, with a postive program ready by September.

This year this was impossible due to the late date at which the final appointments were made.

ALONG WITH the problem of planning the campaign, the committee is negotiating for a possible distribution of the funds, with the posible addition this year of the United Negro College Fund. Last year, the World Student Service Fund, now renamed the World University Service, received the biggest cut, with the rest of the money being distributed among the Red Cross, the Florida Heart Association, and the Cancer Society.

How much each of these organizations will receive this year is still not known, but will be made public shortly.

This year, the tentative goal has been broken down so that the various organizations on campus will have a goal also. Each of these separate goals will eventually add up to the main goal, according to co-chairman Shirley Traxler and Charles McDaniel.

ALTHOUGH a goal has not been made public as yet, it is believed that they will keep last year's goal of $3,000.

Many of the organizations are repeating the projects held last year and have turned in bids for tentative dates. "The committee calendar will not be ready until everyone turns in their project and date so that it can be ironed out," said Pat Perez, co-chairman of the calendar committee.

TO DATE, the only project which has been given the green light is Sophomore Council. Their traditional faculty auction has been definitely set for Wednesday, Nov. 4.

The climax of the campaign will be a dance, to be held on Nov. 6. Billy Rogers is chairman of the dance committee.

As things stand now, students will buy apples, cookies, car washes, shoe shines, and attend fashion shows, street dances, auctions and smorgasbord and box lunches.

Monthly Rate Designated As 75 Dollars

Jack Houser, secretary of finance, presented three budgets at the University Senate meeting of October 20, 1953. For the first time in the history of FSU, the president of the Student Body will receive a salary.

Senator Phoebe Jackson proposed that the president of the student body be paid. Milton Carothers' $75 per month pay will run for a nine months period, annually.

The amount of the salary was suggested by the salary of the president of the student body at the University of Alabama, which has approximately the same size student body. The Joint Student-Faculty budget committee approved Houser's three budgets.

The budgets were passed by the senate and put into effect. Also in the new Student Body budget is the provision for a student assistantship to work for the Chief Justice of the Honor Court.

The new budget for the increase in staff salaries for the Smoke Signals was passed The Warpath Club's new budget includes two hundred dollars per year which will be used by the club for office supplies, props for the cheering sections, cards for the card sections, and duplicate supplies.

Carothers stated, "I am naturally quite pleased at being paid a salary. Taking into account the amount of work and the responsibilities of the office, I feel that a salary is justified. But, I sincerely hope, that the motive of service and not of salary will always be the initiative for those persons who in the future run for the office of president of the student body."

ODK Will Hold Autumn Tapping High Noon Today

Omicron Delta Kappa, men's leadership honorary, will hold its fall tapping at high noon today.

The national honorary customarily holds two tappings per year, choosing junior and senior men on the basis of their records of leadership, scholarship and service.

The largest number of men ever tapped at one time was eight.

The tappings occur at noon, and classes are interrupted, with the permission of the instructors, to notify the men. The tapees are presented with ODK's blue and white ribbons and conducted to the Student Center, where citations of their accomplishments are read.

At present, there are only five student members of ODK on campus. Three of these are graduate students: Jim Ball, Wallace Dynes and Paul Soraparu, president of the organization. Two are undergraduates, Milton Carothers, president of the Student Body: and Bruce Galphin, editor of the Flambeau

Ella Opperman, Former Dean, Feted Tuesday

Miss Ella Scoble Opperman, former dean of Florida State University's School of Music, was honored by the music faculty upon her 80th birthday here Tuesday, October 20 at 4:30 p.m. According to Miss Opperman, this was the 40th birthday party that the faculty has given her since she came to the university in 1911.

"I've never known any dean emerita who has been treated so nicely by his former colleagues and friends as I have," said Miss Opperman durina the occasion, as she strained to prevent tears of joy. She added, "Even the new faculty members have been unusually wonderful to me. I can never express enough appreciation for their kindness."

Miss Opperman appeared very healthy and well. She related some experiences which she had during the summer when she spent several weeks with relatives in Seattle. Included among these was camping in the cedar, douglas fir and hemlock forests where they spent several nights in sleeping bags and lived by other crude means of camp life. She took many interesting photographs of the trip and showed them to those attending the party.

When asked if she had done any professional work in music since her retirement, she said, "No, when I retired in 1944, I told myself that I had done my share in the field and that I would completely resign myself to hobbies and enjoyment of other's work in the profession."

She said that she had become quite interested in cooking since her retirement and now does all of her cooking. "Friends are even asking for my own recipes," she proudly boasted.

The dean emerita has a long and colorful career.

The announcement of her birth in the Harrison, Ohio, weekly paper said, "The Oppermans have bought a brand new family organ." Perhaps the comment was

UN's Goals Are Outlined In Award-Winning Essay

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tomorrow is United Nations Day, and we are pleased to run the following article. The true identity of the author is Salud Tuazon Acosta; for this essay she won the United Nations award in the Philippines last April in a nation-wide competition. We are very thankful to her and it is a pleasure to reproduce her winning essay.

Miss Acosta is a graduate of the Philippine Women's University, Manila, Philippines. Florida State University is proud to have so active a graduate foreign student. Not only is she active in class and campus affairs but also in outside civic and social organizations, in which she averages one speaking engagement every week end.

She is a junior dietetic intern under Miss Anne M. Tracy, whom she claims as the one highly instrumental for her coming over to Florida. She is taking her graduate work in the School of Home Economics.

THE ROLE OF THE UNITED NATIONS IN THE BUILDING OF A BETTER WORLD

By RENE CALS COOPER

(Author's note: Vital statistics and specific objectives have been taken from the U. N. Library . . . Philippines).

In the lulls between war and peace, nations of the world have sought the answer to the problems of humanity. From the Congress of Vienna to the League of Nations, the answer has not been found and permanent peace and security has been an illusion. Two global and bloody wars in a generation have taken place. Hardly had the smoke of battle cleared away and the world's armies demobilized when another world organization came into being "to maintain peace and international security; to develop friendly relations among nations; to cooperate internationally in solving international economic, social and humanitarian problems; promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms; and to be a center for harmonizing the actions of nations in attaining these common ends."

As an instrument in the building of a better world, the United Nations has taken concrete and positive action in the defense of collective security, in the peaceful settlement of disputes, in the building of world prosperity, in the advancement of social progress, in the filling of humanitarian needs, in the progress of dependent peoples, and in the institutions of international relations based on law. The United Nations came into existence on October 24, 1945, and is composed of sixty member nations, of which the Philippines is a member.

On the maintenance of collective security, the grim events in Korea have aroused the United Nations and the rest of the peace-loving nations. The war has been confined there through the collective efforts of the United Nations.

Peace being its objective, the architects of the UN Charter found out that economic and social maladjustments are the root of all the symptoms of war. To root out these evils, the Social and Economic Council was organized to achieve economic and social security for the whole world. Towards that end many UN agencies have been organized, each of which has a specialized role in the building of a better world.

The United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) gives aid for maternal and child welfare service and assists, with the World Health Organization, in the prevention of communicable diseases responsible for much childhood suffering and death.

Under the Trusteeship System nations with dependent areas are accountable to the world community, for the advancement of inhabitants as the supreme consideration. Dependent territories are administered, too, for the welfare of their inhabitants. Considerable areas are not yet self-governing and there are about 10 territories known as Trust Territories of which the UN has a special concern.

The International Court of Justice settles international disputes among brother nations in conformity with justice and international law.

Through the International Labor Organization the promotion of social justice enhances full employment and higher standard of living. It brings together government, labor, and management to recommend international minimum standards of wages, hours of work, and conditions to improve labor for the good of the common mass.

The International Civil Aviation Organization provides for the financial and technical aid for the maintenance of air navigation and air transport facilities to all member states and in regions of the world where low population density makes it impossible for one nation to provide them. Its main achievement was the completion of a convention on the International Recognition of lights in aircraft on an international basis.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the UN was established to help the world feed itself. World starvation is caused by soil erosion usually washed away by floods or blown by wind. To achieve this, the UN called together scientists, technicians, engineers and experts to mobilize the scientific knowledge of the world for the enrichment of life. It created the UN Scientific Conference on the Conservation and Utilization of Resources.

In the field of economic development, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development helps to promote international flow of capital for productive projects, both in areas devastated by war and in lesser developed regions, raise levels of world production, maintain a balanced economy wherein exports of goods and services can eventually pay for essential imports. One of its most important functions is to help set proper international standards to both lender and borrower.

In addition, the International Monetary Fund advances the purposes of stability in international currency matters and expansion of world trade by working toward the eventual removal of restrictions in foreign exchange transaction.

The Universal Postal Union is eliminating the excessive cost of international postal communication by writing its member countries into a single postal territory. The International Bureau recently issued a new edition of its general list of air mail services to give complete information to all UPU members. Maps of 600 air lines were produced in 1949 to meet changing requirements and a world map of surface communication routes which designates railway, sea communication routes, capitals, and other postal centers.

On the other hand, the International Telecommunication Union maintains and extends international cooperation for the improvement and national use of radio, telegraph and telephone services and to decrease its rates. Also, it promotes the development and most efficient operation of technical facilities in order to improve telecom services to coordinate the efforts of nations to attain these ends.

The World Health Organization has two kinds of services, technical and operational. On the technical side, the WHO sends researchers on parasitic diseases and on the operational, it has the fellowship program to learn new techniques, organization of public health services. It makes public demonstration in health and nursing, and makes a rigid campaign on highly communicable diseases.

To increase production and stabilize world economy, the International Trade Organization arranges consultation between members for the reduction of tariffs and elimination of preferences, deals with complaints of members affecting trade discrimination and unfair commercial practices. It collects and publishes information relating to international trade, commercial policy, business practices, commodity problems and economic development. It undertakes studies to promote international agreements.

In the cultural field, the UN has not been lagging. The UNESCO promotes education through mass communication meeting of experts, exchange of students and organization of seminars.

The war has left millions of refugees in war-shattered countries particularly in Europe where the International Refugees Organizaiton (IRO) has been most active. Displaced persons have been taken care of, sent to their homes, provided with the necessities of life, and many have been provided with employment to enable them to start life anew. It is not too far-fetched to assume that were it not for the IRO, the war's displaced millions would have provided a grim tragedy to an already suffering humanity.

As the United Nations enters its eighth year of existence, it has become increasingly clearer that it is the world's only hope for a better world. Power politics cannot be eliminated in a year or even a couple of years, but the United Nations has become the tribunal where world issues are brought forth and settled. There is no other organization today other than the United Nations that is bringing about common understanding, common social and economic progress, and common political advancement for the world's billions who find this United Nations as their last and only hope.

● CAMPUS CHEST

Within the coming weeks the campus will be flooded with appeals to support the Campus Chest. To the old students, the appeal is nothing new. To the new students, there is a striking similarity to the community chest campaigns to which they were accustomed at home.

There is a reason for this similarity. Campus chest is a community chest drive, but for the campus. Many will ask, "why have one on campus?"

The answer is simply this: in the past years, every other money raising organization in the state converged upon the campus hitting the students for monetary contributions. The results were poor. The students were dissatisfied. At every turn there was a palm stretched out.

The campus chest has a goal, and they intend to reach that goal, high as it may seem. The difference lies in that the money will not be collected solely from the pockets of the students. Most of it will be raised through projects of some kind.

There will be box suppers and smorgasbord suppers, there will be spaghetti dinners and apples, candies, pop corn and what not. The main objective is this. These items and many more will be purchased anyway, so why not buy them from one of the organizations supporting campus chest for just one week and let the profits go towards a good cause.

It is always good to remember the proverb of the helping hand, and in helping others to help oneself. So for goodness sake, support the campus chest through as many activities as you can possibly afford and give a helping hand to the unfortunates that are in no position to help themselves.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

"Well, how do you expect to get a good grade? The very fact that you took this course indicates that you have abnormally low IQ's."

OTHER COLLEGES SAY:

A Marxist Confesses

● I AM A MARXIST.

I believe with all my heart that Marxism is the only way to save this world. We must practice it or we will become pathetic figures on the puppet strings of fate.

I think that Russia should practice true Marxism. What they have now is not true Marxism, as I see it.

We speak highly of our democracy as the British talk highly of their queen. I believe the founder of Marxism is equal to the queen even on his bad days. I consider Marxism something apart from democracy, but certainly not inferior to it, since Marxism is inferior to nothing.

They have said that Marxism was born during an era that is not representative of the present time. But I say that, even though Marx was born and received his opinions during troubled times, he is among the world's wisest philosophers.

They talk about revolutions, bloodless and otherwise. I think that the Marxist type of revolution is the only kind that we can afford in this world. I said I think it; I know it.

I know for a fact that Bing Crosby is a Marxist, Bob Hope is one, also, although he keeps it a secret, and not because of a committee headed by a Wisconsin Senator . . .

There are millions of Marxists in this country. They have infiltrated the labor unions, the churches, the educational system, the press, and even the uppermost parts of our government. And I am glad that Marxism has had such far-reaching effect, so many converts to the true cause.

When you are a Marxist, as I am, it is nothing for you to bet your life on this marvelous system. In fact, someone is doing it every week, from the reports that have come to me.

Yes, I am a Marxist and I regard the founder of Marxism highly. For the one who founded it was Marx. And he is the greatest contribution to the world since Casey Stengel was born.

Now that all the Dodger fans have left, I want to reiterate that I love Marxism.

I only live and pray for the day when I can meet the founder of the Marxism that I adore, Groucho Marx, and practice his theory of laughing at yourself without losing respect for yourself.

It is the greatest Marxism in history.

Editor Howard Reports On ACP; Notes Interest In FSU Financing

Editor's note: The following letter was sent to us by John Howard, editor in chief of Smoke Signals, who attended the recent Associated Collegiate Press conference in Chicago. We feel his report and observations are interesting and raise some important questions about student publications.

Facts:

Delegates—Becky Brown and John Howard

Convention — Associated Collegiate Press Conference

Place—Chicago, Ill.

Smoke Signals and Tally Ho were rated to be first class publications. All American is the best rating and first class is the number two spot.

I inspected all of the newspapers that were judged to have a first class rating and they were, in my opinion, far inferior to Flambeau. My advice to the Flambeau is to join the organization, because there is no doubt in my mind that the newspaper would receive All-American. Most of the newspapers carry very few editorials, the print is unclear and the content is strictly confined to campus affairs. There is not much coverage of interpretive world-wide news. I believe that the Association could benefit from the achievement of Flambeau.

As far as magazines are concerned the delegates all envied the financial policy of Smoke Signals and the fact that we use the compulsory subsidy from the student activity fee. Many campus magazines are folding in the nation because they cannot adequately support themselves either from the sale of circulation or advertising.

They did criticize, however, the fact that our publications editors are chosen by election. In most cases the editor-in-chief and business manager are chosen by a publications committee made up of student government leaders in addition to journalism faculty.

I pointed out the fact that when student funds are to be used then it is the choice of the student, and he should have a definite right of selection in this case. In addition I told them that the staff's usually select two or more persons whom they feel can handle the publication; then the final decision rests in politics.

Florida State is definitely on top as to the financial aspect of publications; and I want to report that we were praised highly on the method of subsidy used; in fact several delegates said that they would like to take our plan to their respective institutions and institute similar plans.

Not Teaching?

I was interested to read your article last Friday about Earl Vance's magazine reading courses, because I have taken these courses and consider them to be some of the most educational in my college experience.

Mr. Vance is really a pioneer in the field of studying current literature and its influence on society.

So I was surprised to learn recently that Mr. Vance is no longer teaching the courses he pioneered, and that another teacher has taken over. The course is now being taught along completely different lines. Can you explain why this change has been made?

Name withheld by request.

Comrade Zoryokin Arranges A Coup

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Once upon a time in the mythical land of Russia, there was a great upheaval. Vladimir Zoryokin, top policy maker in the Politburo and second only to the Premier himself, was arrested for crimes against the state. He was accused of colluding with foreign capitalists, of plotting the overthrow of the peoples' democracy, and of bad thoughts.

These crimes and the subsequent trial were not the reason for the turmoil, however, for they were rather commonplace happenings at the time. Rather, people were excited over the fact that Zoryokin had escaped . . . in an airplane directly from Wisconsin, it was said.

Sure enough, the worst fears of the Muscovites were confirmed when Zoryokin showed up as star performer on the Senator McCarpy Show at the Capitol theater in Washington.

The refugee's appearance came at a convenient time for McCarpy, for his show had become rather routine of late and headlines were growing smaller and smaller. Sometimes his press releases even appeared on inside pages.

Soon McCarpy's name returned to the eight-column banners. Zoryokin, he announced, had a complete file on all Russian agents in the United States and was ready to tell all he knew.

The first to be trapped by the revelations were a few writers, professors and scientists. They protested rather loudly about their innocence and their constitutional rights, but nobody paid much attention to eggheads, anyway, and they were jailed, fired or otherwise disposed of.

Then the first of the real shockers came: Zoryokin pointed an accusing finger at about 25 per cent of the State Department employees. Everyone was amazed, because it was thought after the Great Crusade of '52 the Department was "clean as a hound's tooth." These people, too, protested innocence, but of course all Russian agents did.

Next came the armed forces. Over half the strategy staff were revealed as Reds. Naturally there were a lot of service men loyal to these condemned officers, and they had to be dealt with, too. Finding prison space was getting to be quite a problem, particularly since the keepers were also discovered to be largely disloyal and guards had to be posted to watch the guards.

Troops were recalled from overseas to help with guarding duties. Things become increasingly bad when senators, presidential aides, clergymen, labor leaders and members of the National Association of Manufacturers were proven to be in Russian employ.

City and state governments collapsed, and the national government sagged under the pressure of everyone's having to spend all his time watching others. When food delivery to the cities was broken off, utter chaos set in.

It was then that the masses (about 1 10 of one per cent of the population) arose, set up a Marxist government and asked Russia to send troops in to restore order. The United States became one of the Republics in the Soviet Union.

Vladimir Zoryokin was rushed by plane to Moscow, feted magnificently, and awarded the nation's highest honor: the Marx-Lenin-Malenkov (hero) medal. His citation read in part: ". . . perfect execution of your orders . . ."

CAMPUS CARAVAN

The French Have A Word For It

By BEVERLY LACAYO

I'm going to stop reading magazines which talk about anything that is not sweetness and light. This list now includes Life as well as Saturday Review. What is giving me ulcers is Life's report (Oct. 5) on the latest fine impression we are making abroad. In Paris Americans are sponsoring a "Roller Derby" in which fine sportsmanlike teams from all over Europe compete with "American cads" who gouge, trip, and kick their opponents in an effort to win the race. The spectacle of filthy, capitalist Americans wronging their helpless countrymen packs the house everytime in Paris, where the French feel free to hurl physical objects as well as nasty words at the cheating bullies.

According to Life the U. S. Embassy is "genuinely disturbed by an outburst of hatred more rabid than the Communists have been able to drum up." But the financial success of his scheme has American Manager Ken Nydell (who imports his European teams from New Jersey, New York, Wisconsin, Illinois and Oklahoma) beaming with pride. And we sit around home wondering mildly if there is anything at all wrong with FREE ENTERPRISE.

Take heart, though, we at F.S.U. can comfort ourselves since we are in a lovely, peaceable, state supported institution which doesn't have to fight for survival through vulgar and pernicious attractions. (Football is such a tender game.)

Which reminds me, Homecoming is coming. The committees which have been working feverishly behind the scenes will probably see one of the best H. C. weekends as a result of their efforts. Some houses have already finished their decorations. Rooms are already scarce for out-of-town guests. Girls are already wondering if they should wait for their F.S.U romeo to ask them to the dance or if they shouldn't write to the one at U. of F. before it is too late.

The better team and fine band have more than a little to do with the ivigorated spirit this year. Garnet Key is arranging the program for the banquet and Gold Key is planning the dance. Working up a program, choosing a master of ceremonies, and serving as hostesses at the huge banquet is one of the several service projects that Garnet Key carries out during the year while certain correspondents are dreaming up epithets for the organization.

To get on with more pleasa subjects, the weekend lo promising with a Zachara re tal and Life With Father for laxation. Ruge Hall, the Ep copalian Student House, is aga giving the "meet the cast" r ceptions which were so popu last year. The reception tonig for Ruge Hall students will after the play.

The Forums Committee, whi is under the administrati branch of student governme is getting busy on a plan to pu licize the activities by and f the students more systematica this year. We are returning bi-weekly sheet called "Fun an Functions" (which some of yo may remember) to the campu This will list the meetings an entertainment offered by the st dent organization includin dorms, sorority and fratern houses, and religious studen groups (not that these are mu tually exclusive).

It's whispered around tha the way to a student's hear is through his stomach. A least having dinners is a nic idea for all concerned. Las night both Dean Culpepper and Hazel Richards (wife of Dr Richards in Physics) invited student groups to their homes for dinner. Gestures of thi

Hollywood Writers Highly Stylistic

By DAVID DREIS

Writing about the showbusiness shindig is strictly lush in our opinion, but we must admit when Etcetera Etchings first came out, we were dubious about the response. Editor Galphin, in planning his editorial page, believed students were interested in the subject and it seems his faith is justified. It is with gratitude and a bit of humility that this column continues.

Jimmy Fidler for quite a number of years has been functioning as a Hollywood newshound with such success, although his column is more editorial than gossip. His column is divided, usually, into two parts. The first consists of his opinions on a controversial matter addressed to his staff. The second half is the staff's answer giving the other side of the question and giving a few picture plugs. Fidler's column has more weight than most movie mincers.

The one who's been using a Hollywood typewriter the longest is Louella Parsons. She originally was a secretary to Francis X. Bushman and ever since has been in on every movie marriage or mishap. At any rate Louella is first with the gossip. She goes 'ape' in love triangles. A regular Mary Worth, this girl. Her only fault is that she sticks her politico jibes in between the pic plugs, but anyway, she's got her heart in the right place.

ERSKINE JOHNSON is the public defender to all movie personages who drink, use dope, have eight marriages or do their friends dirty. This guy sticks up for everyone which isn't too bad a comment to say for a movie reviewer. Oh, he occasionally raps a singer, but after he raps he elops. For instance about Frankie's latest song "Too Late To Change Me Now" Erskine said something like, "I agree." Now, he's championing the Frankie - Ava marriage and commends Frank for his

● CORD COPPED

If the old adage about biting the hand that feeds you is true, and many nowadays feel that it is, then the University Bookstore's had a mighty big, painful dent since someone unthinkingly removed the large spool of twine from the student wrapping counter in the Post Office.

Most old students here and many new ones, we're sure, are well aware that the Bookstore supplies the wrapping public here with a large roll of paper and a spool of heavy twine worth $35. If those wishing to wrap their packages to mail had to go out and buy these materials, we feel they would run into some money. However, the Bookstore offers a continual supply of cord and paper out of sheer philanthropy; they get nothing out of it and want nothing except thanks in the form of consideration on the parts of those using the service.

Yet someone, unthinkingly and ignorant of the fact that his fellow students rely upon these facilities constantly, saw fit to remove an entire spool of twine from its obviously stationary holder the other day.

Mr. Gordon Wheeler, Bookstore manager and the man who supplies the cord, told us in a very nice way that he doesn't mind if students use large quantities of the wrapping materials and it's not his business what, particularly, they are used for; but, he said those using the materials should think of others who also have to rely upon them.

Now the Bookstore is going to have to put a lock device on the spool of twine because of someoens' selfishness.

It seems to us that, on a campus so instilled with a sense of honor and consideration for one's fellow students, and a campus where the code of honor works so well, that a lock of any kind should have to be put on anything, especially a student service like the wrapping materials.

We won't say the Honor System has failed to prevent this, because our system is based on the individual actions of each of the 6 000-odd students here, and you can't hold an entire student body responsible for the actions of one or two members who are momentarily forgetful of their own responsibilities. The Honor System is good; let's keep it that way.

WHO'S AN EGGHEAD?

Abstract Paintings Baffle Writer At Art Exhibition

By JOYCE POTTER

They call it art and indeed it must be, but not after a meal in the cafeteria!

Having finished a scrumptious lunch I found that I had a few minutes to spare. Ah, but I had a way to spend them! I was going to see that talked about abstract art exhibit.

EXCUSING MYSELF from the table I ambled over to the stairs and decided that the best way to tackle them was to crawl. So I crawled!

But the hard climb would be well worth the effort for I was going to see this famous art exhibit. Almost there I prepared myself for this treat.

Wait, what's that. It can't be a painting. Nope the food was cooked or maybe it was the iced tea for there before me was a rectangular shaped painting covered with splotches of blue, black brown, yellow . . . by this time not even the colors were clear. But I'm sure that I detected a musical note in the picture.

HOWEVER, not to be daunted, I continued on my tour. Next was a painting labeled gears. Now, I'm glad that they labeled it because I was sure it was someone being X-rayed with peculiar insides. I had just about decided it was the man from Mars when I saw the tag on it.

Next in line was a painting of my love of all loves, tennis. I could understand this one perfectly by standing on my head, turning cartwheels, and getting into all sorts of contortions to view it from all sides.

I WAS NOW approaching a sea scene. Ah, it reminds me of home. Supposedly the waves were gaily leaping from the sea, but I'm sure that it was birds arising from the water.

Well on to the next until I see all of them. Can I take it? Sure I'm strong and hearty!

Oh, I spy a man drowning. Armed with junior life saving badge, I dash to the rescue only to find that this painting is labeled, "Nearly White Trees." I was sure that it was a painting of a man holding on to some branches to keep from drowning.

THAT WAS ALL that even I could take for now. I fled past the rest of the exhibit and raced out of the museum. I'm sure that it was something that I ate, so I'll rest up and come again, because "I just love an abstract art exhibit."

prophetic for a child who later became a master of organ music.

She was one of the youngest persons ever to graduate from the Aurora, Indiana, high school. Entering Wesleyan College in Cincinnati, she received her diploma in piano and A.B. degree at the age of 18. She later received an Artist Diploma in Piano and the Master of Music degree from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

Miss Opperman said that she will have an article appearing in the October edition of the Alumni Bulletin of Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, entitled "Palm Sunday in Paris in 1808." This bulletin should be available in the FSU library.

The distinguished celebrity studied private piano and organ in Berlin and Paris in the early 1900's. Upon her return from Berlin and Paris, she gave a number of piano and organ recitals at various places in Indiana and at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. In 1943, this institution awarded her an honorary degree, Doctor of Pedagogy.

Miss Opperman was appointed director of the School of Music at Florida State College for Women in 1911 and was made dean in 1920. She served in that capacity until her retirement in 1944.

Extremely active in various music organizations, she has several times held national offices. She was president of the Florida Music Teachers Association from 1941 to 1943. Her biography has appeared in Who's Who in America, Who's Who in Music, Who's Who among Women, Principal Women of America, American Women, and the Bibliographical Encyclopedia.

In the Music Hall foyer is a painting of Miss Opperman, to whom the hall has been dedicated. Miss Opperman said that this painting is by Marie Goth, a member of one of the famous colonies of artists in the hills of Brown county, Indiana. Miss Goth is noted for paintings of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, James Whitcomb Riley and many other famous Americans.

Miss Opperman lives alone at 735 Beard St., in Tallahassee, where she has resided since 1811. She said that she is never lonesome and enjoys living alone very much. When asked how she likes Tallahassee, she answered, "I like Tallahassee so much that I would never live any place else."

change in career. Others Erskine defends are: RITA HAYWORTH, DICK HAYMES, INGRID BERGMAN and CHARLIE CHAPLIN. This guy is a friend in need.

Hedda Hopper was an actress and a wife to actor DeWolfe Hopper before she took to the keyboard. Besides helping Dick Tracy on Sunday, Hedda raps anyone who does injustice to "Casey At The Bat." Her hubby immortalized the poem. She knocked Lauren Bacall's reading of it because Lauren wasn't a man. "They shouldn't put skirts on Casey." Hedda always tells her readers not to believe those "nasty rumors" which are going around. In all probability, she usually starts the rumors.

SIDNEY SKOLSKY is the most humorous of writers and gives his reports with a tongue-in-cheek attitude. He refers to MARILYN MONROE as MMMMarilyn MMMonroe and her ideas as the Monroe Doctrine. Other quips appear quite often. His column is something to read.

Sheilah Graham for some reason likes everything and it seems no movie star is bad and Hollywood produces no bad pictures. Lanza was in trouble with MGM. (Discussion is going on to the advantage of both.") So Mario quits and Leo says 'Good Riddance.' That's Sheilah.

There are many other writers who peck their previews from the gates of ga-ga land. In fact, more reporters are on the Hollywood scene than cover our nation's capital. It seems everyone is interested in showbusiness, and it's a pleasure working for B.G. who had an inkling it was the same way on this campus.

Industry - College Meeting Planned

The first Industry-College conference will be held at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, on November 12-13. Thirty five educators and twenty industrialists will participate in the conference according to Dr. Henry Heald, Chancellor of New York University, and Admiral Ben Moreell, Chairman of the Board of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation. Heald and Moreell will serve as co-chairmen of the project.

Plans for the conference are being developed on the basis of plans originated by Dr. Milton S Eisenhower, President of Pennsylvania State College, and Mr. Robert R. Young, Chairman of the Board of The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company. Administrator of the conference will be Dr. C. V. Newsom, Associate Commissioner for Higher Education of the State of New York. Clifford H. Ramsdell, Secretary-Treasurer of hte Federation for Railway Progress, will serve as conference secretary.

This cooperative venture between industry and education is an outgrowth of a proposal outlined in an address by Mr. Young before the Fifth Annual Barnard Forum in New York last February 14th in an address "A Marriage of Business and Education." Mr. Young subsequently specified the importance of a mutually beneficial relationship between industry and education at the annual dinner of the Federation for Railway Progress in Cleveland on March 26, 1853, in an address entitled "The Railroads and Education."

In announcing the forthcoming conference, Chancellor Heald and Admiral Moreell expressed the belief that further cooperation between industry and education is essential if we are to preserve and further develop the kind of society that will be most conducive to individual and national progress.

Conference participants will discuss individual scholarship programs, cooperative work-study programs, research programs of fundamental significance to industry and education ,educational services for industrial employees, and the organized exchange of information and experience between industry and education.

It is anticipated that the conference will lead to a considerable expansion of present cooperative efforts.

The Greenbrier meeting also will be designed to encourage the creation of similar discussion groups in states and regions and the development of permanent industry-education institutes that would facilitate the greater development of program sof mutual concern and benefit to industry and education.

Patti Page Is Best-Seller After Starting as Hillbilly

Patti Page, the best female seller of records, has run the gamut from a hillbilly singer on a Tulsa radio station just a few short years ago to a miss who consistently hits the best-seller lists each time she sings a new song for Mercury records. While the first few months on shellac she sounded like every gal singer (usually just like the one who had a hit), she soon found her own style. She made her biggest success, via the aid of tape, on her double-voice renditions of such tunes as Tennessee Waltz and others. For three years she made about $65 weekly until she snagged her first hit, With My Eyes Wide Open I'm Dreaming. Since then, the singer has seldom sold fewer than 300,000 copies of any record she has made, and, of course, quite a few of her platters have gone past the 1,000,000 mark.

The hullabaloo around music circles these days is on religious-type tunes. They are outselling all the ballads and upbeat songs. Success of I Believe started off the most recent push, followed by Crying in the Chapel, and now Patti Page has come out with The Lord's Prayer on wax. Most of the big names have one or more number of the same type in the process, with some being held back for Christmas release.

STAN KENTON will head the "Festival of Modern American Jazz" with Errol Garner, June Christy, Dizzy Gillespie, Stan Getz and Slim Gaillard. The tour starts November 1, and will last a month, hitting most of the major cities except New York, where Kenton played a concert September 28. Some of the most famous musicians pooled their talents on a recent record date for Clef Records. The Session included Lionel Hampton, Oscar Peterson, Ray Brown and Buddy Rich in a rhythm section. Front line was composed of Flip Phillips, Illinois Jacquet, Ben Webster, Johnny Hodges, Dizzy Gillespie, and Roy Eldridge. After that cutting Rich flew to the West Coast to do another star-jammed waxing with Count Basie, Freddie Green, John Simmons, Stan Getz, Wardell Gray, Harry Edison, Buddy DeFranco, Willie Smith, Benny Carter and Arnold Ross.

ON THE WEST COAST: Jo Stafford signed a $1,000,000 deal with CBS for a TV show. The singer has had several radio programs in the past but has never done a national video show. Peggy Lee, who was to be the fine, bright shining star with Warner Bros., after her debut in The Jazz Singer last year, has just been dropped. That leaves Doris Day as the only chirper on the lot. Stand far, far back: Spike Jones is in his first film opus in five years. The madcap joins Abbott and Costello in a harum-scarum pic called Fireman, Save My Child. Cornel Wilde is getting into a composer's rut. He played Chopin in A Song to Remember a few years ago and did such a fine job, assisted by the unseen fingers of Jose Iturbi, that he got a recall to the same role for the upcoming Columbia film, Story of

Franz Liszt. All the vocal recordings have finally been done for the Judy Garland remake of A Star Is Born, and the singer started film production last month. The studio is doing a reverse and banning all publicity about the star, while working, until the picture is in the can.

RECORDS BEING RELEASED: POPULAR: Mary Martin-Ethel Merman—Ford 50th Anniversary Duet. JAZZ: Woody Herman—Moten Stomp. CLASSICAL: Eleanor Steber—Mozart 8. Albeneri Trio—Beethoven Trios.

The aim of the conference is to explore potentialities of research, possible sources of research funds, and feasible methods for the improvement of instruction as related to the smaller geology departments.

Dr. Cullison leaves Thursday morning by air. Before leaving Beloit, he hopes to arrange some way to further geological research at FSU.

Beauty Accepts Applications For 1954 Gymkana Queen

By DOT THOMASSON

Coloring the many already big attractions at 1954's extravaganza Gymkana production will be the appearance of beauteous Florida State co-ed Marilyn Goble as Miss Incredible Products, Coach Hartley Price, Gymkana directors said today. Miss Goble is in charge of the annual Miss Gymkana Contest, which selects a queen to reign over the six-day performance of feats and agility and showmanship by the FSU gymnastic group.

In the role of Miss Incredible Products, Miss Goble is expected to attract much attention, according to Price. However, she will not compete for the title as last year when she placed second only to the queen, Miss Suzi Jones. Miss Goble said she will be accepting applications for the contest until next Wednesday October 28. Those co-eds wishing to apply can contact her at Broward Hall or the Alpha Omicron Pi House.

"SEEIN' is Believin'" will undoubtedly be the best show yet and that is saying a lot, for these gymnasts, co-eds, and Tallahassee Tumbling Tots have really drawn the crowds for every performance they have ever had. Their fame individually and as a group has become national. From November 30 through December 5 Seein' Is Believin' will play nightly at the East Gymnasium. After these performances, they will go on the road to be seen in all parts of Florida and in other states.

The theme builds up around advertising of Incredible Products on T V. Each of the sixteen finalists from the "Miss Gymkana" tryouts of October 28 will portray some kind of cosmetic which will enhance the beauty of women. These may be imaginary or real products. Since the contestants are judged on beauty, poise, graciousness, and design of costume, they will probably want to get started on their costume as soon as possible.

THIS YEAR, Miss Marie Pallico of the Maharen Fabric Corporation, New York, has made sixteen sketches of costumes that will fit into acts nicely. A few of her suggestions are unusual nail polish, hair tints, sachets permanents, etc. These ideas may be studied and reviewed at Dr. Price's office in the East Gym from 3:30 to 6:00 in the afternoon. Any girl may originate her own costume as long as it follows the general theme of cosmetics and is not a repetition of other costumes in the show.

Finalists are being picked four weeks before the show so that they may have time to order their fancy theatrical material from Maharen if they wish.

THE SIXTEEN finalists who make up the Gymnkana Court of Honor will appear in the six shows here on campus. At the third show on December 2, "Miss Gymkana" will be crowned by President Doak S Campbell and will reign over the last two home performances and all road trips. She will receive for her permanent possession a beautiful 18½ inch figure trophy, while her two attendants will receive medals. The entire Court of Honor will receive certificates.

'Unknown' Museum Contains Minerals, Bones, Indian Relics

The Florida Geological Survey, located beneath the Suwannee room, has a very interesting museum that is not as well known as it should be. The museum, during 46 years has collected a number of interesting minerals, fossil animals and Indian relics.

Freshmen and many of the older students are not aware of the fascinating display of articles of Florida's natural history. Among the most interesting of the articles on exhibit are the skeletons and other remains of the larger vertebrate animals. There is mounted in the museum an almost complete skeleton of a mastodon which was recovered from Wakulla Springs in 1930. It was covered by 15 feet of water and the bones were imbedded in marl and vegetation. The animal was almost completely re-constructed, and now fills a sizeable space on the floor. While alive, the creature was estimated to weigh about 4,000-8,000 pounds.

ANOTHER fascinating thing is the 11-foot leg of an ancient elephant discovered near Bradenton. This monster's leg alone is as high as the whole body of the complete mastodon. This specie of elephant came after the American Mastodon and can be associated with the Pleistocene age in geolic time.

One of the most unusual articles in the museum is the dinosaur egg. It is oval in shape, slightly red in color and is approximately the size of three large tomatoes. With this egg is an alligator nest that still contains eggs. There are vertebrae of various mammals such as the whale and lying on its underside is the stuffed form of a Manatee or Sea Cow that was uncovered at Quincy.

INCLUDED in the exhibit is a shell display of which there are many thousand pieces. Due to the lack of space, only a limited number are shown. There are fossil shells that show life eons ago and interesting modern shells that may be found on the beaches and other areas of Florida today.

Some people may recognize the coral polyps exhibit having seen it in jewelry. These polyps have some of the most beautiful textures used in semi-precious stones. Many millions of years ago the silica in the clay and sea water replaced the limey skeleton of the living coral with quartz pheudomorph. From this the semi-precious stone chalcedony is formed. The recognizable forms of this are, Blackonyx, Sard, Sardonyx, Carnelian, Agate and Flint.

HUMAN REMAINS, together with bone tools and bones of animals of the same era were discovered near Vero Beach and these are on display. The Vero Man is most probably the oldest to have been discovered in Florida. It is estimated that he dates back about 10,000 years.

All of the exhibits are well marked and explained so as to give accurate and interesting information. According to A R. Janson, Curator, there are to be signs erected at various spots on the campus to direct people to the museum. It is open during the weekdays from 2 until 5 p.m.

Danford Pens Planning Book

"Recreation in the American Community" by Dr. Howard G Danford, head of the department of physical education for men at Florida State University, is the first book on the administrative phase of the subject to be published in 13 years.

It is timely because within the relatively brief period of half a century the national organized public recreation movement has experienced a remarkable growth.

FROM ITS inception to the present time the development has been geared to meeting immediate and urgent needs, and therefore emphasis has been on programs, personnel, equipment, facilities and finance.

"The last half of the century will witness a corresponding emphasis upon the refinement of policy and practice in the light of carefully selected guides to thought and action," Dr. Danford predicts.

HE SAID the purpose of his book is to provide a sound basis for determining policy and practice in the management of community recreation.

Just off the press, the book is published by Harper and Brothers as one in a series in school and public health education, physical education and recreation.

THE AUTHOR'S wide experience in both community and college recreation activities is reflected in his full discussion of principles and values of organized recreation activities and also of practical operational problems of organization and administration of a public recreation program.

Dr. Danford came to FSU six years ago from Madison, Wisconsin where he had many years of experience in administrative recreation and education work.

Sands' Slants
by Tommy Sands
Flambeau Sports Editor

With Kentucky definitely out of the Seminole foot-ll picture for 1954, it appears likely that the University Tampa will try to fill the Oct. 16, date left vacant hen the Wildcats signed an undisclosed opponent for the me Saturday this week.

Should that become the case, then rule out the possibility of 11-game schedule for Coach Tom Nugent's lads next Fall. lier in the week, Athletic Director Dr. Howard Danford hinted t on 11-game card might be in the offing for next year if e Kentucky tilt and a Sept. 26 opener here with Arkansas State re filled. The 11th game, of course was in order to place mps on the schedule—a loft they've held since 1948. An early ecember date was mentioned.

Whether Tampa has Oct. 16 open is another matter. However, Danford said that formal negotiations—if any—would probably have to wait until the end of the season.

Nugent Hits the Trail

While his Seminoles had an open date this week Tom Nugent ok time out to hit the banquet circuit. Monday night he was Daytona Beach to address the Quarterback Club and Tuesday ht he was guest speaker at Leon High's "L" Club alumni anquet.

The Daytona quarterbacks wanted the Nuge bad enough to fly him down and back—all at their own expense. At both outings Nugent lived up to his optimist tag to the letter.

Typical of the Nugent remarks to the Leon group was "Shoot the moon, and if you don't hit it, at least fall somewhere near it. on't look backward. There is no past—only a bright future."

As for his own charges, Nugent had this to say: "The biggest l I ever had was in the fourth quarter of the Louisiana Tech ame when one of my players came off the field and told me. oach, I know we're goina to do it."

Here's another one that came out of the Tech tussle worthy mention. Late in the game Lee Corso was calling 'em from arterback and on one particular play with fourth down and ly 12 yards for a first down, the Miami frosh lined up the be in the "T". Meantime Nugent quickly sent in a replacement Corso and asked him what the idea was. Replied Lee, "Coach had a play I just knew would go."

It'll Be Brother Against Brother

Yep, the Hank Boyer that won Florida's Lineman of the Week ard this week is our own George's brother. Hence, the Stetson SU Homecoming clash here Nov. 21 takes on an added interest in at Large George and brother Hank will probably stare each other the face from their tackle posts that Saturday afternoon.

George Boyer

Stetson's Boyer well deserved e honor. Hank was credited nt 15—count 'em—tackles in e Hatters bruising 14-7 win er Tampa last week. But our n George, if the Seminoles dn't been playing so far away m home, would probably have me in for his share of contention, too. The rugged 220-pounder ayed the entire game save for econds, and was a mountain defense.

Nugent praised him along with nning-mate Al Makowiecki for s performance and rightly so Boyer played center under Don er as a freshman last season and since moving over from the ot post, has really hit his ide.

In Our Own Back Yard

When FSU passes out grid scholarships to prospective high-schoolers, at the end of the current season a home-town boy that uld certainly come in for consideration is Leon High's versatile Bud Williamson, who does everything for Bill Armstrong's Lions ut carry the water bucket.

Williamson, son of FSU Intramural Director, Ed Williamson is probably the top back in the tough Northeast Conference which the Lions currently lead and is a leading candidate for all-state honors.

The lean 160-pounder, which may seem light for the college anks, has churned out 396 yards in 105 carries over Leon's five games in addition to 92 yards via the airways. Those 105 carries average out to a very tiring 21 per game when you consider he's a 60-minute man. A real rock'em, sock'em on the defense and equally at home in a baseball suit, Bud if he chooses, should make some college team a fine addition. Let's hope its FSU—though Georgia Tech is reportedly interested.

Although the Tribe cools its heels this weekend, Campbell Stadium offers two of the season's finer games here. Tonight Bi. Armstrong's well-drilled Lions and unbeaten Gainesville square off in a battle that could very well determine the Northeast Conference champion.

Armstrong's charges have lost only once—13-8 to Panama City last weekend—while Gainesville has ripped through five opponents without biting the dust. Then tomorrow night, Florida A&M's national Negro champs strengthen their bid for a repeat on that title when they go against another unbeaten eleven—Xavier.

The Rattlers, incidentally, besides being unbeaten, have yet to be scored on, while the visitors racked up 66 points last week. Should make for a whing-ding ball game.

Pigskin Pickin's

By BOB TAYLOR

Back again after a 71 per cent weekend (including the SMU upset). That gives us a 112-45 record, or a rating of .713 for four weeks.

FSU is idle this week, so our average should jump some. Friday we see Maryland over Miami, but it could be close . . . and Leon over Gainesville, in the Lions Homecoming.

Saturday, A&M meets Xavier of Louisiana Xavier won their last game 99-0, but we'll stick with the Rattlers, by a nose. Should be a good game to see.

In the South: Alabama over Mississippi St., Tharp against Parker in this one . . . Duke over N. C. St. . . . Kentucky over Villanova, a game FSU should watch closely . . . Tennessee over Louisville, but not by 59-0 . . . Wake Forest over Richmond.

LSU over Florida, even though 's the Gators' Homecoming . Auburn over Tulane, Bear Wolf's liable to get fired again . . . Vanderbilt over Virginia . . . McNeese St., over Tampa . . . VPI over Wash. and Lee.

Georgia over North Carolina, close . . . Mississippi over Arkansas, by a point . . . William and Mary over George Washington . . . West Virginia's undefeated Mountaineers over VMI . . . and Stetson over Wofford.

EAST

Elsewhere, the East: Navy over Penn, in anybody's game . . . Army over Columbia . . . Holy Cross over Brown . . . Yale over Colgate . . . Cornell over Princeton . . . Harvard over Dartmouth . . . TCU over Penn St. . . . and Fordham and Rutgers to tie

The game of the week takes place in South Bend Indiana. Notre Dame, the nation's top team, is the solid favorite over the country's fourth ranking club, Georgia Tech. The Irish also have the advantage of their home field. Everything seems to be in their favor, yet after Tech's 36-6 win over Auburn last week, it makes one stop and think.

No regular on the Georgia Tech squad has ever played a losing game, and after much thought, we're going to give it to the Engineers, using our hearts more than our heads. Georgia Tech by three points.

MIDWEST

Also in the Midwest: Illinois over Syracuse . . . Ohio St. over Wisconsin . . . Pitt over Northwestern . . . Michigan over Minnesota . . . Iowa St. over Drake . . . Missouri over Nebraska.

Michigan St. over Purdue, the Spartans keep rolling . . . Iowa over Indiana . . . SMU over Kansas . . . Oklahoma A&M over surprise Detroit . . . Kansas St. over Wichita . . . and Cincinnati over Western Reserve

In the Longhorn territory, it's: powerhouse Baylor over Texas A&M . . . Texas over Rice, just a hunch . . . Oklahoma over Colorado . . . and Texas Tech over New Mexico A&M.

Out West: Southern Cal over California . . . Stanford over Washington . . . UCLA over Wash. St. . . . Oregon over San Jose St. . . . Wyoming over Utah . . . and Idaho over Oregon St.

And another upset, Slippery Rock over Shippensburg St., Shippensburg was undefeated and untied last year, but we're pulling for ole Slippery Rock. C'mon Rockets.

FSU 'B' Team To Play MGC

Second Outing For Tribe Reserves; Mercer, Feamster, Set For Action

The Florida State University junior varsity football team makes its second outing of the season tomorrow night when it faces the Middle Georgia College team in Waycross, Ga. Game time is 8 p. m.

MERCER

The Jayvees opened their season three weeks ago, dropping an 18-12 decision to South Georgia College.

FSU will bank on the running of halfback Ray Mercer of Moultrie (Ga.) former all-state, all-southern, all-America high school performer.

Mercer gets plenty of help, however, from freshmen backs Norman Olson of Orlando, Delma Swilley of Boynton Beach, and quarterback Charles Mendel of Hampton (Va.), along with halfback John Pichelmayer of Birmingham (Ala.) Big end, Tom Feamster also is set for action.

Mercer, first-string halfback at Auburn last season, was among the top ten ground-gainers in the Southeastern Conference as a freshman. A transfer, he is ineligible to compete with the Seminole varsity this season.

Coach Mike Long and squad of 28 players are scheduled to leave here tomorrow morning for Waycross. The game is being sponsored by the Waycross Recreation Department.

Seminole Cage Stock May Reach New High

Basketball at Florida State University should reach an all-time high this season.

That's the opinion of Seminole fans who watched Coach J. K. "Bud" Kennedy's freshman-studded varsity finish a rugged 1952-53 season with an even-steven record, 11 wins and 11 losses.

The coming cage campaign will be only the seventh in FSU history, and Kennedy believes it could be a "natural."

Only one Seminole of last season will be absent from this year's team. He is Bob Pence, a 1953 spring graduate who took part in only eight games last winter.

WERNKE BACK

Heading the list of returning letterman is Hammerin' Ham Wernke, the Seminoles' all-time great who was named to the Helms Athletic Foundation's All-America team last year.

Only a second-semester sophomore this term, Wernke was Florida's outstanding collegiate basketball performer last season, being a unanimous All-Florida choice.

Wernke, a six-feet, 175-pound "midget" as basketball players go, poured in 466 points in 22 games last season for a somewhat phenomenal 21.3 average. A product of one of the nation's hottest basketball beds, Batesville, Indiana, Ham shattered a half-dozen individual school records last season.

CLOSE RACE

With Wernke heading the Seminoles, FSU should be one of the strongest teams in Florida this season. It will be a close race between Florida, Miami and Stetson.

The Seminoles have an imposing 20-game schedule lined up, and Kennedy sticks his neck out by saying his Indians should win the majority of them.

"It's too early yet to tell, but we should have a crackerjack club," says Kennedy. "We'll be shooting for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) tournament in Kansas City."

Kennedy

Wernke

So according to Kennedy and Seminole followers, the basketball picture should be much rosier this season.

FSU Draws 20,929 in 2 Home Games

Turnstiles at Doak S. Campbell Stadium are clicking a merry tune this season. In two home outings, the Tribe has performed before 20,929. That's nearly half as many as attended last year's six home games.

Home attendance in 1952 was 42,000. With four home games remaining including the big Homecoming tilt with Stetson on Nov. 21 and the VMI game on Oct. 31, the Seminoles appear well on their way towards establishing new gate marks.

Rate At A&M Game

FSU students may receive student rate of 95 cents at the Florida A&M U-Xavier game tomorrow night by presenting their ID cards to the ticket seller and the ticket-collector.

Florida State University, Tallahassee, is the only school in the country offering a BS degree in baking science and management.

Seminoles In Rough Drills

Indians Prepare For VMI Outing; Search Still On For Punter, Passer

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

The Seminoles may have an "off week" as far as the schedule is concerned, but on the practice field it's been a different story.

For taskmaster Tom Nugent has put his Tribe through some of the Fall's roughest drills since Tuesday. Nugent gave his gridders a holiday Monday, their first since the start of school and probably last of the season.

Pass defense a weak spot in the Seminole picture all season has come in for its share of attention as well as the offensive side. Wednesday the Indians reverted to pure fundamentals and got a taste of live tackling.

Meanwhile the search still continued for a punter and passer Junior Metts and Jimmy Messinese have shared the majority of the booting duties of late, but both sport anemic averages.

HARPER AT QB

In an effort to bolster the passing attack, Nugent indicated the freshman W. L. Harper might get a chance to operate at the all-important quarterback post.

Injuries, although none too serious have slowed down several of the Tribe regulars. End Buddy Bryant, tackle George Boyer and ace back Bobby Fiveash took things easy as a result of minor knocks received earlier in the week.

Joe Holt, limited to spot duty in the Louisiana Tech affair, rested his bruised ribs However, two bright notes were sounded when it was learned that Ronnie King and Steve Kalenich might be ready for VMI

Both were held out of the Tech contest with knee injuries.

VMI GAME

Pointing towards next Saturday's "game of the year" with VMI, Nugent has thrown in a couple of "secret" formations and new plays for his former proteges.

And it looks as if Nugent will have to do just that and possibly more if the Indians are to stop the improved Keydets. Last week VMI, hit it's season's peak by stopping Virginia 21-6 their first victory over the once-powerful Cavaliers since 1942.

However, tomorrow, VMI will have its hands full, when they go against West Virginia, the nation's eighth-ranking team.

Nugent has made no secret of the fact that he would like to do nothing better than send his former charges back to Virginia, tail between legs.

And the Keydets have expressed the same desire. So it should stack up as a very fine afternoon of football. Or as Nugent has put it, "the best game in the South that day."

Four Frat Teams Remain Unbeaten

In the Greek intramural wars, four fraternity football teams have managed to bully their way this far without a setback. Alpha Tau Omega, Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, and Lambda Chi Alpha are all undefeated.

Last Tuesday the games ran like this: Alpha Tau Omega swamped Sigma Alpha Epsilon 21-0; Theta Chi callously clobbered Pi Kappa Alpha 20-0; Sigma Chi went down before the drawling Kappa Alphas 13-0; Sigma Phi Epsilon shot Phi Kappa Tau 6-0; Phi Delta Theta and Sigma Nu tied 6-6, but the Phi Delts slipped by on top by two first downs; and Delta Tau Delta and Kappa Sigma also tied 6-6, with the Delts finding victory by three first downs.

All of this developed a record. As of Tuesday, Oct. 20, the fraternity record stood this way:

KA	3	0
Theta Chi	2	0
Delta T Delta	0	1
Phi Delt	0	1
SPE	0	1
Pi K Phi	1	1

Miles Is Gym Team's Veteran

By BOB GUTTING

The oldest member of FSU's "Big Ten" gym squad is Jack Miles, who came to Florida State in 1950 and has since competed for the Seminoles with devastating results.

Jack attended Germantown High in Philadelphia where he graduated in 1946.

Miles

After graduation in '46 Jack went to work for a Philadelphia firm as a junior executive but still maintained contact with gymnastics by competing with the Philadelphia Turners.

It was during this time that he won the Middle Atlantic flying rings championship by edging out Joe Taylor, currently an FSU gym star, who had defeated him in the same event the previous year.

In 1950 Jack decided to enter college and picked FSU because he was impressed by the athletic program and knew the gym team would build up to championship status. This was during the Dr. Hartley Prices' second year as gymnastics coach when the team was just shaping up into the champions they are today.

RINGS CHAMP

Among the first things Jack did upon entering FSU was to go out and win the flying rings championship of the All-American team.

Following this is an almost unbelievable record of wins while competing under the Garnet and Gold.

They included the National AAU flying rings championship (1951), first place all-around Georgia AAU.

Then came the Florida AAU in 1952 with a first place in the flying rings, second place Indian clubs, long horse, high bars and all-around third place in calisthenics, side horse and still rings.

This was followed by the Georgia AAU with a second place on the flying rings, third on high bar and all-around.

Next was a National AAU fifth place all-around finish, Southern Intercollegiates first place flying rings and long horse. Florida AAU first place long horse and flying rings second place calisthetics and third on side horse, high bar and parallel bars.

And there you have the record of a great gymnast who is also a prospect for the 1956 Olympics.

Magnolia Tops Methodists 26-0

Magnolia Hall trounced the Methodist Student Center 26-0 Wednesday in the second of its ten-game intramural touch football series.

Magnolia's Dutton Haver, demonstrated his pass-receiving ability several times, as the passing combination of Bob Davis and Haver proved too much for the Methodists.

The victory was preceded by a doubtful series opener in which Magnolia tied Senior Hall 6-6.

Teams which Magnolia Hall will play during the rest of the series are: Tigers, October 26; Newman Club, October 29, Penthouse Gang, November 2; and Wildcats, Air Force, Rebels, and Tornadoes on November 4, 9, 11 and 16 respectively.

'Modern Dancers' Select Members; Plan Annual Show

Members of Theater Dance Group, Florida State's proponent of modern dance, met last Tuesday to select new members for the year.

Selected to perform with the group were Mary Carnline Branch, Margaret Donaldson, Joyce Dunn, Pam Duke and Peggy Ellsworth.

Also, Maxine Fletcher, Katherine Hartley, Kathy Jett and Aubrey McCall.

Joyce Nuley, Joyce Reynolds, Emily Schoenberger and Lucille Turnage.

Plans for the Dance group's annual show January 13 and 14 were also discussed at the Tuesday meeting. The show is built around a theme and members of the group strive to make their form more interpretive of the theme, it was explained.

Miss Nellie Bond Dickinson, well-known at Florida State U. for her work in the field of modern dance, sponsors the group. Meetings are held every Tuesday at 7:30 p.m in the Women's Gymnasium Anyone interested in modern dance is invited to attend meetings and practice sessions, the group added.

University 4-H Club Initiates Members In Simple Ceremony

State Home Demonstration Staff members entertained the University 4-H Club with a dessert held at the State Home Demonstration Office on West Campus on October 13 The theme of the evening was Autumn; the decorations and service carried out the motif, featuring "witches" riding across the "moon" on "broomsticks."

New members were initiated at a simple ceremony during the evening After initiation, Miss Anna Mae Sikes, State Home Demonstration agent, welcomed the students back to the campus and extended her wishes for a successful year.

Ann Edwards, president, said that it is known that there are quite a few former 4-H Club boys and girls on campus. "We would like very much for them to join our FSU. 4-H Club which is growing every day," she said "We feel that we have much to offer them in friendship and in helping them become better acquainted with the University—plus what they, as members of the club, could offer to help make the club more successful."

McCarty Explains Judiciary's Testing

In answer to the objections which some of this year's freshmen have made concerning the Knowledge of College test, Yvonne McCarthy, chairman of Judiciary, said today, "The purpose of the test is not just to add to the long list of exams which the freshmen must take, but to familiarize them as much as possible with the rules of the university so that there will not be so many coming to judiciary because of their own ignorance."

She went on to explain that many girls must come to Judiciary when they are late after being out of town simply because they are not aware that they should call in to their residence hall when they foresee that they will be detained. This is just one example of the many cases which go to Judiciary through negligence on the part of the student.

Of the nearly 1,000 new students who took the test this year, thirty-four freshmen and four transfers failed to pass it the first time. The second test was passed by all but two. These two girls will be campused until they pass it.

IN CHECKING the tests, it was found that a few questions were missed by the majority of those tested: for instance, the first question said, "The Honor System of FSU carries with it for every student—(1) non-responsibility, (2) an individual responsibility, (3) a dual responsibility, (4) many problems." Those who are familiar with the Honor System would have encircled number three because they know that each student is responsible for reporting others as well as himself.

Another question which seemed to confuse quite a few was one which asked who should be notified in case a girl wants to leave her dormitory by public conveyance between closing and opening hours. The correct answer is not her Junior Counselor or residence counselor, but the Dean of Women.

HERE'S ONE statement that none used in answering a question concerning classes. "All students must never, under any circumstances, miss any class." Doesn't take the freshmen long to learn the score on that subject.

In closing Yvonne added that she would like to commend the new girls for the cooperation they displayed during the testing program.

Leon County Alumni Plan Years Activities

With over 800 graduates and an equal number who attended, the alumni of FSU who live and work in Tallahassee make up one of the largest organizations in the community: The Leon County Alumni Club of FSU. And the president of this organization, Fred Drake, Jr., is kept busy in this "non-paid" position trying to keep all the activities of the club coordinated.

They serve as "coordinators" between the faculty and staff of the University and the citizens of Tallahassee and Leon County, telling others of the activities and events which take place on the campus. At Homecoming, the Leon County Alumni handle all the registration procedure during the big weekend. Last year alone, the club distributed tickets already reserved to more than 400 visiting alumni for football game, Pow Wow, and to the President's breakfast, as well as reminders about class reunions and where they would meet, kept a list of where the visiting alumni were housed, and in general acted as hosts to the visitors. They plan to do the same thing this year, and for the first time, call in another county club to assist.

THOUGH NOT all the alumni in the county are active in the club, President Drake says that is in the future plans of the organization.

"It is our wish to have every alumni in this year familiar with the work of the club and to take an active part in it," Drake said. He emphasized that if the people of Leon County are to help to maintain the high standards of education at the university, in keeping with the growth, that everyone who graduated or attended, is needed to assist.

TWO MEMBERS of tha Leon County club besides Drake, include Kathleen Falconer Pratt (Mrs. Buddy), vice president, Betty Dixon, secretary, and Herb Chandler, treasurer. The Board of Directors of the Leon chapter include Charlotte Rosenberg (Mrs. Charmles), Buddy Strauss, Marie Herold Pilcher (Mrs. Frank), Nan Page Hall Williams (Mrs. Gerald), and Maggie Beard Patterson (Mrs. H G.).

EVEN COACHES

Reporter Finds Stadium Press Box Full of Teletypes, Stewardesses

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

What goes on in that multi-decked press box at Doak S. Campbell stadium during a football game?

The press box is not, as many people believe, just an exclusive grandstand where men with passes can sit back in ease and watch the game. The press box is a place for work

THIS WRITER, wanting to find out who does what in the press box and why he does it, decided to see for himself during the FSU-Abilene Christian game Friday. He found not only sportswriters, but an FSU coach, the scoreboard operator, statisticians, teletypists, telegraphers, announcers, photographers, as well as a lady sportswriter and a coach from Abilene Christian. There were even scouts from our future opponents present!

Each part of the press box serves a definite purpose The lower deck houses the teletypes and telegraph senders and provides working space for reporters, statisticians, coaches, scouts and the scoreboard operator.

THE MIDDLE deck houses the radio booths and the announcer's booth, where Coach Jack Haskins mans the public address system

On the upper deck FSU movie photographers take shots of each play so that habitual mistakes can be noted and corrected by the coaches.

AN INTRICATE set-up has been devised to assist the sportswriters. Bennett Land, director of sports publicity, keeps up a running play-by-play account of the game over a small PA system which can be heard only in the newspaper section. He spots players as they go in and out, mentions the yards gained and sometimes the type of play, as well as who made the tackle and who carried the ball. Coach Haskins does the same over the general PA system.

Meanwhile, an assistant from the sports publicity office records these plays in separate columns for each team on a ditto machine master sheet. As soon as he fills up a page he hands it to Mrs. Katherine Vernon of the Public Relations office, who puts it on the ditto machine and distributes copies to all those in the press box. During the half and at the end of the game statisticians' reports are also dittoed and distributed.

"MANY OF THE sportswriters have expressed appreciation at this extra gesture on our part," commented Mrs. Vernon before the game.

The team coaches sit safely separated, one at each end of the box, and advise their head coaches via field telephones what went wrong or right with each play. Sometimes they even begin their messages before the ball is snapped

EACH REGULAR sportswriter is assigned a seat and there are spaces for visiting journalists During this game writers were present from the Tampa Tribune, Pensacola News-Journal, Associated Press and Florida Times-Union. They kept play-by-play accounts going out to their papers. Play-by-play reports were also sent by telegraph to the Abilene radio station for re-creation and to the Abilene newspaper The Tallahassee Democrat was also represented.

You may have wondered how a radio announcer can keep up with the substitutions, play descriptions and still pause every few minutes to give you the line-up and game statistics. That accounts for a few more press box personnel.

A SPOTTER from each team assists the announcer. As a player goes into the line-up a card bearing his name is placed in a little wooden frame to correspond with the position he takes. The card of the player he replaces is taken out. The announcer can refer to his board and instantly tell who's playing where.

There were a few other men who didn't bother to identify themselves and this writer assumed they were visiting scouts.

A PRESS BOX is no place for loafing. It's too small and too crowded to accommodate for hangers-on, which explains why there are none.

Every minute counts in the transmission of a game. Despite the play-by-play accounts, the Tampa Tribune man reminded the Western Union personnel to flash his paper the score as soon as the game ended so that no time would be lost in getting the headlines set.

ALL THAT THE sportswriters had to do when the game ended was to write their leads (in this case post-mortems) and have them teletyped in. The play-by-play accounts were already set in type and the presses almost ready to roll.

All that work doesn't go unrewarded. There's plenty of food on hand for the asking — cole slaw, sandwiches, hot dogs, coffee, cookies, cokes, hot baked beans—and attractive Eastern Air Lines stewardesses to serve it.

EVERY BIT of noise and enthusiasm seems to end up in the box's lofty heights. The shrill whistles of the referees, the enthusiasm of the cheering section and the stirring notes of 21 bands all help the writers to add color to their accounts. There's no better place to view the panorama of a spectacular mass drill nor no choicer location to follow each play.

But there's only one way to get in. You have to be working there.

UP IN THE press box one notices things that the stands might let pass by. There was no reaction from the crowd, when, after FSU got the benefit of a 15-yard penalty against Abilene, some band played "Three Blind Mice" Abilene didn't bring a band. Who was the traitor?

After the game had ended the visiting coach turned to a few loyal Seminoles in the box and said, "You wouldn't want us to ride all the way home with a loss, would you?"

OH WOULDN'T WE?

Fulbright Students May Attend School On 'Very Little'

Students who compete and are recommended for Fulbright Scholarships may attend summer school in England for only $80.00, according to word received from Dr. Marion J. Hay, Professor in the School of Education.

Students are usually chosen on the basis of maturity, high grades, and personality.

Different universities in the British Isles stress various fields of study. Oxford and Cambridge stress literature and modern languages, while the University of London emphasizes Political Science and Economics. The University of Edinburgh has a very fine program for the Humanites.

Because it is cheaper to live in Europe, students may live in Oxford for about $15 a week. For summer school all the expenses would amount to approximately $80 Tourist class transportation to England can be arranged through the Education Department for $165.

Honor Court Drops Subpoenas For Carothers, Lawler

Attorney General Nimkoff States Opinion That Action of Court Was Incorrect

FSU Court Upholds Disqualification Of Candidate Revell

"The University Court acted incorrectly in issuing a subpoena to the President of the Student Body, and to the Vice-President in connection with the case of Walter Revell versus the Elections Committee," stated Peter Nimkoff, Attorney General. Carothers and Lawler were subpoenaed to testify as to the validity of the election rules of the constitution.

Revell, prospective candidate for freshmen elections, published a campaign letter prior to the date set by the elections committee for campaigning to begin. After Revell was disqualified by the elections committee, he brought his case before the Honor Court on the claim that the election laws were unconstitutional.

ACTING for the University Honor Court, Chief Justice Richard Jackson subpoenaed Carothers and Lawler to support the validity of the election laws. Following is a copy of Jackson's official letter:

October 15, 1953

Mr. Milton Carothers
President, The Student Body
Florida State University

Dear Mr. President:

The President of the Student Body is hereby ordered along with the Attorney General, Secretary of Elections, and presiding officer of the Senate to appear before this Caart Thursday, October 22, 1953, to show why this statute is constitutional. The decision

ODK Selects Lawler, Nimkoff, Nowlin

Group Conducts Noon Ceremonies; Cite Qualification

Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honorary for men, tapped three Florida State University students into membership last Friday at noon.

Eugene Lawler, Peter Nimkoff and Klyne Nowlin were selected on the basis of their records of leadership in student activities, as well as of scholarship and serviee.

THE NEWLY chosen members were informed of their election either in class or elsewhere on the campus and conducted by old members to the student center where a brief tapping ceremony was read. President Soraparu read a short history of the organization, then officially "tapped" each member with a symbol of ODK's circular key after the man's citation had been read.

Lawler's citation read "for outstanding scholarship, for leadership in student government, for participation in service organizations and for participation in publications and public speaking."

NIMKOFF was noted "for outstanding scholarship, for leadership in student government, for participation in athletic activities, for leadership in a social fraternity and for work on publications."

Nowlin was chosen "for leadership in student government, for leadership in a social fraternity and for participation in athletic activities."

OLD AND NEW members dined together at the student center following the tapping. Formal initiation will be held tonight at 9:30 in the first floor lounge of Longmire building.

Omicron Delta Kappa was founded with the belief that all-round leadership among college men should be recognised, that representative men in all phases of college life should co-operate in worthwhile activities, and that outstanding students and faculty members should meet on a basis of mutual interest, understanding and helpfulness.

THE FLORIDA State circle of ODK participates in many service projects during the year, such as co-sponsoring the ODK-Mortar Board Leadership Training Conference, organizing political rallies, establishing a leadership honorary for freshmen and sophomores.

Fifteen Best-Looking Will Compete As Finalists For Miss FSU Title

Fifteen of the best-looking coeds at Florida State University will be chosen finalists in the 1954 Tally-Ho Miss FSU contest Friday, November 13 in Opperman Hall, Tally-Ho spokesmen said today.

Tally-Ho sponsors the annual contest to pick the reigning beauty for the seventh year now, the spokesmen said, adding that this year's competition will be more than just a photogenic beauty contest as in the past. Instead, Tally-Ho will stage a full-scale beauty contest, "Atlantic City style." The annual spokesman said this step will be designed to promote the fairest possible judging.

THIS ARRAY of beauty will be judged by six outstanding faculty members, with the assistance of Milton Carothers, President of Student Body. Faculty judges are: Dr. Eide, Schol of Journalism; Dr. Jeffries, Infirmary Physician; Dr. Reynolds, School of Arts and Sciences, Daisy Parker, School of Public Administration; Dr. Holschuh, Art Department; Mr. Vogel, Counciling.

These qualified judges will judge the coeds on looks and poise in both bathing suits and formal wear. Fifteen will be chosen and their pictures will be sent to John Powers' modeling agency in New York City, where John Powers will make the final selection of Miss FSU.

ALL GROUPS who are interested in entering constants should submit an eight by ten photograph wit hthe girl's name, hometown and the organisation sponsoring her.

Any number of entries can be made by an organization, but the pictures have to be in the Tally-Ho office by November 11, by 5 p.m., Tally-Ho said.

Frosh Take Field Events; Dunk Haskins

Kenn Haskins, president of sophomore class and chairman of the Florida State University Rat Court was ceremoniously dumped into Westcott Pool Saturday afternoon climaxing Sophomore-Freshman Day, 1953.

The traditional event set up to pit freshmen against sophomores in a field day of events gives the new freshmen the chance to rid themselves of rat caps and rules imposed by Haskins this year and the Rat Court. Freshmen won many of the events and came out at the end with a majority of the points, defeating the sophomores.

A large crowd watched the Saturday event with interest and cheering was strong on both sides as freshmen copped their field event points. Later, the crowds watched as freshmen sans rat caps, did a "heave-ho" with the defeated rat court head and soaked him, ending a pseudo-feud that has gone on here since registration day.

Tally-Ho Sets Final Deadline For 1954 Books

Deadline for deposits for the 1954 TALLY-HO is Friday, October 30. The deposit of $5.50 must be paid in the student bank to the account of the TALLY-HO. The receipt for the Deposit should have the correct name and address of the individual or group requesting the copy. This does not apply to those who have paid full registration fees.

"Numerous requests for past issues of the TALLY-HO have come to my office," said Fred Vogel, counselor for student organization, "but until this year copies have been limited to the number of students paying full registration fees."

Artist Series Features Informal Receptions

By JUNE YATES

How would you like to meet Mack Harrell or have a chat with Cornelia Otis Skinner? Well, this year the chance may be yours.

Preliminary announcers auditions are going to be held tomorrow night, Oct. 28 in room 404 of the Alumni Building at 7:00 for all announcing aspirants. Material for the auditions will be provided. Producer Stokes Plans Sandspur; Announces Staff

Sandspur producer Francis Bailey Stokes today announced that six top positions on the 1954 "Panorama" production staff have been filled.

Miss Stokes, who will also direct the February all-student production named Bob Foley business manager, Kitty Culpepper as set designer, Garrett Marx stage manager, John Baxley music arrangements and Bob Gutting, publicity. She said there will be a meeting tonight at 7:30 in the Women's Gymnasium to add cast members, business staffers, make-up and prop workers to the list. "Many interested students appeared at the initial meeting last week," Miss Stokes said, adding that many more will be needed to fill positions. She urged all those interested to attend tonight's meet in the Gym.

Final tryouts for singing and dancing parts will be held this Friday between 8 and 8 p.m. at Opperman Hall, Bob Gutting, new publicity head said. Gutting said all singing tryouts will be first and anyone interested in these parts who cannot attend tonight's meeting is asked to be at tryouts. Required of singing aspirants, according to Gutting, will be the student's own sheet music, popular preferred, and, if possible an accompanist familiar with the style.

Gutting noted that it is not necessary to have a soloist quality voice to get a singing part in "Panorama." He said there are many openings for all types of singers in this year's production. The publicity chief added that dance tryouts will follow the singing tests Friday night, explaining that the need for good dance and vocal talent is so great since this year's production is strictly musical comedy without dialogue, a deviation from former productions which carried a plot throughout.

Sandspur's Homecoming float will also be discussed at tonight's meeting and Gutting said anyone wishing to work on this should attend the meeting to offer suggestions and take part in the planning.

The teams entered in the intramural tournament so far are Cary Fitzgerald and Ron Martin; Warren Cobb and Ramon Simmons; Nakomas Roberts and Earl Carroll; Silas Smith and Katherine Mason; Joanna Scheye and Ann Coryell; Harold Stewart and Pat Gatlin; Norma Trippodo and Carolyn Close; and Fred Roberts with a partner yet to be named.

IFC Accepts Resignations Of Booth, Ball

The Inter-fraternity Council announced today it has accepted the resignation of President Charlie Booth and Secretary Jim Ball effective as of their last meeting October 21.

Booth, who had held the position of president since last spring, said he found it necessary to resign because of class conflict with the IFC proceedings. Buddy Leynes, Phi Delta Theta, will succeed Booth as president of the council.

BALL TENDERED his resignation as secretary since the council proceedings were interfering with his graduate activities. His vacant post has been filled by Bill Suttlemeyer, president of Lamba Chi Alpha.

Suttlemeyer announced in a statement, "At the moment the future of the IFC looks very good. We've got a lot of work to do and we'll need all the cooperation we can get from the student body. We're trying to build a good IFC foundation and help the school all we can at the same time."

IN OTHER COUNCIL activities, Haywood Taylor, in charge of IFC's share of campus chest, has requested at least $40.00 from each of the fraternities to be donated for the civic cause.

Some Caps and Gowns Still in Bookstore; Late Orders Also Probl em, Says Wheeler

The University Bookstore has announced that it still has some caps and gowns which have not been picked up. This, together with late orders, constitutes one of the Bookstore's biggest problems, according to Manager Gordon Wheeler.

THIS YEAR Mrs. Louise Babcock, Landis Hall, was selected by the Vocational Guidance and Placement Office to be in charge of ordering the caps and gowns. Colin English, senior class president, has also been working on publicity and ordering.

CAPS AND GOWNS for graduation are not owned by the university; it does not have the facilities necessary to keep and maintain caps and gowns from year to year. Such a policy would involve having the gowns cleaned three times a year, once after each graduation ceremony. The University would have to keep more than 800 caps and gowns on hand, and the number of graduates is increasing from year to year.

RENTING the caps and gowns makes it necessary for each senior to pay a rental fee for the period between October and June of $8. They must also pay a deposit to the Bookstore of $5, since the total cost of the regalia is $10. This insures the school against loss should the student not return the apparel.

The student is refunded the $5 deposit upon returning his cap and gown.

STUDENTS graduating in February will have to pay a rental fee of only $3, consequently they will be refunded $7 upon returning their regalia.

August graduates are advised that they cannot keep their caps and gowns from October through August without buying them. They should, now that Investiture is over, return their caps and gowns and order them again in July.

THIS WOULD mean a saving of $7 for August graduates, since it would reduce their rental fee to $3.

All should return caps and gowns immediately after usage because the company may have them allotted for somewhere else on a rush order. This time element is responsible for the deposit.

ONE METHOD of insuring the return of the graduating regalia —holding a student's diploma until it is received—was used successfully for the February, 1953, graduation.

It was discontinued, however, because of complaints from students that it prevented them from having their pictures taken at graduation with their diplomas

News Meeting Rewarding To Faculty, Paper, Too

We of the Flambeau feel that the news conference last Friday with deans, heads of departments, and their representatives was a particularly rewarding experience.

Not only were those present acquainted with the Flambeau's expanding news coverage and the problems they will have to face with new reporters, but they had a chance to make suggestions and criticisms about situations they had already met.

After a brief welcome by the Editor-in-Chief, there were talks by Professor Slaughter and Mr. Wozniak of the School of Journalism.

Mr. Slaughter made what we feel is a very good point. Namely, he pointed out that all those in attendance were people interested in education in their respective fields. Why not look in the same light upon green Flambeau reporters? A college newspaper, after all, is different from a professional one in that it must work with a new group every year. The Flambeau, in receiving the help of reporters from the School of Journalism, at the same time is helping to train them and give them experience.

We cannot promise that they will know exactly how to proceed at first, or even that they will always be 100 per cent right in their facts. They must follow the old Dewey-formula of "learning by doing." We strive constantly to point out errors and make suggestions for improved work, but ultimately the reporters will need sympathy and consideration at the news source.

Along this line, Mr. Wozniak addressed the conferees on the subject "What Is News?" He asked the department heads and representatives to think of what they might discuss with faculty members outside of their immediate fields. He urged them to stress the more important aspects of a story and asked them to help reporters with technical terms.

The question-and-answer session which followed was particularly enlightening to the Flambeau.

One professor pointed out that it was very difficult to get acquainted with a new reporter every week or two, so we are doing all we can to have long-time beats.

Another representative remarked that many students on campus never read any paper other than the Flambeau. He complimented us for having broadened our editorial page to cover national, state and international affairs but suggested it would be good to have news stories in the same field. The editor replied that if clarification of the School of Journalism's contract with the Associated Press is made favorably, the Flambeau may be able to run news "briefs" or synopses of extra-campus affairs.

The Flambeau also explained that it is trying to set up a campus-wide distribution system, and complaints from professors who had not received copies helped improve our efforts along that line.

All in all, we feel that we got a lot out of the conference and hope those who attended also did. Our sincere thanks go to them for attending, as well as to Dr. Sidney Kobre, who arranged the meeting, and Professor Slaughter and Mr. Wozniak.

• OPINIONS

Opinions by the Attorney General

The University Court acted incorrectly in issuing a subpoena to the President of the Student Body, and to the Vice-President in connection with the case of Walter Revell vs. the Elections Committee.

The Court should have issued "a request to show cause," for the President and Vice-President to appear before the court and show cause why the statute in question should not be declared unconstitutional.

This request to show cause does not carry the authority of a subpoena; it is not mandatory.

Second, it is my opinion that in deference to his office, the University Court should, as a practice, request, and not demand, the presence before it of the President, except when he is the plaintiff or defendant in an appeal to that court.

Peter Nimkoff,

Cowboys Still Bang-Banging Away

By DAVID DREIS

Let's talk about movie cowboys. The men who amble across the wide open spaces of the company lot and yodel a haunting refrain to the cactus plants as adoring schoolmarms peek through their class windows and sigh, 'Will he ever return?'

This may sound corny to you now but when the oaters first appeared, they were the craze. Today, the cowboy has psychological problems, but still his celluloids are the best selling film commodity.

Back in the early 1900's the first film epic appeared. THE GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY played to packed audiences throughout the country and one reviewer wrote, "You can actually see the gunsmoke on the screen." What an epic complete with a train telegrapher tied up, but still not outwitted. He taps out a message with his head! Boy, you shoulda heard the fans talk.

A few years later producers decided the fans needed a cowboy actor who would appear in a series of films. Some westerners were appearing as straight actors and so, off the legitimate stage, the name of William S. Hart thundered. To the last gasp of breath when he had lost a gun duel in Another Man's Boots to the cliff-jumping of Here Comes Texas, William S. Hart became a household name.

The years passed and Hollywood decided to find a genuine cowboy to play cowboy roles. So what if he can't act? That wasn't half as important as a fast draw in a rowdy duel. Who would be this cowboy? Tom Mix, of course.

There was no getting around it. Mix was good and genuine to the last degree. His acting was natural. Something which wasn't exploited in western silents. He never used a stuntman. He was a real cowboy. He even had his own horse—Tony and these two galloped in melodrama after melodrama. Tom was followed everywhere he went by grownups and kids alike, but the kids were his weakness. He started a radio drama and the straight-shooters club. It soared to a great membership and his boxoffice went skyward too. Mascot Pictures, his company, put him in sound serials because of his success over radio. Until his death in a race car accident, Tom Mix was the leader.

When sound westerns came into being, western drawls had to be found and Rex Bell and Hoot Gibson answered the call. Jack Holie and now-athletic director Joe Bonomo jumped from aeroplanes to their horses. Westerns were modernized!

It was the early thirties and Hoot Gibson's pictures were getting raves from all who liked horse operas. A cowpoke appeared in one of Gibson's pictures and gave out with a song. He stuck around movie singing in westerns. The cowpoke's name was Gene Autry.

Around these times, western adaptations were the rage and Randolph Scott got his taste of buck leather in Western Union. He rarely leaves it. Another adaptation which became a fabulous series was Hopalong Cassidy. Hoppy stuck around long enough to become teevee's top gunslinger. Nowadays he adapts himself from Clarence E Munsford's character to the personage of William Boyd.

In analyzation, it probably was the Hoppy series which brought to the fore the romantic cowboy. Hoppy's sidekick was JAMES ELISON, who provided the love interest. The big question on producers' minds was how to get a romantic singing cowboy who could shoot a gun. Enter, ROY ROGERS.

Rogers could sing and ride, but he couldn't act or handle a gun. He could make love and married his leading lady, Dale Evans. However, the fans didn't care if he couldn't act. He'd learn. As to handling a gun . . . well, he could use his fists. There you have the format for a Roy Rogers movie . . . only this time the emphasis would be on singing. Rogers was a hit.

Other wranglers who grace drive-ins and the other half of double features are: Rocky Lane, a fast talking Alan Ladd type cowbody; Rex Allen, a sad actor-cowboy who can handle a tune; Johnny Mack Brown, a rough-tough cowboy and Charles Starret, who runs down his hallway, jumps into his closet and changes to the DURANGO KID. Naturally, there are others.

Of course, this article isn't trying to take in the account of western stars who make up big pictures. Randy Scott, Rod Cameron, Gary Cooper, Alan Ladd etc. have appeared as straight stars too, but they feel a western will always help the box-office. John Wayne went from western into big-time straight roles and in-between fights with Chata, he manages to come through in six guns.

I'll guarantee one thing. Movie cowboys are a helluva lot better off than the regular he-men, financially and mentally.

Errors

Dear Bruce:

We wish to call to your attention two errors that appeared in your news bulletin on October 23 concerning the court case of Walter Revell vs. the Elections Committee.

First, The President and the Vice-President of the Student Body were not cited for contempt of court on October 22. But they were asked to appear on October 29 and show cause why they should not be cited for contempt.

Second, The President and the Vice-President of the Student Body maintained that under the circumstances of the case they were not subject to the subpoena of the court.

Courtship Problems

WACO, Tex. (I.P.)—The assorted problems of courtship and marriage, including fear of "aggressive dates," lead to more anxiety among today's college coeds than any other cause. Fears of Baylor University coeds were examined by Robert D. Wickham, a graduate psychology student. He revealed his findings in a thesis for the master of arts degree.

Some 700 girls, including 40 per cent of the coed enrollment in each undergraduate class, were included in the survey. Nothing immoral could be read into the findings of Wickham's category of sex fears. Some 40 per cent of the girls have fears of being old maids, some 47 per cent feared they'll not be able to latch onto the mate best suited to them. Some feared they could not conceive children, while others admitted a fear of childbirth. Slightly more than 50 per cent expressed a conscious fear of "aggressive dates."

Wickham said that the fact the girls come from deeply religious background, where taboos are emphasized, probably is responsible for the concern over the general problems related to sex. Too, he believes some of the fears are due to ignorance on the subject. In other categories, he found that fear of communism and polio are dominant in the thinking of the girl of 1953.

Princeton's Dodds Scores ROTC For 'Intellectually Thin' Courses

PRINCETON, N. J. (I.P.)—The most basic faculty criticism of the present Reserve Officer's Training Corps structure in the American college is that subjects taught under ROTC are "intellectually thin" and are mainly concerned with "dull memorizing of detailed facts," according to President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton University. This criticism, says Dr. Dodds, is sound and the defects in the ROTC studies should be corrected.

Dr Dodds points out that "total war is more than a strictly military problem. The 'know why' is an essential element of the 'know how' and should be part of the equipment of an ROTC graduate." His remedy calls for a close integration between college and ROTC courses, and a closer alliance between academic and military professors.

At Princeton, Dr. Dodds says, the history department has constructed a new course in military history which is required for ROTC students and also open to civilian students as an elective. According to Dr. Dodds, both academic and military professors are pleased with the results.

He also suggests a course in geopolitics. "Officers and civilians alike need fuller knowledge of the economic as well as political uses of manpower and natural resources, and of the impact of military policies upon our economy."

"The cure for the scholastic thinness of the ROTC curricula is not to load on more of the same stuff . . . colleges . . . should be permitted to compress the courses into fewer classroom hours and exercises, and to utilize the hours thus recaptured to deepen the meaning of the program and achieve a more satisfactory integration with the academic program," says Dodds.

Another criticism, which Dr. Dodds dismisses as being "without foundation," is that civilian and military discipline do not mix, military discipline should wait until one enters the service. He points out that discipline in the ROTC has little semblance to discipline in actual service duty. "The campus remains distinctly civilian in spirit and the same is true for the officer candidates," he concludes.

'Life With Father' Is Great Fun, Though Not Notably Meaningful

By STAFF WRITER

LIFE WITH FATHER, currently showing at FSU's Conradi Theater in a rollicking, solid production, centers itself about the strong figure of Father.

The script, not particularly meaningful but thoroughly enjoyable, is pieced together from short character sketches of a New York Victorian father.

Father is red-haired, red-tempered and sharp-tongued; he votes straight Republican, thinks women should definitely stay in the home, is a good Christian but has strange ways of showing it: "Have mercy, damn it!" etc.

The plot, if it can be said there is one, centers about Mother Vinnie's efforts to get Father baptized and his son young son Clarence's first bout with a thing called love.

In good comedy form, the conflicts are in the end resolved, but one is far more interested in Father's "Oh, Damns!" and "Damnations."

Charles Bosdahn turns in a thoroughly laudable performance as the frustrated, firey Clarance Day, Sr. His curses come naturally, and in general he seems to take on the personality of Father. One really feels his anguish at such lines as "Oh, God, here comes Cora with that little snipt."

Newcomer Ellen Driggers plays the scatter-brained, loveable Vinnie with great facility, although one does wish she would watch her movements a little more carefully. Miss Driggers shows great promise for future productions on campus.

Eb Thomas does a remarkable job of compressing his personality into the rather narrow confines of naive, sheltered, bashful Clarence. One might wish, on the other hand, that Lloyd Kay would resort less to the physical cliche to portray 15-year-old John.

Joanna Watt does an excellent job of portraying the bashful-but-teasing Mary Skinner, even though one worries for a time whether she hadn't spent a good deal of time south of her home town.

Other members of the cast turned in creditable performances. Bit-player Nancy Dickinson was outstanding in her brief, bewildered appearance as the first maid.

International Students Ratify New Constitution At Meeting

The International Student Club has ratified a new constitution opening their membership to American students and faculty members as well as foreign students according to Ezzat S. Younathan, the newly elected president from Egypt.

Serving as a liaison, the club brings together all students from abroad who are studying at FSU and American students who are interested in the activities of the club.

SINCE INFORMATION about various cultures is exchanged by the members of this club, a sense of appreciation and true feeling for other cultures is instilled in them.

It also acts as a center for studying the various International Organizations, the different aspects of cooperation between nations and efforts of man to achieve world peace.

THE GROUP pursues all means that will lead to the growth of its members, in knowledge and feeling as good citizens of a world society.

Other officers elected at the recent meeting are: Carol English (USA) vice-president; Ruth Matsuda (Hawaii) recording secretary, Hilda Wagner (Hungary) corresponding secretary; Rafael Lecuona (Cuba) treasurer; Harpik Derhovhannessian (Iran) and Eduardo DelRisco (Peru) social chairmen.

THE NEXT MEETING of the club will be a joint session with the Methodist students to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the United Nations tomorrow at 9 30 p.m. in the Methodist Student Center.

Ezzat Younathan, International Student Club president, will speak about "Our responsibilities Toward the United States." Two films produced by the United Nations, "Now the Peace" and "Peoples' Charter" will be shown.

Warren Appointment Draws Dissent

By GENE LAWLER

Affable Earl Warren of California seems assured of confirmation when Congress reconvenes. His appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court has met with the general approval of the daily press and of the man on the street; few dissenting voices are heard.

To many people, Warren is known for his three pretty daughters, particularly "Honeybear." Casual liberals remember his opposition to the California loyalty oath. Still others have read Drew Pearson's sermons on the Warren integrity, but few are acquainted with the history of Warren as outlined in a recent Nation editorial.

For instance, what is to be said about Warren's part in the removal of West Coast Japanese during World War II—an episode which can be characterized only as a "Constitutional disaster." Says the Nation, "No one person had more to do with bringing about the removal . . . than Mr. Warren, who was then Attorney General of California . . . In urging the removal of the Japanese . . . he contended that the Nisei—the American-born and educated generation — were more 'dangerous' and suspect than the Issei, their Japanese born parents . . . In 1943 (as governor) he expressed unalterable opposition to the return of the Japanese Americans to the West Coast and later warned the federal authorities that 'another Pearl Harbor disaster might result if the ban against their return were lifted.'"

This sordid episode resulted in the dangerous precedent of Korematsu vs. the United States, in which the Supreme Court upheld the removal. The Japanese - Americans were thereby strong-armed out of the West Coast produce industry, at a loss of more than $000,000,000.

How about Warren's attitude toward the loyalty oath? Apparently his views were determined by his friend Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, who originally proposed the oath and later reversed his position when faculty pressure became too great. Warren "opposed the oath not on the broad issue of academic freedom but on a narrow technical point . . . He found it quite consistent indeed, to sign a measure imposing a loyalty oath on all state employees, including faculty members."

Other blackmarks listed against the Californian include his battle to block the pardon granted by Governor Olson to Tom Mooney, his opposition to Max Radin's appointment to the California Supreme Court, his appointment of Raymond B. Allen to the Presidency of UCLA, on the heels of the loyalty oath controversy, and his part in the tidelands oil issue.

The Nation summarizes its case against Warren by saying, "He is neither a great lawyer nor a legal scholar. Nor does he have a well-thought out social philosophy. His is diligent, honest, patient; always cautious, he is a middle-of-the-roader less by temperament than by calculation. These are not bad qualities, surely, but are they the qualities of a great Chief Justice? Has Warren really discarded the biased racial views he held as recently as 1943? Has he outgrown the immature and parochial philosophy he expounded so clumsily in Edwards vs. California (dealing with indigent persons)? . . . he is and throughout his career has been an expert professional politician, just this and nothing more."

THE BOOKLIST

New 'Discovery' Different, Interesting

By BOB FOLSOM

In February of this year, Pocket Books, Inc., published a periodical called Discovery, No. 1. It was an innovation—something never attempted before—containing selections published for the first time in paper-back editions. Some of the stories were by well-known and talented writers — Norman Mailer, William Styron —and each was different and enlightening, a part of some of the new fiction coming out today.

Discovery, No. 2, just out, follows the same patterns laid down by its forerunner.

There are eleven pieces of fiction, a liberal sprinkling of poetry, and an essay by Anatole Broyard called Ha! Ha! in which the author explores and presents the public's sense and or lack of humor in a way that leaves nothing to be desired.

Two authors are marking their first appearance in print. A Columbia student, Donald Finkle, with a poem, and Robert Bassing's short story, Lullaby, a humorous piece about a discontented couple spending a miserable time at a vacation resort.

Yet, Lullaby, may not be humorous to some. Others may call it depressing. In fact, over each of the stories a morbid shadow seems to appear and disappear, and none offers what might be a happy ending. From the story (To Break The Wall) of the school professor whose class rebels and a student slashes him with a switch-blade to the (Gomis's Necklace) native who finally goes insane seeking his goal, this shadow lingers. After reading the part in Laughter in the Graveyard where the boy's father goes to the funeral drunk, and accidentally falls into the grave "feet first . . . One long groan of horror rose from the group of mourners as they crowded about leaning forward to look at my father in the grave. My father's hat came flying out of the hole. He was standing now but the bald spot on top of his head was still one foot below the ground," you don't quite know whether to laugh like hell or just look blank.

Editor Vance Bourjaily in a critical note called No More Apologies explains "about such morbid, depressing things that no one could possibly want to read." His argument is aggressive, yet could be cemented a little more. He explains away ". . . morbidness, depression and neurosis are the very bones of literature and have been from Oedipus through Hamlet to Crime and Punishment."

Mr Bourjaily goes on to mention in his note "seven enduring works of fiction" which have been produced by America's young writers since the last world war. It is an interesting list and subject to discussion for those interested.

The pocket book has an attractive and different cover, and is priced at 35 cents. The titles and such are printed in lower-case typography which was the fad in that intellectual period following the first World War, and which the editor uses by way of calling attention to the work. Altogether it is a worthy and readable collection.

Mr. Vance Pioneers Periodical Study

By BRUCE GALPHIN

A letter to the editor last Friday asked why Earl L. Vance was no longer teaching the current reading courses he has pioneered for many years.

I do not know why, nor do I intend to go further into this aspect of the matter. It does seem a good opportunity, though, to discuss something I have put off from column to column: namely, Mr Vance's unusual, educationally stimulating courses and the philosophy on which they are conducted.

I took the "Magazine Reading" course in my freshman year, and it was something educationally new to me. It was surprising to be in a class where no text book was used and classtime was spent not in a repetition of book-gleaned facts but in discussions of current events and social issues.

It was even more shocking, however, to learn that after 12 years of school I still could not read. Oh, I had a reasonably sufficient vocabulary and had always done well enough in academic work, but I had almost no acquaintance with thinking material . . . writing that contained ideas.

This is one of Mr. Vance's two main points in teaching his courses: that although most people never read much other than periodicals, they never become acquainted with quality magazines, never develop discriminating tastes in what they read.

Closely allied to this is the second and even more important point: that most people never realize the immense propagandizing potentialities of current literature. He theorizes that what we "think," what we consider "our own opinions," are largely what we have been lead to believe from our news sources.

Educators today are convinced of the value of studying "literature," but by this term they mean established works. It is a little shocking to them to think of studying current literature, even though it has far more influence on people than the less-read classical material. And even though teachers realize selections of the "best" and other value judgements must be made in music appreciation and literature courses, it seems to disturb them that certain magazines should be represented as better than others.

Although it is eminently logical that such a study should be made, at the college level if not in high school, the idea at present is quite new, and Mr. Vance has pioneered in the field.

The classroom procedure is simple and copatible with scientific knowledge about learning procedures. The accent is primarily on reading. Little time is taken up by forcing the students to do writing. Regular reading of thoughtful articles is considered far more important. As professor Vance explained it in a recently published article for a national magazine: "If the aim is to create reading habits there must be considerable and there must be regular reading. And there must be reading over a considerable period of time."

Students may read articles in any order they desire, so long as they complete the assigned list within a certain period of time. Every two weeks they turn in brief one-sentence synopses of the articles they have read, and about three times during a semester they have simple, multiple-choice tests.

The effect of such a program is truly amazing. In my own case, I remember how I waded through the first articles only with great difficulty. I did not always get the point. But within a couple of months I noticed how much "easier" the pieces were to read.

I really feel this experience in learning how to read made a great deal of difference in my college work. It made possible a grasping of ideas where before there was no means of communication.

Naturally this column is in no way meant to reflect disrespect for the new teacher of the course, but it was a great surprise to me to learn that both the pioneer teacher and the course itself have been changed.

RECITATIVE

Puccini One-Acters Well Recorded

By ROBERT STRANE

Gianni Schicchi and Il Tabarro, two of the famed Trittico one-acts by G. Puccini, are on release by Cetra-Soria in performances strikingly true. Schicchi is a charming comedy based on a clever swindle of voracious heirs by a historical figure in Florence, Gianni Schicchi, mentioned in the Devine Camedy of Dante. Since its premier in 1918, not a few critics have hailed it as Puccini's most advanced composition. Il Tabarro, in contrast, is a sordid operatic tale of lust, deception and homicide off a port in south France. 'tis a stark affair, the Verismo school, in which the cruel, primitive, vulgar are in emphasis.

In the Schicchi recording, one artist bears particularly commending mention: baritone Giuseppi Taddei, the Gianni Schicchi. His alter-voice of the shrewd impersonation is well-controlled in the musical line and hilariously amusing in inflection. In spite of his scoundrel hoax, his characterization is always winning. The opera's two solo moments, "Firenze come un albero fiorito" and sublime "O mio Babbino caro" are extremely well delivered, though in the latter, the coloratura soprano soft passages are almost suffocated by the orchestra. The worthless old relatives are sung most convincingly, especially the aging aunt, a simon-pure virago.

Antenore Reali sings a vicious Michele, the deceived husband in the Tabarro. There is no "milk of kindness" in his powerful, strident baritone, and in few roles can he be acceptable, this and Barnaba (Gioconda) being his best. His murderous rant at the finale is electrifying. Clara Petrella, always excelling as a coarse wench, is memorable here as the love-starved wife who seeks passion with a ship-hand. Her Nedda in the London FFRR Pagliacci is the very most in that variety of vulgar, Verismo conception. The tenor of the set is properly a uniquely oily tart-hound of odious proportions. The murky tones, rocking tremolos in the orchestra lend a singularly oppressive scene-color, the local color effects in Tarbarro are Puccini's sharpest, in my opinion.

I recommend to all lovers of Puccini the recent Victor release, Madama Butterfly, with Gigli, DalMonti and Basiola. The set is a reprint in RCA's "Treasury of Immortal Performances" series. The recording spares the listener the tedious necessity of hearing Cho-Cho San sung by huge, deep, matronly voices. DalMonti has the fresh, lovely tones suggestive of a fourteen-year old child-mother. Gigli certainly proves the most mellifluous of Pinkertons, though his lachrymosity annoys me decidedly at times . . . his famous, or notorious "a tear per line." It seems to me that so tender, warm feelings as Gigli pours forth in Act III would not have permitted his cruelty, and indifference to the depth of love-marriage and to Butterfly's daintiness in the preceding acts. Mario Basiola deserves much laud for his exquisitely sympathetic Sharpless. He is at all times courteous and tactful in his approach, whether to Butterfly or Pinkerton. Moreover his voice contains none of the rudeness, and sharpness innate in many American Sharplesses. The Sharpless-Butterfly duet in Act II conveys a devastating sweetness unequalled in any other recording of the opera.

BUDDY BRYANT

Buddy Brant, the dependable senior end at FSU should get considerable mention whenever Seminole gridmen are discussed. This 6 foot 3 inch, 190 pounder was voted FSU's "most outstanding player in 1947." His return two years ago after a four year lay-off bolstered FSU's spirits.

AGAIN THIS year Buddy turned up at his old end position and unless that old injury bug gets him he'll be there 'til the end of the season. He is a great defensive end and is learning his way around offense with little difficulty. Against better competition, Bryant seems to shine. In the Ga. Tech game of last year he probably was the most outstanding defensive lineman on either team.

BUDDY IS a member of the Kappa Alpha Order and is a physical education major. He hails from Perry, Florida.

Howard Danford Addresses Parents Of Tumbling Tots

Dr. Howard G. Danford, Director of Physical Education for Men at F. S. U. spoke to more than one hundred parents of the Tallahassee Tumbling Tots at a meeting last Wednesday afternoon. He stressed the unique cooperation between these agile youngsters and their many supporters and directors.

First was the cooperation of the Tots with the gymnasts who work every afternoon during the week helping them learn and perfect their many skilled feats. Secondly was the cooperation of the University and the City Playground Department in providing and financially backing this program for them. Also of great importance is the constant help of parents and the spirit of the Tots themselves. Dr. Danford concluded that this highly organized program was not only developing their lives physically but also mentally and socially.

FOLLOWING THE speech two movies were shown by Jack Miles. "Lingiad" was an amazing picture of the International Festival sponsored by the Swedish every ten years. It showed all ages from children to grandparents performing a great variety of gymnastic sports.

To illustrate that gymnastic sports are not limited to one sex or occupation, a number of the more skilled contestants were housewives. During the spring of last year Wurtele Film Productions made a movie of the Tallahassee Tumbling Tots which has also appeared on T. V.

Because of the success of this meeting it was suggested that an organization of the parents and directors be formed. Mr. Douglas Duke was appointed temporary chairman of a steering committee which would make suggestions for a name, purpose, and program of such an organization. Others on this committee are Mr. Carl Essig, Mr. Bob Beasley, Mr. Marlon Pichard, Mrs. Harold Cummins, Mrs. Bob Vaughan, and Mrs. Lamb.

THE DIRECTORS of the program for the Tots present were Dr. Price's Assistant Director Mr. Clarence Hale and the student instructors Mary McNatt, Dick Gutting, Don Rapp, Pat Signorelli, Mary Lou Byerley, Earl Haag, Rafael Lucuona, Barbara Vickers, and Frances Stokes.

In The Spotlight

By DAVE KENNEDY

Jerry is an 18 year old Soph who hails from South Bend, Indiana. Jacobs was an All-State gaurd while in high school in Indiana This 6 foot, 190 pound lineman was an outstanding player for FSU in the '52 campaign, although he was only a freshman. Jacobs plays both offense and defense equally well which makes him a very valuable guy to Coach Nugent, in view of the new college ruling Jerry is a rugged competitor, hard tackler, sure, swift blocker and excells at running interference. He has good reaction and always plays high caliber ball

MANY PEOPLE believe Jacobs will develop into All-American material by next year, and those of us that have seen him in the current campaign feel this prediction might very well be fulfilled

JACOBS IS a member of Phi Delta Theata social fraternity and is majoring in Phys. Ed.

JOHN GRINER

By DAVE KENNEDY

John Griner is a 19 year old soph from Jax, Florida. This 6 foot 10 inch, 180 pounder won all city, all Big Ten and all state honors while starring for Robert E. Lee High School in Jax He had the distinction of captaining the all city and all state teams in the '51 season

GRINER LETTERED here last year as a freshman and played outstanding ball as a defensive halfback In the Louisiana Tech game two weeks ago Griner proved he could handle offensive duties by lugging the ball with the assurance of a veteran. Griner, who was recently shifted from halfback to fullback is a hard runner and an exceptional tackler. If VMI wishes to win this weekend they'll have to stop "Mr. Griner."

JOHN IS A member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and is majoring in Arts and Sciences.

Gym Personalities

By BOB GUTTING

This week's gym personality is a young man who is a serious contender for the National AAU trampoline crown currently held by Dick "Plastic Man" Gutting, well known FSU gymnast. The gentleman I refer to is Dick "Moose" Ireland of Harvey, Illinois.

DICK WAS GRADUATED from Thornton High in Harvey in 1951. While in high school he participated in the various sports offered and was captain of the football team on which he played four years, captain of the swimming team for three years and ended up his senior year by lettering on the basketball team.

After arriving at FSU in 1951 Dick acquired an interest in trampoline and under the guidance of one of the best tramp men in the country, slowly cultivated a style of his own that won recognition for him in two National AAU and five AAU meets.

IRELAND CAME INTO HIS own during 1952 at the Florida junior AAU with a first place win on trampoline. This was followed by a close second at the Georgia AAU and another second at the Southern Intercollegiate meet of 1952. That same year Dick placed among the top ten trampoline men in the country at the National Collegiates along with team mates Dick Gutting, who won the National Collegiate trampoline championship, and "Big Jim" Fadigan

During 1958 at the Florida AAU Dick lost his stride but managed to place third on the tramp. He recovered quickly, however, and went on to win the Southern Intercollegiate trampoline crown. This was followed by the National Collegiate meet at Syracuse, N. Y., where Dick once again came out in the top ten category

FOLLOWING THIS WAS the Georgia AAU's of '53 and another close second in tramp and then, at the National AAU in Chicago during the last meet of the season, Ireland once again jumped his way into the top ten with a spectacular display of loops and twists.

During summer vacation Dick didn't do much except work out now and then and get married, but now you can find him every afternoon at the East campus gym improving his style in readiness for the coming fall competition.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test

"Sofari as I'm concerned" said Sheedy's gal, "your hair looks like something the cat dragged in. Purrhaps you better spring for some Wildroot Cream-Oil, America's favorite hair tonic. Keeps hair combed without greasiness. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Contains Lanolin. Non-alcoholic." So Sheedy roared down to his druggist for Wildroot Cream-Oil, and now he's feline mighty fine. All the girls paws and stare when he passes. So you better leopard on the bandwagon and try Wildroot Cream-Oil right meow. Scratch up 29¢ for a bottle or handy tube at any toilet goods counter. And ask your barber for some Wildroot Cream-Oil on your hair. Then you'll be the cat's whiskers!

Contempt of court

of this question will answer the question in the present case. This Court also orders that no campaigning by any student shall be carried on until this question is answered.

Respectfully yours,
Richard Jackson
Chief Justice
University Court.

Carothers, in refusing to appear, stated that by his appearing before the court, he would be setting a bad precedent which would weaken the status of future presidents. Carothers also felt that it was the duty of the Attorney General to appear in court for the executive powers Carothers replied to Jackson's subpoena action with the following letter:

October 22, 1953

Mr. Richard Jackson
Chief Justice
University Honor Court

Dear Richard:

In accordance with the ruling of the Attorney General, I hereby claim that under the circumstances of the case the University Court does not have the authority to subpoena the President or the Vice-President of the Student Body to appear before it.

The President of the Student Body is responsible to the Student Body through its representatives elected to the Senate, where the power of impeachment is vested.

If the President were subject to all subpoenas of the Court then he, and not the Attorney General, whose job it is to present the case for the Executive and Legislative branches, could conceivably spend much of his time running back and forth at the beck and call of a Court that might in the future be unsympathetic. Such is not a function of the chief executive, nor was it ever intended to be so. Therefore I do not want to set a precedent which might weaken the power of future presidents by obeying the subpoena sent by the Chief Justice.

Since the question of the validity of the election laws is such an important one, I shall gladly appear before the Court if it requests me to do so. But I will appear only if the Court recognizes that it does not, under the circumstances of this case, have the power to subpoena either the President or the Vice-President of the Student Body to appear before it.

Sincerely,
Milton Carothers

REVELL was ruled as disqualified by the University Honor Court, and the subpoena and the case against Carothers and Lawler was dropped.

State Health Board Reports Diphtheria Increase in State

The State Board of Health recently reported a noticeable, but not alarming, increase in the number of diphtheria cases in Florida It recommended immunizations for infants and small children who have not already had them.

"We are not trying to alarm anybody," said Dr. L. L. Parks, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases "because the cases are fairly well scattered through the state" A slight concentration, he added, is evident in the South Central part of the state—around Orange and Polk counties—and in Bay County in the Northwest. The disease has occurred in 24 different counties since January 1

So far 73 cases have been reported—13 of them last week. Up to this time last year, Dr Parker pointed out, there had been 41 cases reported, and in 1951, 41 cases reported

"Diptheria is more common in the Fall," the doctor commented "So an increase in the number of cases was somewhat to be expected." He recommended immunization as a "very effective" preventative.

News Clinic Held For Professors

A news clinic for professors was held this week at Florida State University. The editor of the Flambeau and instructors at the School of Journalism, told professors what newsworthy news is, how to dig it out, and how to get along with Flambeau reporters.

This is the first time such a clinic has been conducted on the FSU campus. Bruce Galphin, newly elected editor of the Flambeau, explained that the clinic was part of a larger program this year to make the campus newspaper a strong and representative semi-weekly for the entire university.

"A close tie-up is being made between the Flambeau and the reporting classes of the School of Journalism. The school furnishes the reporters, we furnish the experience," Galphin pointed out. The new arrangement has the approval and encouragement of Dean Lawrence R. Campbell, of the journalism school.

Toleration for the mistakes of the campus newspaper reporter was stressed by Prof. William R. Slaughter, who has had much experience in newspaper and magazine work as well as campus publications at Northwestern University.

"We all make mistakes, and the campus reporters certainly are human, and they do too. Some of these are serious, some not so serious. When the student reporters make errors, point these out, but do not get angry, and make them fear and hate you. Call attention to the mistakes so that they may be avoided in the future Students will learn in this fashion, and some will become good newsmen," he asserted.

Prof Daniel Wozniak, a new member of the journalism staff, whose students serve as Flambeau reporters, mentioned the various types of news-stories and feature articles in which the university public would be interested.

Dr. Sidney Kobre, advisor of the newspaper, who presided over the meeting, pointed out that the Flambeau had about sixty reporters, and that a reporter was assigned to a "beat." Each department and school should be on some student reporter's beat, he explained. He referrd to the fact that th distribution of the Flambeau presented a tough problem, but the papers would be distributed to each member of the faculty.

FSU Rally Planned Tonight Behind Student Center

ODK Sponsors Monday Rally For Candidates

Freshmen Aspirants Will Campaign In Amphitheater at 7

Jim Ball, past president of the organization, will act as master of ceremonies.

CANDIDATES for freshman class offices will be given an opportunity to state their platforms and make their pleas for votes. Presidential aspirants will be allotted five minutes to make their appeals. All others will be given a maximum of one minute.

CANDIDATES or those designated to speak for them will be seated on stage. They should be present by 6:45 p.m. Ball expressed the hope that the rally would be over in time for fraternity and sorority chapter meetings.

Card Section Sponsored For Football Game

The Card Section, a project sponsored by the Florida State University Warpath Club will again be featured at the FSU-VMI football game at Doak S. Campbell Stadium tomorrow night, Warpath spokesmen Pat Filson and Paul Wragg said today.

As in the past, Warpath members urge all Florida Staters to turn out at the game to fill up the section. Miss Filson said this is a feature of school spirit showings at college football games the country over, and expressed the desire that Florida State University join the ranks of the best supporters at the games.

Attempts are being made, according to Wragg, to paint in the lines marking a permanent card section so there is no confusion at game time. He said Warpath Club will hope to have this done for tomorrow night's game. He also suggested that Freshmen, on the eve of their class elections, turn out in full force in the card section to show the rest of the student body how much spirit they can muster.

Cards and instructions will be found under the seats in the section, Wragg said. He noted that, should it rain, this material will be distributed before the game.

Expense Deadline Closes 5 Today; Rules Restated

Expense statements for all candidates for freshman offices in the coming elections must be in Mr. Fred Vogel's office in Longmire Building no later than 5 p.m. today, the Election Committee said yesterday.

Committee members Nan Hillman and Betty Jo Grubbs said all campaign literature within 50 feet of any polling place on campus must be removed at least 24 hours previous to Tuesday morning, election day. Polling places are located at the University Bookstore in front of the main door, Seminole Dining Hall lobby, West Hall, and Westcott main floor, Miss Grubbs said, adding they will be open 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Miss Hillman noted that the Elections Committee has received complaints that posters have been placed on trees around the campus. Miss Hillman said these must be removed immediately as they violate a University statute against such displays.

Senate Meeting Has Parliamentary Procedure Talk

Routine matters and a short talk by a university professor filled the agenda at the University Senate meeting, Tuesday afternoon, October 27.

Dr. Gregg Phifer, associate professor, Department of Speech, spoke to the Senate on Parliamentary Procedure.

Two appointments were made. Kitty Peacock replaced Mary Louthan in the Honor Court, and Jean Wetherell replaced Patty Martin in the Women's Senate. They were unanimously approved by the senate.

Stokes Announces Final Play Tryouts Friday Afternoon

Final tryouts for singing and dancing roles in this year's Sandspur production will be held this afternoon between the hours of 5 and 8 p.m. in the Opperman Music Hall, Francis Stokes, chairman, announced.

Stokes pointed out that it is still not too late for interested persons to try out for a part in the show, but that this is definitely the final tryout. She also requested that entrants bring their own sheet music, and if possible, their own accompanist. She stressed particularly the fact that those wishing to dance need not be singers and those singers interested in being in the show need not dance at all.

Sandspur production this year was written by Leo Andrews, and titled "Panorama," a three-act musical comedy. There will be no dialogue, only music and dancing.

Conflict Not Existent, Say Body Officers

Executive, Judiciary Consider Subpoena Issue Closed

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Officers of the executive and judiciary branches of the student government have stated definitely that there is no conflict between the two, despite the much publicized subpoena issue.

The issue itself is, to all intents and purposes, dead. Seeking to clarify the entire question, which arose from the original case of Walter Revell vs. the Elections Committee, representatives of the president, vice-president, attorney general and the University Court met Tuesday night with representatives of the Flambeau.

RICHARD JACKSON, chief justice of the Court; Milton Carothers, president of the Student Body; and Gene Lawler, vice-president, all were emphatic in stating that there is no conflict between the executive and judiciary branches.

Conflict rumors arose after the Court subpoenaed Carothers and Lawler to testify as to the constitutional validity of the Elections Code. Both officers declined to appear and were again ordered to come before the court, this time on personal charges of contempt of court.

HOWEVER, it was made clear by Jackson at Tuesday's meeting, the entire subpoena issue has been dropped by a concensus of the University Court.

Jackson emphasized that the case was dropped merely because the court wished to drop it. He refused to comment on whether or not he felt the Court had the right to subpoena the president and vice-president, nor would he say whether the Court might ever issue such subpoenas in the future.

HE GAVE as his reason for refusing comment the fact that he could not, at the time, speak officially for the Court, but only as an individual student.

"As an individual student, he commented, "my opinion would be worth no more than that of any of the other 8,000 students on campus."

ATTORNEY GENERAL Peter Nimkoff was also at the meeting. Nimkoff, who previously had issued an opinion stating that the executive officers should not be subpoenaed, reiterated his stand on what question.

He said that the duty of the officers to appear before the Court is dependent upon the individual case. He said that Carothers and Lawler, not being directly involved in the Revell case, were not obligated to testify.

HOWEVER, if the Court had pressed the matter of contempt, he added, "they (Carothers and Lawler) would have had to appear to answer to the specific and individual charges lodged against them."

Nimkoff noted that his opinions in no way supersede or affect those of the Court, but are merely those of the legal officer of the executive branch of the student government.

JACKSON, when questioned, maintained that the case was dropped merely on its own basis and not on the right-of-supoena question.

As for the Revell case, which prompted the entire controversy, the matter is settled. The University Court has upheld the action of the elections committee in disqualifying the former freshman class presidential aspirant.

Atomic Energy Exhibit Sponsored By University

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON
Feature Editor

Did you know that Florida has uranium and radium deposits? Have you ever seen a chartreuse or brillian violet colored rock? Are you shocking enough to light a fluorescent bulb?

The atomic energy exhibit, sponsored by the Florida State University and prepared by the Physics Department, on display at the North Florida State Fair, answers these questions.

THE EXHIBIT includes an electric map designed by graduate art students at the University, which indicates in red and blue lights where the deposits of uranium, radium, and thorium, are located throughout the world. Fluorescent minerals which look like ordinary grey pieces of rock, reveal their brilliant colors when an ultra-violent light is flashed on them. This exhibit is set up inside a glass enclosed partition.

High voltage generators produce artificial lighting and make it possible for two people to stand near one and be live wires for the conduction of energy to light a fluorescent bulb. These instruments are models of those used in nuclear research.

IN A CLOUD chamber, the tracks of nuclear particles are made visible to the naked eye. Radio-active materials, articles which give off alpha rays, beat rays, and gamma rays, are on exhibit on a large revolving table.

The work put into the construction of this exhibit was estimated by Dr. Guenter Schwarz, Prof. of Physics, at 2,000 man hours.

Mr. Lewis Eckhart, machinist and curator of physics, directed the mechanical work on the exhibit, and Mr. Taizo "Mike" Miake, graduate student in the Department of Art, carried the overall responsibility for the artwork on the exhibit.

SEVERAL OTHER graduate students in the departments of art and physics have worked to make it a worthwhile, educational, and fascinating exhibit.

Dr. Otis McBride, head of Audio-Visual Department at FSU, has directed another exhibit relating to atomic energy. The audio-visual department has a movie theatre in the school tent at the fair, showing 2 hours of continuous pictures on civil defense and atomic energy as background material for the nuclear exhibit.

The exhibit on atomic energy is expected to be shown at the Florida State Fair in Tampa during February.

Theater Guild Rehearses For Performances

Martin's Theater Guild, sponsored by the Newman Club, is currently rehearsing the former successful Broadway play, City of Kings, for two special Florida State University faculty performances Sunday and Monday night, November 1 and 2.

The seven-scene drama will open November 8 at the Newman House, 458 W. College Ave., and run nightly through November 14 beginning at 8 o'clock each evening.

"City of Kings," deals with the unusual life of St. Martin beginning from early childhood. Richard Coughlin plays the child Martin with Al Valiani playing the lead role of Martin in later life.

The plot of the play hinges around Martin's family, their neighbors, society in the City of Kings, its influence upon Martin and his family, and finally Martin's decision not to become "just a great doctor."

According to director William Chavers, "The play touches upon every human emotion ranging from comedy during the play's lighter moments, excitement during its rising climax and an occasional tear during its denouement."

Unlike any previous production, "City of Kings," has a double cast with six of the actors alternating each night.

Clara Dardis and Marilyn Goble portray the somewhat bitter and resentful mother of Martin. Harry Petry enacts the role of Don Juan De Porres, the father of Martin who becomes Governor of Panama and vainly tries to have his mulatto son accepted by society. Kaye Ellen Pritchand and Betty Mullins are cast as the countess Dona Isabel Garcia Miguel.

Others in the cast of 28 persons include Jim Padigan as Gongaslo, Barbara Rynski and Letitia Tambourino as Juana, Annette Straub and Rosemary Hollander as Francisca, Ernest Stevens as Mateo, John Casbergue as Brother Fernando, Tom Day as Father Juan. Kim Smith plays the part of Father Francisco, Richard Barila as Brother Cipriano, Louis Schiltt as Brother Bernardo, John Pistone and Hans Wagner as Brother Caspar, Sheldonus Musgrove as Brother Alonso and Fred Impastato as Father Pedro.

The "City of Kings" is being produced by Father Profeta and directed by William Chavers.

Complimentary tickets previously mailed to members of FSU faculty will be honored both Sunday and Monday nights. The ticket is printed for Sunday night only.

Staff Holds Meeting; Tally-Ho Takes Pix

Pictures for the 1954 Tally-Ho will be taken at a general meeting of all School of Journalism reporters working on the Flambeau, all copy desk personnel and members of the business staff Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Editor Bruce Galphin said today.

Galphin urges all those working on the newspaper or all who turn in copy to the news staff to attend this meeting.

Ditch Behind Center Scene Of Bonfire

Kadets, Seminoles Clash In Stadium Saturday Night

The students of FSU will hold a bonfire pep rally tonight on the eve of the VMI Kadets invasion of Doak S. Campbell Stadium. The pep rally will be held by the ditch behind the student center, starting at 7:30.

Coach Nugent and the Seminoles will be introduced at the rally. Nugent will speak briefly.

ALL FRESHMEN have been especially requested to attend. A parade of cars and students will form in front of Wescott by 7:15. Band Director Manley Whitcomb, when asked if the Marching Chiefs will participate in the parade and pep rally, could not reply definitely but stated that they probably will.

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of the university, when asked for a statement on the school spirit shown at the games and rallies so far this year, said:

"I have been very well pleased with the wonderful school spirit which has been shown by the students this fall. I think it quite the finest we've had in many years.

"The support they have given to our Seminoles is most heartening, and I'm sure that not only the team but all the rest of us at the university appreciate that fine support.

"I'm glad to see the students putting on rallies. I think it adds to college spirit and provides the proper outlet for student enthusiasm.

"I want to commend the students who plan the rallies on their abilities to plan them without the rowdiness which sometimes accompanies such rallies."

In a letter to the Flambeau, Milton Carothers, president of the Student Government, has also commended the students for their spirit:

Fellow Students:

I want to congratulate again the Student Body for your fine spirit this year. There have been many compliments from visitors and townspeople concerning the spirit and participation of the Student Body shown at our football games.

I want to urge your participation in the pep rally that will be held this Friday night at 7:30 p.m. behind the kindergarten and next to the Student Center. The rally will center around a bonfire with cheering led by the cheerleaders. The pep rally will be over in plenty of time to enable the students to go to the Sophomore Hop, which begins at 9 p.m.

Let's all stay behind the football team and the cheerleaders by attending the pep rally on Friday, October 30, at 7:30 p.m.

Sincerely,
MILTON CAROTHERS,
President of the Student Body.

Student Violators Face Traffic Court

Seventeen students were apprehended for traffic violations and brought before the Student Traffic Court this week.

Sixteen of them were cited for overtime parking in the 15 minute zone of Westcott and other No Parking zones on campus. Eight students were found guilty and dismissed with warnings. Seven were found guilty and fined $.50 each and one was fined $1.00.

One student was charged with reckless driving for speeding on campus and was fined $2.50.

Those who failed to appear on Tuesday will receive another summons to appear next Tuesday at 8:00 p.m. in the Alumni Building. Violators failing to answer the second summons will be considered guilty.

Beneficiaries Named For Campus Chest; Fund Goal For Annual Seven-Day Drive Set

Campus Chest, the annual Florida State University counterpart to "Red Feather Drive," the national community chest push, will be launched here tomorrow, Shirley Traxler and Charlie McDaniel, co-chairmen said today. FSU's goal has been set at $3,000.

Miss Traxler said the committee has decided to contribute the majority of funds realized this year to charities that benefit university students throughout the world. Sixty per-cent of the FSU fund receipts will go to World University Service, Miss Traxler said. This is an international fund which gives aid to all underprivileged university students of all nations. Ten percent will go to the International University of Japan; ten percent each to the United Negro College Fund, the Heart Fund and the March of Dimes. The Cancer Fund will receive $100 Miss Traxler said.

MISS TRAXLER said she urges every individual student here to contribute freely of his time and money toward this worthy cause. "Only with the cooperation of every organization and individual on campus," she said, "Can we expect to make such a large scale drive go to the top, and, we hope, over the top." She said such cooperation from students comes in the form of support from the many money-raising schemes by the many campus organizations.

Ruge Hall, Episcopal Student organization launches the 1953-54 drive with a smorgasbord Sunday night at the Student house, West Jefferson Street at 6 p.m. Admission price is 75 cents for the affair.

INNOVATION IN women's residence hall efforts will be in the form of sandwiches this year, sold every night starting Sunday from 10 til 10:45 by girls in Bryan Hall. The girls urge everybody, "Whether they're hungry or not" to drop by for a sandwich.

Zeta Tau Alphas will earn their money for Campus Chest by sponsoring a cake walk. The cake walk will be given Tuesday evening at 9 p.m. around Wescott fountain. The Zetas will also have a Chinese auction immediately following the cake winning contest.

THE SIGMA KAPPA sorority will sponsor their annual variety show to benefit Campus Chest November 8, at 8:00 p.m. in the Music Auditorium. Entertainment, such as songs, dances, barbershop quartets, and magicians, will be presented by the various sororities and fraternities on campus. The winners of the first prizes for the best presentations last year were Sigma Nu and Kappa Alpha Theta.

Tickets for the show, at twenty-five cents each, will be on sale on the lawn across from the Amber House Monday and Tuesday. Tickets can also be obtained at the door.

GOBLINS AND GHOSTS will be hanging around the Phi Mu house tomorrow night. After the FSU-VMI game, the Phi Mu sorority is having a Campus Chest halloween party.

All students and faculty are invited to come over and bob for apples. A house of horrors will be the main attraction of the evening. Various other halloween games and dancing are planned for entertainment. Halloween refreshments will be served in keeping with the theme of the party.

THE TRI DELT Sorority will sponsor a fashion show Wednesday, November 4, from which the proceeds will go to the Campus Chest. Models for this show will be chosen from every sorority and fraternity on campus. Time and place of this show will be announced in next Tuesday's FLAMBEAU.

Three campus dance bands will contribute freely of their time and efforts next Friday night to play for the big Campus Chest dance from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m.

Metropolitan Baritone Sings Here Tuesday

Mack Harrell, world famous baritone, will sing in Tallahassee's Leon High School Auditorium Tuesday, sponsored by the Florida State University Artist Series, it was announced today. Students may still obtain free tickets at the University Bookstore for coupon #6 from the Student Activities Booklet, Artist Series spokesmen said.

Formal dress for the concert will not be required, Artist Series said. However, students planning to attned are urged to dress properly. Girls should wear afternoon dresses and men are asked to wear coats and ties.

WINNER OF the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air in 1939, Harrell has been a member of this Company ever since. His repertoire includes nearly thirty operas in Italian, French, German and English, it was noted. Last season Harrell appeared in the American premier of Stravinsky's much talked-about contemporary opera, Rake's Progress. During the same season he appeared with the "Big Three" of American symphony orchestras: The Boston Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic. With the latter he sang the title role in the world premier of Christopher Colombe by the famous contemporary composer, Darius Milhaud.

Harrell's program here will include Salve Regina by Pergolesi; Chansons Gaillardes by Poulenc, seven songs from Winterreise by Schubert and a group of American folk songs, including four Tennessee Williams Blue Mountain Ballads. He will also sing the Hall Johnson arrangements of Steal Away— and Ride On, King Jesus.

Subpoena Problem Leaves Some Points Unanswered

Whenever something as controversial as the subpoena issue arises, there are inevitably ruffled feelings, misunderstandings and extraneous arguments thrown into the broil.

The student newspaper is expected to be a simon-pure, entirely disinterested tight-rope walker, sliding along a narrow string of perfectly lucid sentences. Inevitably someone is displeased with what is written, however.

This objection is in many cases justified. Consciously or otherwise a reporter can give a certain color or interpretation to a story that was not there originally. Information may be withheld from him so that he cannot help giving a certain one-sided picture. There are many reasons, in fact, why the "whole truth" is often unattainable.

We are no apologizing for Flambeau coverage of the current case. Some people have suggested, however, that we put forth special effort to make certain points clearer, and the general campus confusion on the issue seems to warrant an explanatory editorial.

The matter actually began with what has since become a sidelight: the case of Walter Revell v. the Elections Committee. Revell, a freshman, had been disqualified by the committee for campaigning for freshman class president before the time prescribed by the election laws.

Revell appealed his case to the University Court. He did not make his plea on the question of constitutionality of the election laws, but the court felt that the problem was one of whether or not the laws were valid. If they were, then Revell was guilty; if not, he was free to campaign.

In order to ascertain the constitutionality of the rules, the court felt it necessary to question the president of the Student Body, who had signed the laws; and the author of the regulations, who is now Vice-President of the Student Body.

This was where the rhubarb arose. The court issued subpoenas, rather than requests. The pair refused to appear. In explaining his refusal, President Milton Carothers said, in part: ". . . If the President were subject to all subpoenas of the Court, then he . . . could conceivably spend much of his time running back and forth at the beck and call of a Court that might in the future be unsympathetic. Such is not the function of the chief executive, nor was it ever intended to be so."

The court then issued subpoenas to Carothers and Vice-President Lawler to show cause why they should not be cited for contempt of court. Attorney General Peter Nimkoff released an opinion in which he stated he thought the court had acted incorrectly and should have issued a "request."

Following a private conversation between Carothers and Chief Justice Richard Jackson, the subpoenas were dropped. Jackson has emphasized and Nimkoff agreed to that fact that the attorney-general's opinion did not supersede the court's decision. Jackson further made it clear that the dropping of the subpoenas had no connection with the opinion.

So on the surface the question is settled. That is, all action is over. There remain some major moral and legal questions, however.

First of all, does the court have the power to issue subpoenas at all? No such power is stated in the constitution, but it is clearly needed if the court is to function. Jackson believes the court has, and Nimkoff says he feels the court has a "moral power," at least.

Second, should the president and vice-president have been subpoenaed? President Carothers feels not. The attorney-general, who released his opinion after talking with the state attorney-general's office, does not think so. In dropping the subpoenas, though, the court leaves the point unanswered.

So while certain questions have settled, such as the supremacy of the court, there still remain certain doubts about governmental procedure which loom as large as ever.

● COVERAGE

No matter how alert a news staff may be, there are always times when it overlooks an important event and the newspaper fails to give coverage to it.

This problem is in part the fault of the news staff, of course, in particularly its reporters. Reporters, however, are not ubiquitous, and they may very well do their assigned jobs without uncovering all the news.

Ultimately, then, it is up to those at the source of the news to see that the paper gets it, if they are particularly anxious to get publicity.

We are working sincerely to give the campus an efficient, thorough coverage, but the process takes time. We are not geniuses and we are not wizards, we need cooperation from the outside.

We request groups planning special activities to be sure we get the information if they want coverage.

● FROSH RALLY

One of the places where the noble idea of democracy falls down is in the actual voting process. It is too often true, particularly in the United States, that only a bare majority of those eligible to vote do so; on the FSU campus it is rarely any better. This can hardly be called "representative" government.

It is also true that students, like mature citizens, vote without realizing all that is at stake in an election and vote without knowing the candidates in any real sense of the word.

As a partial answer to this situation, Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership honorary for men, is holding an election rally Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Music Amphitheater. Candidates will have a brief opportunity to present their platforms and other freshman students will have a chance to see who their candidates are.

We look upon it as a duty for freshman to be informed and to vote. We urge their attendance.

THE BOOKLIST

'Nine Stories' Is Worth Waiting For

By BOB FOLSOM

Our policy is to try to bring brand new material for review to these pages, simply as a matter of keeping up with the times, and, naturally, bringing those books which would taste popular, generally, to the interests of all. Few months or so ago, though, a book came out, and we have just been able to get a copy. It is a book worth running down and waiting for.

Nine Stories, published by Little, Brown and Company, is an up-to-date colletion of short stories by J. D. Salinger. Seven of the stories appeared originally in The New Yorker, and an eighth in Harper's Magazine. "De Daumier - Smith's Blue Period" appears for the first time in Nine Stories.

Mr. Salinger, whose first novel, "The Chatcher in the Rye", was a brilliant projection inta an adalescent's mind, is a unique and original writer. His stories follow a pattern—they are about children and tragedy, usually a mixture of both. When he writes stories conerning children, he does so in a supremely objective and unsentimental manner, and in a way that no one has ever approached before, and likely will for a long time to come. His children are seemingly serious-minded individuals and seemingly grown up, with minds and problems af their own—the 1? year old genius in "Teddy": the 4 year old runaway in "Down at the Dinghy." Beneath the surface of the stories is a bit of darkness lined with tragedy—the veteran who commits suicide in "A Perfect Day for Bananafish"; the young woman whose lover was killed in the war in "Uncle Wiggily in Connecticut": the husband in "Pretty Mouth and Green My Eyes."

The matarial in these stories are about the affert of war on human beings, the flaws in human relationship, and death. There is comedy, too. The idea of love, which would seem predominant in stories involving children, is overshadowed by all this. Each of the stories builds up until it reaches a rumbling crescendo, like in a musical scene, with the endings to his stories ringing in your ears. Mr Salinger has an "astonishing, almost perfectly disciplined capacity for dialogue." He reproduces, perfectly, natural and accurate conversations in the stories.

"The Laughing Man" is one of the finest short stories we have ever read. Superb in its comical element, there is the underlying factor behind the death of tha Laughing Man that is brilliantly blended into the theme of the story.

"For Esme — With Love and Squalor" is a story perhaps different from one you'll ever read, and as one reviewer said, "If Salinger never turned out another story, "Esme" could insure his place as one of the major short story writers of the post-war period." Mr. Salinger is just that.

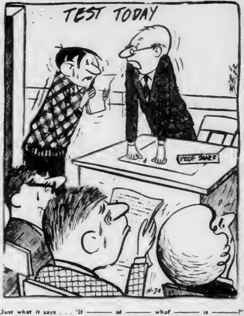
LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler



"Just what it says . . . 'If ——— of ——— what ——— is ———?' If you had read the assignment, that question would be perfectly clear."

Letters to Editor

Bad Taste

Dear Editor,

Being an upperclassman, I hate to butt into the freshman elections, but really, something I saw the other night just gave a bad taste in the mouth.

I am referring to one of the campaign posters for one of the freshmen seeking office, signed by "the committee." In the literature, the candidate was referred to as "our candidate."

I was always under the impression that the candidates were candidates of the freshman class, not of a committee of upperclass politicians, and that "he", not "we" predominated. Many freshman candidates do have upperclassmen h e l p i n g them. That is fine and good, even desirable, due to the fact that the freshmen are new on campus, but when the backers go this far, it's just too far!

Last year, when the Student Party made such a spectacle of itself, we hoped that the freshmen would not be dragged into such a mess, but the very people who made the student party an obnoxious name are in the midst of ruining the integrity and personal responsibilities of the freshmen office-seekers.

In the first place, I personally would not allow myself as a candidate to be quoted as saying I didn't know what could be done to better student government, or that my background could incriminate me. Certainly I would never be so ashamed of myself as to want to clear my own mother of any guilt. "The committee" had good intentions in trying to put forth the candidate's "honesty," but in what a way!

Sincerely,
Orchid Alanso.

Mr Milton Carothers, Jr.
President of the Student Body
Florida State University
Tallahassee, Florida

Dear Milton:

I certainly enjoyed meeting you at the Emory gathering a few weeks ago. I think that it was a very satisfactory meeting (Emory's), and I sincerely hope that the results will be profitable among the member schools. I am also so pleased that your association is not going to be at odds with the National Student Association. I still feel that NSA can fulfill the needs of your school, but in view of the situation I realize now that there is little hope in that direction.

However, since you are in my region, and since you are certainly interested in any suggestions that will better your school, the member schools and I want to extend to your school the following invitation.

Strengthen your school through A WORKSHOP FOR CAMPUS IMPROVEMENTS
Saturday, November 21
Y. M. C. A. Atlanta, Ga.

We are hoping that our regional will be a most beneficial meeting, and I do wish that you would send some observers. As I said at Emory, if you could send some interested underclassmen, maybe by the time they are seniors, NSA would have a chance on your campus. Anyway, please think about it, and I would appreciate your filling out the enclosed card and mailing it back to me as soon as possible. Don't hesitate to write me, if there's anything you want to know about NSA. University of Miami will be sending delegates to the regional, so perhaps you could work with them on transportation to the regional.

Please give my regards to Sylvia, Phoebe, and Gene. Thank you for your trouble.

Very sincerely,

Liberal Arts

The liberal arts education has too long been a 20th century victim of the baleful breath of prejudice. Now, the worm is turning and American big business is helping to correct attitudes which have over-emphasized vocational specialization and under-emphasized the humanities.

The career marriage between industry and the trained technician is not ended but the value of the scholar with the A. B. degree is getting new recognition.

This dramatic shift in thinking was stressed by E. S. Allsopp, a vice-president of the Prudential Insurance Co., of America, in an address before Jacksonville Rotary Club. He pointed out that while great technical skill is required for specialized tasks, a balanced, over-all ability is needed in industry's top executive positions. To build this administrative braintrust, big business is summoning liberal arts graduates to its doors to be groomed for major management posts. These men and women with broad general educational backgrounds are shifted from department to department to learn the ABC's of the industry and, if they demonstrate the intellectual capacity for leadership, they rise rapidly on the ladder to success.

Big business has discovered that a man may be a wizard as an engineer, chemist or an accountant and a dismal failure as

Crawford Plays First Technicolor; Story On Fabled Sword Shows

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

In her first Technicolor film, MGM's Torch Song, Joan Crawford offers fans a chance to see her as a singing and dancing Crawford combined with the dramatic ability which has won her an Academy Award and three Oscar nominations.

Co-starring with Michael Wilding, who portrays the blind pianist in love with Jenny (Joan Crawford), Miss Crawford holds the audience in the grip of her charecterization of a girl too entangled in climbing the ladder of success to have time to fall in love.

Torch Song, playing at the Florida Theatre through tomorrow offers a new Crawford with the famous legs encased in kelly green nylons, singing the hot numbers "Follow Me," "You Won't Forget Me," "Tenderly," and "Two-Faced Woman."

The picture has a backstage flavor—spiced with Crawford's 3-D dramatic ability to portray the theatrical temperament, glamour personality, and emotional intensity of a hardened beautiful musical comedy star. Michael Wilding, a popular British star, complicates Jenny's life in the role of a blind pianist who plays hard to get, which will leave the ladies asking "Could you fall in love with a man like this?"

Another red-headed star rocks the screen this week at the Florida beginning Sunday and running through Tuesday. PIPER LAURIE co-stars with ROCK HUDSON in The GOLDEN BLADE, story of the legendary Sword of Damascus, in the Technicolor setting of Bagdad, famed city of Arabian Nights.

Saucy Piper Laurie gets her shapely self into some broad high-jinks as she and Rock turn the tables on villains Gene Evans and George MacReady. Together, they add something to the sexy, swashbuckling harem days of Bagdad.

Rock Hudson, following in the footsteps of Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., gives a fresh touch to the Arabian Nights adventures. In his role as Harun, legendary commoner who fences his path of vengeance for the murder of his father to the throne of Bagdad, tries to win the hand of the Princess Khairuzan, (Piper Laurie) who is one minute a street Arab in disguise and the next a regal lady in distress.

Other members of the supporting cast include Gene Evans, seductive Kathleen Hughes, and Stevan Geray

Party Praised For Keeping Hands Off

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The Student Party, I believe, deserves particular commendation for staying out of the freshman class elections.

In the first place, it would be rather unfair for so powerful and well-organized a group to enter the race when it is the only party on campus.

The Student Party came in for considerable criticism last year for virtually monopolizing the Student Body (UGA) elections and the class elections. It was compared, even by this columnist, to a monolith. It was called undemocratic because it took elections out of the hands of the comparative many and put them into the hands of much fewer people.

Part of this trouble was not really the party's fault. It simply was too well organized and had too much band wagon appeal. Diverse groups joined just to be joining, and the net effect was a loosely conglamerated but politically overwhelming group. All organized apposition crumbled before the stream-roller.

Many of these problems are being resolved this year.

First of all, I have a strong hunch that certain dissident wings are going to break off from the Student Party. I don't think the party should worry about this, because it is necessary if the organization is going to stand for anything concrete.

I only hope the new party or parties are formed along reasonable lines of differing political viewpoint and not the childish sort of things that student politicians aften get involved in.

A spirit of competition ought to be very helpful to the party, though. It can stand for ideals as well as names, and it will be forced to put its best foot forward.

Chairman Charlie Miner explained that the executive committee of the party recently met and planned a number of reorganizations in the manner of party nominations. The chief feature will be a pre-convention party primary. The changes will be reported in detail in the Flambeau later on, but all I want to point out now is that they are being made.

Even with these changes, though, it would have been unwise for the party to enter the freshman elections. Even with apposition forming, it is at present the only one. Furthermore, it is really too early far upperclassmen to be able to see wha among the freshmen have real merit politically. It should be something the frosh themselves decide on.

There have been semi-clandestine "blocks" formed by a few people, but they are acting as would-be-wheels, pure and simple, and not Student Party representatives. In contrast to their feverish behind-the-scenes actions the Student Party's cool aloofness is admirable.

Meditating Algebra Among Pagans

By BEVERLY LACAYO

The Amber House is definitely the place to go for meditation. We were sitting there one afternoon pondering weakly and wearily over many an old and forgotten lore (our algebra homework) when out from a multi-colored box on the other side of the room came the glorious strains of Mario Lanza emitting the Lord's Prayer.

But the A. H. was inhabited by so many pagans that day that we could only hear snatches of it between shouted conversations. "Hey Mike! Len-me-a-nickle-fra-cuppa-coffee!" . . . "give us this day our daily bread . . ." booms the juke. "Say, Eddie, where we gonna take the girls after the game Saturday?" . . . "Lead us not into temptation, . . ." warns the juke. Louder yelling and babbling finally drowns out the juke and life goes on . . . "forever and ever!"

Our algebra improved considerably under the religious atmosphere. We can't understand why the professor fails to notice the inspiration behind the equations.

We are glad to know that the President of the Student body is finally receiving a salary for the amount of time he spends working. This compensation is long over due, but they made up for that in the size of salary. Seventy-five a month is really great. For that the president should spend his spare time editing one issue of the Flambeau—to even up the loads a little.

This is not meant to be a dig, but in all honesty something should be done about the fantastic amount of work the Flambeau editor and staff have to put out every week. Flambeau editors have been known to practically-fall-out (new verb) since we have been at Florida State. (No casual relationship implied). Having two editors, one for each edition, has been suggested, but rejected because it would make for two editorial policies. Some bright Flambeau worker ought to dream up a solution if he only had the time.

Speaking of Flambeau editors. Last year's editor, Bill Dunn, was seen around campus a few weeks ago. He is pursuing his newspaper career in Fort Jackson where he edits the camp paper.

After discussing old times, we got around to his new work.

B. L.: How did you get the Job?

B. D.: They heard about my experience at F.S.U.

B. L.: Do you write any fiery editorials?

B. D.: Huh? What's an editorial? This is the Army.

B. L.: Did your experience at F. S. U. prepare you for this?

B. D.: You tell the students to quit griping—they never had it so easy!

Deciding that I had "had it" we changed the subject.

We hear that the Sigma Chi's may be buying a new house before long. Seventy-five dollars a month goes a long way towards covering the payments.

It is getting harder and harder to find something insignificant to write about, but we're trying hard.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Everyone Has Guesses On La Rosa

By DAVID DREIS

Newspapers sure are giving a play to the tussle between King Arthur Godfrey and two of his knights, Archie Bleyer and Julius La Rosa. Every columnist swears he knows the inside story behind the cause of radio's number one star firing two of the most popular reasons his show has hit the Hooper. This columnist, with "Interpreting the News" under his belt, will endeavor to read between the lines.

First, the basic facts. Godfrey made no mention of his intentions to fire the singer before the program started. It wasn't until La Rosa finished his tune that the freckle-faced announcer commented, "That was Julius' 'Swan song'." La Rosa, never hearing that expression before, was bewildered. Godfrey continued wishing his warbler 'God-speed.' La Rosa caught on. After the program, orchestra leader Bleyer went into Godfrey's office asking him why the singer was fired for Bleyer has a deep interest in the Italian: La Rosa sings for Cadence Records, an Archie Bleyer commodity.

"I'm afraid you're next to go, Archie," Godfrey muttered. During a two weeks vacation with pay for CBS, Bleyer had made a record for Don McNeill on ABC . . . a rival network. Godfrey considered McNeill, who operates the Breakfast Club, a competitor. McNeill said he was shocked to hear the news. "Arthur and I have been friends for years. I can't see how he could call me a competitor . . . the Breakfast Club comes on an hour earlier than his show." Godfrey made no official comment.

When Bleyer insisted on the reason for the La Rosa pink slip, Godfrey explained that the policy of his show is that the artists have no outside agent and Julius became a production for the Music Corporation of America, a booking agent for professional musicians. "Besides this, La Rosa has lost his humility." Godfrey said. "He refused to show up for dancing rehearsals and just wasn't the same boy that started the morning series."

Arthur made one comment which showed that he was half-way in the right. "I know Julius is nuts about Dotty McGuire, one of the three McGuire sisters." The sisters and Julius couldn't be reached for any comment on this and the next day the family of the McGuires told newsmen "Godfrey had lied." They said Dotty was married to a soldier in Korea and was not in love with Julius. With this, most anti-Arthurs went on a huge crusade calling him a trouble maker, etc. The next day La Rosa announced the engagement of himself to—guess who, Dotty, of course. Her husband would be willing to give Dotty a divorce. They had been estranged for quite a long time. Now the critics shut up.

Reading between the lines. Articles in magazines pointed out that Godfrey didn't like La Rosa to be mentioned as his successor and that trouble was already harboring between the two. Godfrey couldn't do anything about Robert Q Lewis replacing him when he went to the hospital because the network insisted. The rumor was that Godfrey thought Lewis was too "Broadwayish." Godfrey evidently is the only one to reach the top without changing one bit. There are many who will vouch for both sides.

The news is that Julius, who is no ordinary singer and has scored on the hit charts with "Anywhere I Wander" wil be given his own show by CBS. Recently, La Rosa became a guest star on Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town teevee show and scored a smash. As for Bleyer, he'll be backing his Cadence Records and get whatever job comes his way. No doubt, Bleyer has salted away quite a bundle. You don't start a disc company on record needles.

As for Godfrey, he got rid of the Kaydettes and Bill Lawrence very quietly. No telling how he'll do amidst a roar. My guess is he'll stay on top for awhile, but the audience will always keep in mind, the temper of the "Huck Finn of Radio."

OTHER COLLEGES SAY:

Trieste Situation Treated Hastily

It should surprise nobody that the explosive Trieste situation has flared up again, with all its disastrous potentialities. For the last few months, the political situations in both Italy and Yugoslavia have made it inevitable. And until the announcement last week that both the US and Britain would turn their administrative zones over to Italy, the Administration in Washington had maintained a hands-off policy that annoyed both partisans.

Nobody can blame Tito for his aggressive tendencies. He feels that the US and Britain have ignored the Yugoslav viewpoint, the most of the area is ethnically Slavic, and that the time has come to take the diplomatic bull by the horns in spite of international repercussions. And actually what he proposes is not too unreasonable: that the Yugoslavs have sovereignty over Zone B—that part of the Istrian Peninsula under disputa which lies south of the city itself—for another ten years, and the city, which is 80 per cent Italian in population, becomes another autonomous area under Italian sovereignty. To Tito, the US-British promise to return the area to the Italians is nothing more than power politics. To the Italians it is too-little-and-too-late fulfillment of earlier agreements. They say that the city should be allowed to go the way it chooses, since they feel sure a plebescite would favor Italy.

It seems to us, however, that Tito's proposals deserve a little more consideration than they are getting. Before the US committed itself finally to return Trieste to Italy a move which could alienate Yugoslavia as an ally and which even the most naive will admit is based partly on internal politics, it should have explored more fully the possibility of a compromise which would give the Italian city to the Italians and the Slavic countryside to the Yugoslavs.

MANY SCHOOLS departments and offices of the university have their own address files here. Twice a month the latest changes in faculty and staff addresses come into the office and new plates have to be cut. Any change of name or address makes it necessary to cut a new plate.

Mrs Jenson also sends out all catalogs of the university. In fact, this department could well be called the centralized mailing center of FSU.

Flying Seminoles Franklin, Puckett Featured With Band Performance

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

Meet the "Flying Seminoles!" Perhaps their names, Ed Franklin and Dick Puckett are more familiar. Or maybe they are known as the two redskin, baton twirling braves who perform with the Florida State University Band, Marching Chiefs.

The two 18-year-old freshmen hail from Miami where they began their present baton routine four years ago at Miami Jackson High School. There they were known as the "Flying Twirlers."

ED AND DICK have come a long way during these past four years. At Miami Jackson High they received popular recognition and many honors. They appeared in the Orange Bowl classic for four years and have made many other personal and T. V. appearances during their career.

In 1951 the boys were guests of the Dominican President and gave a command performance in the palace. They were with the Jackson High Band in 1949 when the band was New York International Champion, appearing in New York City. "There," said Dick and Ed, "we had one of the greatest thrills of our lifetime by parading from 5th Avenue to Madison Square Garden."

AMONG OTHER appearances, the baton artists have appeared in Cuba and the All Star game in Chicago.

Last year, Dick and Ed acted as instructors in the Texas All State Band, teaching modern band technique. They said that they have been called on often to judge baton twirling contests throughout the state of Florida.

THE BOYS have been pals for more than four years now, continuously working together with the aim of perfecting their team. They may be found working alone around the FSU campus during much of their spare time, practicing for the next performance.

In addition to their baton twirling they also have other talents. They do a modern comedy dance, and character and tap dancing. They have shown the Florida State fans a bit of their dancing ability with the "Marching Chiefs," when they go through their classical dance routine at each gridiron halftime show.

WHEN ASKED if they had plans or hopes for future professional work in show business, one of them replied, "It has always been our secret ambition to someday get into professional show business."

Of course the boys aren't counting on this entirely. They both have chosen a field of professional work in which they are also very interested. Ed is a predental major while Dick is majoring in modern designing. Both of them have scholarships at Florida State University.

THE BOYS SEEM to have mutual agreement on everything. They both agreed that they chose FSU "because of the school curricular activities and all around friendliness."

Ed said, "We were offered scholarships at other colleges and universities, but FSU had what we wanted mostly."

The boys have already become quite active in extra curricular activities at Florida State University. Both of them recently pledged to Delta Tau Delta Fraternity. Ed was elected president of the pledge class and Dick was appointed Social Chairman.

Ed is a member of the "Flying High" circus and bass drummer in the AFROTC Band.

ED AND DICK have begun a baton class which is held each Saturday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Student Center. They will appreciate having all interested students dropping by. It's presumed that they are especially good instructors for you co-eds!

a top executive. It is learning to look to the oft-scorned Bachelor of Arts for its future leadership.

The trend away from a liberal arts education in our schools and colleges has been the most disastrous aspect of the age of mechanization. The A. B. curriculum has been ridiculed and scoffed at so long that its vindication will not be easy.

Champions of vocational education have chorused that the water-logged academic intricacies of Latin, Greek, philosophy, differential and integral calculus, ancient literature and history have little practical use in the hustle and bustle of 20th century living. They are mistaken. These educational 75's teach us to use our brains and perform the mental gymnastics necessary for successful living. They sweep away the cerebral cobwebs and gear our minds for the intellectual battles that lurk around every corner of life. Armed with this mental discipline and a keen insight into the cultural verities, we can adapt ourselves to any specialty necessary.

The massive pillars of our civilization will fall to pieces if liberal arts education is allowed to perish. It is as simple as that. A nation taught only to manipulate machines will soon forget how to think.

If Elected I Promise

President

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

We are in the midst of the campaign for Freshman officers. It is important to you that these officers be both sincere and capable. I ask you to look deeply into each candidate's campaign and decide whether or not he will be a good officer.

I feel that I am qualified for this office, because I have experience as Senior Class President and have been active in Student Government at Lake Worth High School in Lake Worth, Florida.

This is my platform! I stand for thorough representation. If I am elected I will have the whole class in mind in what ever I do, not just a few individuals. Consider these facts. If this is what you want, then I hope that you will give me your support and your vote, for it is only with your vote that I will gain victory.

If I am elected, don't be surprised to find me consulting you individually and informally on Freshman class issues. This is the only way that I can be well informed in order to act for you.

Win, Lose, or Draw.
Hoping to serve you.
Jerry Gunderson.

Dear Fellow Freshman:

Let me take this opportunity to urge you to consider very carefully the campaign promises and policies of YOUR prospective officers, always bearing in mind that YOUR officers, are very backbone of YOUR class and the entire Student Body. When you stand before the ballot box, ask yourself this question. Have I voted for the candidate who will strive to do his best as a representative of Me and My class?

My personal platform is somewhat brief, but never the less clear and concise I favor, and will constantly work for THOROUGH and COMPLETE Student representation. If I am awarded the privilege to serve you, I shall earnestly put forth an honest effort to conduct myself in a manner that will be beneficial to the entire Freshman Class, and not merely a few individuals. Consider this carefully If this is what YOU want, then I would surely welcome and be most grateful for YOUR support and YOUR vote at the polls I realize that the road to victory will be hard fought it cannot be attained without YOUR help.

If I am selected to serve YOU, the class of '57 do not be surprised if I take the liberty of consulting you individually informally on the various issues that may confront our class during the course of this school year This is by far the best way that I know to become acquainted with YOUR desires and ideas.

Win, lose, or draw, I am
Very sincerely
Pete Wimbrow,
Your candidate for Freshman President.

To the Freshman Class of Florida State University:

Next Tuesday, November 3, you will be going to the campus polls and by your vote choosing your representatives for this term.

Too often we are prone to be lax and disinterested in the affairs of our Student Government It is important to you as a voter and member of this Freshman Class to elect representatives that will serve you and not a minority group

The qualifications of a representative should be: Moral integrity, a strong faith in God and fellowman, a sincere sympathy and an open mind to the problems of those he represents and a background of political experience

It is my belief that I meet these qualifications and when put to a test my experience in high school student government and my service in religious work, based on sixteen years non-absentee attendance from services would provide me with the experience needed to serve you as your President

Your vote for Dennis G Small for President of the Freshman Class, will be respected appreciated.

Sincerely,
Dennis G. Small.

Dear Fellow Classmates:

I, George Hill, am a freshman candidate for the office of president of the biggest and best class ever at FSU. The class of 1957

I am YOUR candidate, not the candidate of a committee. I am seeking election for my class and myself. There are no "We's" in my campaign EXCEPT in speaking of my freshmen classmates.

If I do not go back to past records, it is because I am working for the future of the freshman class, not for the past.

Classmates, I am asking for your support and votes to help me carry out my ideas and ambitions for the freshman class.

George Hill

Veep

I am a candidate for the office of Vice-President of the Freshman class. Holding a class office will require a great deal of time, work, and effort and I am willing to give all of these and to accept all the responsibilities that come with the office of Vice-President.

I believe that I am qualified for this job through my experience in Ocala High School. I served on the Student Council three years and my senior year I was one of the four executive members representing the student body as a whole in the Student Council.

The main duty of the Vice-President is to be in charge of the Freshman Carnival. My most important qualification is that I was overall chariman of our Junior Carnival from which we made $1100. This will be the first chance to show what we can do so we must make our carnival a success. We need this money to carry us through our four years at F S.U.

I will sincerely appreciate your vote and support and may we have the best Freshman class ever.

Sincerely yours,
Jane Clardy.

Fellow Students:

I Jack Pickett would like to become the Vice President of the 1953-1954 Freshman Class You the reader might not know me so I would like to tell you what activities I have been in and what offices I have held in my three years in high school.

In my sophomore year, I was elected President of the Sophomore Class. I also joined in that year the Glee Club, the Key Club, and the Hi-Y.

In my junior year, I was elected treasurer of the Key Club, and I also was in the Glee Club, Hi-Y, and I played one year of football.

In the first semester of my senior year I was elected Second Vice President of the Student Government Association In the second semester, I was elected President of the Student Government Association. Also in my senior year I was elected President of the Mixed Glee Club, and also President of the Key Club. I made a letter in swimming and a letter as basketball manager.

I think I have had enough experience to faithfully perform the duties of Vice President of the Freshmen Class.

Thank you.
Jack Pickett
S. A. E. House.

Fellow Freshmen,

Ever since I have been enrolled at Florida State, I have given the office of vice-president serious thought.

The vice-president of Florida State spends much time in making a successful Freshman Carnival This big event is looked forward to by all of the students. If I am elected vice-president, I will try with all my ability to give you the best carnival ever before.

In high school I held offices in the Hi-Y was in Student Council, went to the Alabama Youth Legislature one year, was Sports editor of my school paper, and was active in politics, as a campaign manager.

All I can promise now is that if I am elected vice-president, I will work to the best of my ability to make this year at Florida State very successful.

Your truly,
Ken Brock,
Candidate for
Vice-President.

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

Well, it's almost time for primary elections. I know you're as interested in our class as I am and want it the best of all

I'm running for Freshman Secretary and Id certainly appreciate your vote. I will endeavor to do my best with God's help, if elected.

I graduated from Miami Senior High School in Miami, Florida. In high school I was active in many clubs Honorary, social service and spiritual Among these were: National Honor Society, Modern Music Masters, Quill and Scroll, National Scholastic Radio Guild, and Honoria. I feel that I'm qualified for this office because of my experience as secretary in many of these organizations.

I hope that you will find enjoyment, knowledge and satisfaction at Florida State University.

Sincerely,
MARY ELIZABETH KINO,
Candidate for Secretary.

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

Would you like our class to be the best Freshman Class ever? So would I! I realize that in order to have the best we must have capable students to fill our offices

I have enjoyed being active in many activities during high school and I would like the chance to serve you as your class secretary. If I am elected, I will fill this office to the best of my ability.

When you go to the polls this Tuesday I hope you will remember my name . . . Pat Robson for Secretary.

Sincerely,
PAT ROBSON,
Candidate for Secretary

DEAR STUDENTS:

At the beginning of each Freshman election, students are confronted with a confusing number of unknown candidates. In order to introduce our candidate we are not going to present you with flowery phrases: just with straight facts about Barbara Jeffries, our candidate for Freshman Secretary.

We believe that Barbara would make the Freshman Class the best Secretary imaginable; and this is why we think so

Barbara, in her senior year, held the office of State Beta Club Secretary; she was elected to the House of Representatives at the 1952 Girls State; her high school class elected her as their Secretary for four years. Other positions which she has held are Secretary-Treasurer of the high school band, Managing Editor of the school paper, and Business Manager of the yearbook

The platform which Barbara has selected for her campaign is "Prompt, Courteous, and Efficient Service for the Freshmen." As a candidate for Secretary Barbara Jeffries promises you this, and we hope that you will give her your confidence and your vote.

MARIAN BENSON,
Campaign Manager.

Treasurer

Dear Fellow-Students of the Freshman Class:

Going to college is a great step in our lives and choosing our leaders this year and forever is a great decision. Before we vote, we should look into every one's qualifications and platform. I graduated from Leon High School where I was a member of the band for four years, Spanish Club, vice-president last year, Philharmonic Club, Torch Club, Thespians, Tri-Hy-Y, Junior and Senior Class play. I was also treasurer of our chapter of the National Honor Society, Parian. Having this opportunity last year, I know where we can get things at a better rate and of a better quality.

As I am running for treasurer, a platform can not exactly be made but there is one thing is particular that I would like to do. This is to publish a monthly treasurer's report to keep all the freshman informed about our financial standing. I also have a project in mind, besides our Freshman Carnival, which I am looking forward to help with, that will bring in money with lots of fun and surprises.

I love working with people and I want to serve you and I know we can make this the best Freshman Class yet if we try, so won't you "BANK ON B-BAR"

Sincerely yours for service to the class,
BARBARA HUGHES,
Barbara "B-Bar" Hughes

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

Tuesday's election will determine whether our class will have the type of leadership that will enable it to make a good record during this year. It is my desire to have the privilege of serving you as your Treasurer so that I may help our class leave its mark on our campus as the finest freshman class in the history of F. S. U. If elected your Treasurer I promise to you faithful and honest service that will be a credit to our class. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
Gene Watts.

Dear Freshmen,

With our class elections only days away, I'm sure you must be eager as I am to learn more than just the names of the many candidates in order to be able to vote wisely.

I know that the experience I received while serving in various capacities such as representative to Florida's Girls' State and member of the Senate, Student Council member, officer for four years in the Future Homemakers of America (including the office of treasurer), and member of the National Honor Society, have all helped to make me responsible, dependable, and willing to serve.

This is our election! Let's all work together for the best set of officers Florida State has ever had.

Sincerely yours,
Nell Davis.

Dear Freshmen:

I would like to take this opportunity to introduce myself to you and to urge your support in the coming elections. My name is Helen McLain. I originally came from Sarasota, but I now live in Miami. I graduated from Coral Gables High School.

The office which I am seeking is that of treasurer of the freshman class. I feel that I am qualified for this office. If I am elected, I will do the job to the best of my ability for you, the class of 1957.

Sincerely yours,
Helen McLain.

Social Chm.

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

The position of Social Chairman must be filled by an individual who will not only devote hours of her time to the job, but even more important one who has the interests of her class at heart. It must be remembered that the Social Chairman alone cannot successfully plan and direct the various projects and activities that her class decides to sponsor. To be effective, she must have the support of the entire class. Consequently, a person with leadership, personality, initiative, and experience in social affairs should be selected to occupy this office

I am one of several candidates seeking to gain the honor of becoming YOUR Social Chairman for the balance of this school year. My name is RUTH WILLIAMS, known to all my friends as "Ruthie" I am more than willing to give my every spare moment to fulfilling the requirements of this position. Since I have had the opportunity to familiarize myself with the numerous duties of a Social Chairman through some of my high school activities, I sincerely believe that I would be able to serve YOU, my classmates, in a beneficial manner.

Sincerely yours,
RUTHIE WILLIAMS,
Candidate for Social Chairman.

Men's Senote

Hey Freshmen—

Remember me? I'm the guy that didn't wait for a formal introduction when we met . . . I may have been rather bold, but I have met loads of you. And it's really terrific, making many new friends and renewing lots of old friendships.

Our class has marched off to a grand start with a record breaking enrollment. I don't want us to stop there, I want us to go on and set new records of achievement and progress. Let's work together and make our class "the" class in F.S.U. history.

I have held positions on the local, state, and national level in student government and organizations. I feel the experience I have gained will enable me to provide you with able representation in the Senate.

Sincerely,
Jimmy Soles
Candidate for Senator.

Dear Freshman Students:

I am a candidate for Freshman Class Senator in the coming elections and would appreciate your support.

I will not make any campaign promises, and I will not list a long number of qualifications, because I feel that our student government members should be elected because of their interest, ability, and sincerity rather than because they were at one time serving in some organization.

As I said previously, I do not attempt to state any long platform. I will only say that if I am elected to this important position, I will do my utmost to serve the students as they should be served.

It is with these ideals and sincere interest in good student government that I submit my candidacy for Senator of the Freshman Class.

Thank you,
Charlie Davis

Dear Freshman:

The Senate is of tremendous importance in this University's government. The Senator's decisions affect each and every student, therefore, only the Freshman who are the most competent, the most honest, the most sincere should represent our class on this council. I urge you to meet and learn all of the worthy candidates seeking the offices of Senator so that you will know which of these will serve you best.

I am from DeFuniak Springs, Florida While in school I served as President and Vice-President of the student body, as a state Key Club Lieutenant Governor and many other offices which I believe will help me serve you well as your Senator.

It is my hope that I will fulfill the qualifications for this office and that you will give me your consideration.

James Moore,
Freshman Senator.

Dear Classmates:

As a candidate for your freshman senator I should like to give you my qualifications so that you can judge the candidates fairly and make a good decision.

During my high school career I served as Vice President of the 8,000 Florida Future Farmers, President of the Senior Class, President of the National Honor Society, and won the F.F.A. Public Speaking Contest. In 1951 I received the Star Future Farmer of Florida Award. I have also had training in parliamentary procedure, being a member of a state winning team.

When you go to the polls on Tuesday, I hope that you will consider the qualifications of all the candidates, and I shall be grateful to you for your vote and support if you think I deserve this office

Most sincerely
William Timmons.

Freshmen:

As a candidate for the office of Freshman Senate, I am writing this letter to ask for your vote and support.

I am a native of Tallahassee and have been well acquainted with Florida State University for some time. I am a graduate of Leon High School, Class of 1953, and I attended the Summer Session of '53 at FSU.

I am not seeking this office for any personal honors or privileges. I am seeking it because I want to serve you, the Freshman Class, and the University as a whole.

There are yet three days in which to make up your minds who your choice will be Since this is one of your most important choices of the year, I urge you to be sure you use your vote wisely.

I will appreciate your vote and support.

Yours for a better FSU.
Ben B. Powell, Jr.

Dear Fellow Freshmen,

I am a candidate for the office of Freshmen Senator. I believe that this office needs a well qualified, honest, down-to-earth person, who will represent the freshman class with zeal and determination.

I feel I am a person of this caliber, and If Elected, I will do all within my power to preserve and strengthen our University Senate, The Student Body Government and F S.U.

In regards to qualifications, I was Editor-in-Chief of my high school newspaper, President of Quill and Scroll, a member of Key Club International, a member of the Pep Club, Vice-President of the Intra-club Council, member of the leterman's club and an active participant in the major sports.

When you go to the polls Tuesday think over all the candidates and choose the one you think will represent you, but remember this letter and the ideas and sincere interest I have tried to put forth to you.

Thank you sincerely,
Felix Walker.

Dear Fellow Freshman:

As you know by now I am running for the office of Senator of the Freshman class. I feel that I am qualified to run in this election due to my previous record in holding offices of various groups, organizations, and institutions I am a graduate of Hillsborough High School, where I was active in school clubs and other activities. I am past president of Episcopal youth work for Florida and I am presently studying for the ministry of that church.

I am running not only on my record, but I feel that I can be of great help to the governmental affairs of F. S. U. If I am elected to the Senate I will promise to co-operate in any way possible with the University Government and try to represent and serve, you my fellow students to the best of my ability. I would like to thank the staff of the Flambeau for giving me this oppotrunity to ask you to cast your vote for Duncan L. Gray, Your Senator. Vote for Gray, your vote will be appreciated. Remember Gray on Tuesday, November 3rd.

Sincerely yours,
Duncan L. Gray
Candidate for Senator
Freshman Class.

A Letter to the Freshman Class
Dear fellow students;

As you all know, I am a candidate for the Freshman Senate. I sincerely want to work in this capacity during the next year. I have had experience in Student Government through Student Council and Boy's State and I believe that I can fulfill the duties of Senator well. If elected, I will conscienciously work with the Senate to serve the best interests of the Freshman Class and Florida State University.

Sincerely Yours,
David Bachman.

Women's Senote

Dear Fellow Freshmen:

As all of you know, the University Senate is a very important part of our student government here at F. S. U. A person elected to the Senate, therefore, should be qualified to carry on the legislative affairs of this university. I believe that I am well qualified to hold this important position.

I have had experience in the Senate of the High School Student Congress, sponsored by the National Forensic League. I attended sessions of the Miami Student Congress for two years. Last year I was chosen to be in the Senate of the South Florida Student Congress, and I was elected the Presiding Officer of the Senate. I attended the Florida Student Congress last year, also, where I was a Senator.

At Coral Gables Senior High School, I was Secretary of National Honor Society, Secretary of National Forensic League, Corresponding Secretary of the Student Council, Historian of Modern Music Masters, Treasurer of Mixed Chorus, and a member of Spanish National Honor Society and National Thespians. Scholastically, I ranked 6th in my graduating class of 445 students.

Here at F. S. U., I am President of the Tri Delta pledge class, President of the Disciple Student Fellowship, and a member of University Singers.

Carolyn Close.

Dear Freshmen,

I would like to take this opportunity to let you know that I am running for Senate. Any support you might give me will certainly be appreciated. And if elected or not you can depend on me to work for our class and school.

Sincerely,
Nancy Lee Young.

Editor of the Flambeau and Freshman Class:

I, Emilie Hudson, Candidate for the Senate, would like to tell the Freshman Class my purpose in running for the office of Senatoc. In running, I am trying for the opportunity to be able to represent you in the Senate of Florida State University. I want to be in a position to convey the wishes of the students to one of the most important governing bodies on this campus. In order to do this, I will need your support and a continuation of your eagerness to participate in the affairs which concern you.

In high school, besides being a member of the National Honor Society, I was very active in club and organizational work of Miami Edison. I believe in getting things done quickly, well and for the benefit of the largest number of people.

I hope you will consider me on November 3rd. I sincerely will do my best for you. My room is in Jennie Murphree Hall, so if anyone wants to speak with me further about my intentions if elected Senator, I will be most happy to talk with that person.

I am running to represent YOU!

Sincerely,
Emilie Hudson,
Candidate for the Senate.

Dear Flambeau:

I would like to thank you for giving me this chance to introduce myself to the freshman class. My name is Caryl James and I am running for freshman Senator.

Perhaps many people think running in an election is all fun and posters. But, truly there is more to it, for it has a much deeper meaning. Being a Senator is a job, and I fully realize the work it entails. I would like very much to work in Senate and try to serve the freshman class in that capacity. I will promise only one thing, that if I am elected I will try to do a good job and represent you, the freshman class.

Thank you again Flambeau, for this opportunity and I hope you all will vote on November 3rd It's our first chance to be a true part of FSU, so let's all come out and support our school.

Sincerely,
Caryl James

Dear Freshman:

My name is Betty Ann Pool I would like very much to be YOUR representative to the Women's Senate.

Like my worthy opponents I, too have held various offices during my high school years such as: Member of the House of Representatives at Girls' State, President of Peo Club, Vice President and Secretary of Band, Sophomore Secretary, Worthy Advisor of Rainbow Girls, Secretary of Spanish Club, and Editor-in-chief of the Yearbook.

I realize that it would be a great honor to hold the office of Senator. If I am elected I will do all in my power to carry out the wishes of the individual Freshman and to support the interests of our class as a whole.

If you would like to discuss the election, politics or even the weather, be sure to come see me at 328 Broward Hall.

I wish my worthy opponents lots of luck and may the best three gals be elected.

"Whether I win or whethec I lose,
Although I hope it's POOL you choose—
When all this confusion comes to an end,
I hope you'll say Betty Ann Pool is your Friend!"

Best of luck to all candidates,
Betty Ann Pool,
Candidate for Women's Senate.

Dear Friends:

Although we all haven't had time to meet each other personally and talk for a few minutes togethec, I would like for you to meet a good friend of mine. She is a cute little 5 feet, 4 brunette, who is always rushing around and is friendly to everyone. I do hope you can meet her, if not during the campaign, then afterwards. But, when you do meet her, I'm sure that you will agree that she is tops in everything. She is a fine christian girl, very active in her work in the Baptist Church. Some of her many qualifications follow:

President of the Leon Chapter of Future Homemakers of America, Vice President of the above club, Secretary and treasurer of the Leon High School's famed "Marching Redcoats," Secretary of her Sophomore Class, an active worker on the newspaper staff of her school paper, two activce years in the school's largest government organization—Inter-Club Council.

After reading this, I hope you will be able to meet her, Shirley Willis, youc candidate and mine for Senate in the coming election.

Thank you,
Charlene Pierce

Dear Fellow Freshman:

Tuesday you will go to the polls to make a most important decision—who will represent YOUR class and YOUR interest in the University Senate throughout this school year. I am a candidate for one of the three positions in Women's Senate.

I would like to take this opportunity to present to you some of the things that I will try to accomplish if elected to serve as YOUR Senator.

1. I will work as your Senator for a stronger student governmeot with more responsibilities.

2. I will strive toward creating a more simplified registration program. (Remember the confusion that we had this year?)

3. I pledge to represent the Freshman Class earnestly and conscientiously.

I know you will agree that our college is one of the finest universities to be found anywhere within the South. If I am elected, I shall work diligently with the other Student Body officers to place the name of Florida State University at the very top of ouc Nation's "College Ladder of Progress."

Much time and sincere effort has been spent in preparing this platform which I hope you will believe is a very sound one for our student body I respectfully solicit your vote and personal support in this election.

Very sincerely,
JANE SOPER.

Dear Editor:

I hereby state my platform as a candidate for the freshman office of women's Senator

As Senator, I would carry out principles of fairness and honesty to the best of my ability. These factors are the basis of my campaign.

An unbiased opinion on all matters concerning the Greeks and Independents is an important part of my platform It is only fair that both sides have equal rights to express their attitudes on any controversy.

I would pledge myself as a representative of the freshman class, to bring its problems and ideas to the attention of the Senate.

The FLAMBEAU has performed a great service to the freshman candidates, with the opportunity to express our attitudes and ideas. I sincerely thank all concerned.

Respectfully yours,
RUTHIE HENSHAW.

Dear Freshmen Seminoles:

Upon announcing my candidacy several people have asked me why I want to be their Senator. I want you to know how I feel from the very bottom of my heart.

To begin with I love to work for people and with people. During high school I tried to prepare myself for such a position as I am now seeking. The experiences I have had as Vice-President of my high school Student Council, a member of the House of Representatives of Girls State, and State Vice-President of the Future Homemakers of America have taught me to accept responsibility with a smile and really enjoy it.

After visiting the Senate I sincerely believe that I possess the qualifications that would make you a good Senator. I want to serve you and pledge to you my very best.

Now you must carefully study as many candidates as possible and then vote. During the week I will be contacting many of you and I invite you to talk with me at any time. This is your government and your privilege of voting. Use your privilege wisely and join the crowds who say, "Let's all go and vote for Jo."

Sincerely yours,
JO JONES.

Dear Freshman:

We wish to take this opportunity to introduce ourselves to all of you as candidates for freshmen Senators. Our real names are Charlotte and Phyllis Patten, but we are usually known as just the Patten twins because that is what we are.

We are running for Senator because we think that a Senator has the opportunity to help his class as much as or more than any other class officer by keeping the interest of the class at heart and by acting as a channel through which the opinion of the class may be voiced on all issues. Since the Senate is the legislative part of our student government, it has the very important power to make new laws and change old laws. Therefore every freshman who is concerned about the welfare of his class should be interested in the senate and feel close enough to his Senator to tell them his opinion on a certain bill or his ideas for improving certain conditions. This intercession of the Senatoc for the class is the spark that makes the Senate function successfully and also is the reason that we become interested enough in the Senate to run for office.

If any of you do not know us and would like to meet us, we would count it a privilege to talk with you. If there are any questions as to why we are running or as to our qualifications, please don't hesitate to ask us. Remember that you owe it to yourself and your class to vote in the coming elections because it is your duty to support the candidates whom you elect. "Vote as you please, but please vote."

Sincerely,
THE PATTEN TWINS,
Candidate for Freshmen Senator.

FSU-VMI Clash Set For Tomorrow Night

Sands' Slants
by Tommy Sands
Flambeau Sports Editor

Enthusiasm, Not Optimism

"I sincerely believe that we will have the finest college football game in the South here tomorrow night. Personally speaking I expect this FSU-VMI game to be the hardest fought most contested football game I've ever been associated with."

That's what the man said and he means it. The man, of course, was one Thomas Nugent whose celebrated optimism was at its best this week. Or perhaps we should call it enthusiasm. That sounds better At least it does this week.

You don't have to go far to get the feel of it. Just drive past the east campus practice field between the hours of four and six, roll your car windows down and inhale. It'll knock you down. Enthusiasm, not overconfidence, not high-pitched optimism but enthusiasm. It's the best of the lot.

The Nuge wants this one. His players want it and they are making no bones about the fact. Before one of the Seminoles' practice drills this week, Nugent reportably got so worked up while giving the squad a pep talk that the tears [illegible] Later a player remarked: "It's a good thing we weren't playing VMI tonight. There'd be 11 Keydets on their backs." Not overconfidence, not optimism. Just enthusiasm.

Plenty of Angles

When you stop to consider the angles in this ball game Nugent's words are not far off. Nugent, was the headmaster at VMI from 1949 until last season. He was at the helm when the Keydets trimmed FSU 28-7 last year. And the majority of the boys on the VMI roster were brought there by Nugent. They were, in most cases, his picks and choices.

Now, in his first season here, he will have the task of going back against an outfit which he formerly coached—now heavier and more experienced than when he had them. Then there's this one. VMI head Coach John McKenna served under Nugent as line coach while the Nuge was there and when he pulled up stakes last February, in stepped McKenna as head coach.

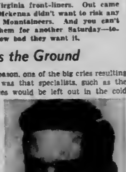
You can go on and on. If FSU wants this one badly, then the Virginians probably want it worse. You probably read the reports of the Keydets 52-20 drubbing by West Virginia last week—how the Mountaineers regulars played less than 16 minutes and so on. And how their ace Johnny Mapp was bottled up and went for only nine yards on his best carry.

Sure it was true. But as Nugent pointed out afterwards, VMI's regulars probably saw less service than did West Virginia's. In fact, Mapp all told, played only about a quarter. And some of the Military School first-stringers—guard Joe Siler and Halfback Mike Foley—were held out entirely. But when the VMI regulars went back in the second half, they scored three times before the Hillbillies knew what had happened That's how bad they want it.

Then in went the West Virginia front-liners. Out came VMI's. The simple truth was Mckenna didn't want to risk any injuries against the powerful Mountaineers. And you can't blame him. He was saving them for another Saturday—tomorrow to be exact. That's how bad they want it.

Mapp Covers the Ground

At the outset of the current season, one of the big cries resulting from the switch to one-platoon was that specialists, such as the offensive and defensive only, aces would be left out in the cold when the current campaign started. Many were. But VMI's Jarrin' Johnny Mapp is a fellow who disproved that one completely.



Mapp

He's taken to offense like a duck to water, and the records show it. Seventh in the nation in the rushing department. That's the same Mapp that the Indians hope to fold up and stick in their hip pocket. But it's going to take a lot of folding.

Somewhat frail as college footballers go, Johnny at 5-11 and 163-pounds, won a berth on the All-Southern team last season as a defensive halfback. However, that's not the limit of his capabilities. He leads his team in punt returns, kickoff returns, pass interceptions and handles the bulk of the punting—averaging around 35 yards per boot.

Mapp can shake his legs on the cinders, too. His 9.8 in the 100 yard dash is good enough for the school record. However, he's at his best in the 220 low hurdles. His 23.1 performance last Spring was good enough to place him third in both the national AAU and NCAA events. No wonder they call him the best track man in the school's history.

Spartans Meet Texans Tonight

TAMPA — The University of Tampa Spartans seek their fifth win of the season here tonight when they go against rugged Sam Houston State.

Tampa which meets FSU here in the season finale for both clubs Dec. 5, has whipped Troy State, South Georgia College, Jacksonville Navy and Mcneese State. They have lost only to powerful Mississippi Southern and Stetson.

KA, Senior Hall, Magnolia Top Intramural Grid Race

By ART KENNERLY

The noise that the Greeks have been making for the last several weeks was almost drowned out recently by the racket that the dormitories have been making. All this din has been on the football field, of course.

It rained last Tuesday And the fraternities called off their games since monsoon footballing is not stylish. Yesterday's tilts featured Pi Kappa Alpha against Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Lambda Chi Alpha and Theta Chi, Delta Tau Delta with Kappa Alpha, Sigma Phi Epsilon against Kappa Sigma, Pi Kappa Phi and Phi Kappa Tau, and Alpha Tau Omega versus Phi Delta Theta.

DORM LEAGUE

Two days ago the dormitories went into battle. Scores then ran like this: Senior Hall hit the Rebels down 12-0; the Pirates swamped the Methodists 18-0; the Gators won over the Mad Hatters on a forfeit; and Magnolia won over the Air Force by a forfeit.

The dormitory schedule for this coming Monday: Senior Hall and the Tigers, the Methodists and the Rebels, Magnolia Hall and the Penthouse Gang, Mad Hatters and the Air Force. The Pirates and the Gators are idle.

Purple Canes Meet Wofford

SPARTANBURG, S. C. — Furman's Hurricane will attempt to boost its national rushing leadership here tomorrow when they meet Wofford's Terriers, conquerors of Stetson last week.

The Hurricanes, who meet Florida State University in Tallahassee, Nov. 14, will carry a record of three wins and two defeats into the tilt — winning over the Citadel, Newberry and Davidson while bowing to South Carolina and Army.

The Purples, on some fancy and power running by Halfbacks Russ Sutton, Ted Yakimowicz, and John Popson and Fullback Bo Barry, averaging 319.4 yards rushing for the five-game stretch.

In total offense, Quarterbacks Jim Boyle and Charlie West have been efficient enough in the passing game to combat the attack game to 387.8 yards per game, second-ranking in the nation. Furman's pass defense has been, exclusive of the 27-13 loss to South Carolina, fairly effective. The opposition has averaged 68 yards in the air.

TAYLOR LIKES KEYDETS; LEON TO LOSE, A & M WIN

By BOB TAYLOR

Halloween came early for football prophets, and with teams like Purdue and Minnesota dropping witches brew in our dope bucket, the ole average dipped to .681.

So this week, it's a much more cautious crystal-baller who says: VMI over FSU in Campbell Stadium's game of the year The Keydets, conquerors of Virginia, are keyed for this one.

Other local teams pit their strengths against Daytona Beach elevens, and although DB's my home. I'm going to have to give one of them to a Tally team. A&M over Bethune-Cookman, but Mainland, my alma mater, over Leon in an upset.

Mapp, Foley Sparkplug Keydet Attack; Feeling Running High Between Squads

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

VMI's colorful Keydets and Florida State University's keyed-up Seminoles clash head-on tomorrow night in Doak S. Campbell Stadium in what promises to be a knock-down drag-out affair from the old school. Game time is 8 p.m.

And with an assist from the weather man, a record crowd of 14,000 may be in the offing. The record home crown here was established when 13,701 passed through the turnstiles to watch the 1951 Stetson-FSU homecoming clash.

According to Athletic Business Manager, Ralph Matherly, advance ticket sales are moving rapidly and indications are that a record or near-record crowd will be on hand by kickoff time.

At any rate, the tilt shapes up as a crowd-pleaser from all angles. Fever has been running at a high pitch here for the past two days and feeling between the squads is running even higher.

SEASON'S RECORDS

	VMI
13	George Wash.	14
7	Richmond	13
14	Citadel	0
21	Virginia	6
20	West Virginia	52
	FSU
0	Miami	27
30	Louisville	0
7	Abilene Christian	20
21	La. Tech	32

Both sides have taken no chances with injuries for this one. Coach Tom Nugent who put in four years as head coach at the Virginia school, ordered no contact work for his Seminoles this week. Instead the emphasis has been on conditioning and perfecting the mistakes accumulated over the first four games. They've had two weeks at it and they've wasted no time.

Coach John McKenna and his Keydets will take a 3-3 record into tomorrow night's outing. Although thrashed 52-20 by West Virginia, the nation's fifth ranking team, last week, VMI has been impressive in its wins over Catawba, 44-0, the Citadel 14-0, and Virginia 21-6.

Their other two losses came at the hands of George Washington by one point and Richmond by a touchdown.

MAPP BIG GUN

Mainspring in the VMI attack is Johnny Mapp, fleet-footed halfback, seventh in the nation this week in the rushing department, according to latest NCAB statistics.

A swift, 165-pound operative, Mapp has gained 456 yards on 68 carries in VMI's six games. That's an average of 6.7 yards per try They also boast a fine overhead game.

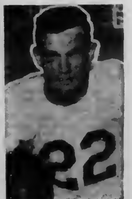
Quarterback Dave Woolwine is a top-caliber passer and in ends Charley Byrd (6-4,215) and Bill Ralph (6-5, 227), the Keydets possess two experienced flankmen.

However, State has some fellows that can move the ball, too

Bobby Fiveash, the Blonde Bainbridge Bomber tops the Tribe in rushing with a net gain of 232 yards on 40 carries.

In total offense he's gained 276 yards on 45 plays, having completed one of five passes for 44 yards. In addition he leads the scorers with 24 points, four touchdowns and leads in kickoff return yardage with an average runback of 23.2 yards on five trips.

Fiveash, little All-America candidate, was named "Florida College Back of the Week" following his 52-minute all-star performance against Miami.



Foley
. . . He can go too

However, Fiveash receives plenty of ball-carrying aid from halfbacks Billy Graham and Stan Dobosz. Graham, hard-running Bogalusa (La.) player, is second in rushing with a net gain of 114 yards on 29 carries. Dobosz, leading ground gainer in 1952, is third in the rushing with 102 yards gained on 18 carries and two TDs.

Physically, FSU figures to be in its best shape since the start of the season Only Joe Holt who reinjured his ailing ankle earlier this week is on the negative side. However, he is slated for spot duty.

Here are the probable starting lineups:

	FSU	Pos.	VMI
	Taylor	LE	Byrd	215
225	Makawieck	LT	Miller	212
195	Jacobs	LG	Siler	193

Stand By To Squeal, Girls; Derby's Coming

By PETE NIMKOFF

Stand by, you crazy, mixed-up Sorority Sisters!

Be ready to compete with shrills and squeals on Saturday, November 7th, in the fourth annual Sigma Chi Derby.

Initiated in 1938 at the University of Georgia, this Sig Derby Day has spread throughout the nation. Most of Sigma Chi's 121 chapters now sponsor this nonprofit (gosh, we lose money) affair.

In the 1950 and '51 Derbies here, Kappa Alpha Theta walked —staggered—off with top honors. Last year Gamma Phi Beta was the victor. This year as always, the race is w-i-d-e open

Now, all this confusion will take place on the girls' hockey field (where else?) Of course, it is approved by the administration

A typical Derby Weekend includes a party and dance and informal festivities at the Fraternity House

And a typical hectic Saturday afternoon includes events like these, released by Chairman Jerome Collier Jones:

Change-Clothes race, Jug (Head) Filling, Hezzz Poppin,' Obstacle Course Race (by way of Lake Bradford), and a secret event known not even to the chairman.

Individual trophies will be presented to the sorority victorious in each event Grander trophies will go to the first three place winners.

There's no admission charge Any concession profit will be donated to the Campus Chest. And everyone — Greek, non - Greek even Subversive—is cordially invited to attend as the guests of Sigma Chi.

Marching Chiefs Featured In Saturday Performance

Florida State University's Marching Chiefs will make their first appearance in three weeks at the Doak Campbell Stadium tomorrow. Director Manley R. Whitcomb announced that the three-week layoff had been used to enlarge the band and rehearse routines. The Marching Chiefs, which numbered about 80 pieces in previous years, fielded 110 pieces for the first game of the season. The musical aggregation which will entertain fans at the VMI game will total 121.

Before game, the Marching Chiefs will perform their traditional entrance and Prof. Robert Braunagel will conduct the band in Alexander's March, The Southerner and The Star Spangled Banner. The national anthem will be performed in total darkness with the flag spotlighted, and skyrockets will add a touch of realism to "the rockets red glare" Since this is the last night game of the season it is also the last opportunity for fans to enjoy this presentation.

IN HONOR OF the VMI Cadets, the show will be a salute to soldiers. A formation of a soldier carrying a gun will be marched down the field to "Something About a Soldier" Ed Franklin and Richard Puckett, "The Flying Seminoles" will be featured in a routine dedicated to "The Man Who Wouldn't Look At Ava Gardner" and the United States Marine Corps will be saluted with a tableau of the raising of the flag at Iwo Jima The Air Force receives a salute in the form of a huge bomber formation which is floated down the field. And the climax of the half-time entertainment will be a drill of the "Wooden Soldiers" which features the "Marching Maidens" and is full of surprises to delight fans.

The Marching Maidens, the Flying Seminoles and the Drum Major Richard Mayo will be appearing for the first time in their new uniforms which arrived too late for the first games.

Veterans Administration Tells Of Military Dental Treatment

Only one-time dental treatment will be given to veterans with service-connected dental conditons or disabilities that are not severe enough to rate disability compensation, Veterans Administration announced today VA said the limitation for these non-compensable cases was made under the basic 1933 law that authorizes the Administrator of Veterans Affairs to provide such medical surgical or dental service as is "reasonably necessary" for diseases or injuries incurred or aggravated in line of duty in the active military or naval service

The limitation, the VA went on, does not apply to veterans receiving disability compensation for service-connected dental conditions or disabilities, nor does it apply to those veterans who require treatment for dental conditons, whether or not service-connected, which are medically found to be aggravating another service-connected disability

ALL VETERANS whose treatment for non-compensable dental conditions or disabilities already has been completed will not be eligible for further treatment of those conditions or disabilities The one-time treatment for non-compensable cases will prevail unless the tretament is found to be unacceptable "within the limitations of good professional standards," or the veteran is found eligible under one or more of the other dental benefits classifications

An exception is made for former prisoners of war who will receive as many dental treatments as are required to take care of disabilities found to have been caused by their imprisonment

THE ONE-TIME treatment for non-compensable service - connected cases may be provided by VA dental clinics, or VA may authorize participating fee-basis dentists to provide it.

Graduate Students Hold Weekly Meets

By ROXANNE SARLO

In order to get graduate students at Florida State University to know the work being done here in the different fields of study so they may profit by it in their own field, the Graduate class of FSU holds weekly luncheons every Thursday from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Seminole Club.

Graduate Students working in everything from education to zoology make up the Graduate Class here which numbers roughly 817 students Club members working for both master's and doctor's degrees, it is hoped, will get to know more about each other at these dutch-treat lunches.

EACH WEEK speakers from various departments, students or faculty members, appear at the luncheons to discuss a subject dealing with a special department. In this way the graduate student is made aware of the resources that are open to him at Florida State University.

At these luncheons the graduate student will hear speakers and talk to people from all the departments; thus the biologist will learn something of interest in his work from the chemist. Through the trials and tribulations of study all the students will be brought together, developing friendships that will aid them in their work, said a Graduate Class spokesman.

IF ANYONE is interested in speaking on a subject concerning their field of study, he will be welcome to speak at the luncheon and should get in touch with Rhoda Letton.

FSU Organizations Plan Divers Projects To Help Meet Goal

By LONA COCHRAN

Campus Chest is progressing at a terrific speed all over campus. There are very few organizations, large or small, who have failed to conduct or make plans to conduct some variety of project to benefit the FSU's version of the Community Chest.

The Delta Zeta sorority is sponsoring their annual Shoeshine Stand at their usual rate of 10 cents a shine plus any free-will offerings which may be contributed. Headquarters for the stands are at the corner between the Amber House and Malone's and in front of the University Bookstore.

West Landis plans to sell sandwiches and coffee in their dorm from pushcarts Wednesday and Thursday, November 4 and 5. East Landis has not one, but four projects planned to benefit Campus Chest. At the free movie, which is held in Landis rec room on Monday nights, they will sell pop corn and chocolate fudge. A contest is now going on between the floors to see which will be the first to fill a "penny bottle" on their floor. The pennies will, of course go to Campus Chest. A white elephant sale is also planned for some time this week. To round out the week of projects, East Landis will hold a "game 'tin' party" November 7, at 7:30 in Landis rec room. Coffee.

Engineer Reveals FSU Considering New Face-Lifting

Improvements in parking facilities and University buildings here are coming up for consideration according to the office of Mr. Green, Florida State University Engineer.

Several necessary changes have been already made, the office said. A thermostat controlled heating system has been installed in the Doak S. Campbell stadium dressing rooms, showers and coaches' rooms, they said. The necessity for this heating system has been pointed up, they said, with the coming of the cooler weather.

Steam lines also heat the warehouse annex, the office said.

FSU engineers have also completed new parking spaces for the area around the arts education building and provided for spotlight at the corner of Call and Woodward streets to alleviate the traffic tie-up lately forming at the intersection. The light will go up, they said, as soon as curbstones are placed at the corners.

Plans for the future, the engineer said, include enlargement of the Student Center area. The engineers, he said, plans to glass in the now-open patio off the dine area of the Student Center. This move, he said, will help take care of the large mealtime volume there.

The newly remodeled Lafayette room, now the offices and classrooms for the School of Business and Secretarial Science in the Seminole Dining Hall will soon receive complete air conditioning, the engineer's office said. Plans for this job are well under way to completion, the office added.

Dr. Allen Urges Refresher Courses For Green Reporters

"Most sadly needed on many college newspapers are competent reporters."

The speaker was Dr. Charles Allen, assistant dean of the Medill school at Northwestern University, at the annual meeting of the Association Collegiate Press in Chicago.

He said too many college freshmen, with reportorial experience and little knowledge of their school, are assigned to stories they are incapable of handling. He urged that college editors provide a "short course" for beginning reporters and suggested that more juniors and seniors take on the responsibility of news reporters, rather than "bossing" others of less experience.

A college paper should first be a NEWSpaper and not a medium through which a small clique can raise ned with the school administration," said Dr. Allen.

Harrell, Noted Baritone, Performs Tonight; Tickets Available in Student Bookstore

Mack Harrell, the distinguished Metropolitan Opera baritone will perform tonight at 8:15 in the Leon High School auditorium, as another in the FSU Artist Series.

Tickets are now available to the general public in the FSU Student Center Bookstore Coupon No. 8 from the activities book can be exchanged for a ticket.

His program will include Pergolesi's "Salve Regina," Pouleno's Chansons Gaillardes (jovial songs), Schubert's seven songs from "Winterreise" and a group of American folk songs including four Tennessee Williams Blue Mountain Ballads and Adam and Eve, also the spirituals, "Steal Away" and "Ride on King Jesus."

Harrell made his Metropolitan debut in 1940, and today is starred in baritone roles of the company's major new productions. Last season he was featured in the American premier of Stravinsky's contemporary opera, "The Rake's Progress" He has at his command a repertoire of nearly 30 operas in Italian, French, German and English.

IN ADDITION to making concert tours throughout the country, Harrell has had more engagements as guest soloist with symphony orchestras the past two seasons than any other singer. Each season he is engaged by the orchestral "Big Three," the Boston Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic Symphony.

The singer is Texas born. Scholastically, he is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma City. Musically, he has a rich, natural voice, and is a product of the Julliard School of Music in New York.

HE BEGAN his musical career as a concert violinist, even won a scholarship to study violin with Emanuel Zetlin in Philadelphia. During his three years there he reached the turning point of his life. He fell in love with a violinist, Marjorie Fulton, and after hearing him sing a small solo part in a glee club, she insisted that he study voice.

Today the Harrells number five, and form one of America's happiest and most musical families. Now that the two sons and daughter are older, Marjorie Fulton Harrell has turned professional. She made her Town Hall debut in New York last season, and this season will make her first concert stage appearance with her husband. It is to be a baritone-violin duo. He will not play second fiddle to her.

HARRELL loves music and loves children. His advice to parents of musically gifted children is, "Give them the most and best training possible. The idea that 'genius will out' is nonsense."

Five revisions for paid positions on Student Body activities have been named by Ed James, chairman of the Student Budget Committee, it was announced today. These changes, mostly pay increases, have been recommended, according to James, by the University Senate and a list sent to Dean of Student Welfare Broward Culpepper.

He said recommendation for an increase in Editor-in-chief's salary from $20 to $30 per month has been made, along with a change in the business manager's salary from $15 to $20 per month. Introduction of a new paying job would give the Advertising Manager of the magazine a 10 per cent commission on all paid advertisements.

James said the Faculty Budget Committee is expected to act on the Senate recommendations in the next few days. He said the Budget Committee is hoping for a quick acceptance of the changes.

THE PRESIDENTIAL salary, first of its kind at FSU, was first brought up in the University Senate some weeks ago by Senator Phoebe Jackson and confirmed the other day.

AT CARNEGIE HALL

Student Holley Pinch-Hits For Dohnanyi

Hungarian-born pianist and composer, Dr. Ernst von Dohnanyi, was in a dilemma until he found that one of his special students at Florida State University, Miss Joan Holley, could pinch-hit for him at Carnegie Hall rehearsals.

His problem was that he could not appear in New York and Tallahassee at the same time.

INVITED TO GIVE his "Concerto No 2 in B Minor for Piano and Orchestra" November 6 in Carnegie Hall, Dr. Dohnanyi learned recently that he was expected in New York two weeks before the concert to practice with Leon Barzin, conductor, and the National Symphony Orchestra.

DR. VON DOHNANYI

Dr. Dohnanyi had already agreed to play his "Variations on a Nursery Rhyme" November 2 in Tallahassee at a State Symphony Concert with Dr. Karl Kuersteiner, dean of the Florida State University school of music, conducting. The concert was planned to highlight the Florida State Music Teachers' Convention.

AFTER LONG distance calls to Conductor Barzin in New York and Miss Holley in Miami, who had just returned from a European concert tour, Dr. Dohnanyi had everything arranged.

Miss Holley had learned Dohnanyi's concerto the summer of 1951 while studying under the composer. Although she had never played it in public, a few days of intensive practice under Dr. Dohnanyi in Tallahassee put her in form for the New York rehearsals. She arrived in New York October 23 to begin rehearsals with the orchestra, and Dr. Dohnanyi will take over from her November 4.

DR. DOHNAANYI wrote his Concerto No. 2 without even a piano when he was a refugee in Austria, 1946-47. He first played it in England in 1947 with the London Philharmonic Orchestra, and composer and orchestra repeated the performance several times in different English cities on special request.

In 1948 Dr. Dohnanyi gave his concerto in Detroit, Mich., as its American premiere. He is the only one who has played it in public concert in this country.

MUSIC CRITICS have commented on its three movements becoming "progressively more modern in the use of winds", and are particularly enthusiastic about the flute solo between the second and final movements. They find both piano and orchestra parts "difficult but exciting."

Before returning to FSU after his Carnegie Hall appearances, Dr. Dohnanyi will give a concert in Hartford, Conn. He has been invited by Governor John Davis Lodge to play some of his own compositons November 10 at the executive mansion.

AS COMPENSATION for Miss Holley's rehearsal work on the concerto, Conductor Barzin has invited her to appear with his orchestra as guest piano soloist for both a concert and radio broadcast later in November.

Crenshaw And Gessler Reign Over Annual Sophomore Hop

Miss Marlies Gessler and Bob Crenshaw of Florida State University reigned over the annual Sophomore Hop last Friday night when they were crowned at their class's traditional formal affair.

Miss Gessler, last year's celebrated Homecoming Queen and Crenshaw, member of the FSU football team, were selected by student sophomore votes from among ten girls and the same number of men. Eight runners-up for the title became court members to the "royal" couple. Members of the queen's court were Bebe Bisbee, Sally Hamner, Deane Jackson and June Yates.

MEN OF THE court were Charles Mixon, Jimmy and Charles Inger and Jim Joanos.

Crowning included the processional to the flower-decked, floodlighted thrones in the patio of the Student Center. Dr. Sam Neel, FSU chaplain, performed the coronation ceremony. The royal couple were followed to and from the thrones by their court.

THE SOPHOMORE HOP, the first formal of the year here, was well-attended, according to the dance committee. Sophomores wore formal attire and masks to carry out the theme of a Halloween masquerade ball. The Student Center was appropriately decorated in black and white for the occasion.

Committee chairmen for the evening were Ina Jean Pruitt, Carol Neill and Bill Doxey on Entertainment; Fred Mansfield, Cleanup; Bobby Lou Lester, Charlie Mixon and Cynthia Sweat, Decorations; Nancy Herald, refreshments.

ALSO, RANDY Church and Porky Alford, Hosts; Nancy Vaughn and Mary Catherine Freeman, voting, Arlene Peterson and Dick Bittner were in charge of the court.

Barbara Yost acted as overall chairman of the dance. Miss Yost is also Special Chairman of the Sophomore Class.

Four Polls Open For First Vote From 9 to 6:30

Candidates Present Platforms At Rally Arranged By ODK

The freshman class goes to the polls today to begin the task of naming class officers for the coming year. Runoff elections will be held one week from today's primaries.

A political rally for the freshman class and candidates was sponsored by Omicron Delta Kappa last night in the Music Amphitheater.

POLLING places in today's primary will be located in the Seminole Club lobby, Student Center Bookstore, Westcott, and West Hall. The polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

Members of Sophomore Women's Council will manage the ballot boxes. Bill Stancik secretary of election's yesterday reminded all freshmen that their ID cards must be presented when voting. The card will be punched to avoid double voting.

MEMBERS of Sophomore Men's Council and individuals named by the elections committee will count the votes. The tally will begin at 7 p.m. in 108 Social Welfare Building and will be open to the public. The results will be posted there as soon as they are known and will then be brought over to the student government offices in Longmire.

The purpose of the primary is to limit the field of candidates for the runoffs.

SHOULD A candidate poll a majority of votes in the primary, he will win the office without going through the runoffs. Only two candidates for each individual office may enter the runoffs. These will be the candidates receiving the highest votes in the primary, providing that the office is not filled by a majority vote.

Stancik has announced that, according to the election rules, all campaign materials and posters within 50 feet of the ballot boxes will be removed.

IN A STATEMENT made to the Flambeau yesterday, Stancik commended the work his committee has done. The elections chief said "I wish to announce that I am very pleased with the work the Elections Committee is doing and I wish to dispel any rumors that there has been any irregularities in any of their actions."

Following are the names of freshmen running for office:

PRESIDENT: Jerry Gunderson, George Hill, Dennis Small, Dale Stranathan, and Pete Wimbrow. For Vice Pres.: Ken Brock,

Cheerleaders Plan Team Sendoff Rally

A sendoff rally for the Florida State University football team, sponsored by the FSU cheerleaders will be staged at the Municipal Airport Friday afternoon at 1:15 p.m. Takeoff time for the specially chartered plane that takes the "Fighting Seminoles" to Hattiesburg for the FSU-Mississippi Southern game will be 1:30.

FSU cheerleaders Rene Hall and Tom Watts said they "hope to muster all the spirit possible from the student body and cram it into the 15 minutes before takeoff." They urge all students not having 1 o'clock classes to turn out for the sendoff. Buses will leave from the Westcott bus stop at 1:00 p.m. sharp they said, adding those who don't have cars may use this service.

Campus Chest Represents Students' Only United Drive

As an individual, when one considers helping one person, especially a friend, the task does not seem too great. When the number rises and we are asked to help hundreds, even thousands of people, the task becomes impossible.

But it is not impossible for each and every one of us to be a part of the help that is offered to the countless thousands that are in need. To reach these people, there are agencies and commissions who serve as our representatives and contact these helpless ones and offer help.

These agencies are our representatives to the unfortunate, and their assignment cannot be complete without the little help that each individual gives.

Every little thing sums up and grows in astounding proportions to the point that when figures are released, the amount of money gathered is tremendous.

It is for this reason that the students are being asked to contribute generously to the Campus Chest. The money derived from the drive goes to several of these agencies of mercy.

In donating, the students should bear this in mind: At no other time during the year are they asked to donate. This is the only drive that is allowed on campus.

Secondly, in the past, the goal has never been reached. This is hard to believe, when you consider how much more fortunate students on this campus are than others.

Last, but not least, students should feel a personal alliance when they donate to the Campus Chest.

The largest percentage goes to the World University Service. This service renders world-wide aid to university student the world over, supported solely by American colleges and universities.

Each and everyone of us should stop and think just what we would do under some of the circumstances that some of the students across the seas find themselves in.

Do you think you would go to school if you had no food? No text-books? No living quarters? Medical help? No, but these people, who are slowly but surely rising out of the horrors of a war that did not touch us on our homeland, are striving to learn to help themselves.

The hopes of world peace and lasting friendship among nations depend on the ideas and ideals that the youth of Europe and Asia develop. Education is the one idea that can make the proper leaders in those countries, insuring our prosperity here in America.

No truer words can be spoken. Help them to help themselves. Let us all participate in as many activities for the Campus Chest as we can, and strive to reach that goal, or even pass it.

The goal is $3000. This sounds large, but consider the fact that there are supposedly 6000 students on this campus. This amounts to only approximately fifty cents per person. Everyone can do this in some way or another. Remember, there are others that are not quite as fortunate.

So contribute, and contribute generously, to the Campus Chest. Step right up the stairway of happiness for others.

● NATIONAL VOTES

The political doctors who have their fingers on the national heartbeat are watching closely the outcome of several important elections today.

Naturally they will be looking for "trends," whether or not these exist. The elections will be interesting, however, even though they may not have significance beyond themselves.

In traditionally Democratic New York City, there is a three-way battle on between Bob Wagner, Jr., the Democrat's nominee; Rudolph Halley, candidate of the Liberal Party; and Harold Riegelman, Republican.

Wagner is the popular son of a popular father (author of the pro-labor Wagner act) and is considered to have the greatest strength. However, Halley, the counsel for the Kefauver Committee, showed surprising strength two years ago by winning the City Council presidency as a Liberal Party candidate. Riegelman's only chance seems to lie in the possibility that the Liberal vote, strong in New York City, can split the Democrats sufficiently to boost the Republicans in.

Some eager Democrats are looking for an upset in strongly Republican New Jersey, but their hopes are based less on their own strength than on internal feuding among the opposition. Paul L. Troast and the George Hetfield, Republican candidates for Governor and congressman respectively, are expected to win handily over Democrats Robert B. Meyner and Harrison A. Williams.

Republicans in Virginia are making their strongest bid in many a year by running vigorous Ted Dalton for the govership. Democrats have a weak candidate, Thomas B. Stanley, but the backing of the Byrd machine will probably keep Virginia Democratic.

Other elections to watch are municipal votes in Pittsburg, Cleveland and Little Rock. Democrats will probably stay in office in Pittsburg and Cleveland and may recapture the mayorality in Little Rock, which went Republican for the first time in 50 years two years ago.

All in all, very few upsets are expected, and even if these come, there is little reason to suppose a trend.

● IMPROVEMENT

Complaints are always loud and long when some branch of student government or the administration does something wrong, but when such groups function in harmony for the benefit of the students, we rarely hear anything about it.

So we want to take this opportunity to tell students of some steps that have been taken on their behalf through the cooperation of the Student Traffic Court and the business manager's office.

Buses leaving for West Campus were inconveniently scheduled so that it was impossible to get out of a class on East on the hour and get to West by the next half hour. The result was that students were missing classes or driving in cars, thus aggravating the parking trouble when they returned.

Then Chairman Pinky Nowlin of the Student Traffic Court took the problem to the business manager's office. Within a short time, buses were rescheduled to leave East Campus 10 minutes after the hour and West Campus 20 minutes before the hour. This has meant getting to class on time and a reduction of the number of cars travelling between campuses.

We feel some important conclusions may be drawn from this incident.

First of all, the Student Traffic Court is a lot more than just a dispenser of fines for traffic violators. The court is working diligently on a complex, integrated problem of improving the overall picture of traffic on the campus.

Second, the administration does not have a deaf ear for reasonable requests from the students.

We wish this example of cooperation could only be repeated a hundred times over on other campus matters.

OTHER COLLEGES SAY:

Emory Says NSA, SSA Compatible

Editor's Note: The following editorial from the Emory Wheel was written before the regional meeting of southern schools, in which FSU participated. The points it discusses are still pertinent, however, and we reprint them here.

"Next week representatives from several great Southern universities will meet at Emory to investigate possibilities of forming a student government association of southern schools. Our hope is that this meeting will be fruitful in the ideas it expresses and the interest it arouses, and that out of it will grow a lasting medium for the exchange of information, ideas and problem solutions for student government, student publications and other student activities.

"A natural question to come out of the proposals of this meeting will be the question of membership in the National Student Association, of which Emory is now a member. One of the purposes of NSA is to provide, on a regional level, workshops in areas of student government and publications the primary purpose of this proposed southern association. This appears to be a duplication of purpose, so that membership in one seems an alternative to membership in the other.

"However, because of the weakness of NSA in the South, especially the lack of large university members, workshops in this region have never been effective. This is not the primary value to be derived from continued membership in the national organization.

"The primary value lies, as we said in the editorial on the same issue last week, 'in belonging to a nation-wide group of college students, with all the healthy intermingling of viewpoints such membership implies, and of being able to stand up and say that, when the majority voted for measures that might be considered a bit too liberal for students bred in the southern tradition, the students of Emory University did not, like the Dixiecrats, pick up their marbles and go home.'

"As we see it, continuation of membership in NSA is a question entirely independent of joining in the proposed southern association. Dual membership would nicely fit practical and ideal values together, if such ideal values are to be obtained from NSA. The question is whether NSA is on a firm enough basis in its organization and membership to be worthy of Emory's continued support.

"The proposed southern association is southern in a purely geographical, not sociological sense. The last thing we would condone is Emory leadership in a movement promoting a sectional outlook in opposition to a national one. However, this association is pledged to be non-political in its activities. It is organized for the mutual benefit of student activities, not for the promotion of conservative or reactionary southern social principles. We wish it success."

Four Current Plays Show Merit; Sword Rings Emit from Conradi

Just a quick look at what's going on in the big city this season. . . .

So far six new plays have opened. The general consensus is that we can forego the seeing of both Late Love and The Little Hut without suffering any great loss.

The other four plays hold varying degrees of interest, if the New York critics are to be trusted.

A first play, Take a Giant Step, by Louis Peterson, is about a young Negro and his struggle with adolescence and racial prejudices. Heading its cast are Frederick O'Neal and Louis Gossett.

The adaptation of Calder Willingham's novel, End as a Man, concerns itself with life in a Southern military college. As I remember Mr Willingham's book it carried quite a punch, but one of the sort that is extremely difficult to transfer to the stage. Featured in its cast are Ben Gazzara and Frank M Thomas.

The private institution is also spotlighted in Robert Anderson's play, Tea and Sympathy. This time the story centers on a young man suspected of homosexuality while in residence at a prep school. Superficially speaking, the drama has several things to recommend it. In the first place, Elia Kazan directed it. Also, its cast includes John Kerr as the youth in question and Deborah Kerr who portrays a sympathetic older woman. However, reviewers in general have taken a dim view of the story's plausibility.

Probably the most successful new play is The Teahouse of the August Moon, which John Patrick has adapted from Vern Sneider's novel about the Americanization of Okinawa. David Wayne and John Forsythe are the chief representatives of the two conflicting cultures; Mr. Wayne takes the part of an Okinawan interpreter, and Mr. Forsythe is our compatriot.

So much for Broadway.

Last week approximately 1,000 persons attended, in all, the four nights of Life With Father. A good time was had by all. But if you should walk past Conradi Theatre in the evening now, you would more than likely hear not Father's "damnation," but the clash or swords or the sound of beautiful poetry, for Dr. Lynn E Orr has finally assembled his cast and is now busy whipping the second Speech Department offering, Romeo and Juliet, into shape.

It seems that a tussle with the bard has become an annual affair, since last year the second production was another Shakespearian play, The Taming of the Shrew. "Shrew" was a delight, and almost anyone who saw it will attest to this fact. However, Romeo and Juliet is a more ambitious project. It is a fusion of many things—sharp wit and manly comradeship (as personified in the character of Mercutio); adventure and excitement; young love that is at once passionate, tender, and true.

Romeo and Juliet was last done on Broadway in 1951. The treatment given it pointed up its pageantry and spectacle but in many ways neglected the beauty of its tragic pathos.

Now we will have to wait until December 11 to see just how well Dr Orr and his players are able to handle William Shakespeare's tale of the "starcross'd lovers."

Letters to Editor

Apology

Dear Editor,

"The moving finger writes, and having writ, moves on . . ." All my piety, wit or tears may not cancel what has been said, but by Khayyam, there's nothing to prevent a body from picking up the pen to correct an unintentional error.

In this my "swan song" before I go home because of illness, I prove beyond a doubt that the pen is mightier than the sword, for from my pen last week I wielded a blow to an innocent person whom it was not my intention to hurt.

I am referring to Pete Wimbrow, freshman candidate for president. I wrote quite a fiery "letter to the editor," hitting at a situation which I misunderstood, and that now I am quite willing to retract publicly.

I must rationalize and say that how was I to know that the campaign literature signed by the "committee" had been drawn up as a witty attention-getting scheme long before the upperclass committee in question ever had any contact with the candidate.

In realizing that the coincidence of the situation and the bad connotation of the word "committee" spurred me on to my unthinking error, I stand corrected as to the status of the candidate. It is indeed regrettable that in criticizing the supporters and their "supposed" methods, I injured the candidate, such was not my intention.

I am grateful to Pete for accepting my apologies for my hasty action and for taking the time to explain the situation to me.

I depart from my beloved FSU with grateful memories of all my friends and sincere hopes that my letter did not injure the innocent irreparably.

Last but not least, I have this to say: "I shall return!"

Sincerely
ORCHID ALONSO

Dear Fellow Classmates:

Today is a Red Letter Day in the lives of us, the Freshman Class. It is today that we have the first real opportunity to vote for our class officers for the ensuing year. I realize that we all want to support our school and have the best class ever. To accomplish this aim, we shall have to choose well our Student Body officers. We want to elect those whom we believe to be the best qualified for the positions they will hold. We have many candidates to consider, and I am sure they are all very capable. I hope that we will all look into the platforms of each before we decide who our choices will be.

It is my privilege to be a candidate for the office of Freshman Senator. This office affords many opportunities for representing the interests of the Class. As our government is constructed similarly to that of the National gov-

President

Fellow Freshmen:

As a candidate for Freshman Class President in today's election, I feel that a statement of my purposes and desire to hold this office is appropriate at this time.

It is my belief that a recognition of the honor accompanying this office is one essential qualification. I do recognize this honor—and I recognize my responsibility as a candidate to present to the voters a platform, a basic plan of action which it is my purpose to effect if the students will support me in that plan.

Two important issues on which our freshman class must soon express its opinions are the desirability of FSU joining the National Student Association and the practical benefits of having political parties on this campus.

As the president of the freshmen, I would attempt to secure the voice of the class on these and similar important questions.

Another point that I feel

Morals Depend On Reference Frame

By BRUCE GALPHIN

It's truly surprising how many people in our supposedly enlightened age believe that morals are something unchanging, solid and golden through time. The idea that notions of right and wrong depend on time, place and situation is completely foreign to most people's thinking processes.

TIME MAGAZINE this week carries a story which illustrates the case of morals' depending on situation.

A British soldier has been court-martialed and sentenced to a year's imprisonment for cowardice on the battlefield in Korea. Time made quite a story of it, contrasting the coward's action to that of a hero who won a medal at the same time.

While Soldier H, the hero, was out performing some astounding feat of bravery, Soldier C, the coward, lay cringing in a foxhole. When ordered by an officer to "get up and fight," he trembled, couldn't get up.

There was the clear-cut case: Despicable cowardice versus highly admirable bravery.

Let's stop for a moment, though, and look at the same situation from the frame of reference of an equally prominent set of moral values. Christian philosophy frowns on killing. Is it "right" to make killing glorious and refusal to kill ignominious? From this point of view, no.

Now let's switch to the frame of reference of the psychologist. Soldier C was suffering at the time of his "heinous" act from an uncontrollable fear. The emotion was deep-rooted in his childhood and the whole complex of his personality. (He had, incidently, the mental age of a 12-year-old). He could no more prevent his reaction than a normal person can keep from withdrawing his hand from a hot stove. Why punish him for something natural?

To me the psychologist's explanation is reasonable, but the appended question, while reasonable, does not necessarily follow.

The society as a whole can be said to have a sort of "drive to survive." Society's needs stand above and almost independent of the people in it. Logic does not always have a place in such an arrangement.

Logic, for instance, can explain why a man commits a criminal act, such as burglary, sexual deviation or murder, and logic asks the question, "Why punish him for things for which he is not responsible? Why not rather try to educate and readjust him to fitting into society?"

Society, however, must survive, and if it feels punishment is the only way to stop acts which hurt it or decimate its ranks, then punish it will.

Well, this column was written neither to defend nor to chastise anyone, but I hope that after reading it, people will look differently upon cases of "moral deviations."

LET'S FACE IT

Odd Troubles Plague Every Election

By GENE LAWLER

Some student government offices are not likely to stimulate friendships. The chairmanship of the Traffic Court is one example. The chairmanship of the Elections Committee is another. At the moment one of the most harassed men on campus is the Secretary of Elections, Bill Stancik.

When Bill, undersecretary Bud Rivers, and the four-person Elections Committee started work they knew one thing for certain: that they could depend on the unlikeliest things to happen. At the start, University Honor Court frightened the Committee by hinting the Elections Code might be invalid. Comic relief was supplied by a pair of twins that insisted on running for a single seat in Senate.

All of this is virtually a tradition. Should FSU ever experience a smoothly-run election in which candidates merely filed their declaration and quietly proceeded to go about soliciting votes something would be wrong. To jog a few memories, we offer these now historical examples:

1951 Class Election: Jerry Thomas is disqualified for the office of Chief Justice on constitutional grounds. What happens? Jerry wins on a write-in campaign. What then? University Court rules write-in votes unconstitutional.

1952 Class Election: Five candidates, including Bill Skipper, landslide winner of Senior Class Presidency, are found to be academically deficient following the primary election and disqualified.

1952 Freshman Election: A group of enterprising and still undetected students declare the candidacy of Jeff Davis for President, submit a forged expense estimate for him, distribute posters in his behalf, and write a fiery letter to the Flambeau proclaiming a platform of "anti-damn-Yankeeism." Result? Davis' votes force the election into a run-off. Emory King later immortalized Jeff Davis, eternal freshman, with a series of Smoke Signals stories.

1953 Class Election: Charlie McDaniel and Betty Whitmire contest the run-off for Senior Class Vice-President. The improbable result? A tie.

As though the unlikely isn't enough, some elections problems repeatedly worry the Elections Committee. For instance, the student Constitution specifically requires a student to have a majority of all votes cast in order to be elected to office. But in today's Senate race, with 11 men and 17 women running and only three of each to be elected, who is to know just which candidates have been elected in the primary and which must enter a run-off? It isn't as easy as it looks at first glance.

The most revolutionary solution to the multiple office dilemma was offered by Jimmy Evans last year. A group system, similar to that used in Florida for legislative elections was to be instituted with one Senator (or Court member) elected from each group. The theory was fine, but the Senate didn't like the bill and few people understood it.

Possibly the best solution has been offered by sophomore Senator Gordon Gaster in a bill he gave first reading last Tuesday. Presumably if the bugs are worked out in time its provisions can be applied to today's election.

The brainchild of another sophomore, Bruce Fletcher, this bill institutes a general definition of "majority" as used in the Constitution. According to the bill, a majority of votes is to be determined thusly:

1. Take all the votes cast for the office, found by adding the totals for the individual candidates.

2. Divide this number by one more than the number of vacancies to be filled.

3. Discard any fraction.

4. Add one vote to the quotient.

Any candidate that receives the number of votes calculated above has attained a majority, by definition. Mathematics majors will note that this modified Hare system includes the ordinary definition of a majority as a special case.

Though some may disagree, it appears that Secretary Stancik's problems would be lessened with the passage of a bill similar to this. Of course, only the successful conclusion of Freshman elections will really relieve Stancik of that hunted feeling.

THE SPECTATOR

State, Campus Politics In Review

By WARREN COBB

There have been interesting political developments on both the state and campus level this past week, at one level significant, at the other ludicrous.

On the state scene, several attorneys have advised Acting Governor Johns that according to their interpretation of the Florida Constitution there is no need for a gubernatorial election next Spring. It is their contention that Johns is legally entitled to fill out the entire unexpired term of the late Dan McCarty.

In the meantime, complicating matters, J. Brailey Odham has filed his qualification as a candidate for governor next Spring with Secretary of State Gray's office.

Johns, who was under the impression that an election for the two-year term would be held in 1954, is now anxious to find out if an election is legally unnecessary.

He has indicated that he will call on legal counsel to determine the matter, explaining "These fellows (Odham and other prospective candidates) won't want to run and spend their money if the election isn't legal."

This benign consideration is probably prompted in great measure by Johns' uncertainty as to whether he himself can legally run if an election is held. The Supreme Court has yet to rule on the legality of the pay raise given the governor by the last Legislature, of which Johns was a member. If the court justices determine it valid — and the chances are they will — then Johns is eliminated as a candidate in the next campaign for governor, whether that campaign is in 1954 or 1956.

Is an election due this Spring to decide who will occupy the governor's chair for the last two years of McCarty's term?

The state constitution reads as follows:

"In case of the impeachment of the governor, his removal from office, death, resignation, or inability to discharge his official duties, the powers and duties of governor shall devolve upon the president of the senate for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease; and in case of the impeachment, removal from office, death, resignation, or inability of the president of the senate, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the speaker of the house of representatives. But should there be a general election for members of the legislature during such vacancy, an election for governor to fill the same shall be had at the same time."

A. V. Walton, Palatka, one of the aforementioned attorneys, emphasizes the "for the residue of the term" phrase. He maintains, "There is now no vacancy in the office of governor."

This column disagrees with Walton.

There is a vacancy. The constitution says the "powers and duties of governor shall devolve upon the president of the senate"—not the office itself.

Johns did not take the regular oath of office when he stepped in as acting governor. It was not the oath taken by Dan McCarty but a special one.

In an advisory opinion given to Johns shortly after that time, the Supreme Court stated that he was "acting governor."

Is it not then consistent to say that the office of governor is nominally vacant?

The Florida electorate should be given the right of filling this vacancy at the earliest opportunity.

One thing has been made quite apparent by this scramble: the succession laws of Florida need revision and more definitive interpretation.

If state politics could be classified sublime—which they cannot — then today's column could appropriately be tagged "From the Sublime to the Ridiculous," for campus politics this past week could certainly fulfill the second requisite.

In the first issue of the Flambeau this year there was an editorial welcoming the freshmen which said:

"This is a period of transition for you, the freshmen, a transition from adolescence to the eventual acquisition of maturity."

It would appear that this transition will be a difficult one in some cases.

Apparently proceeding on the well-founded theory that those who can see far outnumber those who can think, the frosh candidates last week launched into FSU politics with posters, cards and letters.

But, unfortunately, some intelligent people do read these advertisements. Aye, there's the rub.

An examination of some of this campaign material makes the observer wonder about the instigator's conception of student I. Q.

If a deluge of cliches and banalities—"I am your candidate, I want to serve you, I am for God, mother, and the Student Body"—serves to win elections, then surely we have some of the future political leaders of the country here on campus.

But it would seem that such evidence should be more indicative of who not to vote for, rather than vice versa.

Candidates for any office should not insult the electorate by substituting gimmicks for goals, platitudes for platforms, sensationalism for sincerity, and enthusiasm for integrity.

It is in poor taste to stage such a campaign. You cannot substitute color for quality. At least, you should not.

Some of the candidates recognized this. Some did not. However, a mature mind can capitalize on past errors and adverse criticism. Now is the time for the beginning of that transition.

Movie Comic Strips Go High-Brow

By DAVID DREIS

Just recently, movie moguls released the dashing expose' that Twentieth Century Fox was beaming its flashlights on a nationally syndicated comic strip and dressing it up in Technicolor, Wide-Screen and Cinemascope. The comic strip is Prince Valiant and the alluring angels sure surprised everyone.

In the past, it was quite a familiar sight to see a comic strip series come to life as the second half of a double feature, but the thought that a comic strip might be the basis of a major film was strictly bloogie. When Fox announced that it also was throwing in some of the biggest stars on the lot, that really opened eyes. BOB WAGNER and DEBRA PAGET are two of the lesser stars in this one.

Of course, if you've ever read Prince Valiant you have a high regard for the artist and writer Harold Foster who has lifted comic strips to a pretty high standing since the days of The Yellow Kid. Each panel in the strip is equal to a painting by some of the country's leading artists.

Naturally, the comic strip idea for movies is not new and Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake made

Seminoles Upset V.M.I. Keydets 12-7

The Sportlight

by Dave Kennedy

Flambeau Sports Editor

The mighty men of FSU and their affable coach are no doubt still in "high spirite," at any rate I think I can safely say the football squad is For last Saturdsy night before a record crowd the Indians dipped into their bag of tricks and came up with some pretty potent brew to scalp VMI 12-7. This was it . . . ths big game . . . the one they had been waitin' and watching for all season. The game got off to a bang-up start as FSU kicked off to the Kaydets.

NUGENT FIRED UP

The usually calm, quiet and collective Tom Nugent was continuously bobbing up and down from his chair on the side line, shouting to his keyed up football players—always having a word of encouragement or praise for the boys coming in off the field. Maybe just a pat on the back, merely to relieve ths tension which hung heavy in the already foggy cold nite air . . . But can you blame him? After all this was the guy, who for four years coached the Kaydets, was at the helm when they gave FSU a 28-7 pasting last year . . . yep—he wanted this one and wanted it bad And what's more be got it [illegible] a 12-7 victory, one that was touched off by the fired up enthusiasm of 44 ball-players, 5 assistant coaches and the entire student body of FSU.

METTS SHINES

Jr Metts, a 170 pound freshman halfback from Sanford, provided ths offensive spark that ignited the Seminoles attack in the second quarter. Metts, just an average guy who had seen only limited action in earlier games got his big chance Saturday night when galloping Bobby Fiveash, State's leading ground-gainer, was put out of commission early in the first quarter.

CREDIT GOES TO BOYS

"The credit goes to the boys and the other coaches who scouted VMI so thorouehly"—Those were the words of Nugent. A happier guy couldn't be found and its pretty safe to assume that a sadder bunch of boys and their coaching staff as ths Kaydets across the field had never been seen. For while the Indians were whooping it up the Kaydete and Company were quietly and forlornly slinking off the field where last year they had been the victors.

MAPP BOTTLED UP

The guy who is seventh in the nation in the rushing department, the 5'11" 183 pound all-Southern halfback of last season was kept pretty much in the "moth-bolls" last Saturday nite The guy who needs a truck to carry all of his recognized accomplishments around with him was literally hog-tied Saturday as ths boys from Florida State could do no wrong.

Mississippi Southern, the Seminoles next opponent were stunned by a mere Memphis State team 27-13 The giant killers, who, a couple of weeks back toppled mighty Alabama took a savage battering from Memphis to skid out of ths nation's unbeaten ranks . . . And Furman took a 7-6 decision from Wofford, the eleven who smacked Stetson with a defeat last week and . . . in case you'vs forgotten, Stetson serves as the oppositinn for our Annual Homecoming game November 20. Well all's well that ends well—Back to the "steady" hum-drum of just winning a ball game and not "the" ball game . . . next week its Southern and as I've said before . . . who knows . . . ??

Junior Metts Sparks Snappy Indian Offense

Seminoles Take Advantage af Fumbles; Mopp Bottled Up By Forward Wall

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

Experts, Drop Dead!

This famous phrase best expresses the reaction to FSU's 12-7 upset victory over Virginia Military Institute Saturday night at Doak S. Campbell Stadium. The Keydets were two touchdown favorites.

The experts failed to predict a fighting, determined Seminole squad. They could not foresee a fumbling Keydet offense which came alive for only one brief stretch of the game.

VMI FUMBLED six times and lost four of them. FSU bobbled the pikskin three times but lost only one of them.

Johnny Mapp, the Keydets' outstanding left halfback, and Nick Servidio, fullback, shone for the losers, while a host of Seminoles contributed to their team's victory.

On the kickoff VMI returned the ball to their 43. In two running plays Servidio picked up 8 to the FSU 48

BOBBY FIVEASH, FSU'S leading ground gainer, was injured tackling Servidio the second time and his place at left was taken by Junior Metts, who played outstandingly the rest of the game.

The play see-sawed back and forth as neither side was able to sustain a drive. Fumbles by VMI cost them two good chances.

THE KEYDETS put FSU in a position from which the Seminoles subsequently scored when Mapp couldn't get a strong hold on a pass from center he intended to punt and had to run almost over to the left boundary line, booting the ball on the run. It went dead on the FSU 45.

Griner got 5 on the trap play. Metts took a handoff from Massey at quarterback and appeared to be on his way to score when Mapp, ths last VMI goal line defender, pulled him down at the VMI eleven. The Seminole war machine was on the march. Graham smacked for three to the 8. Again it was Metts who was entrusted with the Seminole running chores, as Massey handed off to him and he streaked around right end for 8 yards and the first FSU touchdown. Graham's conversion try was blocked by Karl Kliner but the Seminoles led 6-0.

Massey kicked off and Woolwine returned the ball to the VMI 33. Again the Keydet offense fell apart as Woolwine fumbled, and Leonard recovered for FSU on the visitors' 31.

METTS GOT 6 at left tackle but FSU was penalized 15 to the VMI 40. However, the penalty only delayed their second TD as the Seminoles' Massey faded back to pass, saw the way clear at right side and picked up 16 to the VMI 24 Griner picked up a first down for FSU on a 4-yard run at the VMI 20. Metts jaunted 16 yards for another first down to the VMI 3 and a score looked imminent. The desperate Keydets threw Massey back to the five but in quick succession Graham picked up three to the 2, Griner hit right side for 1 more yard, and Graham smacked over right tackle for the remaining yard and the winning touchdown. His point after touchdown try was wide.

Massey kicked off to VMI, but, despite a first down on their 43 ths Keydets were unable to get anywhere as two passes fell incomplete and Woolwine punted 24 yards out at the FSU 31. The first half ended with the Seminoles on their own 28 after two losses by Swantic and a 7-yard run by Holt.

THE KEYDETS came out for the second half a changed ball club. They kicked off to the Seminoles and forced them to quick-kick with the ball third down on the FSU 28. Metts kicked and the ball rolled dead on the VMI 29.

Then the Keydets struck fear deep into the hearts of the Seminole fans as they struck determinedly for a total of six straight first downs.

Woolwine kept the drive going with a 3-yard pick-up to the 10. A wide gap at left guard let Mapp through to the FSU and VMI picked up another first as Servidio bulled 3 to the FSU 2.

MAPP COULD pick up only 1 to the 1 yard stripe, but on the next play Woolwine just made it over for the TD. He added the extra point and the score was 12-7, in favor of FSU.

During the fourth period the Seminoles threatened twice but were unable to score VMI's fullback, Carter, bobbled a handoff on his own 21 and Barber recovered for FSU. But a penalty set the Seminoles back.

VMI, DESPERATE, picked up two first downs to the 46 but failed to gain any more ground. Mapp punted dead on the FSU 20.

The Seminoles couldn't pick up any yardage and lost the ball to VMI, who were penalized five for backfield in motion, couldn't complete a pass, fumbled but recovered, and had another pass blocked by Griner.

THE SEMINOLES threatened again. Dobosz got 4 to the FSU 44 and then 1 to the 45. With only 4 minutes remaining Coach Tom Nugent sent in a new team. Metts quickly got 18 for a first down on the VMI 36. The Seminoles pulled off the guard trap play and made 10 yards from it, Holt carrying the ball. The Seminoles were penalized five yards for offsides. Metts got to the 14 but a clipping penalty set the Seminoles back on the VMI 32. Metts got 1 to the 31 and then Massey kept the ball and smashed for 22 yards to the 6. Graham, off the right tackle on a quick opener got 6 to the VMI 3. Massey chose to keep the ball and was dumped by Bill Ralph for no gain. Metts hit left tackle for 1 to the 2, but time ran out as the Seminoles left the huddle.

But they didn't need the extra touchdown they almost got. They had won. A delirious mob of players swarmed out to carry Coach Tom Nugent off the field on their shoulders.

Metts led the Seminoles in the rushing department with a net gain of 111 yards in 6 carries. In 8 carries Corso made 56 and lost 6.

BRYANT WAS the only Seminole to receive a pass. Corso was the player who threw it.

Servidio led in rushing for the losers and Woolwine in passing. Ralph was the leading pass receiver.

In the press box after the game had ended, Coach Nugent expressed satisfaction with the spirit of his team.

"IN MY OPINION," he said, "the game was won by the determination of our squad aided by a wonderful job of preparation done by the assistant coaches"

He praised assistant coaches Winston Siegfried and Vince Ragunas for their "excellent" scouting of VMI.

Southerners Lose First

Mississippi Southern's giant killers took a savage 27-13 battering from Memphis State to skid out of the nation's unbeaten ranks Saturday night.

It was a stunning upset. The Southerners, whose victims this season include powerful Alabama, were rated a three or four touchdown favorite in pre-game forecasts.

Jim Cole, tailback in Memphis State's single wing, broke open a 13-all tie in the fourth quarter, taking a kickoff and racing 77 yards for a touchdown.

Cagers Begin First Practice; Starters Return

Monday afternoon at the West Campus Gym was the time and scenery of the first basketball practice of the 1953-54 season.

Coach J. K. "Bud" Kennedy will have all five starters of the 1952-53 team back along with two letter winners and a half-dozen reserves. With these returnees and incoming freshmen Coach Kennedy has potentially the best team in FSU's history.

Leading the list of seven returning lettermen is Ham Wernke, who was named to the Helm's Foundation All American team last year while only a sophomore. Wernke was the states leading scorer last year with 468 points in 22 games Other returning lettermen are Jerry Westhafer, James Oler, Duane Gordon, Rich Benson, Gary Wold and Tom Burst. Returning squadmen are Bill Wisner, Tom Dellahan, Tom Cundy, Dick Artmeier.

Coach Kennedy has a fine crop of freshmen to choose from. They include Jim Savage of Ft Lauderdale, Weegy Thompson of Gonzalez, Jimmy Kirby of Tallahassee, Bobby Walts of Jacksonville, Donald Speirs of St. Pete, Bob Williams of Covington, Ind., Bob Ward of Langdale, Ala., Don Alford of Naperville, Ill., Fred Twomey of Gloucester, Mass., and Doug Bindon of Thomasville, Ga.

Everyone is wishing Coach Kennedy and his boys luck in their opening game against Mississippi State of the Southeastern Conference on Dec. 4

Theta Chi's Remain Tops In Touch Football Contest

By TOM CUNDY

The Theta Chi's reign today as the top touch football team at FSU Thursday, in a battle between the two remaining undefeated teams, the Theta Chi's and the Lambda Chi's. The Theta Chi's decisively trounced the Lambda Chi's 12-0 to take over undisputed possesssion of 1st place. They are definitely one of the top outfits in the history of the sport here at FSU. Outstanding for the Theta Chi's were the brilliant passing of Kay Kindred, who completed 14 out of 17 attempts and the receiving of their two big ends, Ralph Blinn and Wally Rigginbottim. To round out their lineup were Jim Prater, Gary Ashley, "Jim Head" Naugle, and the mighty might Glayton Shafer.

Play was so exciting in the game that Ray Krumpo, miniature sized Theta Chi coach fainted and had to be taken to the local infirmary for first aid. (Shades of Frank Leahy) Every one would like to see a recovery? ? ?. . Blood donors should check at the Infirmary.

FOR THE LAMBDA CHI cause big "Dave" Graham and Jack Kezan put forth all their efofrts, to keep their team undefeated, both boys were sensations on both offense and defense.

In another top contest the ATO's and the Phi Delts fought to a 6-6 tie. The ATO's were heavily favored but were held to a tie by this inspired Phi Delt team. Bob Berto scored for the Phis when he intercepted an El Willis pass and scampered 30 yards to score The Taus scored on a pass from El Willis to Tom Scarrett, the play covered 10 yards. Charlie Miner set up the score by passing 30 yards to Scarret on the Phi Delt 10 yard line. The running of mercury footed Bobbie Jones was also a big faction in the Tau offense.

THE LOVELY PHI BETA Phi's turned out in force to see the ATO's in action. A big thrill was given to all the ladies when muscular Bob Adams, ATO halfback had his jersey torn off. "Big Bob was in the process of making one of his beautiful broken field runs

The high scoring Delta Tau Deltas knocked the KA's from the unbeaten ranks by downing them 6-0. The Delts who set a league record the week before by scoring 37 points could do no wrong and downed the KA's decisively. The passing of Ted Angelis and the good all around play of Haywood Taylor, John Pistoni and Mike Sheridan was enough to spell victory.

The KA's tried vainly in the last half to even the score but the combined efforts by John Hunnicutt, Don Hollis, Kingman Brittain, and Gordon Kyle was not enough.

THE SAE'S GOT on the winning road by downing Bob Upton's Pi K A's 31-0. Coach Joe Harris finally got the SAE offense clicking, and they should be rough to handle in their remaining games. Passer Doug Binion and Joe Wheat were the big guns for the winners. Stylish Bob Upton, playing in his Bermuda Walking Shorts and Tom Hall played well for the losers.

The SPE's led by Gay Argo, Oscar Oropisa and Big Bugis Scarboro downed the Kappa Sigma's 8-6 Fred Brown stood out for the losers.

In the final contest of the day, the Pi Kappa Phi's squeezed past the Phi Tau's 2-0 Alan Sunburg and Don Rodriquia were outstanding for the winners. Handsome Ray Jones, Phin Phelps and

Gym Personalities

BOB GUTTING

This weeks gym personality is Florida's own claim to fame. He is Larry Weston of Marianna, Florida, the only Florida boy on the team and, until Benny Wallace came down from GMA, the only southerner.

Larry is a graduate of Marianna High where he began his gymnastic career under the guidance of Leslie Beard, his gym coach.

LARRY WAS CO-CAPTAIN of his high school gym team which gave performances throughout the state as well as competing in AAU and other meets. It was this fact that first brought Larry to FSU. This was during 1949 when the Marianna High gym team came to Tallahassee to perform in the yearly production of "Gymkana." Larry liked what he saw here and after graduation returned to major in Physics.

Larrys gymnastic record goes back to 1948, the year he took first place in the novice tumbling event of the Florida AAU. The following year he entered FSU and competed for the Garnet and Gold the first time during the team's eastern tour of 1950. On this tour Larry entered the tumbling competition against such schools as Duke, Illinois, Annapolis and West Point and managed to maintain a consistent third place.

LARRY NEXT saw action at the '51 Florida AAUs where he copped a second in tumbling. Following this was the National AAU held in Chicago, but all athletes have their bad days and this was Larry's. He was unable to place among the top ten in the tumbling event. This was followed by a trip west to Boulder, Colo., for the National Collegiate meet of '52. Larry was in good shape for this meet but still was unable to break into the top ten category, this time by a very slim margin of one or two points. This was the last meet of te '51-'52 season, but the '53 season saw Weston come back greatly improved to take third in tumbling at the Florida AAUs followed by a close second in tumbling at the Southern Intercollegiat meet at Hattiesburg. He didn't compete in the Georgia AAUs last semester but climaxed the season in competition at the National Collegiate meet at Syracuse, N. Y.

It is still early in the season with the first competition still a long way off but Weston looks might good and should really get out there and bring home the points for the Seminole squad.

a mint from the Blondie series. The late Ralph Byrd played Dick Tracy in three serials and on television besides a full length film on Chester Gould's character a few years back. When Byrd became ill, the highly popularized film series was taken over by Morgan Conway.

Although the previous series needs no introduction, very few people remember the two L'IL ABNER films starring a youthful JOHN HODIAK sine moustache and a stringy, bosomy blonde called MARTHA SCOTT. Abner and Daisy Mae roamed for a while, but the gags wore off away from the artistry of AL CAPP. However the newcomers, Hodiak and Scott, moved up a notch on producers' guns.

There was a big hunt on to find characters who looked like their inked-in personalities and in the thirties the search was on to find a counterpart for Joe Palooka and Knobby Walsh in Palooka. A nobody played Joe in the first epic and a comedian named James Durante played Knobby. The series was discontinued and the comedian decided to strike out to the big time. Seems to me that he made it. Cartoonist Ham Fisher is quite proud of golfer Joe Kirkwood, Jr. playing Palooka and James Gleason playing Knobby in feature films and in a new television series.

Mickey Rooney's father Joe Yule, played Jiggs in the Bringing Up Father series. George McManus really gets a kick out of the likeness. So do the fans.

The GASOLINE ALLEY series is a top notch array of talent running from JIMMY LYDON'S performance of SKEEZIX to SCOTTY BECKETT'S part as CORKY. If FRANK KING isn't proud af these representatives of his drawings, something is wrang.

Superman was first played in serials by Kirk Alyn and followed into a full length movie and teevee series by George Reeves.

Terry and the Pirates and Don Winslow of the Navy serials are making the rounds of video variety with Smilin' Jack starring Tom Brown reappearing at movie theaters. Bat Man, Nyoka and Captain America came out of comic books and were top notch serials, if any serial can be rated as top notch.

Perhaps the best of the comic strip features was the Flash Gordnn series starring Buster Crabbe. First it was two serials, then recently they patched all the "continued at this theater" slugs together and made a double feature program.

Johnny Weismuller put on a shirt and became Jungle Jim. He let Lex Barker have the Tarzan roles.

Yep, comics sure are becoming recognized by movie theaters as big deal and according to Twentieth Century Fox pictures, who rarely lose money on a film [illegible] Prince Valiant will be [illegible] biggest pictures of the [illegible]. The columnist wonders if [illegible] be within the boundaries of Foster's fantasy or will [illegible] just be another clash clung and clip knighthood picture. Put that in Red letters for Marian.

Trainers and handlers for FSU's 16 sororities will throw their charges into frezied competition at 2.00 p m. on the girls hockey field.

WITH STANDARDS held high these Sisters will seek to wrest the first-place trophy from the 1952 victor Gama Phi Beta. Kappa Alpha Theta triumphed in 1951 and '52.

Won't the Brothers look silly if the girls don't show up? Imagine virile he-men competing in a Changes-Clothes Race (faster, girls) and a final event still known not even to the chairman.

INCIDENTALLY, the chairman is Jerome Collier Jones, pre-ministerial student. Look for a wild program.

There will be a parade, with the Sigma Chi Rhythm Band. Traditional black Derlbes will be worn by brothers and pledges, and the girls may vie for them afterward.

CAMPUS DIGNITARIES will grace the proceedings, and trophies too if we can get that one back from the Gama Phi's.

AND IN CONCLUSION—Sorority pledges classes may remain to clean up the field—emtpy coke ? bottles—and administer first aid (Get up Myron, you're all right) . . . At each booth will be pictures of candidates from each sorority, fraternity, and dormitory on campus. Each penny contributed will count as one vote for the respective candidate.

Girl's Sophomore Council will hold their annual faculty auction to benefit Campus Chest tomorrow night at 7 30 in the music amphitheater. Items to be sold are being provided by members of the faculty. These donations consist mostly of home-baked goods, pictures and as a special feature this year, two steak dinners are being donated by Dr Vernon Fox.

Zeta Tau Alpha sorority is supporting the drive with a gala cake-walk tonight at 8:00 around the Westcott fountain. Dick Sinde will act as chief master of ceremonies and will also be the auctioneer for the Chinese Auction which will be held immediately following the cake-walk. Supporters of the Chest will vie for the cakes at 10 cents per walk.

All students are urged by the Campus Chest committee to generously support any or all of these projects.

SENATE

ernment, we know that the Senate has the authority to institute and enforce laws which will benefit the whole Student Body. It is with this thought in mind that I, as well as all the other candidates, am running in this election. I believe that the principle of democracy which allows representation of the people is the one which should be upheld by those upon whom the responsibility is placed. I will try to the best of my ability, to carry out this responsibility to the fullest.

As you go to the polls to vote, remember that it is the power of democracy which is allowing you to exercise this freedom of opinion, and support our school by voting for your choice of candidates. I know that we will have a fine year and I hope to know all of you better as time goes by. I'll see you at the polls.

Sincerely,
DIANE WEATHERFORD

PRESIDENT

should be investigated for the benefit of students, upperclassmen as well as freshmen, concerns the frequent changing of textbooks in various courses. This seems to me an unnecessary expense for students. I have been informed that this practice is not the fault of the University Bookstore, but is determined by the individual instructors.

Perhaps a student expression by our class officers on this matter and others could provide numerous improvements.

One way in which our feelings could be expressed is suggested by the Junior Class project for this year. A panel of eight juniors will, through polls and personal contacts, receive a cross section of the students' thoughts on campus issues. The panel will then analyze the data and present it to the university senate for consideration. This will provide for a closer relationship between the students and their elected officers.

I believe that something on this order might very easily be worked out for the freshman class to aid in voicing our many and varied opinions.

These are my ideas in running for Freshman Class President. I hope that you will find them satisfactory, and I shall appreciate your consideration today.

Sincerely,
DALE STRANAHAN

Sororities Battle For Top Honors In Annual Derby

Sigma Chi Directs Events for Saturday On Hockey Field

Saturday is Derby Day on the Seminole campus.

Sixteen eager sororities will answer the cornet's call to the Colors in the fourth annual running here of the traditional Sigma Chi Derby.

Everyone is invited to attend this non-profit production at 2:00 p.m. on the Green Downes of the girls' hockey field.

GAMMA PHI BETA, the 1952 victor and Kappa Alpha Theta, winner in 1950 and '51, will go to the post with the squealing sisters of 14 other social sororities competing for eight varied trophies.

Derby chairman Jerry Jones today reported all in readiness. A bowery brawl (er, ball) kicks-off the weekend tonight.

A CROSS-CAMPUS parade will precede tomorrow's Derby. In deference to the Campus Chest dance in the evening, no other event is scheduled. Tomorrow's events include a Change-Clothes race, the Obstacle Race, a Jug-Filling contest, Three-Legged race, and a surprise finale.

Members of the administration will be among the guests of Sigma Chi. After the Derby they can seek cover as the sorority sisters vie for the decorated black Derbies now being worn by Sigs on campus.

INITIATED BY the University of Georgia on the Athens campus in 1938, the Derby has been popularized by Sig chapters throughout the nation.

A Sigma Chi coach and sorority trainer have been appointed for each sorority. These are:

Alpha Chi Omega: Nancy Palmer and George Valentine.

Alpha Delta Pi: Martha Razor and George Cornelius.

Alpha Gamma Delta: Scotty Dickinson and Ken MacPike.

Alpha Omicron Pi: Faya Norman and Sandy Sanderson.

Alpha Xi Delta: Patty Blair and Bill Kelly.

Chi Omega: Jane Sisson and Milton Carothers.

Delta Delta Delta: Meredith Glenn and Clint Thomas.

Delta Gamma: Nancy Penrose and Larry Hill.

Delta Zeta: M. J. Parham and John Rooney, and Gamma Phi Beta: Susan Earle and Dick Slade.

Claude Rains Accompanies Own Readings

Claude Rains, distinguished stage, screen, and radio star, will present a program entitled "Great Words with Great Music" November 12 at 8:15 p.m. in the Leon High School Auditorium, one of the attractions for the year's artist series program.

Already well known for his many stage and screen characterizations, Rains is embarking on a new phase of his theatrical career. A one-man show with piano accompaniment for several of his numbers is his new venture.

Innovations will include a varied program of classical favorites from Chaucer to T. S. Eliot. One of the highlights of the program will be the reciting of Tennyson's "Enoch Arden" to music especially written by Richard Strauss for dramatic presentation.

Chaucer's prologue to "Wife of Bath," scenes from Shakespeare's Richard II and Julius Caesar, a poem by Robert Hillyer, T. S. Eliot's "Journey of the Magi" and "Builders of America" with words by Edward Shenton and music by Hari McDonald will be featured by Rains.

This noted performer has been highly successful both in movies and on Broadway and London stage. He made motion picture history starring with Vivien Leigh in the Bernard Shaw film, Caesar and Cleopatra.

Rain's stage successes have included prominent plays both on Broadway and in London. Two of his most memorable portrayals are that of a dynamic counsel for the defense in John Wexley's They Shall Not Die and that of the sensitive and philosophic revolutionary, Raboshov, in Sidney Kingsley's Darknssa at Noon."

Numerous awards and citations have been bestowed upon him for his many fine performances.

FSU students may attend this show by exchanging their number seven coupon for a ticket at the University Book Store, artist series spokesmen announced.

IFC Approves Right of TEPs To Form Here

Inter-Fraternity Council, in a meeting last Wednesday night, granted Jewish fraternity, Tau Epsilon Pi, the right to colonize on the Florida State campus.

According to Bill Suttlemeyer, secretary of IFC, "Requests to organize were submitted by three Jewish frats, however, IFC found it necessary to award the right to colonize to just one frat since there are only 20 Jewish men on campus."

Suttlemeyer further stated, "There were two factors which influenced our decision. One, Tau Epsilon Pi has a strong alumni made up of prominent local business men who have agreed to back the new organization all the way. Two, Tau Epsilon Pi was the only one of the three frats whose representatives made a special trip to FSU to be interviewed by the IFC and the Dean of Men. All in all we felt this to be our wisest choice."

Other activities of the council reveal letter pamphlets being prepared to send to all alumni of the frats. The letter will explain the work of the IFC and it's components and extend Homecoming invitations to the alumni. This program, which is being promoted by IFC, has received enthusiastic cooperation from the administration.

Applications Due By November 15 For Future Waves

Women considering applying for commissions in the Waves must have applications in to the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Washington, D. C., by November 15, it was announced today.

Qualifications require the applicant to be a college graduate between the ages of 21 and 26 years, must be interviewed and submit satisfactory character and employment references and high school and college employment records.

The Bureau said if selected, a girl is sent to Newport, R. I. for 16 weeks indoctrination before being assigned to one of the various administrative positions in a Naval Shore establishment.

This notice, the Bureau said, applies to the next class of Wave officers consisting of 80 women to be selected from colleges throughout the country. Florida State University women wishing to apply, the notice added, must have applications in by November 15. For full information, women should write or see the nearest Naval recruiting station or write to Lt. Helen Horne, Wave procurement officer, Office of Naval Officer Procurement, Post Office Bldg., Macon, Ga.

Groups Interview Students for Jobs

Representatives of two companies will be in the Placement Office next week, according to Dr. G. E. Tully, Director of Vocational Guidance and Placement.

Mrs. Harold C. Beppler, Personnel Consultant of the National Board of the YWCA, will be at that office November 8 and 10 to interview women interested in working with young people after graduation. She is especially interested in talking with those who have majored in social work, religious education, guidance, recreation, social studies, child and family development, and physical education.

Mr. G. S. Kutscher, Personnel Representative for Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, of Hopewell, Virginia, will be at the Placement Office on Thursday, November 12. He will interview chemistry majors on the B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. levels.

Interested persons should contact Mrs. Ruth Nelson in 202 Westcott, Extension 5281, for an appointment to see either of these persons.

Gallery to Offer Exhibition Of Students' Art Contenders

1953-54 Art Students' Exhibition will open to the public at 2 p. m. on Sunday, November 8 at the University Art Gallery.

There will be no special inaugural program then, but on Tuesday, November 10 from 4:30 to 6 p. m. there will be an informal reception in honor of the student exhibitors, at which time the recipients of the four cash awards will be announced.

CASH AWARDS are a new development in the annual exhibition of student work at FSU. The awards this year are made possible through the generosity of an anonymous friend of the university who was eager to stimulate and to encourage outstanding achievement among art students.

"There were no strings attached to the generous gift which makes these substantial cash awards possible," said Dr. Edmund Lawandowski, head of the art department. "The art faculty chose to give equal awards for the best production on each level of student participation. One for the best Freshman example, one for Sophomore, and so on. I think this interpretation was an intelligent one, since the Freshman class is just as important to us and to the future of our country as the Seniors, who have merely the benefit of three additional years of study and development. We are looking for merit rather than technical or other proficiency."

THE STUDENT EXHIBITION, formerly held in May or June, has been scheduled for November so that Homecoming visitors will have an opportunity to see the show, as well as to stimulate discussion and comparison of work among the art students early in the academic year, when much of their study lies ahead.

Work in all areas of art production will be shown: easel paintings in various media, design experiments, fashion illustration and many other types of work. Installation will be in charge of Taizo Miake, graduate assistant, and a staff of graduate and undergraduate students, advised and assisted by art department faculty members.

STUDENTS, university staff members and general public are invited to attend the reception as well as to visit the exhibition at any normal gallery hour between the opening on Sunday and the closing date, Sunday, December 5.

SIGMA ALPHA IOTA

Sigma Alpha Iota, women's music honorary here will hear a talk by Miss Mary Kerley when she visits the group tomorrow through Monday. The speaker was a former student at FSU. The Women's honorary, along with Phi Mu Alpha, their male counterpart, sponsored the reception for the noted opera star, Mack Harrell, Wednesday night after his concert on the Artist Series program.

Chairman States Tuesday Deadline For Float Entries

Deadline for applications to enter a float in the gala Homecoming Parade here November 20 is Tuesday, the 10th at 5 p.m., chairman of the committee Jim Joanos said today. They must be turned in to him at the Sigma Chi House, he added.

Joanos said applications for this year's contest have been mailed to all organizations having floats in last year's competition. He added that those groups planning a float for this year and who have no application can call him at 2-8695 or 3-0472. He noted that, after completed applications have been checked, the entering organization will be sent full information on inspections and the parade formation.

ACCORDING TO Joanos, competition for the yearly trophies for the most beautiful and the most original float will be keen. He said many groups are already well ahead on their planning and warned that those choosing to delay will "find the going tough." Joanos advised all those groups planning to get materials or help from the University Shop to get their orders in immediately.

Assisting Joanos on the float committee are Dr. Florence B. Cole, Dr. William Tait, Mrs. Olive Cross, Miss Nellie Bond Dickinson, Dr. and Mrs. Joe Doggett and Dr. Herbert Lacayo.

ALSO, NANCY VAUGHN, Gordon Gaster, Bert McIntosh, Mary Ann Zeigler, Beverly Lacayo and Wayne Cherry.

Tully Urges Students To Take JMA Test

Dr. Glover E. Tully, director of the Placement office announced this week, "Any graduating student who sees any possibility of applying for government work should take the Junior Management Assistant Examination to be given at this office on December 5. Application for the test must be made here before November 12."

Dr. Tully added "This is the most important test to be given graduating students. The examination will be given by a representative of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Valiani Stars in 'City of Kings' Performance

Al Valiani, restaurant and hotel major and sophomore here, stars in the Broadway play, "City of Kings," opening Sunday night at eight at the Newman House, 458 West College Avenue. Valiani takes the lead role of Martin De Porres, the mulatto son of the white Governor of Panama, who is socially rejected in the white man's world.

The story of "City of Kings" tells how martin humbled himself and, "by going down in humility . . . to the animals, the lepers, the neglected poor, became one of the greatest men in the world."

A "take-off" on the cost of marriage, stealing a peso, and the miracle performed over a throbbing toothache lighten the 7 scene drama with riotous comedy.

AMID SCENES of violence and bitter hatred, the play moves swiftly to a rising climax and subsides during the flood and moving death scene, always bringing tears to the eyes of the audience when Martin, struggling for his last breath, whispers, "Mother of God, take thy unworthy servant home."

Two special performances were given Sunday and Monday night for members of FSU faculty.

AL VALIANI

CLARE DARDIS and Marilyn Gobla portray Ana, the somewhat bitter and resentful mother of Martin. Harry Petry enacts the role of Don Juan De Porres, father of Martin and Governor of Panama.

Kay Ellen Pritchard and Bette Mullins are cast as the governess Isabel.

Others in the cast include Jim Padigan as Gongazlo, Barbara Rynski and Letitia Tambourino as Juana, Annette Straub and Rosemary Hollander as Francisca, Ernest Stevens and Mateo, John Casbergue as Brother Fernando, Tom Day as Father Juan, Lowell Bathesia as Father Francisco, Richard Basila as Brother Cipriano, Sheldonus Musgrove as Brother Alonso, Louis Schlitt as Brother Bernardo, John Pistone and Hans Wagner as Brother Gaspar, Fred Impastato as Father Pedro, Bob Davis as The Viceroy of Peru and William Chavers as the Archbishop of Mexico.

CHAVERS, director of the play, is a Baptist. According to Newman spokesmen, he has spent several weeks attending Mass to better acquaint himself with the Catholic faith. It was also noted

Dr. Finch Joins Science Staff As Associate

Dr. Arthur Finch will arrive from England this week, docking at Tampa, to join the chemistry staff at Florida State University as a research associate and visiting scholar.

Twenty-three years old, he graduated with honors in chemistry at Imperial College, London. In June he received his PhD after working with Professor F. C. Tompkins, well-known inorganic chemist and editor of "Transactions of the Faraday Society."

Dr. Finch's research has dealt with the effect of heat and light on the stability of inorganic and organic salts, also some related work on the ionic conductance of these salts in the solid state.

At FSU Dr Finch will work on a chemistry project sponsored by the office of Naval Reaserch. He will study the behavior of electrolytes in solution, especially the interaction of the ions with the solvent molecules, according to Dr. Ernest Grunwald, FSU professor of chemistry.

Call For Pictures

Students who have not yet turned in their proofs for the Tally Ho class section must do so today. If the proofs are not returned the photographer will choose the picture to be used.

FUN AND FUNCTIONS

Publicity chairmen of all campus social, religious, educational, and recreational activities are invited to submit articles concerning their group's activities to the new publication, Fun and Functions, published weekly by the Student Body Forums Committee. All copy should be double-spaced, typed and turned into the FORUMS BOX at the Alumni Building information desk not later than Friday evening of each week, according to Beverly Lacayo, Forums Chairman.

STEPPING RIGHT UP—So hard she lost her shoe, Campus Chest Chairman Shirley Traxler hammers up another poster boosting the charity drive. Holding a sign advertising tonight's Campus Chest Dance is Pat Baker. Helping are Haywood Taylor and Ken Chadwick.

Traxler Expresses Confidence In Chest Drive; Dance Tonight

Shirley Traxler, co-chairman of Campus Chest, has announced that the results of FSU's only annual charity drive are beginning to roll in to her committee "A full report cannot be made at this time," she said, "but, we feel that progress is being made."

Suwannee Room will be the scene tonight at 8:30 for the Campus Chest Dance, the affair that annually draws crowds from all corners of the campus. Three popular bands, The Raven Quintet, the Collegians and Johnny Bee's Orchestra volunteered their services to furnish music for dancing which will be continuous throughout the evening.

ADMISSION IS 50 cents per person, which will go directly to the Campus Chest Fund. Use of the famous gothic dining hall has been donated free by Miss Anna M Tracy, head dietician here. The dance is informal, and Chest officials issue a special invitation to all to come, enjoy themselves and at the same time contribute to the year's biggest fund-raising campaign.

Sigma Kappa's annual variety show was presented Tuesday night and was according to chairman Ann Gwen, "a great success." Ann went on to explain that although the final receipts of the production have not been tallied, "we are very pleased to report that the money taken in greatly exceeds last year's receipts."

WINNERS OF THE trophies for the best entertainment were Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Sigma Nu fraternity. It may be remembered that these two also won the awards last year. The Thetas were represented by Ina Jean Pruitt who did impersonations; Sigma Nu presented Charlie Singer and Jim Hanks with their uke and guitar Judges for the affair were Dr. George Yost, Mr. Stephen Winters, and Miss Betty Grimm. In addition to the two winners, acts were also presented by eleven other fraternal groups.

Phi Mu sorority netted a total of $50 for Campus Chest at their carnival after the FSU-Keydet game last Saturday night.

THE THIRD ANNUAL Smorgasbord at Ruge Hall this year brought in an attendance of 200 and a contribution of $50.00 to the Chest, which doubled their intake of last year. Seven long tables in the shape of a large U were laden with the traditional smorgasbord food. A large grouper which was caught at St. Marks the day before formed the center piece and a tremendous cornucopia made of bread and filled with fruit added a surprise touch. Two large grecian torches with their clear flames lighted the tables while pine boughs, green bamboo, palms and pyracantha were placed about the room to lend a festive air. Dinner music was provided by a seven-piece student orchestra. Robert Velzy, general chairman this year, was assisted by thirty-two students with the work on food, tickets, publicity, decorations and entertainment.

The Chi Omega sorority has reported that they took in a total of $70 on their carwashing project which was held as usual this year by the group. The cakewalk and Chinese auction which Zeta Tau Alpha sorority held around Westcott fountain last Tuesday night netted a total of $70 for the drive.

ALPHA OMICRON PI sorority, which chose a cookie-selling concession as their project this year, has reported that to date they have collected about $52. They will continue to sell their cookies all over campus for the remainder of this week.

Bryan Hall, which has been selling sandwiches in their dorm for the past week, reported yesterday that they have already reached and surpassed their original goal of a $50 contribution. Their committee chairman, Norma Bolton, has reported that the group has hopes of reaching a final total of $75.

THE SPAGHETTI supper which was held by the Kappa Delta sorority last Wednesday night has been reported as an "almost-sellout." According to a spokesman for the group, "We

Hill's Lead Large In 5-Way Race; Brock Is Veep

Total of 877 Vote As Slate Narrowed For Finals Tuesday

George Hill and Pete Wimbrow, candidates for the office of Freshman class president, will oppose each other in the Tuesday run-offs Hill received a near majority at the primaries, while Wimbrow came in second on the five-man ballot.

Hill polled a total of 420 votes in the balloting, only 18 short of what would have been a majority of the 877 votes cast Wimbrow gathered a total of 178 votes, only 10 more than Jerry Guoderson, another presidential aspirant. Under the present election setup, only two candidates for class president can enter the run-offs.

Dennis Small and Dale Stranahan received little support in their campaigns for president. Small polled 46 and Stranahan 65.

Ken Brock swept into the office of vice-president with a convincing majority of 463, as against 153 for Jane Clardy, 144 for Shirley Morgan and 88 for Jack Pickett.

Pat Smith, with 183 votes, and Jo Ann Taylor, with 140, enter the run-offs for class secretary. Again there was extremely close competition, evidenced by the fact that Barbara Jeffries trailed Miss Taylor by only five votes

In the race for treasurer, Barbara Hughes polled 201 votes and will enter the run-offs against Jane Howard, who gleaned 143. Their runner-up was Nell Davis, who was only 12 votes shy of the total polled by Miss Howard.

Ruth Ann Whittle, with 263 votes, and Adrienne Petrey, with 237, cleanly outdistanced their competition for social chairman and have now only each other to reckon with.

Jimmy Soles showed outstanding strength in the men's Senate race with 342 votes, not enough for a majority, however Other remaining candidates for men's Senate are Tommy Adkinson, who polled 154; David Bachman, 240; Charles Davis, 178; Jack

Debaters Journey To Alabama Meet On Trade Question

Eight students are representing Florida State University at the Annual Alabama discussion conference in Tuscaloosa through tomorrow to consider the question, "Should the United States adopt a policy of free trade?"

Tom Woods has been designated to serve as chairman for the first round of discussion. He will be the student leader of the FSU delegation.

FOUR SOPHOMORE veterans of last year's forensic competition are attending the conference: Tom Lewis, Jennings Rehwinkel, Herb Lacayo and Tom Woods Lacayo and Woods were last year's intramural debate champions and also brought home superior ratings from the Gulf Speech Festival in Hattiesburg, and the Southern Speech Association Congress and Tournament in Greenville, South Carolina.

Other participants include Eugene Lawler, who was a finalist in last year's intramural debate tournament. He also participated in intercollegiate competition last year against Wheaton College at Gainesville, and in the FSU Invitational Tournament. Bill Twyford is a veteran of a year of intercollegiate debate, and 1952-53 member of the FSU Discussion Group. Norma Trippodo is the only freshman representing FSU at the Alabama Conference.

ACCOMPANYING the group to Tuscaloosa will be Edna Hollingsworth, graduate assistant in the Department of Speech, who will also serve as judge.

In last year's conference Katherine Skogstad earned a superior certificate, rating her in the upper five per cent of the 120 participants. Phil Springer rated excellent, ranking in the upper 18 per cent of the participants. In the fall of 1948, when FSU first entered Alabama's Discussion Conference, Paul Curtis ranked first in the entire conference.

ALABAMA'S SENATOR John Sparkman will be the featured speaker at the Conference Banquet. Dr. R. H. Havens, who has twice served as a Marshall Plan Administrator, once for the Scandinavian area, and once for the sterling area, delivered an address to the opening general assembly on the subject of Free Trade.

The conference includes five rounds. Round I will be an analysis of the problem; Round II, a discussion of the formulation of goals; Round III, the discussion of possible solutions; Round IV, further discussion of possible solutions; and Round V, the forming of resolutions by the various panels.

AAUP Discusses Problem Of Vocations, Liberal Arts

The most important decision facing colleges and universities today, that of vocationalism versus the liberal arts, was discussed in last Monday night's meeting of the American Association of University Professors.

From all we have heard, some vital issues were touched on, but we have also heard complaints that too many side issues crept into the discussion and that lack of time caused important points to go unmade.

Of course, one would hardly expect the most important question before higher learning today to be covered thoroughly in an hour's time. Its ramifications are as wide as those of education itself.

The original universities, as organized in the Middle Ages, were devoted entirely to academic inquiry. Few could or did attend, but those few were broadly educated men of great influence in their society.

These learners of the Middle Ages formed corporations, or colleges, of their own. Thus there was no one to say what they could or could not study. A college was a place of free inquiry, and other matters were considered to be personal, outside the realm of the college.

In the United States there has never been such a tradition. Education has always been under the wing of church or state, or at least men prominent in government, religion or business.

In the United States, furthermore, the dominance of the ideal of democracy has brought with it a unique conception in education: that of universal and largely free education. It is in the fulfillment of this demand for universal education that the argument of professionalism versus the liberal arts arises.

Professionalism, or vocationalism, is a fairly nwe concept in education. Behind it is the philosophy that everyone should be provided with an education. Vocationalists feel that a liberal arts, general education is not suited to everyone's needs. That is, they think it is either too difficult or not interesting enough.

Since they are devoted to the precept of universal education, though, they think something should be provided for such people. Thus the movement in recent years to give college degrees for such diverse things as journalism and hotel and restaurant management.

The liberal arts supporters contend that it is nonsense to call vocational training "education." They feel that universal education is a good ideal, but that a broad, general education better prepares students to be citizens in a complex society. Vocations, they contend, should be studied after a college education, not instead of it. Vocational training is a financial drain on an educational institution and it takes valuable time away from students who could use it for important studies.

The whole problem of vocationalism versus liberal arts is immensely important and needs top priority in educational discussions. It is encouraging to see consideration is being given to it.

● POOR TURNOUT

On looking over the number of ballots cast in Tuesday's primaries, we give lukewarm acknowledgements to the freshmen class in toto. Out of 1,571 potential voters, a little over half, or 877 freshmen showed enough interest to cast their choices.

The mountains of posters and campaign literature spread on practically every window, door and available spot on campus far exceeded that of previous years, but it seems that the enthusiasm of the candidates was only slightly rewarded by their fellow freshmen.

Polling places were located in four strategic places over the campus, and were open from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m., giving the freshmen every opportunity to stop for a few minutes to cast his vote.

We feel it would have ben hard to offer freshmen more encouragement to turn out at the polls. Every available medium of communication on campus was used during campiagning. We think the blame for the poor turnout centers elsewhere than around candidates or their publicity agencies.

The campaign, with the exception of one person being disqualified, was a clean, well-run and well-organized affair, free, as far as we are concerned, from any criticism. The Elections Committee deserves commendable credit for their role in this.

It's farthest from our intentions to shame or goad anyone into performing his duty—we shouldn't have to. The college student, whether he be freshman or upperclassman, is looked upon as an intelligent thinker, worthy of responsibility and trust. We leave it up to the individuals themselves, once they are in college, to fulfill their obligations. Voting, more than an obligation, is a privilege. Use it wisely, freshman—and cast your ballot next Tuesday; let's see our expectations of you come true.

'Progressives' Present Big Question In Understanding Korean Episode

By BOB FOLSOM

The Korean war brought only death, heartbreaks and surprises. The charges that the United Nations used germ warfare and subsequent "confessions" by American flyers, the slaying and starvation of American prisoners, the truce negotiations that lagged for so long before an end was achieved, were all parts of a conflict that will be another piece of history.

Perhaps the really dark story of the Korean War is that of the 23 American soldiers who refused repatriation and decided to stay with the Communists. Here were 23 Americans who, when taken to "Indian Village," the demilitarized zone and collecting point for P.W.'s who did not want to come home, renounced democracy with shouts of "Imperialist Yankee," sang the Communist Internationale, and raised clenched fists in the Communist salute.

What made them go over to Communism? Was it ignorance? (Though some may hardly call it this). Were they finally convinced that the only ideology is the Communist ideology? Did it show a cowardly weakness, because in the surroundings it was almost impossible to stay alive except by turning to Communism? These are only a few questions to a problem that will never be entirely answered. The entire story will probably never be known, unless every one of the 23 come back and tell it. And as such, for the time being only from what is on the surface can anything be determined.

It was reported that the 23 Americans were no different than most. Many of them are high-school graduates who come from mostly, middle-income families in different communities and average towns in America. Nearly all are in their 20's and therefore should have a sensible approach towards life. In other words, up to a time, they had been exposed to our way of life as any other 18, 19 or 25-year-old lad.

They went to fight in Korea and among many others were captured. It was different from World War II. In the prison camps the Communist held classes in which they tried to indoctrinate prisoners to their way of thinking. The Communist prisons were horrible places — much suffering went on and many atrocities were committed. It was terrible enough to weigh a man's mind. Some of the Americans were dubbed "progressives" by their fellow prisoners because they sympathized with the Communists in order to get more food, to evade any reprisals the Communists took on prisoners and in other ways.

In this respect, each and every one of the Americans that came back has his own tale to tell. Some of the acts were almost unbelievable. Like the case of the prisoner who would not submit to germ warfare charges, and was made to dig his own grave, was taken before a firing squad and heard the pistols click on empty chambers and he refused to yield.

The 23 Americans turned to Communist beliefs and therefore escaped the sufferings their fellow prisoners were going through. It was not a momentary decision as some—they followed right through to the matter of non-repatriation. They stood up for all the atrocities that were being committed on their fellow men.

One of the 23, Corporal Edward S. Dickenson, has changed his mind and come back to the American side. His story has been well-publicized. The moving pictures show a young and hanosome boy. If you looked closely, you could detect a trace of shame in his eyes. He said he never intended to go to China but wanted to play along in order to expose Communism to the U. S. Government and the world. He added that he believed Americans would be intelligent enough to understand and believe him. The policy of the Pentagon will be to treat him like any other repatriated prisoner.

Like the others he has his own story. It was not an ignominious thing to do, but it was a turning against their country and ideas, and, regardless, until brought out fully, the few or many facts that do exist, weigh against each of the 23 Americans.

Campus Officials Name Miss FSU Contest Deadline

November 11th has been set as the deadline for entries for the Miss Florida State University contest, said contest chairman John Reitsma today.

The contest, which has been sponsored for seven years by the Tally-Ho will feature a "Real Life" selection of the fifteen finalists this year. A panel of judges consisting of six faculty members and the president of the student body will judge the contestants in both formal and beach wear as well as photogenic qualities as revealed in the pictures to be submitted beforehand. These picures should be turned in to the Tally-Ho office by Wednesday, along with entry's name and organization sponsoring her.

So far, ten organizations have turned in a list of their entries making a total of sixty-one entries. There are just five more days for interested groups to make entries. Any group or club on campus may sponsor any number of entries, with the only qualification being that the entry be a student of FSU.

Jane Wyman Stars In 'So Big' Pulitzer Prize - Winning Novel

SO BIG, Warner Brothers' production of Edna Ferber's Pulitzer prize-winning novel, stars Jane Wyman in a role which equals her Johnny Belinda fame.

Supported by Sterling Hayden (Pervus DeJong) and Nancy Olson (Dallas O'Mara), Miss Wyman plays the part of Selina DeJong, covering a period of 18 years in her life.

The picture centers around Selina and her son Dirk, in the moving and dramatic story of a mother gifted in the arts who wants her son to be "so big" in the things she could never attain as a farmer's wife.

Dirk (Steve Forrest) travels the road of life with two women to guide him — his mother and a girl named Paula, who tries to convert him to business.

SO BIG is a story of love on three levels — that of sweetheart, wife, and mother as portrayed by Jane Wyman. It is a story of life, its happiness and its disappointments, a story that is "so big" in the hearts of everyone who reads the book or sees the film.

SO BIG is currently playing at the Florida theatre through Saturday, November 7.

CLARK GABLE is on the roam again. This time he and Ava Gardner are paired in Mogambo, M-G-M's thrilling technicolor drama of an African safari and a triangular love affair.

Needless to say, this is one triangle with many curves. The two "angles" of the triangle are Ava Gardner and an interesting blonde named Grace Kelly.

Sam Zimbalist has done an even better job on Mogambo than he did on "King Solomon's Mines," which he also produced. Gable and Gardner tangle or entangle?? in the heart of Africa, Clark using his guns and Ava her parasol for hunting.

FILMED IN the heart of the elephant and lion country of Kenya the picture has a spectacular background of the wildlife in darkest Africa which has never been filmed before.

MOGAMBO, which translated means "the greatest" is playing at the State Theatre through Tuesday, November 10.

Houston Minute Women Play Patroit

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Every revolutionary change in history has had its countermovement, and characteristically the reaction has been more devastating than the cause.

Just as the French Revolution had its Reign of Terror, so do Communism and the other movements of today have their McCarthyism and "vigilantism."

When overweight, overzealous, and underinformed club women get into the act, it's more than a poor writer can bear not to comment.

In the November 2, 1953, issue of Time magazine, there is a beautiful job of reporting about the Houston hassle. The Houston Post introduced a series of articles on the subject with these remarks: "For a large American city Houston is remarkably free of Communist influences . . . which from all indications, just do not exist in the city . . . (but) a miasmic fear of Communism . . ."

The Post assigned reporter Ralph O'Leary the job of finding who was behind the whispering campaigns and acts of repression of thought and discussion.

Samples of the things the articles were supposed to trace down: "In whispering campaigns, patriotic clergymen, educators and schoolteachers have been denounced as Reds, and meeting halls have been closed to visiting speakers on the ground that they were too 'controversial'." The schools were forced to ban an essay contest on the United Nations.

O'Leary found at the roots of these happenings a group of superpatriotic women who comprised the Houston Chapter of Minute Women, "the most powerful organization of its kind in Houston . . . since the death of the local Ku Klux Klan."

At his first interview, O'Leary was tape-recorded, and the women demanded an FBI agent be present next time. "We're 100 percent pro-American. Are you?" he was asked. None-the-less the Post reporter found quite a bit about the group. They contact each other by a telephone chain system, whereby each one calls five other members. At meetings, they have "no parliamentary procedure, motions from the floor are prohibited, all (offices) are appointed." These tactics are followed, they explain, to prevent their being taken over by Communists, who have even "infiltrated . . . garden clubs."

Other examples of the Minute Women's "thinking": A Quaker committee was refused a meeting hall because the matrons said that "Alger Hiss attended a Quaker meeting." Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University and the first Negro ever to become a member of the present Atlanta Board of Education, was stopped from lecturing at the Methodist Church because he was far too controversial. The "ladies" even printed a report that "troops flying the United Nations flag once took over several American cities in a surprise move, throwing the mayors in jail and locking up the police chiefs."

The Minute Women would be laughable if they did not wield such power in Houston, but unfortunately they and many like them all over the country are substituting ignorant Fascism for Communism. Since the sentiment of the country is so much with them, there's little to be done, but such an excellent job of sober journalism as the Post's is a big help.

ACP ROUNDUP

Battles Of Suppression: 1 Won, 1 Lost

At Southern Methodist University, the SMU Campus won a legal battle from the student council recently.

The council tried but failed to get an injunction to keep the student newspaper from printing "off-the-record" remarks made during open council meetings. The council maintained it should have "the discretionary power to separate extraneous, irrelevant gossip from official decisions."

"The members of the council should not be bound by or criticized for hasty opinions, which are not made in their official capacity," the council's student attorney said.

"When the student council attempts to censor the campus newspaper it is violating one of the Four Freedoms, but more than that, it is beginning the downfall of the Democratic student government we have at SMU today," argued the paper.

Two days after it filed the injunction with the student court, the council adopted another tactic to keep news from the paper. It went into closed session to discuss "unofficial business."

In denying the injunction the court wrote "Whether we rely upon the United States Constitution, the SMU constitution or on our own individual senses of justice and freedom, we must uphold the basic doctrines of freedom of speech and of the press. But these principles can be protected only by recognizing that they do not include the freedom to pry, to invade the privacy of another, to slander, to blaspheme; nor do they imply an absolute right to know all things."

A photograph showing crowded dormitory conditions prompted the dean of men at the University of Maryland to confiscate several thousand copies of the Diamondback, student newspaper.

When Dean Geary Eppley objected to a picture of basement living quarters for 24 women students, he decided to make off with the papers so nobody else could see it.

It wasn't the first censorship attempt at Maryland. According to Elin Lake, Diamondback editor, the administration tried earlier this year to keep the public from knowing that the dean of women received a summons for failing to stop for a school bus that was loading and unloading passengers.

When a reporter from the Baltimore Sun was sent to the Maryland campus to cover the University's censorship activities, he was arrested by a campus policeman and momentarily kept from phoning the story to his paper.

A 26-year-old University of Michigan senior with a long record of honorable air force service has been labeled a "doubtful security risk" and discharged from the Air Force reserve program by a military tribunal in Ann Arbor. His discharge means loss of his reserve commission.

Milo J. Radulovich—who worked on a highly secret project in Greenland when he was on active duty—was not accused of being personally disloyal. Apparent reason for his discharge was his close relationship with his father and sister, both allegedly Communists. His father was charged with reading a Communistic Serbian newspaper and with spreading propaganda. Most of the evidence was kept secret at the hearing.

Radulovich has appealed the ruling to a higher Air Force board. "A bad precedent has been set," he commented. "The Air Force is going to get a lot of men on similar charges."

'Cinderella's' Abound In Show Biz

By DAVID DREIS

Every year thousands of high schools and colleges turn out products of local theatricals who seem destined to be snapped up immediately upon arrival in Hollywood. Every time a girl wins a beauty contest or a talent contest, the backers always seem to look in the future and see this same person copping Academy Award after Academy Award. The sad part of the tale is that rarely the 'winner' wins in Hollywood and its usually the local loser who comes out on top.

For instance, Jeanne Crain is considered by most astute students of female anatomy as a regular 'box on wheels' yet the pretty piece of protoplasm took second place to Miss California in her state's beauty contest. That was the year Miss California became Miss America. The regal one was given a movie contract, but alas, she never quite matched her looks in the emoting department. Jeanne however, did an awful lot of emoting before she got the Fox contract she had desired for so long.

They told Clark Gable that his ears were too big for romantic leads; they told Gary Cooper he was too tall; they kept giving top roles to Norma Shearer while Joan Crawford kept getting dud parts she knew she didn't deserve. These were the ones who didn't win beauty contests, the ones who were told to their face that they didn't stand a chance in Hollywood.

Video versatile Red Buttons was constantly overlooked by the big wigs and all the work he could get as a comedian was that of emcee and social director in the New York Catskill Mountain resorts. He worked the 'borsht circuit' for 17 years before he was 'discovered.' Buttons saw people who had little talent amount to big deals while he was in the same spot. You can imagine how he felt.

Frank LoVecchio kept appearing as a singer in run-down bars year after year while the successful performers went up the ladder of fame and left him on the first rung. Today, there's hardly a singer to match Frankie Laine in record sales.

In the Broadway production of Oklahoma a dancer by the name of Joan McCracken was one of many to get a hoofer role. Then, she tripped in one of the major numbers and was given a probation period of work . . . She made a mistake all right . . . now she holds the female lead in Me and Juliet.

There are many more performers that could be named. You can go back any time in show history and you'll find case after case of the performers who were not considered talented while others, who you probably can't remember, were given the huge buildup. I own several very old movie magazines . . . very few of the 'new stars' or 'finds' can I even recall, yet one can of a low budget film. I can find names which run from Humphrey Bogart to Ray Milland. Someone said, "When fame is so evident, it never works that way."

Sorta makes you wonder about the guy sitting in back of you who has dramatic intentions, but has been given bit parts in local productions, about the girl who can really emote but whose figure is not as good as Marjorie Main, about the guy who's shy about exhibiting his talents to an uninterested crowd, but who can go his own in front of an audience and certainly about the guy who is not a memorizer of Shakespearian lines or passages from noted plays, but is just the guy who's down to earth and puts on no airs. Yeh, if history repeats itself, keep your eye on these people and you may see more for your money.

LET'S FACE IT

Hello, South Pacific;' Bye, Houston!

By GENE LAWLER

We picked up the Tampa Trib this Tuesday and did a double take. There was a picture of Emory King, FSU's former self-conferred professional student, embarking on a voyage around the world in a 55-foot yacht. He expects to arrive at the South Pacific Archipelago of Tuamotu in early spring.

Ah rapture, ah freedom, ah escape from the draft board! We have considered such possibilities, too, when the world seemed beyond redemption. Away with the torments of western civilization, only the honesty of the green-blue sea to contend with.

There is reason for wanting to get away from it all. Shockingly, the U. S. A. could be a lot better place to live in. It is ironic that this is so partly due to the people that profess to love it the most.

For an example of the above we are indepted to the article entitled "The Houston Scare," in the current issue of Time magazine. Houston Post Reporter Ralph O'Leary was assigned to cover an organization called the Minute Women, apparently responsible for "a miasmic fear of Communism" that had permeated Houston.

These 500 ladies took their work seriously. According to the Post, at meetings of the entire group there was "no parliamentary procedure, motions from the floor were prohibited, all officers were appointed." This was to prevent being taken over by the Communists, who have even "infiltrated . . . garden clubs."

Just what do these women do? There is virtually no Communist influence in Houston, according to the Post, but apparently there is still work for a vigilante organization. By means of a well-oiled telephone chain they have been instrumental in:

Getting the deputy Superintendent of Schools removed even though there was never any question of his loyalty. ("Too controversial!")

Preventing Pasadena's ex-Supt. Willard E. Goslin from speaking in Houston. ("A very controversial figure").

Removing "controversial" University of Houston history programs from educational TV broadcasts.

Blocking a meeting of the Quakers' American Friends Service Committee. ("Alger Hiss attended a . . . Quaker meeting.")

Printing and circulating a report that "troops flying the UN flag once took over several American cities in a surprise move, throwing the majors in jail and locking up the police chiefs."

The tragedy of the situation is not the simple injustices done but rather the hysteria and political perversion exhibited. Is "Americanism" best expressed by a creed that confuses "controversy" with Communism, education with brain-washing, that stands for intimidation, intellectual stultification, and virtual thought control? We think not. Yet when reporter O'Leary interviewed the Minute Women he was asked "We're 100% American. Are you?"

It appears Sinclair Lewis sideswiped reality with It Can't Happen Here, in which a fascist dictator is welcomed by America. Somehow that long voyage to the South Pacific is appealing.

Sands' Slants

Flambeau Sports Editor

HATTIESBURG, Miss.—It's homecoming, this city's football team is keyed up more than a bulldog straining on a leash after the neighbor's cat has just been let out and the honor of the Magnolia state is at Stake.

...at's the atmosphere in this Southeastern Mississippi town of ...000 as Florida State University moves in to do battle with Mississippi Southern, conquerer's of mighty Alabama, here tomorrow night.

And that's not all. Coach Pie Vann's Southerner's would rather whip FSU than eat grits for breakfast Sunday morning.

The reason, of course, is that the Mississippians had their honor slightly revoked in last Saturday's tussle with Memphis State. They lost 26-13 and had a nice little unbeaten string snapped. They don't like to lose.

So today as he and his Seminoles are preparing to hop aboard a ... and highwind it here. Tom Nugent probably wishes Vann's ... (they call him Daddy) had run up 40 points last weekend. ... blame him. For he has the task of catching on the ... one of the nation's fastest rising independent football teams. And they have the guns to do it with.

There Never, Never, Never was

On the cover of the Mississippi Southern football brochure, it says "Never . . . Never . . . NEVER . . . There NEVER was a one-... punch like McElroy and Pepper of Mississippi Southern." ...back Hugh Laurin Pepper the jet propelled 195-pound Benton ... Bomber and . . . Fullback Buckey McElroy, the 200-pound bulldozing Black Knight from Monroe, La."

"The most genuinely magnificent pair of ground gaining backs you are likely to see for the rest of your life. And folks around here believe it

We rather suspect that they put on their trousers one leg at a time like the rest of us, but there's no getting around the fact. They're good. Plenty good. Pepper, the most spook-legged of the pair, was named to the United Press Backfield of the Week following Southern's amazing 25-19 upset over Alabama.

Pepper

McElroy

Ask Don Veller. He probably shudders at the thought of him. Hugh Laurin reeled off better than 100 yards from scrimmage in ... half when Southern thrashed the Tribe 50-21 in Tallahassee last season. McElroy didn't even play. He walked up and down the sidelines limping on a bad ankle just as much to say "Wondering if I'll go in ain'tcha."

But both young men will be in there come tomorrow night. ... they? Pepper turned his pesky ankle against Memphis and ... leave the game after ripping off 72 yards in eight carries ... a touchdown. Now, this week, Southern officials have ... shroud of secrecy around the junior ace's status. However ... a pretty safe assumption he'll be in his familiar halfback ... kickoff time.

From The Statistics Chart

Southern's rise to a place of prominence in Dixie independent ...es, parallels that of FSU's in many respects. For it wasn't ... after the war that this Mississippi school ready began to ... itself serious athletically speaking.

The school's now in its 41st academic year, dating back to ... when it was known as Mississippi Normal College. Then it became State Teachers College in 1924 until 1940 when it became known by its present name.

Enrollment jumped from around 300 after the war to well over 2,000 this Fall, which is slightly larger than the enrollments of sister schools Ole Miss and Mississippi State—a generally unknown fact. Included in Southern's future is a 15-year development plan which calls for an eventual student body of over 3,000.

Backing up their colorful football team is an equally colorful 100-piece marching band, headed by Raymond Mannoni of Northwestern and Michigan Rose Bowl fame. They reportably give 100 band scholarships—great many more than the football team. However, they may meet their match in this department when FSU's Marching Chief's strut their stuff here tomorow night.

Southern's Rise is Parallel

You might well tag Jumpin' Junior Metts "Mr. First Down." The 170-pound Sanford freshman has lugged the leather only 16 times, he's ground out 177 yards net rushing for a phenomenal average of 11.1. 111 of those yards came against VMI, of course. But before the Keydet clash his average was better than nine-plus ... so his performance wasn't just a flash in the pan.

The next time the Seminoles cross the goalline they will top the point total run up by last year's squad for the entire season. Nugent's charges now have 99 markers to show for their five Saturdays' work while last year's squad managed to score only 101 points in ten outings.

And the next time Bobby Fiveash reaches pay dirt, he will eclipse Stan Dobosz's point total of 29 for his last season's work. The Fiveasher has 24 already and should be able to shake off the shoulder injury in time to pass that and then some. After Metts's performance the other night, the sidewalk quarterbacks down on the streets are musing over this one: What would it be like with Fiveash and Metts in the same backfield?

FSU Set For Southern Clash

Senior Hall, Magnolia Tied

By ART KENNERLY
Flambeau Intramurals Editor

Last week there were seven undefeated intramural football teams on the loose. This week the undefeated number has dwindled to two. The non-losers are in the dormitory league.

While the fraternities were busy killing each other off, Magnolia Hall and Senior Hall were calculatingly adding subtle power to their teams.

In the past the fraternities have dominated the intramural scene. This year the dormitories are giving the Greeks a race for their money. With an eye on the fraternity - dormitory run-off coming up the first part of December, the dormitories for once seem to know that they have a chance to snake the campus football crown away from the fraternities.

HOW GOOD?

The main worry in the fraternity league is getting a team that's good into the ring with the top dormitory team. As it stands now, Theta Chi, Kappa Alpha, Sigma Phi Epsilon, or Alpha Tau Omega will probably be the king of the fraternity squabble. These four have teams with won 4, lost 1 records. The leading dormitory teams have won 4, lost none records.

On Monday the dormitory contests feature the Pirates and the Rebels, the Mad Hatters and the Penthouse Gang, the Gators and the Air Force, and The Tigers and the Methodists.

Before the rains came, the fraternities were scheduled to spread a little more gridiron gore yesterday. But it was wet, and so this coming Tuesday has some delayed action games on the docket: Lambda Chi Alpha meets Phi Delta Theta, Theta Chi plays Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Alpha is against Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon scraps with Sigma Chi, Pi Kappa Alpha meets Sigma Nu, and Kappa Sigma plays Phi Kappa Tau.

Sandwiched in between football, the farternities have been playing tennis. Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Kappa Alpha at latest official reports were leading in the upper bracket of the quarter finals of the singles. Sigma Chi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Kappa Tau, Kappa Sigma, Delta Tau Delta, Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Nu all are in the loser's bracket and will have a second crack at the leaders. Tennis doubles will not start until after Thanksgiving.

Leave Noon Today For Hattiesburg Tilt

Five Frosh May Be In Seminole Lineup; Pepper, McElroy Ramrod Southerners

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

Florida State University's Seminoles, in the underdog role for the third time in three weeks, are scheduled to arrive here around 4 p.m. today and go through a light workout in preparation for their grid clash with Mississippi Southern tomorrow night at 8 (9 p.m. EST).

It will be a familiar role for Coach Tom Nugent's young charges, who last week pulled a mild upset by rocking VMI 12-7 and will mark the second meeting in the brief grid history of the two rising Dixie independents.

Southern, paced by jet-heeled halfback Hugh Laurin Pepper, handed the Seminoles, then coached by Don Veller, a decisive 50-21 lacing in Tallahassee last season which proved to be the starting point of a disastrous season for the Tribe.

On the other hand, the Mississippians went on to record one of the finest records ever, rolling up 10 wins against a lone defeat.

STRING SNAPPED

Although bounced from the unbeaten ranks, 26-13, by tough Memphis State last week, Southern has piled up another enviable mark this season.

Coach Pie Vann's eleven own in their victory bag, a 25-19 opening upset over mighty Alabama, plus wins over Tampa, Parris Island, S. E. Louisiana, and S. W. Louisiana, the only defeat, of course, came at the hands of Memphis State.

Pepper and fullback Bucky McElroy ramrod the Southern offensive attack. Injuries at one time or another this season has prevented both from being at full steam at the same time, but both are ready for tomorrow night's tilt although Pepper is favoring an ankle injury picked up against Memphis.

However, they aren't the whole show. In quarterback Billy Jarrell, Vann possesses a fine passer and slick ball handler who can lug the leather when needed. Bob Posey and Jim Brashier who alternate at the other halfback post, are both dependable, steady ground-gainers who can go all the way.

Up front, the Southerner's boast a tight forward wall that has held the five opponents to less than 150 yards on the ground per game. When the offense bogged in the 7-0 win over Southeastern Louisiana, the defenders rose to the occasion and saved the day.

BUSY WEEK

With that in mind, the past week in the FSU camps has been a busy one. Nugent, delighted with the showing of freshman surprises, halfback Junior Metts and tackle Bob Barber has combed through his reserves in an effort to uncover new talent.

Metts, who filled in for Bobby Fiveash after the Tribe ace was hurt on the second play of last week's affair with VMI, picked up 11 yards in nine carries while Barber was a tower on defense. Both were named Florida's Lineman and Back of the Week, respectively.

Save for Fiveash, who will be held out due to his bruised shoulder, the Seminoles will enter tomorrow's clash at full strength.

But five freshmen may be in the starting FSU lineup.

The entire right side of the Indian line may be manned by yearlings. The freshmen who'll go up front are Al Pacifico, a steady hand at guard all season, and Bud Leonard, an ex-Mississippi prep standout whose defensive play has been a bright note.

Half of the starting backfield will be comprised of freshmen. Lee Corso, a cofident first-year signal-caller from Miami, is expected to direct FSU's novel 'I' and T-formation offense. And Metts will operate at left half.

The party consisted of games, singing, relay races, halloween stories and refreshments were served. Donna Byl, president of School of Music student body, said that an enjoyable time was had by all.

Junior Chorus Slates Concert In Opperman

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

The Tallahassee Junior Chorus, a group of 4th, 5th and 6th grade students from elementary schools of Tallahassee, will give a concert in Opperman Music Hall November 12.

This group is conducted by Miss Lois L. Schnoor, assistant professor of music education at Florida State University. Miss Schnoor organized the group in 1951.

THE NOV. 12 concert will be sponsored by the Association for Childhood Education, an FSU student organization of future teachers in elementary education. Each year this organization sponsors a series of concerts designed to give children cultural education through music. Miss Ara Andrews is chairman of concerts for the year

Miss Schnoor stated that the chorus will give another concert on Nov. 17 in Opperman Music Hall for the general public. This will be the sixth such concert given by the children since they were organized in 1951. Each year they give a fall and spring concert.

ACCOMPANIST for the chorus is Dorothy Becker, a graduate student in music at FSU. In addition, the chorus will have the assistance of an FSU string quartet at the Nov 17 concert.

The group includes approximately 50 members. Miss Schnoor said that their work is mostly sung in two or three part harmony She added that their concerts include art, folk, and sacred numbers, with particular emphasis on the folk tunes.

Jane Soper exhibited almost equal popularity in the women's Senate race, polling 310 and a berth in the run-offs Other women's Senate candidates remaining are Margaret Ann Ballinger, 145, Carolyn Close, 184, Caryl James, 192; Jo Jones, 249, and Nancy Lee Young, 141.

The closest runners-up were the Patten twins, who earlier had insisted upon running for a single seat in Senate. However, their supporters seem to favor two seats—one twin polled three more votes than the other

Rumors were rife, after the election results were in, that Pete Wimbrow would withdraw from the race in deference to George Hill's much larger vote. In a statement to the Flambeau Wimbrow emphatically denied the rumors and stated definitely that he is still in.

"I am certainly in the race all the way," he insisted "Winning this election means a lot to me in that it would give me a chance to serve the freshman class."

Polling places and poll hours in Tuesday's final election will be the same as in the primary. Precincts will be located at West Hall, Westcott lower lobby, Student Center Bookstore and the Seminole Club lobby The polls will be open from 9 a m to 6 30 p.m., and will be manned by members of Sophomore Council. These election workers will not allow one to vote until his ID card is presented.

Bill Stancik, secretary of student body elections, commended the work of his assistants in the primaries. Commented Stancik "I am pleased with the good work done by Sophomore Men's Council, Sophomore Women's Council and other assistants in the primary electionss."

Freshman officers will be installed on Nov. 12 at 8 p.m. in the Opperman Music Hall.

Milton Carothers, president of the Student Government, announced that the meeting is compulsory for all freshmen. It will be a brief ceremony sponsored by Garnet Key

Service Group Plans Convention At FSU

In preparation for an Alpha Phi Omega Florida convention in Tallahassee next semester, the Iota Rho chapter of the national service fraternity will send President Bert McIntosh and Vice President David Dreis to the Gainesville campus tomorrow to discuss plans with the University of Florida's chapter.

This is the second time the local chapter has sent these two to a university to personally invite the college to the convention. The two officers went to the University of Miami last Sept. 25.

"THIS WILL be the first annual convention APO of Florida has had and we're looking forward to having a successful arrangement so that the convention can be held at a different campus each year," said President McIntosh.

"One of the main purposes of the convention," commented Vice President Dreis, "will be the planning of a new chapter of APO at Stetson University. We hope that every college and university in the state will soon have a chapter of our national service honorary."

SO FAR, the University of Florida, the University of Miami, Florida State University and Florida A&M have chapters of the group. The Gainesville campus was first to organize and the Coral Gables school was next. FSU's charter was adopted in 1949 and they were instrumental in starting the Rattler chapter.

"We've found," added McIntosh, "that we can learn a lot from other colleges and already we are knee deep in plans for an annual 'Ugliest Man on Campus,' contest." The contest originated at Georgia Tech and has spread to almost every campus in the country. Alpha Phi Omega sponsors it at Florida and Miami and another club has it at Stetson The officers added that as soon as plans are complete, the entrance requirements will be announced.

THE LONDON - BORN actor, world famous for his many portrayals on the screen and stage, is embarking on a new phase in his versatile career. A one-man show with piano accompaniment for several of his numbers is his new venture.

The program, Words and Music, will be in six parts, ranging in selection from classical to contemporary times. One of the highlights of the evening will be the reciting of Tennyson's Enoch Arden to music especially written by Richard Strauss for dramatic presentation.

AMONG the numbers to be presented by Rains are scenes from Shakespeare's Richard II and Julius Caesar, excerpts from Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, April Morning, a poem by Robert Hillyer and On the Harmfulness of Tobacco by Anton Tchekhov. Jack Maxin will be featured on the piano.

In recent years, Rains' preeminence and distinction on the American stage was attested by the winning, in a single season, six of the year's most important awards for his performance in the dramatization of Arthur Koestler's Darkness at Noon. Among the awards were: Best Actor of the 1950-51 season New York Drama Critics Annual Poll and Antoinette Perry Award from the American Theare Wing. Its leading role is one of the most taxing ever written, a role in which the leading actor never leaves the stage throughout three different acts.

IN HOLLYWOOD, Rains has had featured roles in half a hundred photoplays, since his first 'appearance' in the title role of The Invisible Man. He was nominated for an Academy Award for his screen performances in Mr. Smith Goes to Washington, Casablanca, Mr. Skeffington and Notorious. His next movie, produced in England, will be released later this year.

Third in a series of presentations under the auspices of FSU Artist Series Program, tickets may be obtained at the University Book Store in exchange for No 7 coupon, an artist series spokesman announced today.

Bain of the FSU history department will speak on "The New Outlook for Indo-China" tonight at 8 o'clock in the Longmire auditorium. Mr. Bain came to Tallahassee this fall from Washington, where he was a specialist on Indo-Chinese affairs in the Office of Naval Intelligence. He is the author of a book and several articles on the Far East, is now writing a history of Indo-China, and has taught Far Eastern history in three other universities. His academic experience has been augmented by 10 years of varied service in the Navy. This year he is replacing Dr. George A. Lensen, who is now doing research in Japan on a Fulbright fellowship.

Professors Present Research Papers At Historical Meet

Two of FSU's history professors are to give research papers at the meeting of the Southern Historical Association in Jacksonville November 12, 13 and 14

Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan will give a paper on "The State Agricultural Fairs in ante-Bellum Alabama,' and Dr. Victor S. Mamatey will give a paper on "The Place of the German Satellites in Woodrow Wilson's Psychological Warfare in 1817-1918."

THE ASSOCIATION was organized in Atlanta, Georgia in 1933 and meets annually in cities and colleges over the South. Dr. Kathryn Abbey Hannah, formerly head of the FSU history department, is president of the association.

Dr. Jordan's paper, "The State Agricultural Fairs in ante-Bellum Alabama," is a discussion of the economical importance of the state fairs in Alabama since 1850. Dr. Jordan will point out how the state fairs show that Alabama is not just a cotton state but also is much interested in diversified farming, and that the South as a whole practiced balancing agriculture before 1950.

DR. MAMATEY'S paper on "The Place of the German Satellites in Woodrow Wilson's Psychological Warfare in 1917 and 1918," is a comparison of psychological warfare during World War I, World War II and the present "cold war."

Other faculty members planning to attend the meeting are. Dr. William P. Randal of the English department who will preside at one of the sessions on American studies, Dr. Charles S. Davis, dean of the Arts and Science college, who is on the Six men were initiated into the tap class of Gold Key, men's honorary leadership fraternity Sunday evening at 5 at ceremonies in Longmire Building, President Paul Soraparu said today.

Tapped were Bob Canada, Colin English, Duane Gordon, Pete Nimkoff and Tom Simmons Chris Young, unable to attend the ceremony, will be tapped at special ceremonies later.

FOLLOWING CEREMONIES first tap meeting was held to discuss projects required of all initiates. Endeavors will include naming campus streets, placing of student mail pickup stations around East Campus, bulletin boards placed in strategic areas and many others suggested by the new taps.

Gold Key members attending the ceremony were President Soraparu, Vice-president Al Pierce, Secretary Pinky Nowlin, Treasurer Bob Foley, John Howard and Milton Carothers. Gene Lawler, also a member of the honorary, was not present.

GOLD KEY TWICE a year honors outstanding student leaders by inviting them into the organization. Founded on the basis of leadership, scholarship and service to the University community, the group conducts Fall and Spring initiations, selecting from undergraduates on campus those men who measure up to its standards. Gold Key's counterpart, Garnet Key, also follows a similar routine, cosponsoring with Gold Key the annual Garnet-Gold Key Banquet at Homecoming.

The men's group also is in charge of the Homecoming Dance annually and plans are well under way, according to Soraparu for the big event of the Fall season.

Workshop Set By Counselors Starting Friday

Emphasizing "Counseling Trends," the fourth annual workshop of the Florida Association of Deans and Counselors will be held November 13-14 at Florida State University.

Distinguished educators from all over the state will take part in the two-day workshop, including representatives from the universities, colleges and high schools, as well as the state department of education.

Dr Nicholas Hobbs of the George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn., will be the principal out-of-state speaker. He is professor of educational psychology and head of the division of guidance and human development.

His special interests in psychology are in counseling, group and individual psychotherapy, personality theory and clinical psychology.

During World War II, Dr. Hobbs was a major in the Army Air Forces. He is now chairman of the Council on Psychological Resources in the South, Southern Regional Education Board, and also chairman of the American Psychological Association's advisory committee on state legislation.

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of FSU, will make a welcoming address to the delegates.

Danahy Calls Training Meet For Operators

A training period in preparation for students who wish to obtain third-class radio engineer's licenses for the campus station will begin with a meeting at 5 p.m. tomorrow in Room 404, Alumni Building, Chief Engineer John Danahy announced today.

All students who were engineers with WFSU and all students who want to participate in engineering are asked to be present at this important meeting

Preparation for the third-class license consists of material prepared by the Federal Communications Commission. The test for this part of the training will be given through FCC sometime in January 1954.

Donahy said, "The second part of the training will be practical in that the students will learn the operation of radio equipment to be used by the station when it goes on the air." This will consist of familiarization with the radio board, tape recordings, live and remote broadcasts, and engineering techniques. Emphasis will be put on tape recordings.

Danahy said he hopes there will be a good turnout for the meeting. "We will need a sizable staff of good engineers for the station when it begins operating."

Grade Reports Travel Homeward Before Turkeytime

Unsatisfactory reports will be mailed to parents and students alike the Wednesday before Thanksgiving holidays, the Office of the Registrar announced today.

Copies will be placed in student mail boxes at the campus post office, while a carbon of the unsatisfactory form will be sent to parents.

Unsatisfactories, the Registrar said, are warning notices given for any student not maintaining a "C" average in any one course. He said they are designed to act as incentives to do better work for the rest of the semester. He noted they are not official grades and should not be treated as such. Instructors have been asked to submit grade reports to the Office of the Registrar by November 20.

'Miss Gymkana' To Be Selected From Among These 16

These sixteen beautiful FSU coeds make up the Court of Honor for this year's "Miss Gymkana" contest. They were chosen for their beauty, graciousness and poise and will appear in the Gymkana production "Seein' Is Believin'" from November 30 to December 5.

Additional criteria for the choice of the queen will be originality and beauty of costume. Each of the finalists are to wear a costume depicting some real or imaginary article that a woman might use to enhance her beauty. This falls in with the theme of the show which is the advertisement of incredible products on TV and radio.

Finalists for the annual Miss Gymkana contest were announced Wednesday. Three Win Out At Sig Derby Held Saturday

Two Wins Firsts; KAT's Are Repeats At Annual Affair

Sigma Chi's Derby Day of 1953 was named a complete success by all concerned including especially the Kappa Deltas, Zeta Tau Alphas and Kappa Alpha Thetas who walked off with trophies for the three top scoring sororities in the race. The first two have never come out on top in past derbies.

Jerry Jones, chairman of the event was also quite pleased with the entire production. He has asked that the Flambeau convey his thanks to all of the competing sororities for their splendid enthusiasm and co-operation and to the judges, Howard "Cooter" Wetherall, professor Dick Baker, and Charlie Booth, for the work which they put into making the event a success.

JIMMY JOANOS, who served as Sigma Chi trainer for the winning team, displayed a wide grin all afternoon as he cheered his group on to victory. His grin rather faded after the trophies were passed out and the KD's expressed their heart-felt thanks for his efforts by tossing him into Westcott fountain.

Events of the afternoon included an obstacle race which involved scooting under a wire while carrying a balloon in one hand and an egg (raw) in the other; a balloon blowing race, which required such effort from the winning girl that she passed out just as her balloon burst; a four-legged race; a flower race, which turned out to be of the flaur variety instead of the more sweet-smelling type; and the traditional "Changing Clothes" race, which required the girls to jump into a set of boys clothes in record time and run across the field dragging a suitcase, at the same time holding up their much-too-large trousers and even-bigger shoes.

HIGHLIGHT OF the afternoon came in the final event which had been kept a strict secret until the time when the representatives of the sixteen sororities were assembled on the field. At that time they were each fitted with eggs (raw again) on their heads, blindfolds over their eyes, and newspaper clubs in their hands;

Ruth Williams Crowned Queen At Reynolds' Harvest Moon

By BETTY BISHOP

The queen's royal court was composed of Diane Clark, Ann Bullock, Adriene Petry, Sylvia White, Shirley Morgan, Shirley Willis, Audrey Medulla, and Beth Parris. Jane Clardy served as maid of honor for Her Majesty, the Queen.

The queen's name was kept secret until the procession was in line and ready to march into the ballroom. The girls were lined up alphabetically; then Ruth Williams and her escort were asked to step to the front of the line.

Later, when asked what she said when she found out that she was queen, Ruth said, "I was so surprised that I don't think I said anything."

The procession marched down the aisle lined with satin ribbon to the palm decked stage which served as a throne. Hostesses for the ball held the ribbon on either side of the aisle. They were Dorothy Rose Matthews, Barbara Evans, Ellen Francisco, Carolyn Sudduth, Jo Anne Taylor, Bonnie Sellers, Dawn Sharp, Debbie Potter, and Helen McLain.

Judy Tait, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Tait, carried the queen's crown in the procession. Dr. Tait, of the physical education department, acted as master of ceremonies.

Dr. A. B. Martin, vice president of Florida State University, placed the crown of autumn colored oak leaves upon the queen's head at 10 p.m.

Immediately following the crowning ceremony, Susan Linebaugh sang "Blue Moon," and "Shine On, Harvest Moon." The Raven Quintet played for the dance.

The queen led the grand march which took the group by the punch bowl where everyone was served. Intermission followed.

During the evening, junior counselor, Nancy Fagen, president of Reynolds, introduced the junior counselors present to the group.

Seven Students Await News About Fulbright Scholarships

Seven ambitious and superior FSU students now await results of their applications for a U. S. government grant for foreign study under the Fulbright Act, according to an announcement by Dr. Albert Leduc, Fulbright Advisor at FSU.

The University Fulbright Committee has evalued their papers and chosen two candidates to compete for state awards. The other candidates are to be judged directly by the National Selection Committee working with the Institute of Internal Education in New York.

SUCCESSFUL candidates will be notified about April that they have a year of graduate study abroad free of cost, even transportation being furnished, Dr. Leduc emphasized.

Candidates and their country of choice are: Milton S. Carothers, United Kingdom; Jean Dewey, France; Nancy Dickinson, United Kingdom; Frank Finnamore, Denmark; Earlynn Grant, United Kingdom; Max Halperen, United Kingdom; and Joan Reitsma, France.

No announcement can be made of relative standing nor of intermediate success, but several of our students have a good chance to win a coveted $2,000 scholarship, according to Dr. Leduc.

THE NEXT YEAR'S competition will open about May, 1954 and close in October. Anyone interested in foreign study under the Fulbright Act should consult Dr. Leduc in the Modern Languages Department.

It was noted that the President's birthday comes on Monday. However, being a busy day in the University, it was decided by the executive committee to move the celebration ahead a day. The Committee urged all seniors to attend the party.

Tom Woods, sophomore, ranked in the top five per cent of the hundred and forty students attending the Eighth Annual Alabama Discussion Conference in Tuscaloosa last weekend.

Bill Twyford received an excellent rating which is given to the next ten per cent highest in the conference. Certificates went to both of these FSU representatives: superior to Woods and excellent to Twyford.

All the others representing FSU—Gene Lawler, Norma Trippoda, Jennings Rehwinkle, Tom Lewis, Katherine Mason, and Herb Lacayo—ranked in the upper third or upper half of all participants, according to Edna Hellingsworth, graduate assistant in the Department of Speech.

The tournament was attended by 18 Colleges and Universities representing 7 southern states. Among those attending the conference were, The University of Florida, University of Alabama, Emory University, Agnus Scott College, University of Tennessee, and Mississippi State.

Students More Pampered Than Wisely Conservative

"U. S. Campus Kids of 1953: Unkiddable and Unbeatable," an article in the November 2 issue of NEWSWEEK magazine, calls attention to a trend of conservatism on the campus which has brought comments from many individuals and other publications.

If we could view the conservatism that pervades American campuses today as a sign of maturity among this generation, then we would be a little happier, but there seems little to support this supposition.

Rather, today's generation seems overly pampered and smugly satisfied. They want quick success and public acceptance. They want security. As the Northwestern coed expressed it: "You want to be popular, so naturally you don't express any screwy ideas. To be popular, you have to conform."

Our generation not only doesn't express any screwy ideas but also doesn't have any ideas . . . screwy or otherwise. They know nothing of the college radicalism of the '20's; they barely know of Nazism, prohibition or egalitarian liberalism. They know of the Korean war through the departure of relatives and friends, but their biggest worry in this direction is one of how to keep out of the draft.

This does not mean that our era is producing straight-laced, psalm-singing puritans.

There is still enthusiasm for such non-intellectual things as football; as NEWSWEEK remarked, there is still enough spark left for students to riot after winning a football game (Iowa). The most daring thing we seem to have been able to do is engineer panty raids. We are not the raccoon-coated, goldfish-swallowing, phonograph record-eating college kids of 30 years ago.

Even in our dating and recreation habits, we of this generation are more conservative. A recent report shows that while drinking is wide-spread, it is not heavy. Dating goes on, but it is a once-a-week affair usually, with a lot of going steady. Necking and petting are much more open nowadays.

However, this conservatism of habits might be admirable in many cases, and it is not this that is bothering the older generation. The real fear about the younger generation is a conservatism in political thought which more nearly amounts to a rejection of thinking about such matters.

"In the midst of their studies," says NEWSWEEK, "collegians gave little thought to politics or international troubles. Most would say they were for the United Nations with varying knowledge of why. Depending on whether they were Republican (Princeton, Georgetown, Northwestern, Vassar) or unpolitical, Democratic, or liberal (Georgia Tech, Howard, and U.C.L.A. respectively), they accepted McCarthyism, although a goodly number in all institutions questioned its methods."

In short, today's students are so busy being "popular" they have lost the crusader's spark of a generation ago. Unfortunately, if there are no dissenters, neither are there leaders or thinkers.

As Dr. Nathan M. Pusey, new president of Harvard, put it, "You are perhaps too wise, too close to those recently burned, to give yourselves quickly to easy enthusiasm. And yet it will be a tragic lack, and a very unwise kind of 'wisdom,' if your generation feels no compelling urge to make the world over after its own heart's desire."

SYSTEM LEGAL

"I pledge myself to uphold the highest standards of honesty, and I refuse to tolerate dishonesty on the part of another."

This honor pledge which each entering student gives his word to uphold is not a momentary matter. It is designed not for digression in the next four years; it is a pledge of the future and progress, something never to be forgotten.

Last spring, there was some dispute as to the legality of the honor code of Florida State. Students who did not know of the final decision have been heard to remark that FSU no longer operates on an honor basis.

This is not true; the honor system has never been retracted for a moment. The discussion of legality last spring was merely a point of red tape which that part of the constitution had not defined clearly. It was later decided not necessary that it be re-routed through this channel, and the question was dropped.

Some students may want to believe that the honor system has been disregarded in order to salve their consciences. Others know that the question of honor, whether it be the code of their university or not, is their responsibility every moment of their lives.

Honor may be sadly lacking in many places of high esteem in the present world, but FSU does not have to be one of them. It is the responsibility of each student of the university to renew the pledge and to build FSU's reputation as one place where honor is sincere and abundant.

ACP ROUNDUP

Signs ‘Beria’ to Loyalty Pledge

A student at North Texas State Teachers College — faced with signing the eighth statement in his college career that he is not a Communist—signed the name of Lavrenty Beria, deposed Russian police boss the other day.

A notary public in the college administration building let it pass without question. The student said he would put the pledge in his scrapbook.

U. S. FAVORED

The most agreeable foreign country to Brazilian students is the United States, according to a newspaper survey there. Of 1,422 students polled, the U.S. got 30 per cent of the votes.

Italy and Switzerland tied for second place with 13 per cent apiece. Eight per cent favored Briton, France, Portugal and Germany. Switzerland was termed the "most civilized" country in the world.

COLD GOLD

Forty German and twenty Danish students are busy digging gold in Lappland to raise money for their national student unions. They had no small difficulty finding a profitable spot to dig that had not been previously claimed.

WORKING HIS WAY?

A student at New York University has discovered a new way to work his way through school. Standing about in Washington Square, he realized he was averaging 80 cents an hour—panhandling.

WHAT'S THE USE?

Bruce Wormald, a Columbia University student, has been having car trouble—for more than two years now.

It began back in 1951, when the engine of his 1936 automobile conked out near New York City's Welfare Island. Unable to get the car started again, Wormald pushed it into a secluded corner and left it parked.

This month he received a warning letter from Welfare Island officials. They wanted him to retrieve his deserted car. So he and a friend went back to the Island and, failing to get the motor running, they pushed the vehicle off a 24-foot cliff and into the ocean.

An alert doctor saw the car being dumped, though, and notified the police. Now the two students are charged with "dumping refuse into New York City waters in violation of the Sanitary Code," and the police are grappling for Wormald's white elephant.

NO VOTE

The dean of Princeton University's graduate school of liberal arts has ruled that all his students must wear academic gowns to dinner.

Students held a meeting and voted to have the order rescinded, but Dean Hugh Taylor said "There are certain things that votes do not decide."

TIES UNBOUND

In an effort to eliminate discrimination, the State University of New York has ordered all fraternities and sororities to break their national connections or disband.

The measure affects 25 nationally affiliated groups at the University's two medical schools and at the nine teachers colleges. The order was made "effective immediately" but a five-year period of grace was granted to enable groups to take care of financial problems that will come up when they break from their national organizations.

State University President William Carlson said fraternities and sororities might all "claim a clean bill of health and declare that the organization does not discriminate and that anyone is eligible for membership. Unfortunately we cannot take these assurances at face value."

CENSORSHIP

For the second straight year the inter-fraternity council at Augusta College, Illinois, has refused to permit a reporter from the Observer to attend its meetings.

The council says it is a private organization, and that as such it has the right to control its publicity. It represents about half of the total male enrollment.

From now on, the Observer says, it will print only fraternity news that is released by the council and it will appear in a small, clearly-labeled "Greeks" section of the paper.

OTHER COLLEGES SAY:

‘Maroon’ Staff Doesn’t Welcome Plan to Return Football to UC

Recent reports in midwestern newspapers have stated that several leading administration members are working to effect a return of inter-collegiate football to the University of Chicago. We frankly admit that these reports have worried us.

. . . Not that we have anything against football. It is a vigorous and entertaining activity for both spectator and participants. But it is not a sport—it is a business, played and managed by professionals. It should be discussed as such.

As a business enterprise football requires huge expenditures for equipment, a good stadium, coaches and (if the team is to be a good one) for players. Spectators must pay the cost. Also, because of the time required for practice, travel and performance, the good football player is seldom a good student. In fact, at most universities the football player is seldom a student—he is merely a 200-plus pound monster in shoulder-pads who will receive a degree in Physical Education for cavorting before 80,000 wildly cheering spectators.

Of course, it is possible to maintain a mediocre team of amateurs who have a high scholastic average. But such a team would not pay because it could not attract spectators or book games with the teams that do.

But this University has a record of excellence on the football field. During the 1920's, Chicago's football teams were second to none in the country. The Maroons of that day were equivalent to anything that Illinois or Michigan State are turning out today. The students of that time are today our most numerous, most effective, most affluent alumni. These are the people who are demanding a return of football. If the game is resurrected, would these alumni be content with a mediocre team? We believe that they would demand and probably get a first-rate team and with it all the evils we know would follow.

We prefer the alternative of no football.

AT THE GALLERY

Diverse Media, Types; Crisp Set Student Honor Show Features

By FRANKLIN ADAMS

The FSU Student Honor Show, an annual representative exhibition of student work from the FSU Department of Art, is showing at the art gallery after its formal opening this evening until December fifth. This is a showing of work by students in all scholastic years from freshmen to graduates, selected for the show by an entrance jury comprised of Art Department faculty. The work shown is of diverse media and types, included are graphics, paintings both in opaque and transparent watercolor and in oils, sculpture, collages, drawings, and advertising design. These are submitted to the entrance jury by individual instructors and are representative of the wide range of work done in different areas of the department.

The show is an excellent cross-section of what is being done in a progressive art department, the faculty of which encourages experimentation among the students in many areas and media of art. For the first time this year the show will offer four twenty-five dollar awards to undergraduate students, one in each scholastic year, whose work has been outstanding for the past year.

Mr. Taizo Miake, of the FSU gallery, has placed the show in a clean-cut setting of black lines and primary colors that form an excellent background for the diverse form of the work shown. The larger paintings and sculpture are placed through the area as accents among the smaller scaled work . . . each placed so that it shows up well against its immediate background.

The setting impresses the visitor with a crispness and simplicity that is required for this type of show. We look forward to Mr. Miake's settings for his own graduate painting show, as well as for the other shows this year, both in the gallery and museum.

Vote

Dear Freshman:

Here it is—another and final day for voting. I want to thank you so much for supporting me last Tuesday and hope you will see fit to put your trust in me again this Tuesday, today. I pledge to you honest, efficient service throughout the year.

You already know my plans, if elected your treasurer, to publish a monthly treasurer's report to inform each of you on our finances. Once again I ask the question, "Won't you BANK ON B-BAR" or Let B-Bar Hughes do your banking?" Thank you.

Sincerely yours for service to the class,
BARBARA HUGHES.

Time Change

Dear Editor,

It seems to me that the installation of freshmen officers could be scheduled at some time other than that of the artist series' presentation of Claude Rains. Many freshmen are interested in artist series and feel resentful at being forced to miss it for the installation, but would enjoy going at another time, possibly earlier on Thursday. Is there any way to change this? Thank you very much.

Ruth Williams

Editor's note. Your problem has been considered already. The time of 8 o'clock stated in Friday's Flambeau was that assigned by the Registrar's office. Those planning the installation had requested 7:30 and a check revealed that the 8 o'clock assignment was merely a clerical error. The ceremony will be brief: you should be able to make the performance in plenty of time. Check today's news story.

Thanks

Dear Fellow Freshmen,

I want to take this opportunity to thank each and every one of you for your support in the election last week. It is my earnest desire to serve you in the Senate, and I sincerely hope that I will have the opportunity to do so.

When the high school State Student Congress met here at F.S.U. this past weekend, I was asked to serve as parliamentarian for the Senate, because of my

Liberal Arts More Suited To Achieve Goals of Learning, Preparing for Life

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Perhaps the hottest issue among faculty members on college campuses throughout the nation is that of the liberal arts versus vocationalism: i.e., whether colleges should continue to emphasize skills and trades to the detriment of a broad survey of general information.

Discussing this issue seems at times to be one of the most fruitless and thankless tasks imaginable, because side issues are always injected, and people take criticism as personal affronts. None-the-less, since the matter is current, important and pressing, I feel it deserves consideration.

I believe it is logically necessary at the outset of such a discussion to make a clear statement of the purpose of a university. A university could be thought of, for instance, as a place essentially devoted to "fun," comradeship and a development of the social graces. It could be defined as a place where a person does as little as possible for four years to prepare himself to make as much as possible afterward.

Some of us old fogies, though, have the feeling that a university should be a place of learning, of preparing oneself for living in a complex society. Accepting this arbitrary but reasonable definition makes it possible to cast out a lot of side issues which becloud the picture of the central argument.

With this definition, for instance, we can answer the contention of vocationalists that multitudes of young Americans need training to prepare them for jobs. We can agree that such training is necessary and indeed a good thing, but that the college by definition is not the place for it. There is much to be said, too, along the line of reasoning which tells us certain things are far better taught in practice than in books . . . that reading about things without having had some practical acquaintance with them makes impossible that process of assimilation and synthesis called learning.

It is also clear that courses in detailed methods and skills interfere with the liberal arts studies by taking a large amount of time away from them. On this campus, for instance, there is already one large school where required major courses are so numerous as to make fulfillment of the general education requirements impossible.

Vocational courses also interfere with liberal arts in the sense that they usually require expensive outlays of equipment, and the money all too often comes out of the arts and sciences funds. Let us take a hypothetical case. Suppose the university wanted to set up a course in printing trades. This would probably mean buying linotypes, presses and other such equipment. The cost would be enormous, and the number of students who would take the course small. If the university had only a certain total budget, such an expense would have a definite adverse effect on the liberal arts.

If, then, vocational courses do interfere with the arts and sciences, the question naturally arises, "Do the liberal arts lend themselves to making the university a place of learning, of preparation for life?"

The criticism is often made that the liberal arts, the "classical" studies, are too stuffy and unrelated to life. I have no doubt but what this criticism is often valid, but I feel the fault lies with the teachers rather than the subject matter. A good teacher in any art or science has something of importance to impart to his students.

If universities are to prepare students for life in a multiphasic, complex society, how better can it do so than by presenting them with a broad, integrated picture of the culture as a whole and letting them see how their particular functions interrelate with the sum?

Furthermore, the actual discipline of gaining knowledge, of learning how to learn, is invaluable to student later on. It sharpens his wits and thus prepares him for learning a specific vocation or trade later on.

This question of liberal arts versus vocationalism is far from being abstract and theoretical. Its importance is being recognized not only by college faculties but by business men and, surprisingly enough, even by the daily press. It deserves more and more consideration.

‘Esther Costello’ Portrays Gullibility

By BOB FOLSOM

"Then, after a moment, raised arms began to appear among the audience, waving cheques and bills. The moving points of white and green sprouted and spread: soon the whole auditorium, from the floor to the highest gallery, was in a solid flutter, like a forest under thickening snow. Beneath the snow were voices clamouring to give. . . The hands with the cheques and bills seemed to be surging towards Mrs. Bannister, bringing hope for the future." This is the last disparaging note in The Story of Esther Costello, (published by Alfred Knopf) the new novel by Nicholas Monsarrat, in which there is no bright hope for the reader after he finished this last paragraph in a novel that portrays to the inch degree the gullibility of humans in today's commercialized, air-traveled age.

Mr. Monsarrat has written a novel quite different from his recent best seller, The Cruel Sea, with a plot as neat and believable, and yet unbelievable, that is bound to leave you with a telling taste in the mouth.

Esther Costello, at ten, is rendered deaf, dumb and blind in an explosion which kills her playmates and small brother. A well-to-do American woman comes to the small Irish village on a sentimental visit, and through the local priest, learns of Esther's plight. She finds Esther living in squalid, almost inhuman conditions, and takes her back to America, to the relief of Esther's poverty-stricken parents.

In Boston, scores of doctors treat Esther but fail to relieve her condition. Mrs. Bannister and Esther learn a touch language, by which they communicate. The newspapers have grabbed the story, and one day two nuns visit Mrs. Bannister and ask her to speak at their convent—and bring Esther.

That was the springboard. From there, the two make public appearances on the stage, radio and elsewhere, inspiring others in the same condition not to despair. Money pours in, a mass hysteria is provoked and their fame spreads. Things are kept on the surface and somewhat ideally until Mrs. Bannister's long-lost and scheming husband shows up and turns it into a racket. Later, Jack Lett, a man with a hungry eye for the dollar, moves in, and Esther Costello becomes a bigger attraction than Hopalong Cassidy. By this time, too, she has blossomed into a beautiful and shapely girl.

At the start of a world tour, Esther regains her lost faculties through a shocking event. This does not alter the Bannisters' money making plans. Mr. Monsarrat's masterful writing carries their tour right to the end. The reporter who first wrote the story on Esther falls in love with her, and the plot takes on a painful edge.

Television is not mentioned, which seems surprising after every other form of medium has been used by the Bannisters to make money; but Mr. Monsarrat wrote his book while serving as Director of the United Kingdom Information office in South Africa, which has no television.

The Story of Esther Costello is a tightly written, narrative book, which does not seem authored by an Englishman. Mr. Monsarrat knows the American public as thoroughly as any American. And in not punishing Mrs. Bannister for her black deeds, he must know Americans get away with it every day.

Crystal - Balling For Academy Awards

By DAVID DREIS

At last Tallahassee is getting some of the probable Academy Award contenders which this column has yapped about since its inception and now we come to lining up all the Oscar nominees as we see them through rose colored glasses.

For best picture awards, this old die-hard will have to admit that a fair crop of celluloids have appeared recently. In the best picture award category, we can see: Lili (MGM, From Here to Eternity (Col.), Caine Mutiny (Col.) Shane (Par), Roman Holiday (Par) Stalag 17 (Par.); Return to Paradise (U-A); A Lion Is In The Streets (WB), Story of Three Loves (MGM); So Big (WB) and Julius Caesar (MGM).

For best actor, the race will be a close one with such stars as: Frank Sinatra (From Here to Eternity); Humphrey Bogart, Van Johnson, Jose Ferer (Caine Mutiny); Alan Ladd, Van Heflin (Shane); Gary Cooper (Return to Paradise); James Cogney (A Lion Is In the Streets); William Holden (Stalag 17); Kirk Douglas (Story of Three Loves); Louis Calhern, James Mason, John Gielgud and Marlon Brando (Julius Caesar).

For best actress: Donna Reed (From Here To Eternity); Jane Wyman (So Big); Audrey Hepburn (Roman Holiday); Leslie Caron (Lili) and Deborah Kerr (From Here To Eternity).

In the music department, Return to Paradise by the team who copped the award last year for "High Noon," Dimitri Tiomkin and Ned Washington, has received the most support on the juke boxes although "Call of the Faraway Hills" (Shane) and "The Story of Three Loves" has got a lot of followers. The latter is no newcomer to the music field, but its effectiveness as background makes it a candidate. Don't rule out Lili's tune, "Hi, Lili, Hi Lo" and Sinatra's number the same name as his picture.

For best color, Shane has the most support at early guesses with Lili, Story of Three Loves, The Band Wagon, Return To Paradise and a few others following close behind.

Every producer is trying to cop this year's award, because every producer seems to have a good entry. Something which has rarely happened in Oscar races. George Stevens, not satisfied with his other Oscars, wants to get one for Shane along with Billy Wilder getting one for Stalag 17 and William Wyler is no piker; he wants one for Roman Holiday. If these boys don't finish, a certainty is Stanley Kramer for The Caine Mutiny. Didn't I say it was wide open? Directing, ditto.

There doesn't seem to be any sure winner in this year's race in any department. All you can do is sit back and take note of the battle for the breaks. Don't rule out any dark-horses in the race. There are no dark horses.

The Academy Awards really create a furor among movie fans because of the many categories to disagree with. When Humphrey Bogart snared the Oscar away from Marlon Brando for his effort in THE AFRICAN QUEEN as compared to Brando's Stanley Kowalski in STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE, you could have heard yells for miles around. One local actor at FSU kept trying to make me believe that the Awards were 'fixed' and they had something against Brando for his 'Bohemian' ways. "Is Bogart a better actor," asked the thesp, "than Brando." The answer he got was, "For his type of roles, yes." This didn't satisfy him and he went off in a quiet rage.

When American In Paris took the best picture award, it was as if the world had come to an end for some. "I can't see how it could beat Detective Story, was the cry of many. No answer would satisfy the dissatisfied.

There are times when everyone is in a form of agreement such as Shirley Booth's Come Back Little Sheba. Newspapers reported that no popular winner has ever been so magnified as Miss Booth.

At any rate, the Awards will be announced in March and the movie companies will now release their best films. It's generally understood that companies release the best of their firm around Oscar time. It's sorta rediculous, but that's the way the schedule works.

Selection Rules

Dear Editor:

In response to a recent letter published in the Flambeau, Garnet Key would like to make clear its position.

A great deal of time and thought is spent in the consideration of new members of Garnet Key. Certainly, any group attempting to recognize others for leadership, spirit and service must have a thorough method of selecting.

To be eligible for consideration for membership in Garnet Key, a girl must be a second-semester sophomore, must have an overall 1.3 average, and must be active in at least two phases of campus life.

Garnet Key has on hand a list of eligible girls. Each girl is considered on the basis of the quality of work and the service rendered in each activity. Information is obtained from residence counselors and personal records.

We make a final selection through a point system and we have found this to be the fairest way over a period of many years. However, we are always open minded about revising this system as long as it means improvement and not merely change.

Yours for a better FSU.

Signed,
Garnet Key

Southern Hands Seminoles Fourth Defeat

Stalwart Line Halts Offense; Loss of Aces Proves Fatal

By DAVE KENNEDY

A stirred-up Mississippi Southern football team seeking to redeem itself before a Homecoming crowd of 11,000 shivering fans romped Florida State University's Seminoles 21-0 and thus keep their hope for a bowl bid alive.

Both the Southerners and Seminoles were hampered by the loss of their backfield aces, Hugh Pepper of Southern and Bobby Fiveash of FSU. However Bucky McElroy, Peppers' backfield mate, was the big gun for the Southerners and a constant torment to the Seminoles. He pushed over for one TD and added three extra points.

STAN DOBOSZ, expected to help fill the ailing Fiveash's shoes was hurt early in the game which was a great loss to FSU.

For the most part, the Tribe battled the highly touted boys from Hattiesburg on even terms but lacked "the punch to push to a payoff." On four occasions the Seminoles pushed deep into Southern territory. In the early moments of the game they ripped to Mississippi's 22. In the last period Indian rooters had cause to cheer as they again penetrated deep into enemy territory, this time to the 14 and 12 respectively.

THE INDIANS of Florida State ended up with a net rushing yardage of 46 yards as they were "socked for losses at crucial moments." Southern in turn garnered an enviable 228 yards on the ground.

The Seminoles took to the air 23 times and completed 8 of them. "Five interceptions by Southern stalled repeated Seminole bids."

In the air Southern tried 19 passes and found receivers for 7 of them, however luck was with them as they piled up air yardage when they needed it most. FSU managed to procure three of Mississippi's tosses.

THE SCORING went something like this, as the Seminoles got off to a hang-up start when Massey won the toss and elected to receive. Griner took the kick and powered it back to the State 27. On a quick opener Metts went for nine, as Massey, wasting no time, took to the air and hit Jimmy Lee Taylor with a 20 yard pass to bring the Tribe into Southern territory on the 44. Southern was penalized for offsides as the Seminoles promptly took advantage of this and Metts plunged to the 35. At the 22 the Indian drive was halted as a series of bad breaks took its toll. Grahm was caught for a loss of three yards and two pass attempts failed while a fourth down aerial was intercepted on the two by Lee Clark as Southern took over. After an exchange of hands the ball again was in the possession of Mississippi where Davenport fumbled and the alert Al Pacifico pounced on it at the Southern 44 yard line. The Indians lost the ball on the 38. Davenport passed to Waters which brought the oval to the 39 along with a first down. J. Mason slithered off left tackle as he went 88 yards to paydirt. No one came close to getting him. McElroy pointed his toe and the score read 7-0 as the first quarter ended.

Mississippi's second TD came in the 3rd quarter when Pepper started the ball rolling by taking the second half kickoff back to the 29. This, incidently marked the first time that both McElroy and Pepper were in the backfield at hte same time. Mason pulled the same "quick opener" off the left side that resulted in a touchdown only minutes before. Mason jumped over right guard with McElroy converting as the Southerners' led 14-0.

AFTER A 12 YARD LOSS for the Tribe, McElroy intercepted on the 47. Jarrell hit Hub Waters with a pass as Metts brought him down on the 1. McElroy

AD BREAKS

The men of FSU went down defeat last Saturday night be- a hungry Homecoming d at Hattiesburg, Mississippi not before "scaring the pants the Southerns as the Indian en held the mighty giant rs to a 7-0 half-time lead the statistics showing an battle. The Southerns en- ed the game—the second in intersectional series—favored ree touchdowns. They got billing by virtue of their ressive 1953 record, which in- ed a season-opener victory Alabama's Crimson Tide. Up date, the Southerners from ssissippi sport a clean slate the exception of Memphis ate which pulled a 27-13 ker last week.

The Seminoles from Florida te may have been outscored never outfought as they got to a splendid start when me captain, Harry Massey, won toss and elected to receive, ever the same Indians were many a blow during the se of the game which led downfall.

ODDITIES

Oddly enough, the star backs both teams were injured and expected to see action although the elusive Hugh Laurin pper saw limited action he did e to spark an already hungry n in its 21-0 defeat of the minoles. FSU's line battering America candidate, suffered severely bruised shoulder and m against VMI and did not although Bobby did make trip to Hattiesburg.

HOMECOMING FOR SU PLAYERS

Saturday's clash served as a al homecoming for four Flor- a State players. Harry Massey, started as the Indian quarterback is from Canton, Miss. ert and Carl Grenn, the other halfback combination, from Brookhaven and End Ed Leonard is formally of Pas- coula.

Incidentally, "Southern has the gest enrollment of any Mis- ssippi college, including Ole Miss and State, and thriving Hattiesburg is now the fifth largest city in the state."

STETSON SLAPS MOREHEAD, 41-8

The Hatters of Stetson rolled over a badly outmanned Morehead, Ky., State College football eleven. This makes the Hatters record an even 3 and 3 for the season. . . . And Tampa outplayed East Carolina Teachers and knocked them from the ranks of the unbeaten. Halfback Charlie Harris was the star of the game as he racked up two touchdowns to lead the Spartans. . . . Another of Florida State's future opponents saw action last weekend, but the N. S. Staters did not fare as well, as a superior Army football squad crushed them 27-7 . . . but don't sell this team short as they are the possessors of a 19-year-old sophomore sensation by the name of Ed West who Saturday had a field day as he sprinted 63 yards returning a punt for State's only touchdown of the day. Seminoles Beware!!!!!

Just as a not of interest, the VMI team that the Indians from State so decisively upset the weekend before last scored in the closing seconds of their game with William and Mary to edge them 20-19 and also edge them out of a share in the Southern Conference football title.

RACES TIGHT

As the Fraternity League nears its end in the intramural contests the leading contenders for the championship are the Theta Chi's, the KA's, Lambda Chi's, SPE, ATO, Delts and Phi Delts. Over in the Dormitory sector Senior Hall and Magnolia Hall are all tied up with the closest being the Pirates who sport a 2-1-0 record. Spirited action will get underway this week with the first seven engaging in various gruelling battles in hopes of gaining undisputed first-place. For further information READ THE FLAMBEAU . . .

'B' Squad Defeats Military College

Three Baby Seminoles shared the scoring as Florida State's "B" team defeated Gordon Military College 19-15 in Doak Campbell stadium last Saturday night.

HALFBACK JAMES McCLENNAND raced 60 yards for a first-period score and Fred Dollard ran over the extra point.

But eight half Gerald Davies really brought the small crowd to its feet when he galloped down the sidelines 99 yards on an end sweep.

W. L. HARPER PASSED five yards to giant end Tom Feamster, a defensive standout, for the third touchdown after a succession of Seminole linebacks put them in scoring position.

The Georgians scored on a short buck, and a 25 yard pass.

Veteran center to graduate

Kalenich Views Conclusion Of Brilliant Football Career

By TOM CUNDY

Steve "Pops" Kalenich, the debonaire senior center is playing his last campaign as a Seminole griddei. He will long be remembered as one of the most versatile athletes to wear the garnet and gold.

In his first three years he played center, guard, end, linebacker, tackle and halfback, gaining praise in each of these positions. Coach Don Veller placed so much confidence in Steve that in the '52 season he had him call plays both on offense and defense, in the first half of the season.

IN THE THREE games played in the current season Kalenich has proven a power of strength in the Seminole machine, both on offense and defense. You can usually identify Steve on the field by watching the big number 35 making key blocks, incredible tackles, and knocking down enemy passes.

A stiff blow was dealt to the Seminoles when it was learned that Steve had chipped bones in his right knee, before the La. Tech. game. His absence was costly to FSU and could have played an important part in the Seminole defeat. It was also feared he would be lost for the all important V. M. I. game, but a bright note was sounded in the Nugent Camp when it was learned that Steve would be ready to go against V. M. I. and other opponents.

KALENICH IS 6 FT. tall, weighing 195 lbs., and hails from Akron, Ohio. He attended Akron South High School where he was an outstanding student as well as athlete. Steve lettered in five sports while at South, competing in football, basketball, track, baseball and tennis. An all State selection in football and basketball he also excelled in tennis and was known throughout Northern Ohio tennis circles for his bullet like serve.

Upon graduation Steve plans to enter pilot training with the Air Force. He is majoring in Social Work and expects to graduate in June. He is a member of the Men's F Club and the Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity.

Stan Dobosz, twenty-year-old sophomore from East Chicago, Indiana is our spotlight player this week. The stocky 5'9" 180 pounder was the leading ground gainer for the Tribe in 1952 with 609 yards net.

Dobosz gained more yardage against Georgia Tech last season than any other back they faced all year. Tech Coach Bobby Dodd said: "Dobosz is as good a running back as we faced all season."

STAN WAS the outstanding freshman back in 1952 and could always be counted on for yardage. He is a power runner with good speed. This season he has been a constant offensive threat.

Dobosz was hurt during the Mississippi Southern game which dampened FSU's offensive power.

HARRY MASSEY, a junior college transfer and a star FSU quarterback literally had a field day against Mississippi Southern last Saturday night in Hattiesburg, Miss. Massey did his high school and junior college playing in Mississippi.

Kennedy Prepares Cagers For Opener

Coach J. K. ("Bud") Kennedy's Florida State University basketballers wrapped up their first week of pre-season cage practice yesterday with a fast session in their West Campus arena.

And as they did, cool weather moved into Tallahassee, making the 30 Seminole hopefuls happy they'll be spending their spare moments for the next three months in the warmer confines of a gymnasium.

KENNEDY APPLAUDED the team spirit and hustle thus far, but added: "We have plenty of work to do before we'll be ready for our opening game." The Seminoles run into Mississippi State's Maroons, Southeastern Conference darkhorses, in their 1953-54 debut December 4.

Kennedy says it's too early to tell if the Tribe will be better than last year's Seminoles, who won 17 games and lost 11 before closing shop with a District 25 NAIA tournament loss to Stetson. "We're just drilling hard on fundamentals," he said.

NOW IN HIS sixth season as FSU's head basketball mentor, Kennedy singled out the first-week performances of four freshmen and one veteran as an early bright note. Freshmen Jim Savage of Ft. Lauderdale, Waegee Thompson of Gonzales, Fred Twomey of Gloucester, Mass., and Boh Williams of Covington,

IN MEMORY . . . of her husband, Mona McKelvey, center, presented the FSU library with two books on Mormonism. With Mrs. McKelvey are Norman Kilpatrick, head librarian, and Mrs. Nona Goodson, assistant professor in home and family life, who is faculty advisor to Mormon students.

Consultants Named To Assist Kilpatrick

A student library committee to act as a consultant to Professor Norman Kilpatrick, Director of Librarians, has been formed by the combined efforts of Professor Kilpatrick and the student government. This committee is to serve as a link between the library and the students and act as a clearing house for any complaints or suggestions they may have concerning library procedure, service, and other problems that arise.

On the agenda are the possibility of keeping the library open until 11 00 p. m or at least later than usual during examination week and the placement of a book box in front of the library for returning books before and after library hours. This group is also to help with planning various areas in the new library when it is completed.

PROFESSOR Kilpatrick has already begun making changes in the library service. Now all departments of the library open at 8 00 a m and close at 10 p m on weekdays. A checking desk has been installed for the purpose of reminding students and faculty to charge their books out, and to assist the library staff in keeping their records accurate.

The members of the student library committee were chosen to represent various undergraduate groups on campus so that the difficulties each has in using the library can be brought into the open and discussed. Evelyn Fredrickson is serving as chairman of the group. Other members and the students they represent are: Roy Chapman, Men's dormitories; Margaret Keller, Women's dormitories; Jud Duraham, Fraternities; Nancy Smith, sororities, Calvin Hasbrouck, town students; Tom Watson, commuting students, Betty Whitmire, seniors; Jerry Jones; juniors, Dick Bittner, sophomores; and Dorothy Thomas, freshmen.

and told to start walking until they met somebody and then swat "for all you're worth." After several minutes of swatting, egg-splatting, and female squeals, the Kappa Alpha Theta representative came out with the only whole egg. This was quickly remedied by Jerry Jones who personally squashed egg all over her head. Jerry didn't laugh for long, however, for he received not one, but several eggs on his head as offerings of appreciative contestants.

The Derby was named complete only after the contestants successfully relieved all of the Sigma Chi brothers of the traditional derbies which they have been sporting for the past week.

bulled over for the third and final score of the evening. And once more he found his mark and the scoreboard showed 21-0.

In the closing minutes of play the Seminoles, despite their deficit of 21 points, were still going strong as Graham intercepted a fourth down pass to race 40 yards to State's 45. Mixing up a combination of pass plays and a strong ground attack the Indians moved to the 14 but, after they were thrown for a 10 yard loss, Southern took over on downs. FSU had one final chance to score as J. Jacobs intercepted a Jarrell pass at the 20, but with only a minute left to play, time ran out.

OUTSTANDING for the Seminoles were Jimmy Taylor, Harry Massey, Al Pacifico, Jerry Jacobs, Billy Graham, Al Mackiewki, George Boyer and John Griner.

Spivak Rose To Fame As Jazz Trumpeter

"The man who plays the sweetest trumpet in the world," Charlie Spivak, and his orchestra will furnish the music for the 1953 Homecoming dance to be held November 21, in the Sewannee Room of the Dining Hall.

Charlie Spivak is the leader of a great all-time band which rocketed to topflight stature so rapidly that now it ranks among the kings in the entertainment world. Featured with the Spivak orchestra are Eileen Rodgers, vocalist; Joe Tucker playing the baritone; and "Small Paul" O'Connor.

Born in New Haven, Connecticut, Spivak got his first trumpet while he was still in grade school. Spivak played with such topflight orchestras as Benny Pollack, The Dorsey Brothers, and Ray Noble. After engagements with the orchestras, and a period of time as a free lance trumpeter, Spivak organized his own band. He got his first big engagement at the Glen Island Casino. Later he broke several musician records at the Cafe Rouge and the Commodore.

Spivak has an interest second to his trumpet and orchestra, baseball. He organized a team within his own band. Charlie plays center field.

Charlie Spivak

Spivak's orchestra has come a long way since the days when he was known as one of the greatest jazz trumpeters. He has admittedly gone commercial. Aside from being a top flight dancing orchestra, Spivak has won top acclaim in the fields of motion picture and recordings. A high light in Spivak's career was the award presented to him by Downbeat Magazine as the top sweet band.

Charlie Spivak has his own formula for success that says, "Don't take yourself seriously, my boy." Charlie also says, "Success is something you work for—and when it comes, you work harder. Because, once you get to the top, you're a public servant, and you owe your public the best service."

Other teams on the FSU slate include Auburn, Villanova, Mississippi Southern, Davidson, VMI, Furman, and Stetson.

Ford Official Named To Give Dinner Talk

Theodore O. Yntena, vice-president of The Ford Motor Company will deliver the principal address at the Florida State University 1953 Homecoming celebration set for November 20-21, FSU President Doak S. Campbell announced today.

Yntena will speak at the traditional Garnet and Gold Banquet to be held Friday night in the Sawannee Dining Hall before the giant "Pow Wow" pep rally in Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

YNTENA WAS named vice-president—finance and a member of the company's administration committee on March 24, 1949. He also is a member of the executive committee and the board of directors.

Born April 8, 1900, in Holland, Mich., Yntena attended Hope College where he received his AB degree. Later he earned a master's degree in chemistry at the University of Illinois, a master's degree in business and a doctor's degree in economics at the University of Chicago. He also attended Harvard University and holds a CPA certificate in Illinois.

THE BANQUET, sponsored annually as Garnet and Gold Key's contribution to the festivities of the traditional Homecoming, yearly honors a leading person in state or national affairs.

Open to Florida State University Alumni and their guests, it is one of the first on the long list of activities scheduled for the busy week-end visitors. The banquet will precede the "Pow Wow," pep rally and extravagant production at Doak S. Campbell Stadium Friday night when the Homecoming Queen and her court will be presented for the first time. Also a feature of the Pow Wow are skit competitions and entertainment by many gymnastic and musical groups here.

Campus Chest Proceeds Reach Outstanding Total

The results of the various projects which have been conducted for the 1953-54 Campus Chest drive are constantly coming in, committee Treasurer Germaine Murray said today. The committee head announced she has received money from only ten sources to date but will have a full report ready by next Wednesday. This report will be featured in Friday's Flambeau.

The group turning in the largest amount so far is Delta Gamma sorority which made $182 08 on their Betty-Coed, Joe-College popularity contest. This annual project consisted of selecting the most typical college couple by votes of one penny each.

GERMAINE DID not include it on her report, but the Flambeau has received word from a spokesman of the Women's "F" Club that that organization netted an all-time-high of well over $300.00 on their annual Box Supper. Because of the rainy weather of last Thursday, the Supper was held in the Suwanee Room where over 500 people met to eat and to send off the football team with a rousing pep rally complete with cheer leaders and the Marching Chiefs.

Credit for making the event a success goes to the eight sororities which attended en masse; Sigma Kappa, Pi Beta Phi, Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Xi Delta, Alpha Omicron Pi, Gamma Phi Beta, Alpha Chi Omega and Zeta Tau Alpha, and Pi Beta Phi to those who sent representative Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Delta Gamma, Delta Zeta, Kappa Delta, Phi Mu, and Alpha Delta Pi, to the cheerleaders and band members; and also to the outstanding number of faculty and students which attended.

THE FACULTY auction which Girl's Sophomore Council sponsors each year brought in a total of $97.32 this year. Bryan Hall, which is contributing to the Chest for the first time this year, contributed $72.64 from their sale of sandwiches.

Phi Mu sorority's traditional Halloween Carnival netted $58.42 this year. The Zeta Tau Alpha Cakewalk and Chinese Auction brought in $43.35 for the campus drive.

DELTA TAU DELTA fraternity has turned in a total of $42.00 as their contribution. Gamma Phi Beta sorority made $28.75 on their sale of cookies for the drive. A net amount of $18.00 was turned in by the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity. The International Students Club netted a total of $14.00 from their campaign to raise funds.

The committee was particularly impressed with a $24 00 contribution which the faculty and administration made to the Chest in spite of the fact that most of the members of the faculty and administration live in Tallahassee and give to the Red Feather drive of the local Community Chest.

Hanks, Singer Set For Vocal Roles

Notable among the singing roles in Panorama, the 1954 Sandspur Productions recently cast, are Jimmy Hanks and Charles Singer, the two "zany" instrumentalist-singers who have entertained their way into the campus spotlight since registering as freshmen last year.

This announcement was made by Bob Gutting, Sandspur publicity chief. Gutting also named other members of the singing cast of the all-music and dance production to come off here late in February. Thalia Whitehurst, Ricky Powell, Jim Bradley, Jo Ann Hosbach and Sandra Darling were named to have vocal parts in the all-student production.

Also Delano Driver, Ray Kickleiter, Ed Franklin, Dick Puckett, and David Dreis.

Convertibles Needed

Twenty convertibles and drivers are needed to transport dignitaries in the Homecoming Parade a week from tomorrow morning, announced the Office of the Business Manager, Rod Shaw, today.

Mr. Shaw said those volunteering cars and services are urged to sign up immediately in his office, 207 Westcott. He noted that, in the past, students have cooperated with much enthusiasm. He said he hopes to see many volunteers this year.

Senate Approves First Amendment Of School Year

The first Constitutional amendment of the season, dealing with men's House Presidents, gained approval Tuesday at the regular meeting of the University Senate. This amendment will, if possible, be submitted to the Student Body for a vote next Tuesday, at the time of the final balloting for Homecoming Queen.

Senator Gordon Gaster was author of the successful Bill, which will in effect allow freshman men to hold the office of House President, subject to the rules of the various men's residence halls. This issue had previously drawn a decision from the University Court which declared that the present Constitution, as printed in the Pow Wow, does not allow a freshman to be House President.

THE PROPOSED amendment has been described by its backers as an expedient measure, to serve only until the Student Body's new Constitution, approved by Senate last spring, is ratified. Dean Warren, chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs, which is studying the document for the administration, stated that the faculty is working hard, but hinted it may take the rest of the semester before action is taken.

Other action taken recently by the University Senate has included the confirmation of Jean Stigler to replace Nancy Wilson as business manager of Smoke Signals, for internship, and the approval of the Student Body Organizations Committee, which regulates the activities of the numerous campus organizations.

NEW ORGANIZATIONS Committee members are Leslie Ann Fagen, Ikey Arnold, Hoke Grant, Carol Rogers, Gail Henshaw, Ted Aggelis, J. T. Williams, David Lang, Margaret Cantney, Dot Sharitz, Evelyn Brown, Henrie Henrad, Ann Chandley, Lucy Cornell, Gene Watte and Billy Rogers.

Senate has also passed a resolution requesting the Flambeau to print the names of absentee Senators, because of the large number of recent absences. Those not answering the customary roll-call this Tuesday were Renie Hall, Jean Wetherall, Bob Berto, Dunnie Hollis and Phoebe Jackson. It could not be determined by the Flambeau if any of these five absences were excused by the Senate Rules Committee. Three unexcused absences are grounds for impeachment, according to Senate rules.

Speaker Analyzes Indo-China Status Affecting Nation

Speaking Tuesday night in the Longmire Auditorium before an audience of 250 students, faculty and townspeople, Chester A. Bain discussed the position of Indo-China in the present international scene and the ways in which the struggle there affects the United States. Mr. Bain, who teaches Far Eastern history at Florida State University, was formerly a specialist on Indo-Chinese affairs in the Office of Naval Intelligence, and is currently writing a history of Indo-China.

"The situation in Indo-China is definitely encouraging," he asserted. "After nearly seven years of costly and confusing warfare, within the last year both the political and military aspects of the struggle have considerably improved. French agreements this year with the government of Laos, Cambodia and Viet Nam have greatly increased the degree of independence enjoyed by these provinces. With the increased incentive of promised autonomy, military reinforcements from France and increased economic assistance from the United States, the non-communist forces have shown a new spirit and have struck effectively against the Communist Viet Minh."

IN REVIEWING the history of the struggle, Mr. Bain showed how the war, which had originally been a movement of the Indo-Chinese to gain at least autonomy within the French empire, had been drawn into the broader conflict between freedom and world communism.

He pointed out that the free world cannot afford to let the 178 million people of southeast Asia be captured by the Communists.

FOLLOWING THE program, an informal reception gave the audience the opportunity to meet and converse with Mr. Bain and Dr. Taylor Parks, State Department historian who was a guest at the meeting. Mr. Parks had spent the day on the FSU campus, discussing with faculty members and students the types of research which might involve use of State Department records.

The program was the first of a series planned by the local chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, national history.

Students Receive Awards For Outstanding Work In Art

Student Honor Art Show awards were made at the formal opening on Tuesday, November 10. The show, an annual representative exhibition of student work from the Florida State University Department of Art, presented four awards, ranging in scholastic years from freshmen to senior.

Awards in the amount of $25 each, went to George Milton, Senior class; Irene Winterly, Junior class; Franklin Adams, Sophomore class, and Cynthia Sweatt, Freshman class. The basis for awards was on general art performance throughout the academic year, 1952-53.

The works were selected for the show by an entrance jury comprised of Art Department faculty, and judging was made by the same committee.

Cash awards were made possible through a $100 contribution by a Florida art patron who preferred to remain anonymous.

Settings for the show were under the direction of Mr. Tiazo Miake, a graduate student.

The show was originally for later in the year, but dates were set up in order that it would be open for display during FSU Homecoming. The show is a cross-section of what is being done in a progressive art department, the faculty of which encourages experimentation among the students in many area and media of art, according to Dr. Edmund Lewandowski, department head.

Included in the presentation are graphics, sculpture, collages, advertising designs, drawings, paintings both in opaque and transparent watercolor and in oils.

Sales to Open Here Monday On Dance Tabs

Regular ticket sales to the Homecoming Dance will begin Monday and run through Friday, Homecoming Dance Ticket head Ed James said today.

James said the $1 50 tickets or $3 a pair will be sold at booths in Lower Westcott, Seminole Club Lobby, and in front of the FSU post office from 9 to 5 on those days next week. He said booths will be attended by girls of the Women's Sophomore Council, service organization here.

The tickets Monday and Tuesday of this week showed "pretty good" results. He said 70-odd tickets were bought during the two-day opportunity, principally designed, James said, for veterans whose GI checks came in around this time.

The committee head added an urgent note to the student body to buy tickets to the dance early as there is a limited number on sale.

Dr. Moore Speaks To Service Group At Informal Coffee

Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity will hold an informal coffee hour on Tuesday night, November 17, at 9:30 in West Hall.

Featured on the program will be Dean Coyle E. Moore of the School of Social Welfare who will lead a discussion on the relationship of physical sex to marriage.

The major program is to inform the men students of the purpose and activities of the Alpha Phi Omega. The Iota Rho chapter at FSU has been in operation for only two years. Membership in the Service Fraternity is open to all men on campus who desire to be of service to their fellow men.

Students and faculty members alike are invited to learn more of the APO by attending meetings. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the discussion on Tuesday night, announced a fraternity spokesman.

Counselors Attend Personnel Meeting

Dr. C. E. Tully, director of Guidance and Placement at FSU, discussed criteria for awarding scholarships and loans at the meeting. Dr. Tully worked on the subject for two years, and used it to gain his doctorate.

A report of a workshop studying problems relating to guidance and counseling was given by Dr. Melvene Hardee, Coordinator of Counseling and Guidance at FSU. The workshop was sponsored by the S. C. P. A. Dr. L. D. Corson, FSU Dean of Men, served as Recorder at the meeting.

Also attending were Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, Dean of Student Welfare, Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Assistant Dean of Women, Mr. John S. Blackburn, Head Counselor at West Hall, Miss Ruth Pyche, and Mrs. Myra Bailey.

The S. C. P. A. is a division of the American College Personnel Association.

THE OFFICERS were installed last night in brief ceremonies in Opperman Music Hall.

Ken Brock earlier swept the office of vice-president in the primary elections.

THE EARLIER primary election results last Tuesday showed promise that a close race would ensue between candidates for secretary Jo Ann Taylor and Barbara Jaffries who trailed Taylor by only five votes. Pat Smith won in the finals with a margin of almost 100.

Another close one expected was the race for social chairman decisively won by Ruth Ann Whittle.

DEFEATED PRESIDENTIAL aspirant Pete Wimbrow, when asked at 12:30 Wednesday morning for a statement on the election results said, with a smile, "I'm going swimming!" And he did—in Westcott pool right then and there!

Statements from the Student Body Elections Committee, engineers of the polling, included one from Bill Stancik, Elections chief. Stancik said, "My thanks to the Elections Committee members; they did a great job. Also, I wish to thank the freshman class for their splendid cooperation during the campaigning."

BUD RIVERS, under-secretary added a note to Stancik's words with, "I am very pleased with the clean campaigning and general class spirit shown. I only hope this feeling will become even greater as the class of 1957 heads toward their graduation."

Rivers also complimented Stancik on the "fine systematic counting of votes and tallying." He also expressed the committee's gratitude to Women's and Men's Sophomore Councils for the "able assistance" in tending booths and counting votes.

President Feted With Annual Party

The traditional birthday party for Doak S. Campbell, president of Florida State University, given annually by the senior class has been set for Sunday, November 15, from 4:30-6:00 p. m., senior class executive committee announced.

The party will be held at the Campbell home. Seniors and their guests are invited to visit the house and gardens and to meet and chat with Dr. and Mrs. Campbell.

Dr. Campbell's birthday actually falls on Monday, November 16, but because of a full schedule at the University the executive committee moved the party up a day.

Scholars Credited With U. N. Participation

Dr. Edgar L. Henderson and Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell of Florida State University's faculty represent the South in an inquiry published by the United Nation's Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) with papers on their ideas of the meaning of Liberty.

The results of this inquiry were published in Paris in 1953 by the International Federation of Philosophical Societies, in cooperation with UNESCO, in a volume entitled "Enquete Sur la Liberte."

FIFTEEN COUNTRIES were represented in the UNESCO publication, including Russia, although the papers on Russian liberty were written by Russians living outside the Iron Curtain.

In summing up her statement on freedom, Dr. Liddell said: "Freedom is self direction and self control. A human being is his unique self and also one of his kind. Men originated custom, laws and social institutions as agencies through which their freedom could be established and secured.

"SOCIAL FREEDOM is dependent upon individual responsibility. No individual should assume absolute command over another, nor should any be in absolute subjection. The free person is responsible not only for the conduct of his private life and personal affairs but for maintaining social order.

"It is his right and his duty to take an active part in making and keeping the institutions of society adequate to secure the freedom of all."

IN CONDENSING his statement on freedom, Dr. Henderson said: "Freedom is usually defined negatively to mean not being constrained. Such definitions must consider physical and human laws as enemies of freedom, since they constrain us.

"But actually the law of gravity makes it possible for me to walk down the steps as I purpose to do. Constraining rails enable the train to take the passengers where they purpose to go. Without such constraints we could not do what we purpose, we would be unfree.

"FOR, POSITIVELY defined, freedom is our ability to accomplish our purposes. Physical laws and wise human laws make this freedom possible. More fully defined, freedom 'consists in man's ability to grow according to his own nature, and in all the aspects of his nature, as much as is proper to a man.' "

Parking Lot Morals Seem To Weaken Own Purpose

We hate to sound sophomoric by charging full-lance into unconquerable windmills, but when the rules themselves are so juvenile, we can't restrain from making a comment.

We refer in particular to the latest "thou shalt not" in regard to night-parking in the Cawthon car-lot. The long arm of the law is now supposed to reach in upon parked couples and stop them from doing whatever they happen to be doing.

This editorial is not meant to be an essay on morals, so we won't discuss the relative merits of necking versus not-necking, but we do want to ask the question "Will this new ruling accomplish its goal of improving the moral level of the student body?"

One comment we have heard is that increased chastity on the parking lot will increase bodily dangers in the form of stampedes at the door of the dorms.

Another quip is that students will just be forced to the woods.

All this may sound rather flippant, but it does bring us to the main point of the discussion: does forbidding comparatively minor vices prevent bigger ones? We think not.

After all, just what is likely to go on in a parking lot with other people around that isn't just as likely to happen in a drive-in theater? Or isn't there danger that considerably worse will happen if the couples are driven to more secluded spots?

Despite all piety and wit and lip-service to high-sounding moral principles, there do exist in people certain natural tendencies which are unlikely to be banished from the world before long. If we wish to avoid the more drastic consequences, it is wise to make certain concessions to reality.

Again we repeat that we don't want to make childish attacks on existing rules that hang over from FSCW days. We realize that big changes are not made overnight.

On the other hand, changes DO come about, even though they "grind exceeding small." Girls are, after all, allowed to ride downtown in cars with "men" and they do smoke openly.

As the university grows, we expect rules to be relaxed, not made more stringent. We hope there will be a mellowing of heart and the present ruling will be generally ignored by the enforcers.

We understand that in Atlanta, police are instructed to leave alone the loving couples on benches in the park. That doesn't seem so racy.

● GET 'EM DOWN

Well, it's all over. The last ballot has been counted. The victors are happy and the losers disappointed.

But the memory lingers on.

We saw the janitors doing trojan-like work the other day removing posters from every imaginable nook and cranny, but the clean-up job is Herculean.

We hate to make unkind comments about something which demonstrated such enthusiasm, but after three weeks it is rather tiring to see the hundred variations on the theme "Don't be sneezy. Vote for Tweezy."

In short, although we can stand them for a while, the time has come to GET THEM DOWN. We would hardly advocate a law forcing candidates to remove their old signs, but there does seem a certain moral obligation involved.

THE BOOKLIST

'New World Writing' Typifies Trend

By BOB FOLSOM

In the past year a new phase has been written into the publishing field. Paperbacks have come on the scene. Actually nothing new—Pocket Books Inc. has been doing it for years (Modern Library may be included in the low-price sense)—it has now expanded into big business by many firms. In the beginning various houses started issuing paperback originals by budding (and sometimes, established) authors, thereby providing a new and perhaps profitable market and at the same time enabling the publisher to make up on costs. Then Doubleday came out with Anchor Books, in which famous classics are being reproduced in paperback form. Among them, Stendhal's The Charterhouse of Parma, Conrad's The Secret Agent, Gide's Lafcadio's Adventures. Houghton Mifflin tried something new with a simultaneously publishing in both cloth and softback of Executive Suite by Cameron Hawley last year. This week they're out again with something of the same. The Best American Short Stories of 1953 edited by Martha Foley has been issued simultaneously in both editions, the softback for 50c, called Dolphin Edition.

On the same note, out in San Francisco a bookstore opened that sells only paperback editions (we often wonder what the Caliph of Baghdad-by-the-Bay, Herb Caen, said about it).

Other publishers came up with original collections of short stories. Pocket Books, Inc., with DISCOVERY I and 2. THE AVON BOOK OF MODERN WRITING edited by William Phillips and Philip Rahv, with excellent pieces of new fiction and criticism, was issued just recently.

The Fourth Mentor Selection of New World Writing, on the newsstands now, and our subject, contains almost anything and everything with 12 countries represented in this edition.

There are three young authors in MENTOR who bear watching. Ivan Gold, a 21-year-old graduate of Columbia College, hitherto published only in college magazines appears with a story called A CHANGE OF AIR, seemingly fashioned after Norman Mailer. A 23-year-old Phi Beta Kappa, Shirley Ann Greu, with WHITE GIRL, FINE GIRL. And Eric Bercovici with his play THE HEART OF AGE. "Nine hundred and ninety-nine guys out of a thousand live with their faces in the mud. They just make different noises . . . that's the only difference."

A short story, Thoughts in the Dark, by one of Japan's best contemporary writers, seems to support the evidence that today's violent and hopeless theme of Western writing is evident in Eastern works, too.

There is a choice selectability of phrases in some works. Such as Andrew Glaze's A Slightly Different Story, as Miss Tapley says, "Respectability is a damn prison." In the Castle of My Skin by George Lamming, "But Boy Blue never lost his temper. When you asked him why he was so black he would answer with serious conviction 'Just as I was goin' to born the light went out.'"

Suzanne K. Langer who says "Art is the vanguard of civilization" in her essay ART, THE SYMBOL OF SENTIENCE. Miss Langer covers large ground in short space with good convictions, "art is in essence symbolic." To appreciate it we do not have to study the artist himself but rather, "success of a composition lies in the meaning it embodies visibly or audibly, without reference beyond its appearance."

One of the better pieces in Mentor is Mark Schorer's Two Houses, Two Ways, where he takes the reader on a meticulous journey through the Florentine villas of Sinclair Lewis and D. H. Lawrence.

Fourth Mentor exemplifies the attempt today of presenting to the public good reading at an intellectual and not "egghead" level. It has some of the best writing to come along in any paperback collection yet.

With more and more selections chosen by an experienced eye for taste and popular appeal offering good reading, paperbacks will rise above the position most consider them to be in today.

Even Religion Uses Show Techniques

By DAVID DREIS

Show business seems to be angling its form into a variety of professions and it seems that the old-fashioned type of entertainment is dressing itself out in new guises.

Back in the twenties and early thirties a Baptist minister by the name of Billy Sunday was giving his sermons to people in a few midwestern states. His fame spread to such an extent that his supporters felt Sunday could benefit the country if he went on a tour. The young man agreed and a schedule was set up.

People from miles around picked up their bottles and ventured to the far-off cities to hear what "Sunday was saying." He packed in audiences everywhere he went and pretty soon, he became newsworthy and reporters from every syndicate covered him like a blanket. He fought everything from sin to motion pictures. (Practically the same thing.) Sunday was a household discussion.

Finally, Billy found he wasn't making enough money to continue his tours so donations were always accepted. People gave gladly and the Sunday tours kept on. Then he decided to give in to movie theaters and become a sort of vaudeville attraction. When his supporters saw that Sunday was now meddling with the "enemy," his support became nil . . . people stopped going and Billy was silenced as far as newspapers and publications were concerned. Sunday died out.

Today, religious leaders like Billy Graham stage a huge pageant when they speak and attract a multitude. Last year, when Graham spoke . . . the Doak Campbell stadium was packed . . . Miami's Orange Bowl held the same distinction . . . his "Hour of Decision" radio program started registering big on the Hooper ratings. This was show business put to use in religion.

On the Dumont television network, no one made critics gasp so much as Bishop Fulton J. Sheen who stood before the cold cameras and gave out with warm religious stories and ideas. Comedian Milton Berle in the Tuesday at eight spot over NBC was shocked to find that his former number one show was now number two. Sheen had captured the audience. He thought he was slipping and did everything to come back up to the top spot. He hired Goodmao Ace of the Easy Aces radio show to be lead writer of his program. He changed the complete format while Fulton Sheen stared into the cameras and just talked. Berle was befuddled.

Berle, always on the lookout for material to steal, asked NBC to film the bishop so that he could see just what was so great. Miltie was on the air at the same time as the bishop. So, Mr. Berle, complete with pad and pencil, decided to gape at the gargantuan named Fulton Sheen. After the cided to gape at the gargantua or to be second to that man." Today, the bishop and Milton are chums.

There are many people who dislike the idea of church and show being united. The biggest violence came when a song about the aforementioned preacher of the twenties landed on the hit market. The song, "I Love My Billy Sunday, But Oh You Saturday Night." Sunday wasn't too pleased, but there was little to do in connection with it.

Actually, Sunday's idea to fight fire with fire isn't too bad because many people are coming out to the ceremonies where in the past they could figure on getting it on the radio or reading it in the paper. Sure, they can do that, but today's audience is of the type to want the same old story hashed up in a new way—and they'll come out for it.

Sports, Martian Invasion Fill Bill With Western, Film On Florida

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

ALL AMERICAN, is a top-scale story of the football hero who tackled society as well as the gridiron to earn the right to love. It's a story that all America loves, the saga of Nick Bonelli, who came from the wrong side of the tracks to building his own rails of success.

UNIVERSAL-INTERNATIONAL'S All American, stars Taoy Curtis, co-stars Lori Nelson, and introduces Mamie Van Doren.

Currently being shown at the State Theatre through Nov. 14, the picture is produced and directed by ex-All-Americans Aaron Rosenberg and Jesse Hibbes respectively. The football sequences feature a gridiron full of real-life All-Americans including Frank Gifford, Elmer Willhoite, Don Moomaw, Jim Sears and Herman Hickman, ex-Yale coach.

TO INSTILL MORE interest in the local townspeople in football, FSU's Seminole team was introduced to the audience at the showing of All-American, Wednesday night.

Those who wish to get away from real life and see the thrills and horror of a fantastic Martian invasion, will want to see War of the Worlds, Paramount's gripping technicolor production of H. G. Wells' famous tale.

STARRING GENE BARRY and Ann Robinson, the picture brings to life the incredible and terrifying depiction of an imaginary war between Earth and Mars. Space ships, robot men, deadly weapons which even atom bombs cannot destroy, come to the screen with terrifying reality straight from the pen of H. G. Wells.

The picture is currently being shown at the Florida Theatre through Nov. 14.

SHARK RIVER, filmed near Naples, Florida, begins Sunday, Nov. 15, at the State Theatre, starring Steve Cochran, Carole Mathews, and Warren Stevens. The picture is based on a hazardous expedition to carry a wounded man through the Everglades to the Gulf, taking him across Shark River, which white men never cross and Indians never go beyond.

Western fans will enjoy City of Bad Men, starting Sunday, Nov. 15 at the Florida Theatre.

ALL THE NOTORIOUS outlaws of the west are combined in this technicolor production of the woldest "hombres" to the hottest city of the Western era.

City of Bad Men, (Carson City, Nevada) stars Jeanne Crain in her first role in the wide open spaces, and Dale Robertson, the man quick on the draw and heavy on that Oklahoma drawl.

Letters to Editor

Protected

Dear Editor:

I heartily commend your recent editorial on the conservativeness of American college students today. I have often felt this conservativeness of ours and, after noting it in three institutions of higher learning, have become disgusted by our general lack of concern. Why are we as we are? Is it because we are pampered, satisfied, and wish to be popular? At a recent showing of some United Nations films depicting the unpleasant conditions in our war, many students left before the program was over. When asked why, one student replied, "Well I don't want to see all those starving people."

Why are we conservative? Why don't we express "screwy" ideas? It IS because we are pampered, satisfied, and wish to be popular. Isn't it also because we are over protected and have never really been put in positions in which it is necessary to do some serious thinking?

Sincerely,
Aon Brown

Responsibility

Dear Editor:

You are certainly to be commended for putting your finger on today's weak spot in the editorial "Students More Pampered than Wisely Conservative." That is what the person is constantly up against who's capacity it is to stimulate interest in politics and world affairs. It is pure apathy and indifference! Will it take shattered buildings and marching feet across our nation to shake us awake? Democracy is being severely crippled because citizens aren't realizing the responsibility placed upon them as a vital part of it. Freedom is not a vacuum nor is it acquired through a vacuum; it cannot be fully attained without those seeking it constantly working toward that goal employing their full ability.

Brothers in peace to other lands aren't gained by top-brassy words about freer trade, etc., unless it is given the people's confidence and will and action. There is almost always something we can do about any political situation even if it is merely writing our congressmen, but the trend is not to even know the current issues, much less take action on them. (I've been appalled at the number of college students—"educated people"— who don't even know who their senators are!) This is our Christian responsibility, or Jewish responsibility, or the responsibility of just being a citizen, to know what is going on and to do what we can about it.

Youre very sincerely,
(Miss) Carroll English

Pledge

Dear Freshmen,

I sincerely thank you for the vote of confidence you gave me last Tuesday when you elected me to serve our class as one of its Senators. I pledge myself to be fair and to work to the best of my ability for the betterment of our class and FSU.

Sincerely,
JIM MOORE.

Poor Support

Dear Editor:

The campus chest committee did a commendable job in planning the campus chest dance last Friday night. The only thing lacking was student support and attendance. I believe that appreciation should be expressed to a number of groups who gave their services absolutely free to promote the dance. Included among these were the three orchestras (Johnny Bee, the Ravens, the Collegians), Miss Anna Mae Tracy who gave the use of the Suwannee Room, Mr. Gordon Wheeler who gave the materials for advertising, Mr. Martin, FSU gardener, who provided decorations; the audio-visual department, faculty members who served as gatekeepers, Men's Sophomore Council, Methodist Student House and many others.

The dance is an excellent way of promoting the campus chest, and it is the hope of many that this idea can be continued in the future with greater attendance.

Teachers and educators seem to have considerable interest in the subject of magazine reading.

Since the publication of his recent articles on the subject, Professor Earl Vance of journalism has received numerous letters from educators and teachers asking for further information about the way he has conducted courses in magazine reading at Florida State University. Many have requested the outlines and bibliographies he has used in his courses here.

One professor of education in another state asked for the bibliography and added, "I think you can see immediately that I want to make use of this type of reading in a course which I teach."

Time Movie Reviews Slipping A Bit

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Time was when you could count on one thing: that Time magazine's review of a movie would be critical. Producers of shallow motion pictures would practically withdraw in pain before the terse, sharp-pointed resumes. The gourmets would cheer and the "folks" who "just like movies" would grumble that "Time just doesn't like anything."

But alas, I detect slipping standards somewhere. Either the Time staff just isn't seeing the movies before they review them, or else I am simply becoming one of the "folks."

In any case, I challenge several recent reviews, some for being too kind, one for being unjustly short and harsh.

Take It Came From Outer Space, for instance. It was pure ham from beginning to end, the way I saw it through my three-dee viewers. While the added dimension added little to the story, I must admit the rock-slide crushed the first three rows of the audience. However, I would hardly say it was even a mediocre movie.

The plot dealt with the many times trite possibility of earth's visitation from another world and the lack of understanding shown these visitors by earth creatures . . . except for the hero, of course. IT CAME FROM OUTER SPACE attempted a pseudo-philosophical theme, but the nearest it came to its goal was pipe-puffing, tweed-coated Richard Carlson.

The Florida Catholic reviewed the movie beautifully: "Send it back," but Time was rather kind to it.

Just an issue or two ago, Time gave considerable space and praise to another show which in my opinion was just fair, namely, Half a Hero. The story dealt with a "typical" suburban New York family and its weak-kneed head.

The dialogue was sadly spotty, and the action moved like traffic at a rush hour. The whole movie seemed almost like a random splicing of events, building to flat, totally expected conclusion. Yet TIME rather liked it.

In the same issue, the great red-bordered critic reserved one short paragraph and a few nasty words for what I consider one of the better pictures of the year: Edna Ferber's So Big. The chief objection Time had seemed to be that the book had been filmed twice before. Secondly there was an implicit statement that Time didn't like heroic works, portraying people of unusual character or moral level.

SO BIG did send you away feeling enobled, but I hardly find this an objection. It was realistic. It had its tragedies without being too hammy. It had good actors, the action moved smoothly and when it was over, you felt you had at least received your money's worth.

But Time didn't like it.

As far as I can see, there are only three things for me to do: Stop reading Time reviews, offer them my incomparable services, or just go on grumbling.

CAMPUS CARAVAN

Ghost Writer Rattles Editor's Skeleton

By BEVERLY LACAYO

Dear Diary

This may be my last entry. My bones ache, my stomach is in a turmoil. Intestinal flu has gripped me. This is my death bed, surely.

There's the telephone, jarring my eardrums again—curses, my parents have left me all alone. Why don't they take my wretched condition more seriously? For a long time now, I've suspected that they don't really love me . . . groan . . . I'll have to answer that idiotic phone eventually.

"Hello, . . . I can't. I'm dying . . . You don't care? . . . Listen Galphin, who do you think you are anyway? . . . (thunder, lightning, cracking of whip, from the telephone) . . . But, Bruce, I can't write a column for Friday. I'll probably be dead by then . . . moan . . . My obituary? Are you crazy? Why can't somebody besides me write it? . . . Wayne Terry . . . choke . . . maybe I won't die after all. Bruce, honestly now, be reasonable . . . Okay, okay, okay, okay. But I'll have to get a ghost writer!" Clack!

Humph, I bet he thinks I'm kidding. Let's see, now, I could write a defense of Garnet Key . . . nn . . . they already wrote a letter back to the editor. Or, how about an expose of co-ed visitation in the infirmary? I might warn people about using tri-lingual typewriters, there is quite a market for them suddenly. Hmm, here's the first issue of Smoke Signals, interesting . . . We have arrived. Don't ask where. It might prove embarrassing. Say that picture of a boy and girl dancing isn't according to Hoyle, nor to my anatomy class either! More . . . hmm . . . ha! . . . oh, oh . . . boy! that's good. Howard not only got the ax from Dean Culpepper, he came out smoking that pipe with an air of distinction. Well there's not much column material in that. It's a cinch people will be anxious to read the next issue, now that it has been definitely established it has been definitely established as a humor magazine. Oh, Ho! Here's what I was looking for! A letter from Ignor Amos, the gentleman farmer who liked Bruce's column on liberal arts versus vocationalism. This is rich.

Dear Miss Caravan:

I'm ritin to ya cuz my son brings home the Flambo an sometimes I reed it an I no yer column has anything in it so I want you to print my letter. I want to tell yall thet yer editor is reel smart, he realizes thet colege aint no place fer folks wut dont no nuthin. But stil I gotta pay taxes sos every last man jack kind go ta skool an waste a lotta time offa werkin. Then they wont spend my money on corses thet wud be fer biness folks, an werkers an farmers, like my son an me. Then maybe he'll git rid of is foolish notions bout goin out to F. S. U. an he'll cum home an git ta work!

Emory Council Votes Against NSA As Wheel Editorial Scores Decision

EMORY UNIV. LEAVES NSA COUNCIL VOTES 14-4 IN FAVOR

Emory University ended its affiliation with the National Students Association Monday when Student Council voted 14 to 4 to stop paying dues and not to send delegates to the NSA conventions.

The vote was the last step in a year-long controversy over the organization which began last fall, when student body president Stell Huie turned in an unfavorable report on NSA after returning from the convention.

Arguments all year long in Council meetings were climaxed by the spring elections in which the organization became a campaign issue.

Gilbert Turner, the winning candidate for Student Government Association president, promised voters he would support withdrawal from NSA and formation of a new student government group in the South.

Recently delegates from six Southern universities approved plans for such a group, the Southern Universities Student Government Association.

At Monday's meeting, Treasurer Wally Rustin made the motion to stop payment of dues and sending of delegates to conventions.

Vice-President Ken Murrah spoke for NSA, saying he believed it is necessary for Emory to be a member of a national organization.

"It is definitely an advantage for the Emory campus to be affiliated with a national organization," he said.

He added that NSA is the only way Emory can participate in national affairs, and pointed out that "we haven't received full material value from NSA."

Rustin said, "The majority of the things we received from NSA, we would have got without being members."

He emphasized that Emory can send six or eight delegates to a convention in the South as compared with one or two to an NSA convention in the Midwest, thus permitting more students to get full value out of such gatherings.

Turner stated that he opposed staying in NSA because "it is too expensive for us" and "there is very little interest on campus in it."

A GREAT LOSS

Self-satisfaction breeds degradation . . . and Student Council this week demonstrated in action the self-satisfaction which has characterized it for the past year. In voting to quit NSA it stated its irresponsibility in national and international affairs and opinions, and its self-satisfaction with those of an inactive precedent and of a relatively inactive neighborhood of Southern student governments.

In quitting, Student Council refuses to be a part of a financially self-supporting NSA international program representing United States students abroad, on money furnished by national foundations, not by member schools.

In quitting, Student Council refuses to send delegates to a national convention at which national issues affecting students are discussed and at which there is exchange of ideas on the purpose and operation of student government.

In quitting, Student Council refuses to send its future president to the Student Government Presidents' Conference each summer for training before beginning the year's work.

In quitting, Student Council refused to back a financially independent NSA-sponsored travel service which provides low cost European tours by working through national student government associations in Europe.

Emory's circle of ODK, in planning their high-school leadership workshops, wrote to other Southern schools and received no useful information. From NSA, however, it received useful information and ideas from the NSA records of leadership workshops conducted by member schools in other parts of the nation. Last year a faculty evaluation system, derived from NSA sources, was used here at Emory. At last year's NSA national congress, Agnes Scott delegates were informed of and put into effect on their campus a preferential balloting system to prevent run-offs and to give weight to each voter's second and third choices. They say it worked effectively.

Evidently, NSA membership is not altogether an unprofitable thing from the local standpoint.

We hate to see Council quit NSA, especially because we feel the members of Council itself were uninformed of the services NSA offers. We are afraid the vociferous, or loud-mouthed, opponents of the organization — because of their prejudiced opinions—have kept Emory from the profits of membership.

LET'S FACE IT

On Smoke Signals, World, Pravda

By GENE LAWLER

We thought of writing this column about Smoke Signals, since that publication began dribbling into student circulation this week. The wisdom of restraint won out, however, so instead we are commenting on another magazine that hit the newsstands recently.

"1728 The Saturday Evening Post begins publication.

1883 The Ladies Home Journal changes a nation's habits.

1923 Time inaugurates the newsweekly idea.

1936 Life develops the picture magazine.

and now, WORLD."

With this optimistic prepublication publicity, World, or "Brave New World," as Time magazine dubbed it, issued this month. World is the successor publication of U. N. World, established six years ago as foreign policy magazine with no official connection with the international organization. It takes more than a good idea to make journalism pay, however, and U. N. World lost nearly a million dollars.

In an attempt to reclaim some of his lost investment, present publisher Roger S. Phillips of Phillips Gas and Oil Co., ditched the old magazine and began anew. The result has been welcomed by many critics, including the Christian Science Monitor, which said World "promises to be world-minded without being soft-headed, to be liberal without being left, to be distinguished without being stuffy."

A quick survey of the first issue reveals a wealth of solid information about international affairs and business. The lead article, for instance, is by Ernst Reuter, in his the "Last Message to the West." His political testament is entitled "The Way to Peace: Stand Up to Russia, Unite Germany Now." Serious students would do well to read this article by Germany's late distinguished leader.

Other articles include a pair on "The Mind of Asia," by Mrs. Lakshmi Menon and Chester Bowles, Parliamentary Secretary to Nehru and former US ambassador to India, respectively. Alfred Duff Cooper, former MP Cabinet member, writes on "Churchill before Sunset," and rounding out the feature articles is a picture story of Liberia, America's forgotten ward.

It Happens In Pairs

Operation Touchdown. That's how Talkin' Tom Nugent describes his team's first daytime game of the season tomorrow afternoon.

Borrowing a term from his former Air Force days, the Nuge simply means that his Seminoles are simply going to have to go and score more touchdowns than the South Carolina eleven. And it looks like he's right.

Nugent love his objective flatly on the line. "I have a feeling Furman can score against anybody," he says, "they're big and powerful, so our objective is to simply outscore them."

"If we can hold them to three or four touchdowns, then all we have to do is get three or four."

The fact is, Furman has scored on everyone they've played this season with the exception of Army. And in the five games they've won they have averaged 24 big points a game.

Nugent instituted a peculiar operation this week in order to find out who is best passer. After regular practice is over each day he has his four quarterbacks—Harry Massey, Leonard Swantic, Lee Corso and W. L. Harper throw 25 times in assorted pass patterns with the one throwing the most strikes designated the winner for the day. Then the one with the best average over the week starts the game Saturday.

W. L. Harper, the sparsely used freshman from Cairo, Ga., jumped out in front in this week's contest and Nugent says he wouldn't be surprised to see him start the game tomorrow.

Football injuries, like fires, kidnappings and the recent icebox deaths have a habit of occurring in pairs. Take for instance the shoulder injuries of Bobby Fiveash and his running mate, Stan Dubosz.

Against VMI Fiveash had no more settled down for his usual capable performance when — bang! out he went with a severe bruised shoulder on the second play of the game after colliding head-on with Nick Servidio, a fellow who the Seminoles no doubt wished had left along with Bobby.

Then last week, against Mississippi Southern, Dobosz got it in the same spot, same shoulder, and same situation. Oh yeah, it was the second play, too. The funny thing is, that the same thing happened to a Wisconsin halfback a couple of weeks ago. Wha's next?

Speaking of injuries, you've probably haven't noticed any of Nugent's lads on the shelf with the usual run of pulled muscles and charley horses which generally plague many football teams. The answer lies in the mark of a well-conditioned ball club.

FSU, Furman Meet Here Tomorrow

FIRST DAY TILT FOR SEMINOLES

Hurricanes Favored; Kickoff Set For 2

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

Furman's offensive-minded Hurricans provide tha opposition for Florida State tomorrow afternoon in Doak S. Campbell Stadium as the Seminoles make their first daytime appearance of the season. Kickoff time is 2 p.m.

The Southern Conference eleven, on the upswing after several seasons among the cellarites, bring an impressive 5-2 record into tomorrow's affair and the sixth best rushing average in the nation.

Boasting 32 lettermen, the Furmanites have rolled over Newberry (33-0), Citadel (27-0), Davidson (24-0), Wofford (7-6) and last week Presbyterian (18-0).

The only losses were to Army (41-0) and South Carolina (27-13).

TWO BACKFIELDS

Their running game is so good in fact, that Coach Bill Young alternates two backfields. One unit has Jim Boyle at quarterback, John Popson at left half, Ted Yakimowicz at right half and Bo Barry at fullback.

The other backfield has Gus Pringles at quarter, Charlie West at left half, Paul Stewart at right half and Bob Snead at the deep slot.

However, the Hurricane passing attack is a primary reason why the Hurricanes are among the nation's leaders in total offense. They possess three capable passes in Boyle, Pringles and Russ Sutton. And in lettermen ends, L. G. Hightower, Roland Barefoot and Frank Abernathy, they have three fine pass receivers.

Up front Furman is led by 1952 All-Carolina guard Vince Perone, tackles Dave Buffamoyer (225), Harold Pridemore (225), Joe Gilreath (200), and Gene Reed (210).

That's why the Seminoles will be a two to three-touchdown underdog to absorb their fifth defeat when the two clubs collide for the second time in two years tomorrow. Furman defeated the Seminoles 9-0 here last year in the Tribe's homecoming.

Coach Tom Nugent's lads have won over Louisville (59-0), VMI (12-7), and lost to Miami (27-0), Abilene Christian (20-7), and Louisiana Tech (32-21).

So with Furman's offensive prowess in mind, the emphasis has been on defense out on the East Campus practice field this week.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the Tribe varsity went through long defensive scrimmages against reserve units employing Furman plays. In addition the passing game received a thorough once-over as did line pass protection, kicking and pass defense.

Physically, the Indians are in top shape save for Bobby Fiveash and Stan Dobosz. Fiveash, injured in the VMI tussle, will probably see some action but Dobosz, injured against Southern last week, is definitely out, according to Nugent. Both have been nursing shoulder ailments.

JAYVEES PLAY GORDON TEAM

To Seek Fourth Win In Statesboro, Ga.

Florida State junior varsity gridders will be looking for their fourth win of the season tomorrow night at Statesboro, Ga., when they go against Gordon Military College in a return tilt.

The "B" squadders who defeated Gordon 19-12 here last Saturday night own wins over Middle Georgia (32-7) and Tyndall AFB (7-0). Their only loss came at the hands of strong South Georgia (18-12)

Spearhead of the Jayvee attack is Ray Mercer, 5-10, 180-pound fullback from Moultrie, Ga. Mercer transferred to FSU from Auburn where he was a first-string halfback as a freshman.

However, Mercer has a capable partner in halfback James McClellan of Monticello. McClellan was a standout in last week's win over Gordon.

Up front, guard Wesley Holden, end Tom Price and tackle Ed Titus are the standouts. Noticeably absent in tomorrow night's tilt will be giant (6-7, 245-pound) end Tom Feamster who is out with a knee injury.

The lineup: LE, Sam Griffis; LT, Ed Titus; LG, Wesley Holden; C, Gene Phillips; RG, Percey Steele; RT, Gene Fuller; RE, Tom Price; QB, Charles Mendel; LH, James McClellan, and FB, Mercer.

Intramural Football Race Thrown Into Tight Scramble

By ART KENNERLY

The dam broke over in the intramural leagues during the past week and several teams got their feet wet.

Tricks were pulled in the fraternity league. Last Tuesday the SAE's got out their lion and rode bareback through their game with the foxy Theta Chis. The SAE boys scratched and clawed to near-miss victory. The Theta Chi crew lost by one first down. The SAE team managed to tie the score 6-6, and they wiggled out on top four first downs to the Theta Chi's three.

Sigma Chi knocked SPE down the ladder when they won over the elephant owners 18-0. The KA ungentlemanly rebel gentlemen won over Pi Kappa Phi 6-0. The Phi Delts and the Lambda Chis battled to a 0-0 tie. But Phi Delt squeezed through on top three first downs to two.

Sigma Nu won for the first time this year, beating Pi KA 18-6. The Kappa Sigs went to work on the Phi Taus and hammered out a 7-0 win.

On Wednesday two playoffs were ground out. Kappa Sig lost to SPE 13-0. And the Phi Delts lost to the ATO's 12-0.

This makes the record stand like a jigsaw puzzle. In one league KA and the Delts are in the semi-finals. In the other league, ATO leads the field in a semi-finals mix-up that will see six teams play off for the championship bid: Theta Chi, ATO, SPE, Sigma Chi, Lambda Chi, and Phi Delt.

In the dormitory league things were thrown into a turmoil when illegal players, forfeits, and screwed-up records came into the picture. Senior Hall, Magnolia Hall, the Rebels, and the Penthouse Gang lead the dormitory race. Due to the mix-up and possible elimination of some of the better teams because of illegalities, the dormitories are not as formidable in the intramural race now as they were at the first of the year.

Taylor Picks All Local Teams

By BOB TAYLOR

Whitney Martin and Major Hoople better look out, or I'll have their jobs after a 78 per cent weekend. But this week a lot of grid rivalries will be renewed, and the ole .702 average looks shaky already. So here goes.

You know, Furman has a pretty fair ball club this year, and the Purple 'Canes looked convincing in their 9-0 win here last year. But after tossing the proverbial coin, it looks like FSU, but don't spot any points.

Other local games see Leon over Bishop Kenny in a romp, and A&M over Allen U. The Rattlers after their eighth straight.

Georgia Tech over Alabama in the SEC's hair-raising headliner . . . Auburn over Georgia, in another tight fracas . . . Clemson over Citadel . . . Kentucky over Memphis State. Steve and his gang in anothero ne.

Tennessee over Florida, keeping the jinx alive . . . LSU over Mississippi St., vindicating last week's loss . . George Washington over Davidson . . . Cincinnati over VMI . . . Miami over Virginia Tech.

Maryland over Mississippi to go on undefeated . . . Mississippi Southern over Louisiana Tech, one of them has got to lose, almost . . . Pitt over NC St. . . . William and Mary over Richmond.

Notre Dame over North Carolina, hold it down Frank . . . South Carolina over West Virginia, in the upset of the week . . . Tulane over Vandy . . . Virginia over Wash. and Lee . . . Arkansas Tech over Tampa . . . and Stetson over whoever they play, I forgot.

MIDWEST

Illinois over Wisconsin, on their way to the big bowl . . . Northwestern over Indiana . . . Oklahoma over Iowa St. . . . Minnesota over Iowa, but not by much . . . Kansas St. over Missouri, this one against my better judgment.

Kansas over Oklahoma A&M . . Michigan St. over Michigan . . Nebraska over Colorado . . . and Purdue to come up with one of those giant-killers again over Ohio State.

SMU over Arkansas . . . Baylor over Houston, on the rebound . . . Rice over Texas A&M . . . Tulsa over Texas Tech . . . and Texas over TCU.

California over underrated Oregon . College of the Pacific over Idaho . . . Wash. St. over Oregon St. . . . Stanford over San Jose St. . . . Utah over Colorado A&M . . and UCLA over Washington.

Army over Penn, too much letdown for the Quakers after last week . . . Detroit over Boston C. . . . Villanova over Boston U. . . . Harvard over Brown . . . Syracuse over Colgate.

Navy over Columbia . . . Cornell over Dartmouth . . . Fordham over Temple . . . Marquette over Holy Cross . . . Penn St. over Rutgers . . . and Princeton over Yale.

Slippery Rock closes out its season against Westminister. And after last week's 30-0 loss to Clarion St., they should close. But we pick them to win this one for old times sake. Incidentally, Slippery Rock is in Pennsylvania.

Waiters Are Needed

Twenty to twenty-five male students are needed to serve at banquets given two or three nights a week at the Suwannee Room of the Cafeteria, spokesmen for their department said today. Waiters will be paid 65 cents an hour and waiting experience is not necessary, they noted.

The first twenty-five men to apply for these positions will be put on the list, to be called on as they are needed.

Interested students should see Mrs. Fletcher at the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement.

Dean-Counselors' Meet Tests Students for Social Impacts

Reactions of five average high school students to some major social problems will have the full attention of the Florida Association of Deans and Counselors at a wind-up luncheon meeting tomorrow here.

Dr. Mildred Morgan, professor of home and family life at Florida State University and chairman of the division of family relations and child development of the American Home Economics Association, will serve as moderator for the demonstration.

IT WILL BE spontaneous. None of the participants will know ahead of time what problem they will tackle. Choice of problem will be left entirely up to the teenagers who may decide on any personal concern from "Dating" to "Good Grooming." Dr. Morgan will advise them as they proceed.

The demonstration is a sample of programs planned for the two-day meeting designed to get more guidance service started in Florida schools at all levels, from elementary grades on through colleges and universities.

THIS IS THE fourth annual workshop the organization has had, and the first held on a university campus. Previous workshops have been held in Orlando, St Petersburg and Jacksonville. The organization meets twice a year. In addition to getting together for the workshop, it convenes annually in conjunction with the meeting of the Florida Education Association.

Dr. Harold Cottingham, associate professor of psychology at FSU, and Dr. Melvene Hardee, FSU coordinator of guidance, are co-chairmen for program arrangements.

Lakeland Wins Contest Prize In Journalism

Top honors in the first series of the Florida State University School Press Tournament-By-Mail go to Lakeland High School's student newspaper, Bagpipe, according to Dean Laurence R. Campbell of the FSU School of Journalism.

The Bagpipe won a first class rating in four of the contests and a second place rating in the other two contests, according to Dean Campbell who said the tournament-by-mail for Florida high schools is to be an annual FSU project.

Entries were judged in competition in news story, editorial, sports, feature, advertisement and photograph contests.

Leading newspapers in the first tournament-by-mail series in addition to The Bagpipe were Tornado Whirl, Bay County High School, The Pioneer, E L Constance High School, CHS Chatter, Clearwater High School Palmetto and Pine, St. Petersburg High School.

Leading junior high newspapers in the contests were Put It Blountly, Blount Junior High School, and The Mirror, Mirror Lake Junior High School.

At National Caucus Lunch Officers Meet

Mrs. Lucy Parson, school lunch director at the Florida State University Demonstration School, is among 20 official delegates from Florida who will attend the convention in Boston, Mass. of the American School Food Service Association. The meeting began Wednesday and runs through today.

Mrs. Parsons is president of the Florida School Food Service Association.

Five other delegates from Tallahassee will also attend the convention. They are: Mrs. Thelma Flanagan, Miss Doris Bilger, Mrs. Bessie Weems, and Mrs. Charliemae Johnson.

Next year's national convention will be held for the first time in Florida at Miami.

Openings Available

Dr. Vordenberg, director of the University Personnel Office, states that there are openings for jobs here for alumni who are interested.

Dr. Vordenberg commented that there are many secretarial positions open at the present.

Court Notices

Thirty-two students received tickets for traffic violations and were brought before the Student Traffic Court this week.

Eighteen students were apprehended for parking overtime and other no parking zones on campus. Thirteen were given warnings; two were fined $.50 each; one was fined $1.00; and one was fined $1.50.

Fifteen students were found not to have a university car sticker. All students that use their cars on campus must display such a sticker, and they can be obtained in Room 104 Westcott.

Those students who failed to appear before the court will be notified to appear next Tuesday at 8 00 p.m. in the Longmire Building or will be considered guilty for failure to appear.

Foundation Offers Graduate Positions In Science Field

Students of Florida State University who wish to apply for post-graduate assistance in the field of Biological Engineering, Mathematical, Medical, and Physical Sciences, can make application for one of the National Science Foundation Fellowships, it was announced recently. The foundation plans to award stipends to approximately 750 students in the United States for the 1954-55 school year. Stipends will range from $1 400 to $3 400 per year.

In order to be considered for the 1954-55 academic year, post-doctoral applications must be received in the Fellowship Office of the National Research Council by December 15, 1953. Graduate applications must be received in the same office by January 4 1954. These application forms are available at the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement. abroad, the United Nations, "What's Ahead," and so forth. In line with the current trend for "confidential" information, regular subscribers will receive "Word Cable," in between issues of the magazine.

An interesting story in the new magazine is "How Pravda Is Made," written from "hitherto restricted data." "If an American publisher ran his newspaper the way the Russians operate Pravda, he would go broke in a couple of weeks," states World. Though Pravda usually consists of only four pages, there are 2,500 people on the payroll, of which 1500 are part time local correspondents.

The PRAVDA staffer lives well. He has full use of a private car; passes to the cinema, the theater, the ballet, the concert hall; first-class accommodations on trains and in resort hotels; a good table and small check in the best restaurants. The collaborators-editors are generally allowed ten to fifteen days to write a single article, in order to check the party line. PRAVDA, after all is supreme in its critical judgments, whether they be in politics, industrial news, or art.

Pravda's circulation is about two and a half million, being distributed from Moscow to all Communist capitals and the free world as well. Incidentally, World's circulation is about 82,000, and Smoke Signals runs about 3500.

Howard Names Final Beauties For Cover Girl

One of the sixteen finalists chosen last week from the bevies of candidates in the Calendar Girl contest staged by FSU's humor magazine, Smoke Signals, will appear on the cover of the magazine's December issue as "Miss Smoke Signals of 1954," Editor John Howard announced yesterday.

Finalists from among twenty girls are Marlies Gessler, Joan Lee, Betty Willmon, Nancy Warner, Shirley Harper and Deane Jackson. Also, Gail Tomlinson, June Yates, Ann Yates, Jackie Harrell, Dot Johnson, Sarah Hambley and Anita Wall.

THE THIRTEEN girls, twelve of whom will represent the months of the year on the inside pages of the Smoke Signals, were chosen by a board of judges consisting of University officials and staff members Dean Katherine Warren, vice-president A. B. Martin, Mr. Yaegert of the Art Department, Mr. Slaughter of the Journalism Department and Milton Carothers, president of the FSU Student Body. Howard issued a statement of thanks to those on the judging panel for their contribution of time to the contest.

The editor also released an announcement that Acting Governor Charlie Johns has consented to crown the Cover Girl when her name is revealed and she is presented at the annual Pan-Hellenic Dance on December 12 in the Suwannee Room here. In a letter to Howard, Governor Johns said, "It will be my pleasure to crown 'Miss Smoke Signals of 1954'"

ACCORDING TO HOWARD, the contest was a big success this year and "student participation was great."

"I congratulate the managing editor and contest chairman, Margaret Horrox, on a job well done," he added.

Pre-Game Parade Saturday Morning Proves Successful

School spirit at Florida State University can't be dead, according to head Cheerleader Shirley Knight Revell when she commented yesterday on the pep parade turnout last Saturday prior to the FSU-Furman game.

Mrs. Revell said sororities, fraternities and independents alike filled a two-block-long motorcade and fired the pre-game celebration with "enthusiasm to rate among the best of them." She said the parade of gayly decorated cars spread out a good two blocks and circled around campus rousing spirit up all the way around. The motorcade, complete with police escort, filed past dormitories, fraternities and sororities and ended at Campbell Stadium followed by a cheering croad.

Mrs. Revell said she spoke for all the pepsters in saying thanks to the FSU student body for the cooperation and "great showing." She added that the squad hopes Florida Staters will continue showing school spirit all along as various events come up. She said this is a necessary item and one which other colleges and universities look for in a "big school."

Students Present Play Tomorrow At Wesley House

Methodist students of the Wesley Foundation here will present a play, He Couldn't Marry Five tomorrow night at 7.30 p.m. in the Methodist Student House, West Jefferson St.

Open to the public and free of charge, the play is a comedy in three acts starring Bill Summers and Ralph Barton. Summers will play the hero, Donald Regan and Graham Owen portrays Ralph Barton. Other members of the cast making up Barton's family include Jane Huskinson as Mother, and the five daughters, objects of the play's plot. They are April, played by June Smith, May, portrayed by June Simmons, June by Susan Weisenbarger, Tarris played by June Misell and Leona by June Barber.

THE PLOT CONCERNS the hero's recuperation from a nervous breakdown brought on by over-indulgence in sports. During his convalescence, Regan visits a member of his wealthy father's firm and proceeds to fall in love with all five of the eligible daughters of the family.

Other members of the cast include Germaine Murray as Aunt Etta Barton, and Granny played by Mary Harvey. Directing the play is Hasel Bryant.

Scientists Jungle-Bound On Shoe-String Budget

Two young Florida scientists on a shoe-string budget left here yesterday for a six months to a year motorcycle's expedition through the jungles of Central America.

The men, H. Morgan Smith, 26, anthropologist, and H. Robin Mills, 27, geographer, arrived here a week ago after a 245 mile shakedown run from St. Petersburg, their home and expedition starting point.

BOTH MEN, graduates of Florida State University in June this year, stopped in Tallahassee to re-rig their gear and to receive the load of material, such as jungle hammocks, and technical advice from the university's Department of Anthropology and Archaeology under Dr. Hale Smith, head.

Known as the Zundapp Mid-American Expedition, the scientists in cooperation with the FSU Department of Anthropology and Archaeology, will do anthropological research.

THEIR ACTIVITIES will take them 10,000 miles through Mexico, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, with their destination as Panama City, Panama

Mills said their route to Panama is about 8,000 miles with 4,000 added for scouting and exploratory trips along the way.

"We will gather material and specimens for laboratory and exhibits for the Florida State University Museum and for further graduate study" Smith said.

THE TWO MEN will photograph, sketch and collect surface collections of pottery, bones and implements, and will photograph and survey areas of prehistoric human occupation.

"Another phase of our work will be ethnobotanical and ethnographical research," Smith said. "This will include cataloging vegetation both edible and that used in the manufacturing of clothing and articles by the native tribes."

SMITH RECEIVED his BS in anthropology. He was director of the Florida State University Panama expedition which did archaeological and ethnobotanical research, and was a member of the recent Florida State University botanical and archaeological expedition to Cuba.

Mills received his BS in geography and has spent one semester at the Inter-American Summer School, Saltillo, Mexico.

THE MEN SAID they intend to make the entire trip overland with no recourse to commercial transport . . . "That is with the exception of burros or native canoes," Smith added.

Two specially-equipped Enduro model Zundapp motorcycles are being supplied to the expedition by the International Motorcycle Company of New York, through the local distributor in St. Petersburg.

The motorcycles have raised exhausts and "snorkel" tubes on the carburetors to prevent them from drowning out while fording small streams.

THE YOUNG SCIENTISTS got their money the hard way, and it took a long time. Almost a year before their planned kickoff day this November, they began a money raising campaign.

This included baby sitting, house painting, cutting and selling fire wood, clearing land and selling orchids (which Smith grew), among other things. Now they have a slim budget to work from. They said they will live off the land if they have to.

THE OVERLAND TRIP may be first. "We understand from the American Automobile Association and a road map service that there is no record of this trip being completed before on a power vehicle," Smith said.

He added that there are several stretches on the route where there is no road, only a jungle trail or path, particularly in the Costa Rica region from San Isidro del General to El Volcan, Panama.

Their route will take them through Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, Brownsville and across the proposed Pan-American Highway through Mexico City, Oaxaca and Tehuantepec, on to Panama.

Counselors Attend Workshop; Hear Guidance Chairman Here

One hundred and twenty-one Florida educators, deans, and counselors attended the Fourth Annual Workshop of the Florida Association of Deans and Counselors Friday and Saturday at FSU.

The series of workshops and individual programs was highlighted with a speech by Dr. Nicholas Hobbs, chairman of the Division of Human Development and Guidance, George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville.

DR. HOBBS, speaking on the topic "The Social Scientist in the Field of Guidance" said that the counselors seal to work with a group may be receiving too much emphasis over individual work.

He stressed the fact the guidance must with individuals themselves as well as with individuals in relation to others.

Dr. Hobbs said, that the meaning and function of guidance have been lost.

Dr. Melvene Hardee, FSU coordinator of guidance, and Dr. Harold Cottingham, FSU associate professor of education, were program co-chairmen for the workshop.

The program included two panel discussions. One was on "Achieving Functional Guidance Services" and was led by Miss Audrey Atherton, Counselor, Coral Gables Junior High School.

THE OTHER was a panel of five Leon County high school students who discussed problems concerning teen-agers. This group was led by Dr. Mildred Morgan, Professor, Home and Family Life, FSU, and closed out the two-day program.

Miss Helen Lynch, Dean of Girls, St. Petersburg High School, presided at the opening session Friday.

Individual workshops and discussions included: "Guidance Developments in Florida," led by Garland Wynn Jr., Horace Mann Junior High, Miami; "Southern Region Guidance Developments," led by Dr. Robert O. Stripling, College of Education, University of Florida; "Plans for the Future at the State Level," led by Dr. Victor E. Johnson, consultant, Florida State Department of Education.

ARTICULATION problems, home, elementary, senior high; Articulation problems, senior high-college; school and community resources; initiating guidance services; counseling problems at the high school level; Counseling problems at the college level; tests and appraisal devises; and guidance service as an aid in improving the school program

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, president of FSU, gave the welcoming address. Dr. Cottingham presided over the session at which Dr. Hobbs spoke. Miss Lynch presided over the next-to-final session and Miss Katherine Warren, FSU Dean of Women, presided at the final luncheon meeting.

Students Vote On Amendment About Officers

The entire student body will go to the lower Westcott poll today to vote in a constitutional election called by University Senate, provided the measure gained the approval of the Faculty Committee last night.

Students will vote in favor of, or against an amendment to the Student Body constitution concerning house presidents' offices in the various campus dormitories. The measure states that any man or woman living in a University-operated residence hall will be qualified, under the Student Body Constitution, to hold office of house president subject to the criteria set up by the dormitory constitution

POLLS WILL BE open 9 to 5 p.m. today and will be manned by meo of the Sophomore Council. Sue Rivers under-secretary of elections said in an interview yesterday.

Rivers said the University-wide referendum has been spurred on due to difficulties encountered at West Hall, new men's dormitory here. He said the present Student Body Constitution stipulates that no freshman can hold the major office of governor of a dormitory.

HOWEVER, the West Hall Constitution originally had made no such stipulation, and men there elected a freshman to the office of governor at the first of the year.

It has been learned since, that two other men's halls have also elected freshman governors, Rivers said. These officers are invalid, however, because no dormitory constitution can over-rule the Student Body constitution.

Bulletin

The proposed Constitutional amendment was rejected by the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs last night, so the scheduled referendum will not be held today. The Committee was reported to consider the measure "unwise at this time."

Vote Today Decides Homecoming Queen

Carothers, Conyers Air FSU Student Opinions

Milton Carothers, president of the Florida State University Student Body, and June Conyers, president of Women's Senate, will represent FSU at the annual National Conference of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions to be held at the University of Florida November 30 to December 5, it was learned today.

Carothers said he and Miss Conyers will be part of a six-man panel discussion at the conference representing the three major universities of the state They will be asked to mirror FSU student views on several major areas in the operation of state schools such as FSU.

IN A LETTER from Hollis Rinehart, chairman of the Florida State Board of Control, Carothers and Conyers have been asked to discuss "What's good, bad or indifferent with the way in which our universities are being administered by their respective governing bodies, presidents, faculty committees, student councils, etc."

In a "dress rehearsal" held last Friday at Gainesville to prepare the six members of the panel on what points to discuss, five major topics were decided on, according to Carothers. Plans include discussion on Governing Boards of the Universities and should students be allowed to sit in on such national meetings af the governing bodies of the various national institutions.

ADMINISTRATION, including questions on the President, Dean of Students, student services and the like; Faculty committees and should the students be placed on faculty committees when they meet; extra-curricular activities and the questions they engross, and Student Government problems.

Carothers said also present Friday were two representatives from University of Florida and University of Miami. He said the six members reached the above points after about several hours of discussion.

WHEN QUESTIONED as to the choice of FSU representatives, Carothers said he didn't know how he and Miss Conyers were chosen. He said he received a letter from the State Board of Control advising him of his selection to take part in the conference

"On seeing President Campbell for further information," he added, "the President said he couldn't advise me on what to say. He left it entirely up to June and myself" Later Carothers received the final decision on topics in the Rinehart letter

QUESTIONED ON the purpose of the rehearsal, Milton said, "We had no idea what we were going to discuss when we left here Friday, but we wanted to find out what the other two schools were going to talk about at the panel in December." He added that the three schools' representatives agreed on most points and that University of Florida and Florida State "agreed almost on everything discussed."

The national conference is held once a year at different member schools. This will be the first time students have been invited to participate in the meeting of the body that recommends policy for state-administered schools.

FSU Coach Named Member Of 1956 Olympic Committee

By BOB GUTTING

Dr. Hartley Price, Florida State gymnastic coach, has been appointed Senior member of the 1956 Olympic Games Committee for the sport of gymnastics, it was announced recently.

Dr. Price, who previously served on the 1940 and 1952 committees, was selected over a field of dozens of prominent gymnastics coaches throughout the nation. Other well known NCAA representatives who will serve on the committee include Erwin F. Beyer, University of Chicago, Eugene Wettstone, Pennsylvania State College, Ralph A Piper, University of Minnesota, Anthony Rossi, Colorado State College, and C. W. Phillips, United States Naval Academy.

DR. PRICE HAS long been associated with gymnastics. When he came to Florida State in 1948 he left behind a tradition of Gymkana spectacles at Illinois. He has coached national team championship winners in the United States for several years.

Dr Price seems to be a sort of Pied Piper in the gymnastics world. When he came to FSU many of the greats of the gym world followed him here including Bill Roetzheim, United States Olympic Team, Jack Miles, 1951 NAAU Rings Champion, Jack Sharp, 1952 NCAA Rings Champion, Gene Rabbitt, 1952 NAAU Side Horse Champion, Dick Gutting, 1951 NCAA Trampoline Champion, and Joe Calvetti, NCAA High Bar Champ.

UNDER DR. PRICE'S tutelage this team made a grand slam in gymnastics competition in 1951 and 1952. They captured everything in the books including, of course, the most coveted NCAA and NAAU titles, thus bringing fame to the southland, for this was the first time in gymnastics history that either an NCAA or NAAU title was won by a team from south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Chem Dept. Plans Open House Friday In Science Building

The Florida State University Chemistry Department will bring an innovation here Friday afternoon with their Open House from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. in the Science Building.

Student Affiliates of the American Chemical Association will be on campus to present an exhibit of chemical devices and discoveries which are found in everyday life, it was said. Included in the exhibit are spectroscopes, chemicals used in cancer research and, the notice said, students will see the laboratory where a substance was found to prevent the souring of milk.

Margaret Neiler, Student Affiliates vice-president, said all students, alumni and friends are urged to add the Chemistry Open House to their list of busy Homecoming activities.

Five Contend To Don Crown At Festivities

Five beauteous co-eds here will vie today for Homecoming Queen of 1953 when students go to the Westcott polls to vote in the final runoffs.

Thursday's and Friday's bevy of campus aspirants for the reigning crown, numbering 38 in all, was narrowed down to finalists Sally Hamner, Betty Jo Miller, Anita Wall, Betty Willman and Ann Yates Results of vote-counting Friday night showed the top five candidates received a total vote of 1250, said Bob Canada, overall chairman of the contest, who added a note of clarification.

CANADA SAID that each time a candidate's number appeared on a ballot it was counted. "However," he added, "if a girl's number appeared more than once on the same ballot, it still only counted as one vote" Canada said he came across a number of such tabs, but that on the whole, the votes were properly marked and it seemed that each knew every number he put down would count as one vote, even if duplicated.

Polling procedure requires only one vote per person today to select the final choice for queen. Th five finalists will appear on today's ballot, but voters are only to mark one choice.

Booths at Lower Westcott will be open from 9 a m till 9 and Canada has assured a swift counting. However, he said the queen's name will not be released until Friday when she is presented at the Pow Wow at Campbell Stadium

Today's finalists are Sally Hamner, Pi Beta Phi, sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity; Betty Jo Miller, Kappa Delta, sponsored by Theta Chi fraternity; Anita Wall, Kappa Alpha Theta, sponsored by North Cawthon, women's residence hall; Betty Willman, Kappa Alpha Theta, sponsored by Kappa Alpha fraternity; and Ann Yates, Zeta Tau Alpha, sponsored by Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

RESULTS of the two-day polling showed that about 2,000 students cast votes Thursday and Friday. Canada had extended the voting another day, a precedent in Homecoming Queen competition. He said this was done for two reasons. One, two candidates qualified for the race and turned in photographs late "for excused reasons." Two, the voting up till Thursday noon, Canada said, was abnormally slow and it was feared there would not be a fair representation of the total voting populace here.

Canada, following the vote-counting Friday night, said he wanted to especially thank certain people for their "splendid cooperation and aid" during the contest. "Orchids to the girls of Sophomore Council," he said. They did a great job tending the polls and counting votes. He added, "Special thanks go to Nancy Vaughn for her able assistance and for being on call whenever we needed her."

The elections chief also expressed gratitude to Mr. Fred Vogel, coordinator of all student organizations and such activities here. "Without people like Mr. Vogel pulling for us," Canada said, "we wouldn't have nearly as smooth a time arranging elections such as these."

Officers Installed At Thursday Rites For Frosh Class

William Stancik, Secretary of Elections, installed the newly elected Freshman Class officers last Thursday evening in the Opperman Music Hall. Over 400 Freshmen were present to see their officers installed and to hear the annual three torches ceremony which is sponsored by Garnet Key.

The part of the narrator, whose voice was heard from back stage, was taken by Chris Young, senior senator. Margaret Jean Parham, Carolyn Gola and Rick Hutto explained the meaning of the three torches pictured on the Florida State University emblem.

After Stancik presented the Freshmen with their certificates of election, Chris Young closed the ceremony with the poem "The Torch."

Officers installed were George Hill, president, Ken Brock, vice-president, Pat Smith, Secretary, Jane Howard, treasurer, Ruth Ann Whittle, social chairman, and Senators Jimmy Soles, Jane Soper, James Moore, Carolyn Close, Dave Bachman, and Jo Jones.

'Can Honors Be Spread?' Asked Of 'Who's Who'

When is an honor not an honor?

That is a question students, particularly student body leaders, might well ask themselves.

Look for a moment at the various honors that might be bestowed on a senior.

He can be Gold Key or Garnet Key, ODK or Mortarboard. He can be named to the Tally-Ho Hall of Fame or Student Government's Hall of Fame.

Or he can be in Who's Who.

It is about Who's Who in American Colleges that we want to speak just now. Is it such a great honor and does it add anything to the FSU campus? Is it essentially a commercial enterprise and does it merely duplicate other honors?

There are usually two major arguments made in favor of Who's Who. First, it is said that employers take membership in Who's Who into consideration when filling positions, and that of two otherwise similarly qualified candidates the person so honored would have the advantage. Second, it is maintained that by adding another honor to the present campus list more students will be able to be "honored."

We feel there is considerable fallacy in both these arguments.

Who's Who in American Colleges, despite its high-sounding name, is not a standard reference work in the sense that Who's Who in America is. It is published by a company that is interested in selling the book itself, as well as rings, class pins and the like.

Conceivably there are employers who might take mention in Who's Who into account when hiring graduates, but it is our guess that these would be the comparative few who themselves were once mentioned. A book does not become an authority by the simple virtue of being printed. It must have more acceptance than the one we are considering now.

This brings us to the second and far larger question: What is an honor?

Experience hardly seems to bear out the contention that creating more honors adds substantially to the number of persons honored. It would be interesting to notice how many people in last year's Tally Ho's Hall of Fame, for instance, were also either in Gold Key or Garnet Key. It will be interesting, too, to see how many of this year's Student Body Hall of Fame are either in the two above mentioned honoraries or in ODK or Mortarboard.

This question of "spreading" honors does not quite reach the core of the argument, however. We must go a little deeper and examine the idea that "honors" can be created.

We may be old-fashioned, but we always thought honor was something a man merited by virtue of some achievement or group of achievements. The honor would therefore exist whether one or a hundred groups cited a person for his acts . . . indeed, it should exist even though no one acclaim him.

Of course, it's nice to be recognized for what one does, but the idea that one goes around "creating" honors is juvenile, to say the least. Looking at things in this light, it seems a little foolish to worry about seeing that a lot of people are "honored."

How thin can honor be spread?

Tampa Tribune Requests Ruling On Succession of Governorship

The death of Governor Dan McCarty seven weeks ago has left Florida's state government floundering in the worst confusion which has befallen it in modern times.

As a people we don't know from one day to the next what duly appointed state official will be hustled off to the political guillotine at the whim of the spoilsman who now holds the Governor's chair.

We don't know positively that there will be an election next year to choose a new Governor, even though one candidate already has qualified.

We don't know, if there is an election, whether the man who wins it will be eligible to succeed himself at the end of his two-year term.

And, what is most important, we don't know whether we are stuck with Senate President Charley Johns as Acting Governor until 1957 or only until 1955.

Much of this confusion is caused by the inadequacies of Florida's 1885 model Constitution, which should have been rewritten long ago. But a large part of it is chargeable to Mr. Johns himself.

The turmoil in state government created by the firing of honorable officeholders on technical or trumped-up charges of misconduct is entirely on his own doing. There was no need for it; there is no justice in it.

And it was Mr. Johns and lawyers friendly to him who first cast doubt upon the people's right to choose their own successor Governor. Until these lawyers began producing interpretations of the Constitution which would keep the Senate president in the Governor's office until 1957, it was regarded in Tallahassee and elsewhere as an accepted fact that a new Governor to fill out McCarty's term would be elected next year.

Yet, after raising this disturbing question, Mr. Johns does nothing to resolve it. He has the constitutional power to ask the State Supreme Court for an advisory opinion which would settle the issue once and for all. But he delays. Meanwhile, rumors spread over the state that Johns appointees are being "assured" they will keep their jobs until 1957.

This is an unwholesome situation.

It is especially unwholesome because, one way or another, the Supreme Court eventually must decide for how long Senator Johns holds the powers of Governor—and, as Acting Governor, Senator Johns is the man who will fill any vacancies which may occur on the Supreme Court. One of the seven justices currently is on sick leave; another is in his 70's and eligible for retirement. It is therefore entirely possible that before the 1954 general election Acting Governor Johns will have the opportunity to appoint one or more justices to the court. It is also possible that he would appoint lawyers who interpret the Constitution as giving him three more years in the governorship instead of one.

As for the theory advanced by some of Mr. Johns' lawyer friends that the president of the Senate has the same relationship to the Governor that the Vice President of the United States has to the President — well, we find no more substance in it than we can grasp in a fog bank.

This theory rests upon six words of Section 19 of Article IV of the Constitution: That part saying that in event of the death or disability of the Governor his powers devolve upon the president of the Senate "for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease; . . . The theorists argue this means Senator Johns serves the rest of the McCarty term, or until 1957.

But what of the last sentence of Section 19, reading: "But should there be a general election for members of the legislature during such vacancy, an election for Governor to fill the same shall be had at the same time." Oh, that, say the theorists, refers to any vacancy occurring after the Senate president has assumed the governorship.

Then what about a later provision of the Constitution, Section 9 of Article XVIII, which provides there shall be a general election every two years for state and county officeholders whose terms are expiring "or for any elective office that shall have become vacant?" But the vacancy in the governorship is filled when the Senate president steps in, say the theorists.

It doesn't take a law degree to understand the English language. We think any layman who reads carefully the two pertinent sections of the Constitution reprinted here can have no doubt that their clear intent is to make the Senate president the temporary trustee of the governorship until the people can choose a successor.

But, as we have remarked once before, it makes no difference how we read the Constitution or how Senator reads it or how his lawyers read it. What counts is how the Supreme Court interprets it.

The responsibility to seek that interpretation rests squarely upon Mr. Johns. If he continues to fiddle while the issue burns, then we think, as Rep. Willard Ayres of Ocala suggested the other day, the responsibility passes to Attorney General Ervin as the state's chief legal officer. He can force a decision, presumably, by the procedure of filing a suit questioning Brailey Odham's qualification as a candidate.

Whatever the proper means to get the question before the court, it should be taken. Blowing away this fog is the first necessary step in returning Florida to political normalcy.

Let It Be Said

By DICK VICTORY

Introducing and maintaining a column in an original light is like brushing your teeth with paint remover, for when the veneer or enamel wears off, we see it as it really is, a dull, insensible, quality with no real use or meaning.

Let It Be Said will attempt to capture permanently the truth of any matter as I see it, in a novel light. If one word can be descriptive, then it is satire. Lest originality and satire seem incompatible because satire is accepted by most as one's opinion on an established principle, etc., I must remind the reader that penetrating wit can also be classified satire.

So much for definition.

It will also be the policy of this column to present a four-line riddle or poem for the sake of those who care to read it. It may be timely. Or morbidly untimely. I can say definitely, though, that it will be four-lined. For example, currently with Steve Allen's recordings on legend and fantasy, many a false premise has been overlooked.

If Mary had a little lamb,
With fleece as white as snow—
Then, where O where is the little ram,
Yes, where O where did he go?

Everybody is seeking truth. Even me. Thus if I see a person that deserves to be described as looking like he or she was in a hatchet fight without a hatchet, the person will be described as such.

If my Milton Berle does happen to come out, I hope I don't get canned and become as frustrated as a writer friend of mine. The only thing he's getting published these days are letters to the editor.

Speaking of writers, one kind or another, have you read or seen Tennessee's latest? It's called A TRUCK NAMED PICKUP, with Martin Stinkosomuch. It concerns a mechanic who gets mixed up in the black market cloth industry. It seems his wife has a passion for ripping up undershirts. Real involved.

His remarkable performance cost him the chance to be cast in How Green Was My Envy in Chlorocolor.

Enough, enough.

I shall now bring this forward to a halt, realizing that one can write a wrong much easier than one can right a wrong. I've just proved it.

So now you know what to expect. Be prepared, Mother.

From the Florida Constitution

Article IV

SECTION 19 Impeachment, death, resignation, etc., of governor: who to act.—In case of the impeachment of the Governor, his removal from office, death, resignation or inability to discharge his official duties, the powers and duties of Governor shall devolve upon the President of the Senate for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease; and in case of the impeachment, removal from office, death, resignation or inability of the President of the Senate, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Speaker of the House of Representatives. But should there be a general election for members of the Legislature during such vacancy, an election for Governor to fill the same shall be had at the same time.

Article XVIII

SECTION 9 General elections.—A general election shall be held in each county in this State on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1896, and every two years thereafter, for all elective State and County officers, whose terms of office are about to expire, or for any elective office that shall have become vacant.

Letter to Editor

Thanks

Fellow Freshman,

Thank you for the support that I received in my campaign. I'm sure that if I receive the same support for the Freshman carnival, it will be a big success.

I also would like to thank the other candidates that ran against me, for putting up such a clean campaign.

I am looking forward to knowing as many of you as possible throughout the school year, so that we can work closer together.

Until we do meet, and after we do meet, I'm yours for a better Freshman class than ever before.

Sincerely,

NIMKOFF TO SPEAK

The International Students Club will meet tomorrow Nov. 18 at 7:30 p.m. in Student Lounge of the Longmire Building.

Dr. Meyer Nimkoff, head of Sociology Department, will speak on "American Society: Family Life." All those interested are invited.

SPONSOR ELECTED

Miss Dorothy Johnson has been selected sponsor for the Florida State University chapter of the Arnold Air Society, honorary fraternity for Air Force ROTC cadets, according to Cadet Colonel C. M. Booth, president of the FSU Arnold Air Squadron.

Dot's first official duties will be to take charge of the tapping ceremonies, scheduled to be held on the drill field west of Building 121 at noon next Thursday. Names of new members will not be revealed until the time of the ceremony, according to Booth, who said all faculty and students are invited to attend.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

Veterans who fail to keep dental appointments at Veterans Administration outpatient clinics either at the Don Ce Sar Building, Pass-a-Grille, or at the Haverty Building, 317 Main Street, Jacksonville, will probably prevent the scheduling of other veterans for that period, H. F. Dickensheets, Manager of the Pass-a-Grille Regional Office of the Veterans Administration, said today.

"If you cannot keep scheduled appointments at either of these outpatient clinics," Mr. Dickensheets continued, "please notify VA in advance so that another veteran may be scheduled."

Broken appointments result in unnecessary delays in dental care for all veterans in the Pass-a-Grille Regional Office area and reduce the number of veterans who can be served by VA, Mr. Dickensheets said.

HONORARY INITIATES

Alpha Kappa Psi, business fraternity here, installed 15 men in the school of business into the pledge class last Thursday evening at ceremonies.

Initiates are Donald Rogers, David Lafitte, Arthur Methvin, Ralph Patia, Dick Jordon, Gordon Tyrell and Rick Benson.

Jim Bishop, Charles van Middlesworth, Dalton Hagler, Jack Houser, William I. Aynes, Leroy Boling and Bill Perry. Additional pledges from a previous installation were Clarence Smith, Rick Weber and Harrell Fountain.

Qualifications for membership in the organization are a 1.0 scholastic average and enrollment in the Florida State University School of Business.

LIBRARY HOURS SHIFTED

Library hours will be shifted this weekend because of Homecoming celebrations, it was announced today. Revised hours are: Friday, Nov. 20, 8 a.m. till 3 p.m.; Saturday, Nov. 21, 8 a.m. till 12:30 p.m.; Sunday, Nov. 22, 2 p.m. till 5 p.m.

What A Readership Schmidt Had!

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The other day, when new columnist Dick Victory and I were discussing his prospective column, I chanced to mention Stan Schmidt (pronounced carefully with an "m," as Stan used to say).

I was hardly suggesting that Dick mimic Stan (no one could), but I showed him a few of Schmidt's "Campus Characters" columns from a couple of years ago to demonstrate what a powerful form of writing satire is.

Stan was a dissenter par excellence and from the time of his appearance on campus he was a center of interest and controversy. Even those who grew most furious at his columns reached quickly for copies of the Flambeau to read, if nothing else, Campus Characters.

Stan made his debut in the Flambeau with a bang. In the letters to the editor column there appeared the following: ". . . it seems to me that your writers take themselves much too seriously. There are plenty of well-paid 'pros' writing about how we're all going to hell and moaning about existing conditions. Seems to me that college writers on the soap box always manage to sound sophomoric and phony. College to me has always been pretty much gags, sharp talk and generally looking at the lighter side of things . . ."

Before long Editor Earl Dobert had talked the firey one into writing a column for him, and as it began it was on the "light side" originally portraying three students per issue in the colorful Schmidt manner.

But alas and alack for the guy interested only in "gags, sharp talk and generally looking at the lighter side of things." Stan never lost his colorful, humorous way of describing things, but before he knew it was up there on the soap box with the rest of us. I have gleaned some excerpts from his columns, illustrating the metamorphosis.

"BETTY HENKLE . . . President of the Mecca, she holds court there 16 hours a day. Delta Zeta house manager, she's got a terrific sense of humor. Calls her true-love's convertible the 'portable deep freeze.' Always talking about the moron who wanted to become president—and did (Truman or Askew, Betty?)"

Later, on campus prototypes: "BIG FRAT MAN . . . Strictly yours in the bond. Non Fratters are lumped with Wasserman positives. Wears his pin on his pajamas.

"BMOC . . . . Practices his charming smile on impressionable young clinging vines. Proud of his 'common touch'."

And still later: "I'm mad."

"I have just read an article in Life magazine which brings to a head an idea that's been simmering in my foreconscious for a long, long time. The article tells the true story of James Jones, writer of the currently hot novel, From Here To Eternity. Previously the writer of this tough, realistic account of Army life was painted as a rugged, old line individualist. So—Life has to take this likable figure and in typical confession style reveal he is a shy, sensitive namby-pamby who is driven by—you guessed it, a woman.

"This sentimental slop is typical of the garbage handed out by radio, magazines and the modern bust-pocket type novel. The enthralled American in his favorite magazine is informed that Tyrone Power sleeps in the raw and that the latest starlet bathes in pure hot milk. Most of life's problems are solved by cool young women who push aside the stammering, ineffectual male when the crisis arrives, according to the radio. The modern novel portrays the hero as a curly-haired, wide-shouldered, narrow-hipped, boudoir crawler who spends most of his time being ever so cute. He says unlikely things mostly with a crinkling grin and smiling eyes. Have you ever met anybody with smiling eyes?

"The trouble is all this swill is gobbled up by the American teenager. If this slow poisoning keeps up we'll wind up a nation of milksops who will probably carry the ubilical cord to their graves."

Well, obviously I could quote Schmidt all night, but my byline is on this column and I'd better keep a little original. Oh, to have half Schmidt's readership!

THE BOOKLIST

John Burns Dies Almost Unnoticed

By BOB FOLSOM

The other day picked up a magazine, and while briefing through it noted a small piece which told of the death of John Horne Burns. It gave only a few facts: he had died at 36, in Italy of cerebral hemorrhage, and was author of The Gallery. That was the only note on his death we have seen, and it doesn't seem a befitting tribute.

Mr. Burns stood out, foremost, in the school of postwar novelists. The Gallery was truly one of the great books to come out of World War II and the finest war novel we ever read bar none. Only a few years ago, he received wide critical acclaim—The Gallery was called the best war novel of 1947.

Today he does not live in the minds of many: The Gallery did not leave as great an impression on the general public, as say, Norman Mailer's The Naked and the Dead or James Jones' From Here to Eternity. Yet it was the beginning of that particular trend of postwar writing which dealt in stark realism and four-letter words. Just the next year, 1948, another war book, James Gould Cozzen's Guard of Honor took the Pulitzer Prize. Though honest and lifelike, it did not have the force and sensitivity found in The Gallery.

Every so often, a paperback copy of The Gallery will spring up on a newsstand—probably the best place to find one, the cloth edition has stopped printing. His book is a collection of portraits or character vignettes of Army and Italian life in North Africa and Italy, specifically Naples. The twin obsessions of service men—drink and women—are adherent in the book. Among the portraits will be found an imperialistic censor hated by his workers, a pathetic love between an American soldier and Italian girl, an officer who finally winds up insane believing himself to be Christ. There is an account called "Queen Penicillin" which reveals the crowded syphilis ward of a military hospital, perhaps the most memorable story, too.

All the forms and fortunes found in a war period are here: the scenes of life in North Africa and Italy are written with such "rich variety and pervasive stench that Mr. Burns may be said to have written part of his book with his nose."

He published two books in his short lifetime. The second came in 1949, which we never been able to get, Lucifer with a Book, about an intelligent and sensitive teacher who sardonically surveys the evils and malice that surround a boy's private school. He had this to say about his theme "Nothing is worth writing about except America, for we have the power to be the future, whereas everything else in the world is either standing still or looking into th past."

He was born in Massachusetts, attended Phillips Andover Academy, and was graduated from Harvard. Before the war he taught English at a boys' prep school before entering the service in 1942. He served in the same theater he wrote so vividly about. Of his war experiences he once said: "The African air, the Arabs, the odd behavior of Americans — all worked on me strangely overseas. My laughter shifted to the other side of my face and finally died away . . . For the first time in my life I wasn't any different from anybody else. And when I went to Italy I experienced an annihilation of myself and a rebirth in that tragic but four-dimensional country."

After the publication of The Gallery, he went back to the countries that had fascinated him so during his wartime visit, writing of his travels for various American magazines.

Perhaps it was most befitting that he died in Italy. A young man at his death, with probably what would have been many more productive years ahead, the contemporary scene lost a sensitive writer whose place in American fiction already seems certain.

'Red Channels' Hurt Many Unfairly

By DAVID DREIS

The lady looked at the paper in front of her and turned to anyone who could explain it. Nobody could. She had been a noted radio actress for many years and now she was looking at a dismissal slip from a program she had been part of since its inception some years back. Why was Jean Muir fired from the part of Mother on Henry Aldrich? The answer, Red Channels.

What was Red Channels? Why did it have such an over-powering effect on showbusiness? Today, everyone is wondering—at least everyone in showbusiness.

RED CHANNELS was a little booklet released to most radio network affiliates, record companies and various forms of showbusiness outlets. It "told" Communist party members who were being employed in the mediums. Many of those named were lies, but nevertheless, they were named.

Henry Morgan, one of the fine dry-wit comedians, was scoring heavily for his sponsor when his name appeared in the booklet. The sponsor liked him, but . . . he couldn't take any chances with the public . . . Morgan was released from his weekly show. Claims that he wasn't a Commie went unheard. He was definitely fired. "My bankroll really took a dip," commented the comic. Now, Morgan's back up the gravy road once more with a nightly deejay show in New York. Still, Red Channels hurt.

On teevee, PHILIP LOEB was playing the part of the father on "THE GOLDBERGS. Critics had acclaimed his performance, but he too felt the wrath of the booklet. Loeb was given the pink slip and found it pretty difficult to get a regular salary. He admitted he was a Communist for a few months but quit when he found it wasn't what he believed it to be. Loeb has a part in a Broadway show and there are many who wish that his name had never been mentioned. Loeb for one.

Ethel Waters was called in about it, but she just laughed at it. She's still around—Red Channels missed one.

Jean Muir, however, has been working valiantly to rid the showbusiness industry of its 'blackbook' and she's been receiving quite a lot of help from the American Civil Liberties Union and numerous other political groups.

ROBERT SHERWOOD in his foreword to the book, THE JUDGES AND THE JUDGED hit the editors of the booklet with every metaphor he had . . . he praised Jean Muir for not just sitting down and taking it, but rather for being the one person who 'asks' to be named when these problems arise.

The country, however, is still dubious about many people. Lucille Ball admitted her membership for "a short time" but her video efforts are still being rewarded. Larry Parks admitted to the Un-American Activities Committee that he was a Commie, but he is not one now. He was dropped from Columbia and Betty Garrett, Parks' wife was dropped from MGM although she was not a member. Parks finally got a role in a filler with Liz Taylor. A filler is a picture made between release dates of a big film. Liz was in Ivanhoe but Larry is trying for any part he can get. A real shame . . . when showbusiness is treated with a 'black book' called Red Channels.

TAMPA ORCHIDS

Time To Do Something About Honor

Editor's note: turn about is fair play. This summer while in Washington, I sent in columns to Summer Editor Orchid Alonso. Now Orchid, recuperating from a recent illness, is sending a column to me. Comes out even, doesn't it?

By ORCHID ALANSO

Just finished reading the Flambeau (Nov. 10). I was very interested in an editorial in that issue on the honor system. But what are they doing now, coddling the people who break the rules? Begging them to consider FSU?

Maybe the students need to be approached in another manner. Perhaps if the students who worked hard for their grades took a personal and selfish attitude towards the honor system, it would work. It would work then, because the shysters and cheaters would be afraid to do their dirty work. They would be reported.

Just how can a selfish attitude be achieved? Why just think, if a person worked hard and studied and missed 8 answers out of a possible 103, getting a C, he wouldn't feel too bad if the people who set up that high curve worked harder or knew more, but if anyone of the curve setters got their answers dishonestly, well, pit the guy when he gets found out. That's the way it has to be.

Students kick because they do not have enough leeway, or that professors do not give them a chance and they aren't trusted. I don't blame the faculty. I have heard of too much cheating going on and even by people who are in offices, elected by their fellow students.

No, now is not the time to coddle them or to plead with them, now is the time to give it to them straight, one and for all . . . that is, if the other half does their part.

Looking at honor from a different aspect, we take Schopenhauer's definition of honor: " . . . is, on its objective side, other people's opinion of what we are worth; on its subjective side, it is the respect we pay to this opinion."

Just how much are we worth as individuals? Are we worthy enough so that we can set up a code of what we think of someone who does not abide by rules, or are we to be dictated by the opinion, fearfully maintained perhaps, of a few people who heap scorn upon us if we do the right thing.

Schoephauer also says that honor is everywhere recognized as something valuable to have. With as many hard-working, harp-up

Furman Hurricane Blows Too Strong For Seminoles

In The Spotlight

By DAVE KENNEDY
Flambeau Sports Editor

FURMAN, 14; FSU, 7

It was a bleak day as a "Hurricane" which swept across Doak S. Campbell last Saturday afternoon brought nothing but tough luck to the underdog Indians. It appeared that everytime Florida State turned around they were slapped with a penalty. The fact is according to the penalties which was a high of 115 yds., the Seminoles mus'ta broken every rule in the book. However, they should have taken this one, but the breaks just weren't with them. Other than the penalties the Indians from State outplayed the favored Furman team as you can see for yourself

	FSU	FURMAN
First Downs	13	13
Net yards rushing	167	182
Yards Passing	65	26
Passes Attempted	15	7
Pases Complated	6	1
Passes Intercepted	0	1
Punting Average	39.3	36.5
Fumbles Lost	6	6
Yards Penalized	115	26

SEMINOLES "NOT SO HOT"

For those of you who have not read this little item, I would like to quote for you in part from Mike Beaudoin's article in Sunday's Democrat—

John Varidan, Tampa's backfield coach, says FSU's Seminoles "aren't so hot."

VARIDAN WAS SCOUTING for the December 5 game with the Spartans.

"I didn't think too much of them," Varidan said frankly. "I was disappointed after all I've read and heard about them."

Despite his criticism, Varidan would not predict the outcome of the FSU-Tampa game and he had considerable praise for Lee Corso and Jr. Metts "They've got finesse and speed," he said.

"VARIDAN ALSO PRAISED Al Pacifico and End Jimmy Lee Taylor. He said he tried to get Pacifico to come to Tampa but failed"

Well, John Varidan and company will have a chance to get first-hand info on December 5. It's just possible that Varidan bit off a little more than he can chew.

TEMPERS, FISTS FLY

This was a bitter, hard-fought game — Seems Big tackle Jim Olsen became a little confused and thought he was warming up for a little bit of muscle "flexing with the forearm." But as luck would have it, the ref just happened to notice and out went Jim, "muscle and all" in the first quarter.

Furman, not content with being in the lead decided they too should get into the act as end Roland Barefoot (too bad he wasn't) after some "unkind" words to an official joined a companion on the bench for the duration of the game. It was almost impossible for FSU supporters to see how any Furman player could possibly offend an official. Well, at any rate, the day's work was naught in vain as it gave the FSU "Marching Chiefs" good practice for they had occasion to continually give out with their rendition of "Three Blind Mice" — A song which reached the height of its popularity last Saturday afternoon.

MOURNING MORNING BLUES

Well, the eye of the "Hurricane" has passed, and after the debris is cleared, Coach Tom Nugent will have his work all cut out for him. This Saturday's game is State's Homecoming. Will he be ready?? Looking things over, the books show that Fiveash is back on the injured list joined by team-mates Stan Dobosz and Bill Graham. Will Nugent switch his fiery little quarterback to a half-back post as he did in the latter part of the Furman game?? You never can tell just what the congenial mentor will do. However, he'll come up with something spectacular as is his usual habit. GOOD LUCK!!!!

THE LOWDOWN

Seems Statson met with a little difficulty last weekend also. The wind must'a really been blowing full force down that-a-way as East Carolina left their mark by way of a 40-6 defeat to the Hatters.

N. C. State too, couldn't find its way to the win column as mighty Pitt humbled the Staters 40-6.

Of the 3 future opponents for the Tribe, the Spartans of Tampa alone, emerged victorious. They edged Arkansas State 26-20, in a thriller.

LIL BITS OF INTEREST

Just a note — a little something that may have ignited the spark in the Furman attack was the fact that they were requested to change from their usual purple jerseys, which appeared too much like the garnet of the Tribe, to their other white jerseys. It could be.

One last thing, this column would not be complete without mentioning the play of tackle Al Mackiewicki, whom I'm sure all agree played a terrific game.

Bob Crenshaw is a 19-year-old sophomore from Miami, Florida. While at Miami Edison High School this 5 foot, 8 inch, 180-pounds was a member of the all Miami High School team.

The coaches say each pound of Crenshaw stands for guts and determination. Bob is a real scrapper with a tremendous love for the game. He is a fine linebacker and good offensive pivot man, put these two together and you have a good center.

CRENSHAW WEIGHED 165 pounds last season, and this gain in weight has helped him considerably. With Steve Kalenich graduating this year to leave the position open for Crenshaw, he should be even more valuable next yaar.

Bob is a good scholar and is majoring in pre-engineering.

Indians Drop Game 14-7
Fines, Bad Breaks Hurt

A riled up Furman Purple Hurricane team led by Russ Sutton defeated the young Seminole gridders 14-7 before a mediocre crowd of 7,000 in Tallahassee. Penalties and bad breaks hurt the Tribe whenever a scoring opportunity came into view and in turn helped Furman's offensive drives. Altogether FSU was charged with 115 yards in penalties. In losing, Florida State played one of the worst games of the season. The Seminoles were not np for the game as they were for the VMI and Mississippi Southern games. But as Coach Nugent said, "I guess you can't get the boys up for a game week after week"

RUSS SUTTON of Furman was the offensive hero of the day as he scored one touchdown and ran 82 yards with a kickoff return to set up another after FSU had battled 72 hard earned yards to tie the game 7-7.

FSU's brightest spots were left halfback Junior Metts, who ran 12 times for 70 yards, and the tackle work of stalwart Al Makowiecki who led Seminole defensive forces with seven tackles and two assists.

Offensive standouts for Furman were Paul Stewart with 56 yards in 11 jaunts and Sutton with 39 for 8 including his 3 for a TD. He bobbled a pass in the end zone that would have been a touchdown but made up for it with his kickoff return.

VINCE PERRONE, 205-pound guard co-captain, led the Furman line with 8 tackles and 9 assists. He played the whole game with the exception of 50 seconds.

"On paper, FSU showed a good passing attack with 8 out of 15 completions, but the aerial game was not sound. FSU hit very seldom when it counted."

State worked its way toward the Furman goal twice. Once to initial period and once to the 14 in the fourth and final quarter.

FURMAN WON the toss and elected to receive. An unusual sight of the day was a Furman penalty, for offsides, "stymied their initial afforts." The oddity of the day came when quarterback Jim Broyle of Furman fumbled on his own 35 and alert Jimmy Lee Taylor pounced on it with such force it slithered right out of his hands and Boyle managed to get his hands on it to recover his own bobble.

Towards the end of the game, the Indians were searching along tha bench for a likely half-back, due to the injuries of Fiveash, Dobosz, and Graham. The lot finally went to Lee Corso FSU's quarterback.

After an exchange of punts, the Purple Hurricanes marched 72 yards in 13 plays for their first touchdown. "Sutton climaxed the drive by hitting FSU's vulnerable right side from three yards out." Gus Pringle converted and Furman led 7-0.

THE "CANES" kicked off to FSU who pulled to mid-field. Massey passed to Fiveash, who was injured on the play and had to leave the game. The Tribe was penalized 5 yards for backfield in motion. Metts replaced the ailing Fiveash, and immediately quick-kicked for 54 yards to the Furman 11.

The second quarter opened with Furman punting with Lee Corso pulling it down and running it back 22 yards to Furman's 42. Metts took a Corso pass for eight and Metts went for 6 on a power play. FSU got a first down when Taylor was hit with a Corso pass on the 10. Graham pushed to the nine but in successive plays Metts lost 3, Corso followed with 10 and then Corso's pass was intercepted and returned to the 27.

METTS PUNTED a meager 7 yards. Furman then passed 26 yards and found themselves on the Seminole 7. FSU "checked three running plays and Sutton let Boyle's neat pass slip through his fingers in the end zone on a fourth down.

AT THE SOUND of the second-half kickoff, the Indians marched 72 yards in 15 plays to their lone TD. "Taylor converted Massey's short pass into a 31-yard gain by some fancy digging that reached the Furman 35." Taylor fumbled but team-mate George Boyer quickly recovered. A pass interference gave FSU a first down on the 17. Fourth down found Massey passing to Graham that moved the Tribe to the one foot line. Massey went over for his only touchdown of the season, he also converted.

Sutton took the kick on the eight and took off . . . Metts getting him from behind at the FSU 10. It took the Hurricanes three plays to score. Pringle kicked the extra point.

THE INDIANS, showing a spark, ground out 66 yards to the Furman 14. Metts and Carl Green being the "key men." A series of hard "luck" plays gave FSU a deficit in yards gained column as they lost 8 yards. Corso was hurried in from the bench but could only get back the yardage lost. Furman took over on downs.

Furman managed to push to the Seminole 13 but were halted with 3 to go for a first down. FSU went air-wise, Massey using Metts and Eddie Johnson for targets and FSU found themselves on the Furman 35. But that was it. With the officials marking off some penalties which put the Tribe back to the 40, the whistle blew and that was all.

Basketeers Journey To Jax For Three Practice Dribblings

By TOM CUNDY

The FSU basketeers were far from idle this week-end. The team traveled to Jacksonville to play three practice games preparing for their opener with Mississippi State on Dec. 4.

Coach Kennedy, who substituted freely in an effort to see all his material under game conditions was pleased with this early showing. The team won all games on the trip.

RICK BENSON, the 6'7" center from Winter Park, Florida, is improving rapidly and from all indications should develop into one of the all-time great Seminole cagers. Rick who is noted for his accurate hook-shot with either hand, looked especially well and could lead the Seminoles to one of their most successful seasons. By the way, nothing would please Coach Kennedy more than to make that little trip to Kansas City.

To round out the starting lineups, were Tom Burst and Ham Wernke, both from Batesville, Indiana, at guards, Duane Gordon of Madison, Wisconsin and Jim Oler of Economy, Indiana at forwards.

TOM BURST, the glamor boy guard, could also turn into a steady performer for the Seminole machine. Burst, an All-Indiana star in his prep school days gained fame when a nationally famous basketball magazine did a story on his career. Tom is known for his deadly one hand push shot which he hits from all angles. Potentially Burst has the makings of a great athlete, everyone is hoping he can come around by December 4.

Others who are looking well are Dick Artmier, Bill Wisner, "Preacher" Roe and Gary Wold. These boys are very much in the running for starting berths, as Coach Kennedy reports all positions are open.

TOM DELLAHAN, and Jerry Westhafer were ailing and did not make the trip.

ATO's End Season With Best Record

By TOM CUNDY

With the regular season completed, the intramural Touch Football teams are looking forward to the forthcoming semi-finals and playoffs.

The ATO's ended the regular season with the best record, losing only to the Lambda Chi's in an early season upset. In their last encounter the powerful TAU's completely outclassed and outplayed the Phi Delts 12-0. The first ATO score came in the first half when Bobbie "Lightning" Jones passed 30 yards to El Willis. They scored again when an El Willis kick was recovered in the Phi Delt end zone by Richard Esposito. Dick Hollihan kept the opponents offense off balance by his brilliant rushing.

THE TAU's put their star halfback Bob Adams on the shelf to save him for the playoffs. This was a smart move on the part of Coach Ashley Coston as Adams is the key to the ATO offense. He is considered by many as the most versatile athlete to play intramurals here. By the way, Bob recently celebrated his 32nd birthday, so congratulations to him.

In another top contest, the SAE's edged the once powerful Theta Chi's, 3-2 on first downs. Coach Joe Harris had his boys up for this one as a win would offset the bad record they had compiled in early games. Binion and Joe Wheat were outstanding for the winners while Glayden Schafer played outstanding ball for the losers.

RAY KRUPO, Theta Chi coach was especially happy during the game as he had his new elevator shoes on. Krupo who usually watches the game from the shoulders of a pledge could not view it like a normal person. Everyone is happy for Ray.

Tha Sigma Chi's halted singing practice long enough to down the SPE's 18-0. Bob Miller, Sig passer was definitely the outstanding player on the field, his passing was superb. Bob Canada, Dick Slade and Larry Beaty also stood out for the winners.

THE KA's minus tree climber Gordon Kyle downed Pi Kappa Phi 6-0. Kyle who climbs trees for a local pecan firm fell and was unable to compete. The passing of Don Hollis and the receiving of Kingman Brittian was too much for the losers defense. The Sigma Nu's downed the outmanned Pi Kappa Alpha 18-6. Randy Church, "Pinky" Nowlin and "Cooter" Mills were outstanding for Sigma Nu. Bob Upton, FSU's Bryce Thompson looked good for the losers.

In an earlier game the Phi Delts stopped the scoring of "Young" Dave Graham and downed the LGA's 3-2 on first downs. Graham who is the leading scorer in the league this year was bottled up throughout the contest. He has caught 6 touchdown passes for a total of 36 points.

IN THE FINAL CONTEST of last week's schedule, the SPE's led by "Big" Beryle Scarboro defeated the Kappa Sigs 13-0.

In the Dormitory league a new star has arisen. Bob Davis of Pensacola has been an outstanding end for the Magnolia Hall team. He looks like a good bet to make the all intramural team. Others in the running are ATO's El Willis, Bobbie Jones and Richard Esposito, KA's Don Hollis and Kingman Brittian, Theta Chis' Kay Kindred and Glayden Schafer, Sigma Chi's Bob Miller, Phi Delts Bob Berto and Tom Overstreet, Phi Kappa Alpha's Bob Upton and the Lambda Chi's have their great end Deve Graham.

THE FSU ALL INTRAMURAL TEAM will be announced in our next issue along with the outstanding player of the year. Helping our staff pick this team are the game officials and team coaches.

NY Board Issues Decree To Greeks

In one of the most forceful moves ever made to end discrimination in fraternities and sororities, State University of New York ordered all student social organizations to sever their national fraternal affiliations and eliminate any racial and religious discrimination in the selection of members within five years.

The decree, made by the Board of Trustees affects 25 different national groups at the two state medical schools and at nine teacher training colleges, which have a total enrollment of 13,000. It will be effective immediately, but the deadline for compliance would be 1958 to give the organizations time to work out financial problems arising from the edict

THE TRUSTEES acted on the recommendation of Dr. William S. Carlson, president of the State University, following instances of alleged discrimination in two units of the University. They adopted a resolution which said that no student social group would be permitted to exist on its campuses if it had "any direct or indirect affiliation or connection with any national or other organization outside its particular institution."

The trustees also ordered that no such organization should, in policy or practice "operate under any rule which bars students on account of race, color, religion, creed, national origin or other artificial criteria"

THE REGULATION does not apply to organizations with scholastic achievement as criteria for membership, such as Phi Beta Kappa, or to religious organizations affiliated with recognized religious bodies The trustees authorized Dr Carlson to decide whether a group was scholastic, religious or social.

The incidents on which Dr Carlson's recommendation was based took place during the academic year of 1952, at the State University Teachers College, Cortland, N. Y. The question arose as to whether the local chapters of two sororities, Sigma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Sigma Alpha, could accept Negro girls as members. The local chapter wanted to admit them, but the national organization said no. The question became a major issue on the college campus and the two sororities were suspended by college officials. At the Albany College for Teachers all sixty-two members of the Kappa Delta Rho fraternity had resigned in protest against the national group's refusal to approve for membership five Jewish students who had been accepted by the local chapter

IN HIS ADDRESS on national organizations, Dr Carlson said, "The real problem is not the formal, written restrictive provisions in constitutions, by-laws etc., but the actual pernicious practices based upon informal and unwritten tacit understandings and agreements.

"So long as student organizations are local in nature, the situation is manageable. But when they involve ties outside the university, over which the university can exercise no control serious conflicts may arise. This is something a university cannot tolerate . . ."

HE CONTINUED by saying, "It would be sophistry for the State University to vigorously combat discrimination in its admissions and academic policies and, at the same time, condone those practices among the extra-curricular organizations which it recognizes The academic and extra-curricular programs intertwine to such a degree in educating and molding a student that they cannot be severed and each judged by contradictory standards"—THE CHICAGO MAROON.

Class Hears Crime Reporter Tell of Ethics, Experiences

By GEORGE MATTER

Students of the Florida State University journalism class "Reporting Public Affairs" heard Theo Sommerkamp, police reporter for the Tallahassee Democrat, in a talk on his experiences as a crime reporter recently Sommerkamp told of his policies where individuals are concerned in crime news.

"My personal policy is not to report in the newspaper those individuals who are held for investigation in a criminal case," said Sommerkamp "I prefer to wait until someone is formally indicted before releasing names to the public." he explained.

Among the newspaper taboos are the use of minors' names in criminal and civil cases Sommerkamp traced the procedure involved in legal investigation of crimes against the community, and explained to the journalism class the forms and approaches that they could expect when, in the future, they covered the police beat themselves.

Sommerkamp, a former news editor on WTNT, local radio station, recalled from personal experience several of the "big" stories of crime in the Tallahassee area He handed photographs and police forms around to members of the class so that they might become familiar with sources of information.

Some information cannot be used without undue invasion of privacy, he pointed out All police reporters have to be on the guard against possible libel Hence the rule against juvenile publicity, and the public naming of suspects

Information for police reporters may be collected from personal statements and from the official accounts of the event recorded on police forms, or those forms from the Sheriff's office and the Highway patrol.

There is some confusion of jurisdiction, he pointed out A deputy of the sheriff's office can arrest anywhere in the city, but Tallahassee police cannot arrest outside the city limits except when in "fresh pursuit," or chase, of an offender

Both the sheriff and the city police department use similar forms for complaint reports and arrests The highway patrol report provides detailed information on accidents, the killed and injured and the witnesses They also tell the number of cars involved and the circumstances of the accident.

The legal process of the apprehension and conviction of a criminal follows a well-set pattern, Sommerkamp explained When a breach of the peace occurs (for instance, a murder in the county) a preliminary investigation is conducted by the sheriff's office. Suspects are identified by circumstantial evidence or eye-witnesses.

The suspects are arrested and a formal charge is filed against them. Except in the case of a murder they may be released by the court under bond. A preliminary hearing before a judge is held to determine the extent of the evidence. This is followed by a grand jury indictment, based on the extent of guilt apparent by the accused's actions. The jury, of course, can dismiss the charges.

A date is set for the trial. A jury is called, an attorney appointed if necessary; witnesses are sworn After hearing the testimony, the "twelve peers" are charged by the judge to consider the legal aspects of the case. They return a verdict of guilty with or without leniency, or innocence. The last step of justice is the sentencing of the criminal by the judge

168 State College Students Receive Outstanding Benefits From Gov't.

Exclusive of those receiving state scholarships, one hundred and sixty eight students received $40,358.34 in 1952-53, or an average of $240.00 per student, the Placement Office announced recently.

All scholarships are given on the basis of need, character, and academic standing.

Funds come from such donors as: The Borden Milk Company, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Ruge Estate, Southern Bakers and Sears & Roebuck Some funds are set up by public-spirited citizens, such as the Mrs. Alfred I. duPont scholarship. Others are available to students qualifying under certain conditions, such as attendance at certain high schools, residence in a particular town, or being physically handicapped.

State scholarships, formerly divided into Lewis, House and Senatorial, have been incorporated under General Scholarships for the preparation of teachers. Those who win one of these scholarships by taking the competitive examination in the spring, receive $400.00 per year.

The Placement Office advises students planning to apply for scholarships to study listings in the catalog beforehand, to decide which ones they may be eligible for.

Although Spring is the best time to apply for most scholarships, application may be made at any time Scholarships are available in all fields, such as music, restaurant and hotel management, and nursing.

Students are advised by the Placement office not to leave school for financial reasons without first consulting that office

Personnel Chief Pens Magazine Articles

By NANCY HARN

Dr. Wesley Vordenberg, director of the University Personnel Office, has written two articles which appeared in recent issues of the magazine, College and University Business.

The articles were titled, Do Tests Pay Off in Hiring Or Replacing Nonacademic Personnel? and It's Time Something Was Done to Improve Spelling.

In the article "Do Tests Pay Off," Dr. Vordenberg stated the results of a 1952 survey conducted by the College and University Personnel Association It was a survey of employee personnel practices in colleges and universities and showed that, out of a total of 70 universities reporting 32 used no tests at all as a part of the selection procedure. It was stated that undoubtedly most of these universities offer courses in personnel management, procedures and the like"

DR. VORDENBERG gave a list of some of the tests which are helpful to personnel offices. General Aptitude Test Battery. The Clerical Aptitude Test, Basic Number Skills Test, Typing Skills Test, Dictation Skills Test, and Business Machines Card Punch Aptitude Test were among them

"Students who are unsure of their skills naturally dread tests most," Dr Vordenberg explained "Either their skills have not been fully developed or they have become rusty through disuse Usually, however, applicants who are sure of their abilities have few difficulties. Actually, the testing situation differs very little from the office situation when the pressure is on," he went on to say

IN THE SUMMARY of his article, Dr Vordenberg stated that "it would be just as ineffective to base all considerations and decisions on test results as it would be to use no tests at all To be sure, tests are not the answer to all problems of employee-employer human relations, but they do help"

In the second article Dr Vordenberg wrote on improving spelling. He related an incident which happened in the University personnel office.

A department head called the office about a prospective secretary named Betty. She was a recent college graduate, capable and poised, and was, apparently all those things employers look for in a secretary — and seldom get. Furthermore, Betty had majored in business education, and she was skilled in typing and shorthand. There was only one subject which marred her record of achievements. That was that she simply could not spell.

"THE OFFICE DISCOVERED," Dr. Vordenberg continued, "that more than half of the applicants for a spelling test misspelled remembrance, c a l s o n and garrulous. Forty per cent couldn't spell grateful and acquainted; thirty per cent had difficulty with definite, twenty per cent could not spell unusual, expenses, operation and owing and more than fifteen per cent misspelled such words as distribute, collusion, sheriff, syllable, ignorance, signature, diligent, customary, temporary, allowance, presence, and convenient."

In the closing of this article Dr. Vordenberg stated that "employers may sometime have to take time out to train workers in spelling. This will be the case if colleges and universities continue to graduate students who are deficient in the use of English and sanctify their deficiency with degrees"

Classes Measure T-V's Penetration In Learning Area

Florida State University's School of Journalism is conducting a survey designed to measure the extent of educational telecasting being carried on by the commercial stations in the United States.

This research is being conducted by Bernard Hirsch, a graduate assistant of the School of Journalism. Hirsch mailed questionnaires to 109 television stations throughout the United States.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE was designed to determine what educational programs the television stations are carrying and how successful they are

A second questionnaire was sent to leading educators to measure their impressions on the value of educational programs in their respective areas

THE PURPOSE of this study is to determine whether commercial television stations are doing as complete a job on educational programs, as a non-commercial educational station might do, also to determine if a need exists for educational non-commercial television stations in Florida.

Hirsch stated that this study should be of particular value at this time since the Federal Communication Commission has allocated nine educational television channels to the state of Florida.

Campbell Advises Large Field Open For FBLA Group

President Doak S. Campbell told the Future Business Leaders of America recently that "There is no limit to what you can achieve in the field of business."

The backbone of the president's address was a discussion of two basic ideas which he considers essential to business success.

"I SPEAK out of some experience," he said, "because as far as I can gather, a president is a specialized businessman"

The first point that Campbell emphasized was "Get first principles first, and the rest is a matter of detail." The president said that these principles do not apply merely to business, but are fundamental to any human behavior.

"THE FIRST principle is honesty," he said Campbell said that many businesses succeed with an executive who is sly and corrupt, but that he didn't "know of any that endure"

President Campbell went on to say that "faith in people" was necessary for success. He also stressed that an immense amount of hard work was part of any organization.

THE SECOND basic concept he discussed was a statement by a sales agent of the early part of this century—"Genius is the infinite capacity for detail"

"I doubt if you'll ever get very high as a business executive if you don't have that capacity for detail," Campbell stated "Any business is made up of an organized mass of detail."

HE NOTED that never before in history have business people exerted the influence that they do today. "There has never been a time when the profession of business had higher esteem than now."

President Campbell concluded his address with a glance at the future "I wish you every success in what is in front of you, and I think you can make it what you want."

BEFORE THE president spoke, Dr. Glenn Murphy, FBLA sponsor, discussed that chapter activities He also told the group of plans being made for the state convention that meets on the FSU campus in February.

students we have on campus, you'd think they'd like to own something "valuable."

"A person that is honorable never uses unjust or unlawful means of getting what he wants." If the honor code was not legally in practice, it would not be unlawful to cheat, but it certainly would be unjust!

In colsing we are reminded of fame, personal fame that comes of making good marks in our studies, but we also think of that very old yet truthful saying: "Fame is something that must be won: honor is something that must not be lost.

Yes, the time has come to do away with the fame seekers who seem to have no honor to lose There is only one way to do this at FSU. A united combined campaign by the hardworking students to protect what is rightfully theirs.

Dance Climaxes Weekend Events Tomorrow Night

Spivak Will Play In Suwannee Room For Large Crowd

Highlighting the formal ball which climaxes the Homecoming celebration tomorrow night, will be the music of "the sweetest trumpet in the world," played by Charlie Spivak and his orchestra. The dance will be held in the Suwannee Room of the East Dining Hall from 9 until 1.

Featured with Charlie Spivak and his orchestra are Eileen Rodgers, vocalist, and Joe Tucker, baritone. The nationally-known band has been a favorite since Spivak's days of famed jazz trumpeting.

NOT ONLY is his orchestra a top dance band in the nation, but he has won acclaim in the motion picture and recording fields as well.

From all indications, the 1953 Homecoming Dance promises to be one of the best yet. All arrangements for the ball have been supervised by Gold Key, men's honorary organization on campus, who have the dance as one of their yearly projects.

ADMISSION to the dance is $1.50 per person. Tickets are on sale today at booths located in lower Westcott, outside the Post Office at the student center, and in the main lobby of the cafeteria until 2.

Talk of beach umbrellas and lawn chairs are the only hints available as to the theme of the dance which is a surprise feature. Helen Erickson, chairman of decorations, has reported that they will be "unusual and in a popular theme."

THERE WILL not be two formal dances this year as at past Homecoming celebrations, due to the extra expense of decorating two ballrooms and hiring two orchestras. Several fraternities are sponsoring private dances this year however, and informal get-togethers are scheduled at the sorority and fratrenity houses during intermission of the main ball.

Charles MacDaniel, member of the board of directors of Circle K has announced that the organization will again sponsor cloak or check rooms. They will be located in the side entrances of Reynolds and Bryan Halls.

New Queen Chosen From Field Of Five

Five candidates, Sally Hamner, Betty Jo Miller, Anita Wall, Betty Wilmon, and Anne Yates, are competing this year for the much-coveted title of 1953-54 Homecoming Queen.

These finalists were chosen by the student body from a field of 38 representatives of various organizations on campus. The identity of the lucky girl will be announced tonight as a highlight of the Pow Wow. She will be crowned with the traditional Seminole head-dress by last year's queen, Marlies Gessler.

Sally Hamner, who is sponsored by Sigma Chi fraternity, hails from West Palm Beach, where in high school she was Homecoming Queen, reigned over the Junior-Senior Prom and was a cheerleader. She is dark with green eyes and brown hair. On FSU's campus she is active as a cheerleader, member of the Warpath Club, the Village Vamps, The Circus, and Pi Beta Phi sorority.

Another FSU cheerleader is tiny, dark-haired, brown-eyed Anne Yates who is from Key West. In high school she was also a cheerer, and a drum majorette. She is a member of Sophomore Council, the Circus, the Village Vamps, and Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Phi Delta Theta fraternity is sponsoring Anne as their representative.

Theta Chi fraternity is sponsor of Betty Jo Miller who is from Tampa. In her high school she was a member of the Kiwanette club, the Gold and Black, Saborettes, cheerleaders, and was an ROTC sponsor. Here on campus she is a member of the Social Standards committee, is projects chairman of the Village Vamps, and social chairman of her sorority, Kappa Delta. She has very dark brown hair and eyes.

Betty Wilmon of Quincy is sponsored by the Kappa Alpha fraternity. Her past experience in beauty contests includes being chosen Miss Northwest Florida of 1953, Miss Deep South in the Rose Show, Tobacco Festival Queen in 1951, and a finalist in the Orange Bowl contest last year. Betty is the only light complected girl in the running; she has blond hair and green eyes. She is active on campus in the Circus, the Village Vamps, on the Tally-Ho staff, and in Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

The only candidate from out of state is brown haired, hazel-eyed Anita Wall of Atlanta, Georgia who is sponsored by North Cawthon Hall. In high school she was active on the school newspaper staff, was president of the Ballet Club, and vice-president of the Drama Club. She was one of the finalists in this year's Orange Bowl Queen competition. She is a Kappa Alpha Theta, works on the staff of the Flambeau, and writes a column for a local newspaper.

Theme Carried Out In Half-Time Show As Band Marches

One of the top attractions of Homecoming celebration will be the half-time show by the University band during the FSU vs. Stetson football game tomorrow afternoon.

Under the direction of Manley Whitcomb the band will feature a program featuring this year's Homecoming theme "All Florida Jubilee."

THE HALF-TIME show will open with the 120-piece band forming a teepee while the FSU cheerleaders lead the assembled fans in the "Scalping Yell." Then the band will spell out "Fight" while the fans sing the "Fight Song."

Then the band will form a crown and introduce the homecoming queen with a fanfare.

PICKING UP the idea of the all-Florida motto, the band will march into an outline of the State of Florida while playing the "Old Garnet and Gold."

The University Singers, directed by Dr. Wiley Housewright, "The Collegians," directed by J. Dayton Smith and the Choral Union," directed by Herman Gunter, Jr., singing "Old Garnet and Gold" will march on the field and fill in the outlined map of Florida.

A MEDLEY by the band of "Your Land and My Land," "Way Down on the Suwannee River," "Going Home," "Home Sweet Home," and "Auld Lang Syne," will follow.

Meanwhile, members of the Collegians with lettered cards, will spell the names of many Florida cities on the map. Then the city names will move to Tallahassee on the map and spell out "Welcome Home Alumni."

FRIDAY NIGHT at the Pow Wow pep rally the band will do a "Ray Anthony" routine playing "Dragnet" and other Anthony numbers. They will also march in the Friday afternoon Homecoming parade through downtown Tallahassee and on campus.

Banquets Fete Alumni Guests This Weekend

Two major "Food Functions" annually highlight the weekend Homecoming celebration here. The Garnet-Gold Key Banquet, staged by those two men's and women's leadership honoraries here will honor alumni and notables tonight at 5:15 in the Suwanee Room, while the outdoor Alumni Barbeque will call all alumni to Camp Flastacowo for the biggest feast of the year tomorrow afternoon.

Yearly a notable is picked to speak at the Banquet. This year's scheduled speaker is Theodore O. Yntena, vice-president of the Ford Motor Company. Mr. Yntena is considered among big business circles one of the most outstanding in the field.

Invited guests, University officials and notable friends will attend tonight's affair. Hosts and hostesses will be members and taps of the two honoraries, Garnet and Gold Key, whose keys will be represented by centerpieces at the various tables.

Special table arrangement will be made honoring the several classes holding reunions this year. The classes and the representatives appear in the Alumni registration story on this page.

University officials announced today that Mr. Yntena will not appear to speak at the Garnet-Gold Key banquet as previously announced. Due to illness, the Ford official was forced to cancel his appearance here. No further details were announced at FLAMBEAU press time.

FROM 1,200 TO 1,500 guests are expected to jam the grounds at Lake Bradford for the traditional Alumni barbecue tomorrow afternoon from 12 noon to 3 p.m. Special arrangements have been made with the Marching Chiefs and Manley Whitcomb, director, to provide background music for the picnic-like atmosphere.

Tomorrow's menu, according to Rod K. Shaw, FSU Business Manager and overall chairman of the affair, will feature barbecued pork and beef, potato salad, cole slaw, rolls, corn-bread and ice cream. Mr. Shaw, his mouth watering already at the thought of the famous affair, told Flambeau that over 55 persons from campus and Tallahassee have volunteered services in the past few weeks to set up and serve the barbecue lunch. J. P. Love, a veteran at preparing and serving the picnic, will again serve as co-ordinator, Mr. Shaw said.

Crowning Of Queen To Highlight Tonight's Big-Scale Pow Wow

The crowning of the 1953 Homecoming Queen will highlight the Pow Wow, large-scale pep session, to be held tonight at 8:15 p. m. in Doak S. Campbell stadium.

The Queen will be selected from the five finalists, Anita Wall, Betty Wilmon, Ann Yates, Betty Jo Miller, and Sally Hamner. She will ascend her throne situated in the middle of the football turf to be crowned by Miss Marlies Gessler, Homecoming Queen of 1952.

TWO GIANT FIREWORKS displays honoring the Queen and her court will be fired. "F. S. U. Sweetheart" in brilliant red and orange letters will announce the new Queen while "An American Beauty Rose" will climax the crowning.

"Yells, songs and tributes to the Fighting Seminoles will be the order of the night for this large pep rally" stated Pete Nimkoff, master of ceremonies. Nimkoff urges everyone to come out and show the team that they are behind them all the way.

SPECIAL NOTICE has been made by Warpath Club, sponsors of the now well-known Card Section at football games, that there will be a miniature card section at the Pow Wow tonight. Warpath spokesmen said they urge all students who have participated in former card sections to again sit in the section to participate. Said the spokesman, "This is the last home game of the season, and we are planning the best tricks yet." He added that the idea seems to be catching on at FSU and thanked all students for the cooperation and spirit shown through the season this year.

A TROPHY FOR the best float from the parade will be presented to the sorority, fraternity, or residence hall that wins. The prize winning boys' and girls' skits will be presented.

"The State of Florida", another large fireworks display, will serve as a tribute to the Governor. After the outline of the state appears, the capital will light up with all railroads, airlanes and highways leading to Tallahassee pinpointed.

CARRYING OUT the theme of homecoming, large letters, "Jubilee of '53" in bright colors, will flash.

To herald in the FSU football team and coaches, gigantic letters, "The Fighting Seminole", will burst forth into fiery colors. At this time the team and coaches will be introduced.

"OUR EMPHASIS this year is on a cleaver and unique way of presenting the whole show" stated Jack Haskins, director, "especially of introducing the football team. He continued, saying that much credit should be given to Tom Nugent, head football mentor for the cooperation he showed in doing this.

Director Haskins stated that in previous years, this part of the program had been long and drawn out. "I'm sure everyone will like the new way of introducing the players since it will take much less time." Haskins concluded.

A SALUTE TO the Marching Chiefs, who will perform throughout the show, will be given in fireworks form.

A grand finale of fireworks and the singing of the Alma Mater will climax this large pre-game pep rally.

Parade Features 33 Floats; Huge Crowd Expected Today

Floats representing 33 of Florida State University's various organizations will appear in today's annual Homecoming Parade. The parade will be led by a float which was made by the Women's "F" Club and will feature the five finalists in the contest for Homecoming queen. They are Sally Hamner, Betty Jo Miller, Anita Wall, Betty Wilmon, and Anne Yates.

Also in the line of march will be three bands, the Marching Chiefs, the Leon High School band, and the Air Force ROTC band. The Pershing Rifles drill team will demonstrate their formations during the parade. Members of the ROTC and Air ROTC will make up a color guard.

THE SIDEWALKS along College Ave. are expected to be packed with spectators as the gala procession winds its way downtown from Call St. and Copeland. After reaching Monroe St., the procession will veer North and file past the Florida Hotel toward Tennessee St.

Times Set Aside Honoring Alumni For Open Houses

Alumni will have plenty of opportunity to renew old acquaintances and meet new ones as dormitories, fraternities, and sororities plan their open houses for the week-end. Specific times have been set aside for these open houses by the Homecoming Committee. Any dormitory, sorority, or fraternity may hold an open house immediately following the Pow-Wow Friday night and immediately after the game on Saturday from 5:30-6:30 p.m.

An open house will be held at the Rowena-Longmire Building after the game from 5:30-6:30 p.m. Alumni will have the opportunity to meet many old friends and official hosts for the Homecoming week-end at this time.

Seminoles Face Stetson's Hatters At 2:30 Kickoff

Tilt Marks Seventh Since Teams' Start With 1947 Contest

By TOMMY SANDS
Flambeau Sports Editor

One of the South's most colorful football rivalries is set to be renewed in Doak S. Campbell Stadium tomorrow afternoon as victory-hungry FSU and Stetson clash in the climax to a weekend of homecoming festivities. Kickoff is slated for 2:30.

It will mark the seventh grid meeting between the two in a series that dates back to 1947, when FSU fielded its first modern-day football team. The Hatters took that opener 14-6 and they haven't duplicated the feat since.

THE SEMINOLES were on top 18-7 in 1948, 33-14 in 1949, and 27-7 the following year. 1951, the most memorable of the series saw FSU ground out a hard-earned 13-10 win here in another homecoming. Last year they battled to a 6-6 tie in Orlando.

Tomorrow afternoon's affair, however, will be quite a contrast to the '51 tilt when both FSU and Stetson were riding high along the State grid circles.

THE HATTERS have won only three times in seven starts—bowling over Western Kentucky, Morehead State and while losing to Auburn 47-0, Florida 45-0, Wofford 26-0 and East Carolina 41-0.

On the other hand, Coach Tom Nugent's freshman-studded Seminole eleven has copped only two of seven, thrashing Louisvell 59-0 and VMI 12-7. The losses were to Miami (27-0), Abilene Christian (20-7), Mississippi Southern (21-7) Louisiana Tech (32-21), last week to Furman (14-7).

WHILE STETSON is regarded as the underdog in this one, the Tribe coaching staff has taken no chances this week. As Tom Nugent put it on Monday: "We will stress pass defense all week." And they have, as they braced for an expected Stetson aerial attack spearheaded by John Imgarund.

Imgrund better known for his basketball talents was the Hatters number one quarterback when the season started and was regarded as among the best in the state. He was injured in the Auburn opener and has been sidelined ever since, but reports from DeLand indicate he will be on the firing line tomorrow afternoon.

Flambeau Sounding Board As Well As News Source

Returning alumni as well as present students at FSU will doubtless find this edition of the Flambeau quite "different" from the ones of their memories.

This difference, though, is one of size and certainly is not representative of regular issues.

The Flambeau has made many chages this year, however, and we would like to explain to alumni and restate to students our editorial policies.

We publish the Flambeau with the neglected but not radical idea that a college newspaper is a sounding board of opinions as well as an announcement and news sheet.

It saddens us to read papers from other colleges and see they are saying nothing more than "Outcheer our rivals at the football game." "Rat day is a great day" or "We need a place for our bonfire." Today's students seem woefully uninterested and uninformed about the vital issues which affect the world they live in.

These attitudes are in part due to their not having to face the responsibilities some generations have had to, but it is also traceable to a lack of any real leadership. We hope in our small way to present various sides of important issues to arouse students' imagination. This is our duty to the student body.

We naturally want to give the university a wide news coverage, as well. So far we have been able to increase our coverage considerably through a cooperative plan with the School of Journalism. Students in the reporting classes are given beats throughout the campus and turn in their stories both to the Flambeau and their classes. Thus they gain practical experience and we are able to report news more fully.

It is our policy, however, to encourage the participation of students outside the School of Journalism as well. We feel that there is considerable latent talent on the campus and hope students will come to look upon the Flambeau as an outlet for their creative abilities.

Finally, we hope to make the Flambeau as professional and efficient as possible.

Professionalism, in the respectable sense, includes taste both in physical appearance and in method of expression. At times we find it necessary to criticize, but we always try to be factual, fair and moderate in language.

Efficiency and professionalism also imply the need for a reliable and capable staff, and we give particular attention to promising new workers. Promotions to senior and junior staff positions are made strictly on a basis of performance, and present members are expected to keep on their toes.

Ideals are always just a little beyond outstretched hands, of course, and we are not always able to have or do exactly what we would like. But we feel that continued adherence to such goals makes it more and more possible for succeeding staffs to attain them.

● THANKS

A twenty-four page edition of the Flambeau is a rather unusual thing. It is only the second time in Florida State's history that it has been accomplished, and it is probably one of the few times any college newspaper has published so large an edition.

Naturally it has meant a tremendous amount of work for the staff, but none of our efforts would have been of avail if it had not been for the cooperation of many additional people.

We want to take this chance to extend in a small way our thanks for their assistance.

The FSU public relations office was of considerable help to us in obtaining photographs and negatives.

We are also grateful to the many students outside the regular staff who devoted considerable time and effort to writing and reading for us. Similarly we appreciate the patience displayed by faculty members who were interviewed about their respective departments.

Finally and most important we are deeply grateful to the workmen of the Tallahassee Democrat who are responsible for printing the Flambeau. They displayed more confidence in us than perhaps we deserved and they have always been helpful and cheerful. We particularly appreciate the Democrat staff's help with photographic material.

● CLARIFICATION

When an order goes down the official ladder from one official to a subordinate and to another, there is always a great possibility that the original intent of the order will be misunderstood along the line.

Such was the case in recent banning of couples' sitting in parking areas at night.

Students were being forced to leave parked cars at night, and there was a great hue and cry that they were being forced "to the woods."

We now learn, however, that the directive from the Dean of Women's office was not so intended.

Original objection to parking lot spooning came because some couples were parking as early as 7 p.m. and making an evening of it. Without being particularly prudish, we feel this is being a bit extreme.

There is no objection to students parking for a while after a date, and such students are not supposed to be disturbed.

An explanation has been sent by the Dean of Women's office to the campus police force. We appreciate the clarification.

TAMPA ORCHIDS

It's Time To Stop Neglecting FSU

By ORCHID ALONSO

"Down below the Chattahoochee . . . there's an old abandoned outhouse, known as FSU." These popular words to the music of Sanford's even more popular alma mater is not unknown among Florida Staters. For Florida Staters to sing it is all right but when the people of the state of Florida regard FSU as an old "abandoned outhouse," the time for action has come.

Over the years many Seminoles have become aware of the lack of appreciation that exists in the state for FSU its faculty students football team and band. As far as most Floridians are concerned, their university is at Gainesville. As for Tallahassee, well, it is the State Capitol.

To go home and say you are attending FSU brings many a sly smile and look of pity. Little ol FSU. It is about time that the people that pay the taxes that support FSU became aware of its role in the state.

FSU trails the University of Florida by approximately 4 000 enrollment. The people here are spoiled because of the size of the University of Florida. Wonder if many people realize that FSU has almost four times the enrollment of Ole Miss? No one questions the size of Ole Miss, why question the size of FSU?

In football, the Seminoles have this year a powerhouse, but are looked upon with scorn. So it is with every other phase of our fine school. With a faculty and staff exceeding 600, we have many of the Souht's leading educators. We have a music school that is considered one of the best state music schools in the country. The physical facilities, coupled with Ernest Von Donhanyl, is indeed noted as the best in the country. But do the people of Florida know this? Absolutely not.

In the last five years, Florida State University has become one of the most widely publicized campuses in the United States. The famed circus, "Flying High," the gymnastics team, and Life cover girl, Marlies Gessler, have added their bit to the publicity role. But do the people recognize us? Again, the answer is no.

There is nothing to do but to grow bigger, and better to get more and more publicity but most of all, for each and every Seminole to be so proud of his school that he will not drop his head with shame when he says he attends there.

Come December 5, fans from all around the West Coast will flock down to see, as they put it, "Tampa U molder the Seminoles." Most Seminoles will agree that these people will be in for a great surprise when the Nuge's team converges upon them.

For a personal note, I'd like to add that my own life is in dire danger unless the Marching Chiefs come down and put on a show that will do Manley Whitcomb and his 121 piece marching band due credit.

The "girls' school" is going to really put the skids on a lot of Floridians when its students come to life and show some of the state's "best" people that FSU is not only co-ed, but wonderfully so.

Former FSU Students Win Excellence Award For Paper

For the third straight year two Florida State University graduates have won the General Excellence award of the Florida Press Association for their newspaper.

Arthur and Hettie Cobb, both of whom graduated from the FSU journalism department when it was part of the liberal arts studies, this week wrote Prof. Earl L Vance that their newspaper, The Playground News of Fort Walton, has again received the coveted General Excellence award.

THE AWARD was made at the recent meeting of the Florida Press Association held at Silver Springs. A plaque bearing the inscription "The Florida Press Association presents to The Playground News the General Excellence Award for the Best Weekly Newspaper in Class 1-C" is to be presented the newspaper.

Arthur Cobb, editor of The Playground News, graduated from FSU in 1949 and went from here to Furman University as assistant professor of journalism before becoming editor of the Ft Walton newspaper, which has received the General Excellence award every year since he went there.

HIS WIFE, the former Hettie Camp, also on the editorial staff of The Playground News, was both a student and an instructor in the department of journalism here, Professor Vance says. After her graduation she served on the editorial staff of Popular Publications, an New York magazine syndicate, before returning here in 1948 as instructor in journalism. Bob' Arthur and Hettie Cobb were on the staff of The Flambeau while students here.

Representation

Dear Editor:

It seems to me most strange - - - that last week a Flambeau would contain an article in which a member of the FSU faculty would define freedom and this week a Flambeau would contain an article which shows that at least a few members of the faculty wish to restrict the freedom of a large fraction of the students on campus—the freshmen.

The fact that the present Student Government Constitution does not allow freshmen to hold major dormitory offices shows that it, too, was adopted by individuals under the impression that freshmen were in some way inferior to upperclassmen. As soon as a group or government begins to exclude a large fraction of those under it from the right to freely elect their own leaders, then that government has started to become a dictatorship.

The present West Hall Constitution, which excludes freshmen from holding the offices of governor and lieutenant governor, was put into effect by 19 votes. 19 people determined the by-laws under which several hundred others will live! Is this Democracy?

This is written in the hope that it will stir freshmen in their own defense, that it will cause upperclassmen to realize that when people are excluded from their rights because of technicalities, the technicalities must be abolished and, that it will convince the faculty that freshmen have an interest in and desire for self-government.

Sincerely,
RAY N. MOSES

Thanks

Fellow Students:

I wish to express my thanks for your vote of confidence in electing me president of the freshman class. I will endeavor to carry out the plans of our class to the best of my ability. With your co-operation we can make our class the most outstanding freshman class that has ever entered this university.

Again I would like to express my deepest appreciation for your confidence and support in electing me president of our class.

Sincerely,
GEORGE HILL,
Freshman Class President.

Officials Permit Coed Visitation In Hospital as Experiment

By JEAN KING

Co-educational visiting is being permitted in the University Hospital this year for the first time.

Dr. Hathaway, the man mainly responsible for the new ruling, came to Florida State University in February, 1953, from Bennington, New York, where he had been in General Practice for about 25 years with four years out for the army.

He stated that he is most interested at the moment in taking some "preventative health" measures.

"We intent to follow up the surveys taken on the various eating places on campus."

Dr. Hathaway obtained his medical degree from Syracuse University in New York. He is married and has a daughter 14 years old.

Dr. David Stevens, another new addition to the University Hospital Staff, came to FSU from the Veteran's Administration in Lake City. He is a graduate of Tulane Medical School.

Dr. Stevens served in the Navy for two and a half years. He is married and has a seven months old son.

Besides Dr. Hathaway and Dr. Stevens, the staff also consists of Dr. Elizabeth Jeffress, a psychiatrist connected with the school of social welfare, a part time Roentgenologist, 16 registered nurses and an X-ray and a Laboratory Technician.

This year the diet kitchen has been enlarged, and a storeroom has been added. This permits better food to be served at a minimum cost.

"The same meal would cost from 50 per cent to 100 per cent more elsewhere," said Dr. Hathaway.

In the 85-bed hospital, medical care is offered to all students who wish to make use of the service. All medical cases are treated except major surgery.

Honesty, Skill, Experience Make Art

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The other day in one of my classes we were discussing an article written by an experienced and successful author as advice to a friend who wanted to be a writer.

We didn't see the amateur's story which prompted the essay, but the reply leaves no doubt in the reader's mind about its quality.

It surely was a razor-sharp, biting sort of article that the successful writer penned, but he made some very good points.

Essentially he was pleading for honesty in writing, and honesty demands that the writer have experience with and understanding of what he's talking about. Great works are often products of the artist's imagination, but in "creating" his composition, he must draw upon experience.

The previously mentioned author advised his friend to get out of the writing profession before he had invested too much time in it because he could never be an author without a rich storehouse of experience and a natural talent for expressing himself without resorting to cliches.

Here I must disagree. One has only to pick up any number of popular magazines or "slush," paper-bound books with the bare-bosomed covers to see that one can make a living without honesty or excellence of technique.

However, I believe it is true that what is considered "art" by the experts is that which is honest.

I'm sure it is true of writing: that the modern and older classics are stories by those authors who observed the societies and times in which they were living and captured them dramatically in words.

Can you imagine teachers a hundred years from now reading the pulp romances and "high-class" trash typified by Saturday Evening Post and telling their pupils that these are great? The question is practically rhetorical.

Pulps and Posts may be financially successful, but they do not stand up under the crite of greatness. They merely po tray life as their readers wou have it, not the way it is. The may sell, but they will never great.

Music that lasts is also th which captures the sentiment its times. Bach may today se sterile to many, but his mu is the very epitome of the pow and religious fervor of the Cat olic church at the time of greatest influence Tchaikowsk music captured the essence the romantic period at the en of the last century and com posers like Khatchaturian typ musically the social struggles modern Russia.

Were I more acquainted w the graphic arts I could try analyze them along similar line but I must admit I do not alwa get the significance of a mode abstraction. I am told by tho who know that they too are e pressions of modern society.

In the case of art, the old s could be reworded, "Honesty the anly policy."

THE POINT IS

Anything Can Be Done To Extremes

"Did somebody really dream the story up?"

"No I don't know. I've heard it before."

"How did you happen to know about it?"

"Someone told me—forgot who. It was two, three years ago. At a fair."

"Yeah, now I'm beginning to remember. Over near Fairfield. Quite a story behind it all."

"Do you know the whole story?"

"Most of it, what I heard. His name was Bitter—John Bitter."

"Well, tell me what you know."

"He had come up to the manager of this road show—a third rate circus, and asked him for a job."

"He was pretty young then, wasn't he?"

"Yeah, Bitter must have been 17 or 18. An orphan. Strong for his age. Plenty of nerve. He told the carny he had an act that should draw people. The show was pretty hard up, so the carny heard him out."

"Carnies are tough guys to deal with."

"Yeah, acts like his were nothing new, you know, jumping off a 50 foot tower into a pool of water. But he was young and he'd dive into a tank of water."

"It takes plenty of nerve."

"I don't know what he had—either he was crazy or did it for kicks. The crowds started coming in. They always like something like that. Real stark."

"Yeah, I know . . . some people . . ."

"Anyway, after a time, it got old to Bitter and the people, so he got more daring. Instead of having a water tank, he dug a hole in the ground, stretched canvas over it, and poured water in it."

"How deep was it?"

"No taller than you. Pretty shallow. He dived headfirst into that canvas pit. The water sure would splash. And he'd come out better than ever. 'Just so he had some water' I heard someone say once. The people really started flocking in."

"I would liked to heve seen that."

"That went on for a while. Bi ter loved the crowds and belie me, there were plenty of them. He decided to try something neve done before. Jump into a tu tub of water."

"Jump or dive?"

"I mean dive. Right into th tub of water."

"What happened to him?"

"Nothing happened to him. H was the big feature of the circu after that. Two shows a day—tw times a day he would dive in a tub filled with water."

"I didn't hear the whole stor then."

"Eventually that got to be o stuff though, and Bitter wanted try the supreme trick."

"What else could he do?"

"He wanted to diva from th 50 foot tower into a wet towe"

"Did he make it?"

"He was killed."

"Killed?"

"Yeah, someone had wrung th towel out."

CAMPUS CARAVAN

Party Added To 'That Senior Feeling'

By BEVERLY LACAYO

Last Sunday afternoon the seniors celebrated a Happy Birthday Party at President and Mrs Campbell's home on Tennessee Avenue. The President's Birthday is an occasion which all red-blooded seniors love, as each year it seems that Dr Campbell drops a special gem or two for their class alone. This year it was a sly but cordial invitation to take advantage of weekend evenings, the chairs and divans on his back porch (yes, he meant with dates).

After the honored guest and his wife had fed each other a little cake, Colin English as president of the Senior Class helped Dr Campbell serve the cake. The guests among whom were members of the faculty and administration as well as many students, sat in informal groups throughout the living room and out of doors drinking coffee or hot cocoa with their birthday cake.

It was more than the cocoa which had warmed us, however, as we headed back to campus over the wide green lawn. Perhaps it was the sincere simplicity of their spacious home. Perhaps because, observing the photos on the wall nearest his desk, we realized that our president enjoyed collecting autographs—his specialty— musicians. Or perhaps we noticed a reading, framed, at the entrance of his study entitled "The Penalty of Leadership" and for a brief space our minds could grasp the significance of his responsibilities. It may have been his kiss on Mrs Campbell's cheek coupled with his advice, "Look boys, this is how it's done!"

It was all of these things, of course, and more. It was engaging in easy conversation with those with mixed pleasure and sadness the last four years of classes, activities, fun. It was the "Senior" feeling.

This peculiar feeling that Seniors get reminds me of a sentiment expressed by alumni of other years as they come pouring back for the weekend to end all weekends. Strangely it is the simple traditions which we recall with mixed pleasuer and sadness as we return to the loud gaiety of homecoming parades, football games, and crowded dances.

Ah! But I hear the music!

3 00 Parade time—and as usual a couple of boys will walk out with an unscheduled "float."

Tonight: the Garnet and Gold Key Banquet, where, for the first time, we see a toastmistress instead of a toastmaster. We are all counting on Polly to let the world know that FSU still has the best girls in the state.

8 15 the Pow Wow, which, whe translated, means good ente tainment. After that open hous . . . old home week . . . ret early this night.

Saturday morning: Alum breakfast at Dr. and Mrs. Camp bell's. Then they return to cam pus, walk their old haunts, vis favorite professors bump into o classmates and lie profusely each other that neither one ha aged a day.

2 30 The stadium is pack and old timers still slightly su prised by Campbell Stadium, side by side with a "pip squeak" generetion which takes it granted.

Dinner time again—and do we know that George's will ma enough on that one meal to clo for a month of Sundays.

9 00 Charlie Spivak. The s purpose Suwannee room become a dance hall, multi-colored dres whirl by, a young man swears re venge on the "character" th kicked his shine in the last terbug—only to find that it was ex-president of 'the Chapter', ble his heart.

Sunrise Sunday morning find everyone either dead, missing action or still going strong. An another page, marked "Homecom ing," falls into that charming tender, but elusive scrabook whic we call our memory.

A Little Contract Changes The Heart

By DAVID DREIS

BITS OF BARBS

One of the things that I can't stomach is the testimonials made by some radio personalities about their sponsors. It wasn't so long ago when this columnist was naive enough to believe everything he read and heard but that was before Horace Heidt. This bandleader was formerly sponsored by Philip Morris cigarettes and gave everyone the impression that the cigarette dangled from his mouth when his lips weren't fastened to an instrument . . . then, something happened and P. M. dropped his contract. Horace didn't have to look far for somebody to pay his bills because Lucky Strike took up his option. Horace makes the same comments about Lucky Strike.

Ugh! Horace, however, isn't alone and Jack Webb of Dragnet is another offender. Webb made comments about how good, his former sponsor, Fatima cigarettes were. Then the Fatima blood brother took over and Webb is all for Chesterfields . . . ditto on the dialog. However, there are still people like Dennis James and Godfrey who stick by their product. Bob Hope was on the Colgate Comedy Hour on television, but insisted that the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet company just mention their products with exception of the toothpaste. Hope had been associated with Pepsodent for so many years that he felt the public would distrust him if he was on for a rival brand. That's the type of fellow I like.

ADDED ATTRACTIONS

A heavy rumor about Julius La Rosa is that if ever CBS drops his contract, another close rival network will snap him up. La Rosa gave in to an agent because he was guaranteed $100,000 a year where he was only getting $15,000 by the red-head . . . A heavy fact is he's being tested by Paramount. Jack O'Brien of the N. Y. Journal-American who's a good friend of Godfrey labels his action "all wrong . . . I Love Lucy again rated no 1 on video starring Lucy Ball—Dragnet's the topper on audio starring . . . Webb, natch . . . Newcomer Mary Murphy, who's a ringer for Debbie Reynolds is still getting great roles from RKO . . . with Brando in Hot Blood and with Tam Marten in Main Street to Broadway.

To advertise Roman Holiday a San Francisco theater manager superimposed the body of Terry Moore to Audrey Hepburn's head . . . Hepburn's emoting got raves . . . Moore's body got ditto and the manager has headaches from Paramount . . . Keefe Brasselle playing Eddie Cantor getting hoorays . . . same with James Stewart as Glenn Miller . . . Martin and Lewis turn to Damon Runyon's story for next film, Money From Home.

Betty Grable's going on tour . . . says she'll show the people her legs . . . In How To Marry A Millionaire her swan song for Fox . . . the studio built up co-stars Monroe and Bacall in ads, but Grable got the buildup in reviews . . . Fox trying to get her back . . . Jess Barker, awaiting his decree from spouse, Susie Hayward, will resume his screen career . . . Jess saw his star fall while his wife's rose . . . if he returns, he's been guaranteed stardom by video, audio and movie studios . . . nice to hear . . . he got his declaration when he gave Susie a shiner . . . now he needs to make it official.

AHEM

Lorry Raine of Kem Records being given the big play by maga zines . . . we mentioned Kem a an up and coming record com pany . . . Teresa Brewer really a scene-stealer in Those Redhead From Seattle for Paramount co ing to the State theater. The fil Guy Mitchell, the Bell Sisters ar Brewer besides Gene Barry an Rhonda Fleming . . . Crosby be ing considered for another O car . . . Little Boy Lost . . . h seems to be the only one to g raves after noses had alread been counted. Jose Ferrer an Rita Hayworth also may be u for it in Columbia's Miss Sadi Thompson . . . merely speculatio George Seaton, director of Littl Boy Lost was the first Lone Ranc er on the radio . . . more useles information, eh?

LET'S FACE IT

Issues Invitation to a 'Joe-Toasting'

By GENE LAWLER

[illegible] week the students at the University of Toronto did an unusual thing. Shrouded in KKK-[illegible] bedsheets, hundreds gathered and cheered as U. S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy was hanged and burned in effigy.

This set us to wondering. Some persons have complained of a foreign student body denouncing a U. S. Senator; we could make it national at FSU. The first order of business after Homecoming, a burning could be staged on the site of football pep [illegible] by the Student Center. Students could buy faggots to toss on the fire, with proceeds going to Campus Chest.

Who Knows? Perhaps such a spirit would spread to other colleges, much as the panty-raid movement spread last spring. A dozen such "Joe-Toastings" would go a long way to revive the voice of this "Silent Generation."

Certainly few demagogues have more richly deserved to be so [illegible]ted. McCarthy's ruthless [illegible] have broken virtually [illegible] precept of moral decency. [illegible] lied, bluffed, bullied, and [illegible] his way to the status of America's number one demagogue. About the only thing he [illegible] done is bodily remove the [illegible] Constitution from the National Archives building.

The record is clear for liberals. [illegible] how McCarthy has [illegible] muddied the reputations of [illegible] loyal Americans like [illegible] Marshall, Dean Acheson, [illegible] Bohlen, Philip Jessup, [illegible] Kenyon, Nathan Pusey [illegible]dore Hanson—all of them [illegible] their nation and its government. They know how Joe [illegible]rminded our influence [illegible] and made the U. S. appear [illegible]-tending [illegible] about our more con[illegible] friends? How can we [illegible] them that Joe's ends [illegible] justify his means, that his [illegible] accusations are worth-[illegible]deed detrimental, in an effort to oppose Communism? How [illegible] entice them to buy a faggot to toast McCarthyism? Let us ask them this question: How would Joe treat a government official about whom the following facts are known:

1. That he was elected to office with the help of Communists?

2. That he has been found in correspondence with a German Communist?

3. That he has employed a confessed Communist on his staff?

4. That he has on many occasions followed the party line of the DAILY WORKER and as short as six years ago openly made statements friendly to Russia?

There is little doubt that such a person would branded by McCarthy as "Communist!" It is unlikely that he would get off so easily as to be denounced as "Fellow-Traveler," "Subversive," "Communist-Thinker," "Party-Liner," or "Subversible Person."

But this official will never be investigated by the McCarthy Committee. For this man is McCarthy himself.

As explained by Jack Anderson and Ronald W May in their well written and carefully documented book, McCarty The Man, The Senator, The Ism (Beacon Press, 1953) each of these charges can be fully backed up.

1. He was elected to the Senate with the help of genuine Communists in the Allis-Chalmers CIO local in Milwaukee, which ground out smear attacks against Bob LaFollette Jr., his opponent. Said McCarthy afterword: "Well, Communists have the right to vote, don't they?"

2. He was found red-handed with a manila envelope with the return address of a German Communist, Dr. Rudolf Aschenauer. "This envelope had borne across the Atlantic tall tales of American torture, allegedly practiced on Nazi war criminals. Joe gave the chary a respectability by repeating them on the Senate floor; and the Communists circulated his speeches throughout Germany to stir up anti-American feeling."

3. He employed Charles Davis, a confessed American Communist, to get dirt on John Carter Vincent, then American Minister to Switzerland. Davis tried to frame Vincent with a faked telegram, but was arrested by Swiss authorities and deported.

4. His statements may be paralleled with those of the DAILY WORKER, at least as well as those of his victims. He has called Harry Truman a vicious and irresponsible man, has attacked former Secretary of State Dean Acheson at every opportunity, has opposed the Marshall Plan, and has called the UN's effort in Korea "Truman's War." So, of course has the DAILY WORKER. As short ago as 1946 he said: "Stalin's proposal for world disarmament is a great thing and he must be given credit for being sincere about it."

So run the charges against McCarthy. We would hardly dare suggest that McCarthy is a Communist—a wolf in skunk's clothing, but we do think they illustrate the hypocrisy and worthlessness of his so-called investigations.

We think Herbert Philbrick, who spent nine years in the Communist party as a counter-spy for the FBI and who rose higher in the Communist hierarchy than any other revealed FBI agent, summarized this well:

"According to leaders of the Communist party, McCarthy has helped them a great deal. The kinds of attacks he has made do three things that the comrades like: They add greatly to the confusion, putting up a smokescreen for the party and making it more difficult than ever for people to discern just who is a Communist and who is not; they make the party appear a lot stronger than it is; and they do considerable damage to some of the 'stupid liberals' whom the party hates."

Have trouble parking? You shouldn't with all the new parking lots that have sprung up around the campus . . . a year ago the streets looked like a continual motorcade was passing through. With the increase of more student cars every year, the administration wisely designated and built new lots at strategic spots over the campus . . .

Alumni will find parking space behind North Cawthon, in the shade of the 8-story dormitory Florida Hall, at the new Student Center, behind the Presbyterian Student House on Copeland St., and across the corner from the Baptist Student House on West Call, and, of course, behind the Music Building . . .

Let It Be Said

By DICK VICTORY

All roads lead to Tallahassee.

Homecoming.

Homecoming: conducive to memories.

Of cold coffee in wee hours, of repressed cries around a disharmonious piano, of floppy-collared professors attempting, of soft music and wild hearts, of anxious frowns in these times of little assurance, of many hellos, goodbyes and 'til we meet againsts, of moist eyes at diploma or parting time all collected to form what they call the university and in turn, education.

And what makes a university a university?

People.

What kinds?

All kinds.

Qualify that, please.

Three types of women. Three types of men. Ladies first.

The Frustrated Florence type in foremost. She sends herself candy, flowers ,and heroin. She has seen every movie produced in the last four years. When asked what she has been doing lately, she replies in a nauseated nasal, "I been sick." She looks it.

Next, there is the Belle of the Ball type. She has a cauliflower ear from excessive phone calls. Her motto is: "Familiarity breeds children," thus she roves, induces raves, and remains in a rut.

And finally, in all her gory glory, there is the Perennial Sweater type. Her goal is to be a belle of the ball, but she just doesn't have her bearings.

She blooms brightly in the winter, fades slightly in the spring, and proves to be quite unsightly by summer. With the emphasis on entasis, she walks her wares. When questioned on her sweater-wearing motives, she replies in a voice that makes you wish you were wearing ear muffs. "It's cold." She's not.

And now, on to the men.

Perhaps the most interesting, is the Hubert Updike type. He's so blue-blooded that his bedsores have bedsores. He is so rich that he sells anything he can't buy. He is so sure of himself that he wears matching underwear.

Then, there is Radical Ralph. Constantly plotting to overthrow the Student government, his fingers are very yellow. They smell like the original tobacco field.

At last we have the Saturday Sot type, who excels at football games. After yelling for that old Seminole spirit, he is passed the bottle and then becomes a man possessed.

He stands and screams, "F. S. U. one time, F. S. U. two times, etc., while his date quietly slips under the seat.

All of this could have been said in these four representative lines:

It takes all kinds to make a school,
The brain, the queen, the creep, the fool.
But, I bet it's still your view
There's not even one just like you.

So now, as the sun sinks slowly in the west, I'm yours until then.

Troner Runs 'Really Cool' Program From His Swivel Chair At WTAL

By BOB FOLSOM

Since television is the meek item around here, radio listeners (and popular music lovers) who stay up late at night, very likely tune in a program run by an extremely sharp and soft-voiced disc-jockey who seems to fit the music world jargon, "cool," perfectly.

A progressive-minded chap as the music business goes, Bob Troner can be heard week nights spinning records over his "Night Owl" program. In a temperate zone such as a college area, its almost a prerequisite that some good music should shroud the air waves at night, and Troner's show seems more than fill the bill

SITTING in the compact, air-conditioned studios at WTAL, Troner, firmly rooted to a swivel chair, patiently waiting for the news slot to fade, told of his feelings on the matter of playing good music. "I try to choose my music carefully, not only in the content, but in pacing as well to please the listener—the lover of all types of music. On the "Night Owl" you'll hear a smattering of many types of music."

He lit a cigarette, and then emphasized seriously ,"For that reason, the smattering—I mean, is why it's not a telephone request show. I feel if it was run as a request program I would be playing 'Doggie in the Window' six times a night, thereby alienating the affections of those who don't listen to 'Doggie in the Window'."

ADJUSTING the controls, he fidgeted for a moment with the needle on a playing arm, and then muttered: "The turntable kicked out. I think I'm going to be operating on one turntable tonight. He took it in his stride, not breaking the pace he so meticulously sets down in his varied patter of music interspersed with timely comments on the artist, or the arrangement.

Born in New York City and unmarried, he came to Tallahassee two and a half years ago. "I was headed for a television job in Huntington, West Virginia. I had worked there before in radio, and discovered when I arrived the job had been taken. So I headed South, found Tallahassee, liked it, and I've been here ever since."

HE HAS had the program now for about two years. It was formerly known as the "Seminole Shuffle," until changed a year ago to "Night Owl" with him as the host. At 26, he has been in radio for "roughly five years" and before that he worked in an advertising agency. The Navy claimed him for two years. A wiry, well-dressed young man, he possesses that natural and confident air come by most good disc-jockeys. From time to time various people would phone in for a request, he would politely refuse them saying only dedications were allowed. Others would drop in the studio to say hello, and chat for a moment.

The theme song to his show, Ecstasy, by the Art Van Damm Quinet, was mentioned. Troner's grin exposed a set of perfect, white teeth. "I think I'm responsible for a shortage of those records in this area." Some weeks ago, he was going to change the theme, and had asked his listeners if they would rather he keep Ecstasy. "The response was terrific," he said. "We tied up the telephone lines for an hour."

A NATIVE NEW YORKER, he worked for a radio station on the north shore of Long Island, where his parents still live. Why didn't he go back and try the big time? He got pretty emphatic on the subject.

"Not in the foreseeable future. New York City is a rat-race—your job is much more competitively insecure. Not that you don't have to stay on your toes down here, but I'm satisfied. For the time being I've got what I want."

HOW about a hit prediction? He didn't hesitate. "It's difficult as all get out to predict a hit. The likes and dislikes of the American public are hard to figure out. The ones I do predict usually fall flat."

"Up and coming vocalists? Julius La Rosa. Bob Manning and his The Nearness of You was a fine record."

THE TALK drifted on to other disc-jockey programs—Dick Martin over WWL, New Orleans with his Moonglow with Martin, and Art Ford, WNEW, New York City on Milkman's Matinee.

"Some people told me I was trying to fashion my show after Martin. Incidentally he's great. Its really a compliment. He's highly listenable, and has a sophisticated show. But I'm not." he admitted frankly in all candor. "The 'Night Owl' is my baby, all my own making," he smiled

ON the latter portions of his program you will likely hear the music subdued, and more uninterrupted music will be played. He had this to say, "About then people are more inclined to hear music than listen to a disc-jockey."

Yet he seems easy to listen to anytime.

Dreis Objects Subjects Taken By Columnist

By DAVID DREIS

Aw, c'mon fellas . . . lay off. Funny things about my fellow Flambeau writers . . . they won't let me have all the fun . . . I can remember when Editor Galphin first called me into his office, brushed a pencil behind his ear, pointed a bony finger in my direction and said, "Dreis . . . I want you to write about show-business . . . that oughta keep you busy."

Tears flowed from my eyes. Here was my chance at last. Nobody wrote about show-business—movies, theater, vaudeville, radio-teevee. Wow, here was my chance.

The first issue came out . . . I found that legitimate stage was handled by Richard Stevens . . . that was okay. I still had my other medias of entertainment. Then Bob Folsom hit with a disc jockey story . . . my column still went on . . . Dick Stevens countered with a review on "From Here to Eternity." Well, I told myself, he liked it. Folsom continued his literature with a story on movie projectors, but I wasn't downhearted . . . I had a column about radio in that issue. Gene Lawler pounced into his "Let's Face It" column with an article

Debate Team Members Discuss Free Trade Question

Negative

By BRUCE W. FLETCHER

Editor's note: The topic for intercollegiate debate this year is "Resolved: That the United States should adopt a policy of free trade." The Flambeau here presents two arguments, one affirmative and one negative as representative of the views of the debate squads.

The space allotted in no way reflects the Flambeau's opinion on the subject. The two students were asked to write in the matter and allowed all the space they wanted.

The definition of the term "free trade," as stated by Webster's New International Dictionary of the English Language, The Oxford English Dictionary and W[illegible]'s Political Dictionary, [illegible] essence, elimination of all barriers to trade.

But more important than the free trade idea stated in the resolution is the proposition of unilateral action. The question is not whether the world should adopt free trade, but should the United States do it alone?

Therefore, the merits of free trade are irrelevant. What we are trying to determine is: should our nation eliminate those barriers to trade which we now have, and should we allow other countries to compete without restriction in our domestic market?

Proponents of free trade have [illegible] reasons for its adoption. Most of them point out that our exports exceed our imports, thus producing a "dollar gap." We should eliminate the dollar gap because the rest of the world is buying more than it is selling and consequently, we have to give them money to buy our goods.

Free traders also are worried, that unless something is done, the countries of Western Europe are apt to engage in an all-out trade program with Russia and Red China. I might point out that we are also considering opening trade agreements with Communist countries. Trade with another country creates an interdependence between the two countries; what could be better than having your enemy dependent on you?

Too, there are those free traders who approve of the free trade theory as it appears on paper; unfortunately, these people fail to consider the practical side of the question.

First, let's evaluate the need for a change. The reader can see that the most significant problem facing our present economic foreign policy is the problem of the dollar gap. Do we need to adopt a unilateral policy of free trade to solve this problem?

Figures from The American Tariff League Publication, No 133, entitled "How Low Are U. S. Tariffs?" show that the United States has the eighth lowest tariffs in a survey of forty-three countries. Our tariffs have been reduced on a reciprocal and mutually advantageous basis sixty-eight per cent from 1937 to 1951. In other words, if we should eliminate thirty-two per cent more of our 1937 tariff rates, we would eliminate our tariffs. The question is; should we eliminate the rest of our tariffs through reciprocity, as we have in the past, or should we do it on an untried unilateral basis?

A sixty-eight per cent reduction in fourteen years is an average ,yearly reduction of 4.3 per cent. At this rate of speed, it would take about seven years to eliminate the remaining 32 per cent. Seven years from 1951 (i.e., by 1958) we could have our tariffs eliminated through reciprocity; that is, other countries would eliminate their trade barriers along with us. The result would be world free trade. I have heard several free traders say that they wanted to launch a ten year reduction scheme, when, at the present rate of reduction, our tariffs will have been eliminated in five years. Thus, our present economic foreign policy will solve as much of the dollar gap problem as we are capable of solving through tariff manipulations.

Adoption of a policy of free trade without definite assurance of what the rest of the world would do to its trade barriers could produce a disastrous effect on the internal economic status of our country. Other countries could react by raising their tariffs sufficiently to reduce our exports considerably while they flood our home market with their cheaper goods. Then the dollar gap would be reversed, and many of our industries would be run out of business.

It is true that our nation is sovereign: we are theoretically without limit in what we as a nation can do. However, we must consider the repercussions of a unilateral foreign policy before we adopt it. When disastrous repercussions are possible, our government is bound by its obligation to us not to adopt the policy which is being considered.

Free trade is an untried plan, and we must not let our national leaders gamble the destiny of our nation on it!

Therefore, be it resolved, that the United States should not adopt a policy of free trade.

Affirmative

Resolved: That the United States Should Adopt a Policy of Free Trade.

By WARREN COBB

In presenting the affirmative side of this resolution, I shall [illegible]ate and attempt to justify [illegible]ons for believing that the United States should adopt a new [illegible] policy of free trade [illegible] the present inadequacies of [illegible]teralism and foreign aid.

First of all, it is imperative to [illegible] just what is meant by "adopting a policy of free trade."

Does this mean acting impetuously upon the present cumbersome system, irrespective of practicality and mutual relations? Does it mean subordinating the interests of the United States to the interests of foreign countries? Does it mean shipping strategic materials to countries dedicated to our overthrow?

The answer to these questions is an emphatic "NO."

In attempting to define free trade, we must remember that words and terms cannot be taken in isolation, supplied a concise definition from Webster's dictionary, and interpreted accordingly without regard to usage, connotation and context.

Economist Adam Smith has defined free trade as that economic policy which draws no distinction between domestic and foreign commodities, and, therefore, neither imposes additional burdens on the latter nor grants any special favors to the former.

FREE TRADE, then, within the ambits of this definition—and it is essentially a good one—is nothing more or less than an equalization of competitive opportunities for all. It is a policy which, though not necessarily eliminating revenue tariffs, would insure that these tariffs were used only for equalization purposes.

For example, if there were a five per cent excise tax on domestic butter, then a five per cent revenue tariff on imported butter would not contravene a policy of free trade.

We are not advocating an impetuous, unreserved policy inconsiderate of national security and common sense.

An intelligent proponent of free trade does not disregard the inherent dangers involved in shipping strategic materials to Russia or other countries which are our enemies in the cold war. Reason and reality apply to any statement of free action.

We do NOT advocate the repeal of the Battle Act, which prohibits trade with an enemy nation.

What we DO advocate is a more progressive and mutually beneficial approach to the world economic problem than that afforded by the present system of bi-lateralism and foreign aid.

We feel that there is definitely a need for a change.

Our present protectionist trade policy was first begun during the War, of 1812 to reciprocate against England and France This ruined our shipping temporarily, and it was some time after the war before we recovered.

Tariff policies were necessary during the embryonic period of growth and development when this country could exist in comparative isolation; perhaps they were temporarily necessary during the exigencies of the depression

But we are a mature nation now, with a mature economy, and the depression—despite the lamentations in the past presidential campaign—ended some 25 years ago.

Our present system, then, is a hangover from another century, an anachronism in 1953.

It might also be pointed out that the present bi-lateralism is an involved, entangling system lacking coherence and consistency.

To illustrate the world trade situation under the present system, suppose that every one of our 48 states had its own tariff system, suppose that each state had its own currency, suppose that each state's dollar had a different value for different types of purchases in trade with the other 47 states, suppose that half the states had physical quantity limits or expenditure limits on exports or imports or both—then you would have a picture of international trade today.

Under the highly complicated and, in many cases, completely arbitrary rates and controls now in effect throughout most of the world, who imports or who exports is determined largely by administrative or bureaucratic decisions. This opens the door to pressures and briberies.

It should also be noted that bilateral trade can continue only to the point where home price of imports equates home cost of exports. Then it will cease.

We must also face the unpleasant reality that our present policies of restriction, protectionism, and discrimination do not recognize and appeal to the most powerful political phenomena of our times—the rising tide of nationalism throughout the world.

Imperialism is out-dated. The nationalistic fervor has been exhibited in the Far East, the Middle East, North Africa, South America, and Central Europe. And it is this nationalism, together with Catholicism, which can stand as the prime deterrent to Communist expansion.

We must recognize the needs and fervent appeals of these struggling small nations if we are to maintain a position of strength and bargaining power in the cold war.

Russia has recognized it. She has recently made barter-trade agreements with France and Italy, offering them products they are used to buying from the West and, in turn, taking products the French and Italians have been unable to sell to a western world at high tariffs. And Russia will also get strategic materials under this trade-bait plan. And Russia has recently made a similar pact with Argentina

We cannot afford to let these vital materials go to Russia by default.

As Canadian Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent pointed out in a speech before the International Municipal Congress in Montreal, the U. S. should not present trade barriers to these countries which depend primarily on foreign trade. Such restrictions, said St. Laurent, have drastic consequences in the international fight against Communism and depression.

Such restrictions are certainly not in keeping with the policy advocated by President Eisenhower— ". . . A long-term, consistent program . . . directing all our economic power toward reviving free world economies and trade as a whole."

Under the present system of bi-lateralism, Europe has attempted to cope with the dollar gap by decreasing her imports by 30 per cent since 1946, with a resultant decrease in American exports. This is a negative solution of the dollar gap, which is, simply, the discrepancy between American purchases abroad.

For these reasons we believe a redressal of the policy of bi-lateralism is in order.

Another alternative to free trade is continued and expanded aid. Immediately after the war a program of aid was necessary for the rehabilitation of Europe. Since then we have poured $21.1 billion into Europe alone, attempting to buy protection against Communist expansion.

But maintaining the economy of Europe by making them dependent upon our aid does not make for loyal allies—as evidenced by the numerous "Go Home, Yankee!" signs posted in countries we have been subsidizing. We are not winning friends and influencing people by this dollar diplomacy. We are gaining nothing in the way of material goods when we pay countries for producing surpluses that our protective barriers prohibit to our consumers. We are merely doing what Marx, Lenin, Stalin, et. al. said all along we would do—spending ourselves into oblivion.

An allegiance based on resentful dependence is in no way as trustworthy as an allegiance based on interdependence, co-operation, and mutual advantage.

A system of "trade not aid" would make European and other countries dependent not upon our loans and subsidies but upon their own industrial capacity and initiative.

These are our reasons for believing that the need for a change is clearly apparent.

Adopting a policy of free trade, as I have stated, does not imply an impetuous action inconsiderate of practicality and mutual relations.

The actions of all nations, our own included, must necessarily be co-ordinated and interrelated with the actions of other nations in this shrunken world.

Consequently, a policy of free trade would have to evolve gradually rather than appear in the international economy by spontaneous combustion.

Our nation could precipitate this innovation by progressively reducing duties (perhaps at the rate of 20 per cent annually), simplifying customs procedures, and establishing more and larger buying offices abroad.

Opponents of free trade may argue that we cannot be certain that other countries will concomitantly lower their barriers—which incidentally, are much lower than ours now.

This is a specious argument in that it disregards these facts:

A. A great many nations, because of geographical factors, will always be dependent upon importing more than they export

B. The barrier to U. S. exports abroad is not a reluctance to buy our products but a financial inability to pay for them. It is this dollar shortage which is responsible for the disjointed world economy—and the dollar shortage in these countries is the result of a shortage of markets for their incipient industries.

It is to these facts that we address our plan for a free market and free trade.

We believe this plan would serve these positive ends:

1. It would stimulate our own economy.

2. It would create a favorable economic and political harmony throughout the world.

3. It would prevent our allies and potential allies from turning to Russian markets and to interdependence among themselves exclusive of the U. S. because our markets are unavailable to them.

First, it would stimulate our own economy in that it would afford an outlet for much of our surplus which is currently being handled by the government.

Prosperity is the goal of this nation. But not "false prosperity." Subsidizing our surplus goods and stabilizing wages may give the illusion of prosperity, but the debt thus incurred by the U. S. government must inevitably fall back on the U. S. consumer and producer. This indirect circuit and exchange of currency may give the impression of prosperity, but it would be rank self-deceit to consider this a healthy situation.

If, however, tariff barriers were removed, our prices to foreign countries would be lowered and they could more easily afford to buy our surplus in the form of exports—thereby sharing and alleviating the burden of parity.

An end of subsidies would reduce the national debt and income taxes. This, in turn, would serve to encourage business, both large and small.

Secondly, free trade would create a favorable economic and political harmony throughout the world.

It would yield the greatest benefits to each country. Exports can be sold to the highest-priced markets. Imports can be bought in the lowest-priced market.

The hundred years of comparative peace after the Napoleonic wars was in most parts of the world a period of relative freedom from governmental authority and controls. There was freedom of capital movements, freedom in the movement of goods and labor mobility.

And thirdly, free trade will serve to prevent our allies and potential allies from turning to Russian markets and to interdependence among themselves exclusive of the U. S. because our markets are unavailable to them.

If we encourage expanded European production and then close our doors to their products as we are now doing, the logical alternative is an ultimate economic freeze-out of the U. S.

These, then, are the advantages and positive ends of a policy of free trade.

The opposition will maintain that free trade will subject us to an influx of cheap goods with which we cannot compete, that it will impair our self-sufficiency and standard of living, that it would mean trading with Russia, that it would not protect minorities, etc.

Is it true that we cannot compete with low income countries exploiting cheap labor? Would free trade bring a prodigious flood of cheap goods into this country which would vitally endanger our domestic industries?

There are those—manufacturers who prefer protection to progress—who maintain that this is the case.

But at the present time the U. S. produces about 40 per cent of the world's goods. Labor productivity is, on the average, about nine times as great as in the rest of the world. We CAN compete with other countries because of our advanced technology, our supremacy in mass production methods, and the ingenuity which has made America great.

It is foolish to assume that there will be this sudden influx of cheap goods from other countries. Foreign countries do not have the combined natural resources and developed technology to make that possible. Our competition would be chiefly in quality rather than quantity goods.

Another point favoring our own products in a free market is our superior advertising techniques, which have derived from our highly competitive domestic economy.

As for impairing our self-sufficiency, we must remember that we are not self-sufficient and never will be. We are vitally dependent upon other countries for many of our essential imports—e. g. rubber. If we are afraid to compete with foreign products in time of peace, how can we expect to excel them in time of war?

As for our standard of living and the threat of unemployment as a result of a free market:

Granted, certain industries could not survive foreign competition. But other industries would be stimulated by competition and by the fact that they would no longer be indirectly subsidizing their own goods.

Workers from the weaker industries could be absorbed by the industries that could weather the winds of international competition. This law of survival and adaptation has always held sway

Our commerce, under this expanded system of trade, would expand proportionately, opening up many fields of employment.

And industry on the whole, would be provided great incentive for increased production.

As for sending strategic materials to Russia, this is completely invalid as an argument against free trade. In any form of trade, a country exports what it chooses to export—and where it chooses to export.

The opposition will say that our exports might find their way indirectly to Russia. But it should be pointed out that we cannot prevent foreign countries from trading with Russia under the present system of bi-lateralism. Russian foreign trade has expanded greatly since the end of the war.

It is true that a system of free trade does not protect minorities. It protects no one. It merely gives everyone equal opportunities. For the opposition to say that free trade and removal of tariffs is all right for some but not for others is highly suggestive of George Orwell's satiric declaration from his novel 1848: "All men are equal, but some are more equal than others."

Freedom of market is one of the foundations of world peace. Leagues of nations, councils of powers, and associations of governments — desirable as they may be—will not prevent wars if the threatening tensions and sources of friction between nations are not allowed to absorb their explosive force through a free market.

The unfettered market is not the universal touchstone of the millenium. It does not change human nature, and, therefore, the impossible should not be expected of it.

It is, however, one of the indispensable catalysts to a free and peaceful society, because it organizes human energies and resources on the basis of voluntary co-operation, rather than on the basis of force, coercion, and directives.

Temporary advantages should not be made an excuse for destroying the free market—and possibly the freedom and peace of the world today — and the world tomorrow.

Crosby Plays Biggest Role In 'Little Boy'

Bing Crosby plays the most dramatic role of his career in Little Boy Lost, a Paramount production, currently playing at the Florida Theatre through November 21.

Based upon the story of the same name by Marghanita Laski, the picture introduces a new moppet, Christian Fourcade, the "little boy lost."

Filmed majorly in France, Little Boy Lost was produced and directed by William Perlberg and George Seaton. It is a film that is reportedly filled not only with honest and powerful drama, but one which includes a tender love story and the poignant search of a foreign correspondent (Bing) for the son he has not seen since birth.

Claude Dauphin co-stars as Bing's old friend who helps in the search. Music is not lacking, and Crosby introduces several new Johnny Burke and Jimmy Van Heusen tunes

Starting Sunday, November 22, at the State Theatre, Those Redheads from Seattle will run through Tuesday, November 24.

A Technicolor musical by Paramount, the picture stars Rhonda Fleming, Gene Barry, Theresa Brewer, Guy Mitchell, Agnes Moorehead, and the Bell Sisters.

The days of the gold rush in the Yukon and Klondike areas, are the setting for the songs, dances, and romances of a family of red-headed beauties from Seattle.

New hit tunes are featured.

Those Sixteen Performances a Year Represent Much Work For Director, Costumers, Set Designers, Backstage Help, Too

By RICHARD STEVENS

Sixteen nights a year people congregate in Augusta Conradi Little Theater for the purpose of seeing Speech Department play productions. Many of these persons who attend on one or more of the sixteen performance nights have no idea how much work is done by the director, costumer, set designer, and students in preparation for a single production.

First the plays are selected. This is a job usually left to the individual directors who are Speech Department instructors and professors, although the final word is that of Dr. Lynn E Orr, associate professor in the Department of Speech and head of the drama area.

THEN, while the director wrestles with the problems of staging his play, two other problems are turned over to Douglas Russel and Charles Reimer, Speech Department instructors. Their jobs are, respectively, to costume the play and to build the sets.

Mr Russel then goes about the designing of the costumes, or he may assign one of his more advanced students to this problem. For example, senior speech student, Nancy Dickinson, has been given the important job of costuming the forthcoming Romeo and Juliet. As a general rule, though, Mr Russel does this job and also supervises all of the work. Under him is the costuming crew, made up of several students, who, like the students comprising the other crews and in the cast, are not necessarily Speech majors, but who have one collective desire to add their services to the production of a play.

MOST OF the costumes seen in Speech Department plays are completely manufactured by the costume crews. Mr Russel, who was for several years costumer for the Oregon Shakespeare Festival consistently comes up with some of the finest costumes to be found on a college stage.

The building of the sets for these plays runs a course parallel to that of the costuming. Mr. Charles Reimer puts his scene shop crew to work at least four weeks prior to the opening of the play. This student crew, under Mr Reimer's direction, constructs and paints the components of the set, or sets, to be used in the play. Here, once again, the man in charge, Mr. Reimer, manages to produce unfailing sets of technical perfection.

THE MOST complicated work of all, however, belongs to the director. This FSU is fortunate in having two very capable men, Dr. Orr and Dr. Paul (Life With Father) Davee to direct these shows. The director starts his task as soon as his play has been chosen. He has many problems right away—how to stage it, how to handle character problems, what sort of general tone to effect, and so on. Then, when he has finished many weeks of preliminaries, he will post a notice on the Speech Department bulletin board in the History Building inviting all interested persons to appear on a certain date to read for parts in the next production. Perhaps the most difficult job a director has is that of casting his show. He must listen not only to individuals but also to combinations; he must listen for voice qualities and look for physical characteristics that strike responsive chords in him as to the characters of his play as he has imagined them.

When the director has cast all the parts in the play, only one thing remains to be done—to whip the show into shape. This is accomplished by having the players learn their lines and their movements, then rehearsing for from four to eight weeks to polish the timing, pace and chacterizations.

THE PLAY is now entertainment for four nights, but is the product of over 1.00 man-hours of work. So it seems it might not be advisable to remark to one who does stage work, "After all, it's only a play . . ."

Editor Reveals Tally Ho Runs On Schedule

"Everything's progressing right on schedule," was Becky Brown's only comment when asked about the progress of Florida State University's 1953-54 yearbook, the Tally-Ho." Becky, who is editor of the annual, went on to explain that the staff has already met its first deadline on November 14. At that time the entire class section was sent in plus all of the art work for the whole book.

The staff is working hard now to finish up the section which is devoted to faculty and administration and has also started on the feature portion. These sections plus the part of the book which will feature pictures of all of the Greek organizations on campus, must be ready to meet a second deadline on the seventh of December.

LAST FRIDAY night, November 13, a group of faculty judges chose fifteen finalists to compete in the Tally-Ho's annual Miss FSU contest. The finalists, who were chosen after parading in bathing suits and formals include:

SELECTION of finalists in the contest was originally slated for last Friday night. But at the last moment the Friday judging was moved back to Wednesday because of numerous conflicts, which took many girls away from campus.

Fifteen finalists were chosen Wednesday night in the Longmire auditorium but their names could not be obtained in time for publication. The judges were: Milton Carothers, president of Student Body; Dr. Eide, School of Journalism; Dr. Jeffries, Infirmary Physician, Dr. Reynolds, School of Arts and Sciences; Daisy Parker, School of Public Administration; Dr Holschuh, Art Department, and Fred Vogel, counseling.

Individual pictures of each of these girls will appear in the yearbook. Their pictures will also be sent to Mr. John Robert Powers, nationally-known expert on models, who will select from them the lucky young lady who will be named Miss FSU of 1953-54. The identity of the winner will not be disclosed until the Tally-Ho is distributed next spring.

Those assisting Becky in the major positions on the annual staff are Barbara Yost, assistant editor; Al Shuler, business manager; Fred Herrold, managing editor; and Tracy Harrison, advertising manager. Becky added that she would like to commend these people for the work that they have done this year and would also like to thank the many people whose names do not appear here but who have contributed so much time and effort in keeping up with the schedule of work which has been planned for the year. She also said that she was quite pleased with the number of people who volu[illegible]ed for work on the Tally-Ho t[illegible] year.

Voiceless Now, WFSU Returns Soon on FM With Big Plans

By JOHN DANAHY

No one has heard a word transmitted by the campus station—yet. But if you were to listen hard enough you would hear. If you were to look hard enough you would see.

What you would hear and see would be a group of students being directed and directing so that you may soon hear WFSU-FM.

IT IS impossible to conceive what FSU would have had in the way of radio today if it weren't for a small group of enterprising students who first established WFSU. Radio here just as so many other functions of FSU began growing from just about the same time as FSCW became FSU.

Not many of us students remember those who built the first campus station. Indeed Harry Hughey, Dennis De Lacure, and Thomas Bedwell would enjoy working in the building of the new station. These were the three former students who did a great deal of work in establishing a wired-wireless system of radio in 1947.

FROM 1947 until April of 1953 WFSU progressed and grew in popularity on the campus. Then during the 1952-53 school term trouble with the radio system developed. The trouble caused transmission beyond the limits allowed by the FCC. The station stopped broadcasting by order of FCC.

For the remaining part of the semester Margret Jean Parham, who was the student station manager, picked up the work and directed the objective of a new station. At the end of the semester Rick Hutto, the newly elected student manager, continued the work through the summer.

DURING the summer the office of Public Relations, under the leadership of Roy Flynn, director of public relations, plans were continued.

When the 1953-54 term began, Roy Flynn immediately got together with the student members of the radio staff and began working. Five student assistants were selected who are not working on various phases of the constructing of the station.

THE LOCATION of the new station will be in the recording studio in the music building. The radio station and recording studio will occupy the same facilities. The old studio of WFSU will be used as a laboratory and for rehearsals.

The Seminole Broadcasting Association, the student organization responsible for the operation of the old wired-wireless station, will continue to be an organization for the students interested in extra-curricular participation in radio.

IN OPERATING an FM station WFSU-FM plans to be associated with the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. This association will make the NAEB tape exchange program available to WFSU-FM. A benefit by this will be a return of programs recorded by the student station.

The new station will serve the community of Tallahassee as well as the student body. The programs will be heard on the campus and in Tallahassee within an area of 15 miles.

IT WAS DECIDED that the station would operate on frequency modulation this past summer. The new FM station will operate seven days a week. At present, the plans call for WFSU-FM to operate on a daily schedule with the sign-on at 2 p.m. and sign-off at 10 p.m.

The afternoon hours will be devoted almost exclusively to uninterrupted good music. Evening hours will feature talks, discussions, news and news interpretation, drama, sports, and special events.

PUBLIC RELATIONS Director Flynn said the purpose of the campus station will be "to supply the community with high caliber programs some of which will be directly educational and some of which will be indirectly educational." The programs will be directed toward an educational appeal.

In planning the program schedule, the student assistants will work through Mr. Flynn and various departments of the university. The students who will be working with the various departments are: Ann Chandley, John Danahy, Rick Hutto, Hal LeVay, and Margaret Jean Parham. The student staff operating the station is drawn from persons elected to positions of responsibility in the Seminole Broadcasting Association.

PREVIOUS to this time, the complete program schedule was handled by the student members of the station. A great deal of the work in preparing the programs on the new station will be done by members of the faculty and students. Programs of this nature will come from courses that will be able to use the station as a laboratory. A major emphasis in the program schedule will find many hours devoted to good music.

One major problem that the station will face is that of establishing an FM listening audience. Standard radios will not be able to receive FM broadcasting. It would be necessary to have listeners adapt the standard radio to FM.

A SOLUTION to this problem will be FM tuners which will be made available at reasonable cost to the students and the community. Flynn said he felt certain that the tuner would cost under $10.

Six schools and departments will co-operate with WFSU-FM in programming. They are the School of Journalism, the School of Education, the Library School, the department of speech, and the School of Music. From interviews with the deans and department heads their support and co-operation have been pledged.

DR. LAWRENCE Campbell, dean of the School of Journalism, indicated that the School of Journalism will co-operate in programs of a news nature and special events. These programs will consist of news, news interpretation, sports, special events, and background in documentary.

Students in radio news courses will work with the station in getting and writing the news under the direction of Mr. Wo nisk, also of the School of Journalism. Mr. Wozniak, who is a new member of the faculty, has had experience in radio news before coming to FSU.

DR. CAMPBELL said that it is possible that classes in advertising will also participate in using the station as a laboratory. However, he said it is unknown at this time in what way they will participate.

It was pointed out by Dr Campbell that writing for the station will aid in giving a professional quality to the news but not in working towards a professional station.

THE CO-OPERATION of the School of Education was assured by Dr. Stone. Programs from the School of Education have not been outlined as yet. Dr. Stone said that programs would be worked on and ready for broadcast before the station goes on the air.

The Library School will be available by co-operating with material to background programs and also to provide programs and recordings, said Dr. Shores, dean. The Library School plans to use the facilities of WFSU-FM as a laboratory.

DR. McBRIDE, of the audio-visual department in the Library School said that the recording facilities of the audio-visual department will be used in programming for the station. The school has in the past recorded campus events and, will have a large amount of tapes available to the station.

This coming summer a course in radio and recording will be offered. The school plans to use the station as class projects for programming and recording.

THE DEPARTMENT of speech will provide a variety of programs consisting of debates, discussions, oral interpretation, speeches, and stories for children, said Dr. Edney, department head.

Many of the programs by the department will be conducted by the students of speech. Programs that are not conducted by students will be sponsored by the speech department. A highlight for programming by the department will be dramatic productions for radio broadcast. Radio dramatics will broaden the acting field to include radio acting with stage acting.

THE GREATEST pool for program material will come from the School of Music. Dr. Karl Kuersteiner, dean, said he was ready to co-operate by providing the station with music programs. Since the emphasis of the station is on good music, the best programs will be by our own artists.

With such talent, WFSU-FM will have programs that will be outstanding. The students will be able to hear concerts and recitals along with special music programs that they might not have been able to see.

THE SCHOOL of Music has made recordings of nearly all of the best concerts presented here. The university recording service is also well supplied with valuable tapes of concerts, recitals, and special taped recordings.

The music organizations such as the University Singers, the Collegians, Choral Union, the band, and others will be heard either on tape or as a live broadcast.

FOR THE FIRST time the students and citizens of Tallahassee will have available to them an almost complete picture of the culture and talents of FSU. The most important benefits that will be realized by the new station have been stated by FSU's president, Dr. Doak S. Campbell:

> There is a two fold reason behind the establishing of a low-power non-commercial educational station on the campus. We hope to serve a small but significant public whose listening needs are not always adequately met by existing commercial stations. In performing this service we will provide a realistic laboratory situation for students in our expanding program of training for careers in radio and the communication field.

Smoke Signals Expands to 5 Issues As Color And Humor Emphasized

By WARREN COBB

Smoke Signals, the campus magazine, has this year expanded its publication to include five issues for the first time in its history.

Editor John Howard, who was elected on a platform of giving the students a humor magazine, has directed his program in that direction. Increased humor, color, and readability were emphasized in the first issue of Smoke Signals appearing last week.

Editor Howard has expressed his belief that a college magazine should give the students humor and relief from the worries of everyday life.

In accordance with this belief, Howard is providing the FSU student body with the first magazine based primarily on humor and in keeping with many widely-acclaimed college humor magazines in the South.

"My objective," says Howard, "is two-fold: (1) To provide those whose talents are channeled in humor an outlet, and (2) to present subtle humor and generous satire to the students of FSU.

"Staff selections are made on the basis of contribution and activity. Joiners for the sake of joining do not remain on the staff very long."

This year's magazine staff has been larger than ever before with more student participation.

One of the annual Smoke Signals features is its Cover Girl Contest. A cover girl, who will be featured on the December 15 issue of the magazine, and 12 calendar girls have been selected by Smoke Signals judges.

This year a field of 70 contestants was narrowed to 40 girls, and then to a field of 20.

From these 20 girls the cover girl and 12 calendar girls were finally selected on a basis of personality, beauty, and photogenic quality.

The final field of 20 was comprised of: Shirley Harper, Sigma Kappa; Anita Wall, Kappa Alpha Theta; Leah Jana Brown, Zeta Tau Alpha; Marilies Gessler, Zeta Tau Alpha. Nancy Watkins, Zeta Tau Alpha; Janet Stark, Kappa Alpha Theta; Deane Jackson, Kappa Delta; Jackie Harrell, Zeta Tau Alpha; June Yates, Zeta Tau Alpha; Gail Tomlinson, Kappa Delta; Anne Yates, Zeta Tau Alpha; Dot Johnson, Chi Omega; De De Duguid, Sigma Kappa; Sarah Hambley, Chi Omega; Betty Willmon, Kappa Alpha Theta; Myrna O'Dell, Chi Omega; Nancy Warner, Kappa Delta, Shirley Boulware, Zeta Tau Alpha; Joan Lee, Kappa Alpha Theta; and Suzanne Ball, Delta Tau Delta.

Last year's cover girl was Barbara Brewton, sponsored by Sigma Nu. The 1951 cover girl was Judy Ellis, Pi Beta Phi.

Last week's initial issue of Smoke Signals featured the Seminole football team and band. As previously stated, the December 15 issue will present the Cover Girl.

In the Spring the annual Literary Award will be given for creative writing. Another cup, such as the one won last year by Warren Cobb, will be given. The contest is not open to past winners.

Sandspur Provides Opportunities For Students to Develop Talents

By BOB GUTTING

Sandspur is an all-student organization that was established on this campus several years ago in order to create an interest among students in the stage, and offers an excellent opportunity for them to develop their talents. The entire production, including script, music, dances, and stage design, is created by FSU students.

"Panorama," a musical comedy in six acts, is the Sandspur production slated for February, 1954 The script, written by Leo Andrews, differs from previous Sandspur productions in that the play has no dialogue but is composed entirely of singing and dancing throughout the three acts. These three acts consist of six scenes representing various ways of life on Basin Street, South America, the Gay 90's, New York Society, and climaxing in a dream sequence.

THE BASIN STREET number will consist of a group of couples jitterbugging to hot Dixieland jazz while the South American number will include many Latin dances such as the rhumba, tango, and samba. The dream scene will consist of only one couple backed by the singing chorus and smooth dreamy music with special effects in black lights.

The Gay 90's number will have a line of boys, complete with derbys and handle bar moustaches, tapping to fast music. New York Society will show a scene of that city's elite being entertained by combo music and dance and by juggler Don Rapp.

Various adagio steps will be introduced throughout the performance by the dancing chorus. Leading dancers will be Gene Kirchoffer, Jim Fadigan, Patsy Cooper, Barbara Vickers, and David Harmer, stars of earlier productions.

IN THE PAST the main theme of Sandspur productions consisted of boy-chase-girl and girl-chase-boy with the setting in some unusual surrounding such as Venus. This year's production will be radically different from the past and represents the first major break from a somewhat established trend.

The 1954 producer, and also one of the judges that picked the script, is Miss Frances Stokes, a talented and charming young lady who has been connected with Sandspur for the last three years. During the last two productions Miss Stokes was choreographer for the show and did such a spectacular job that she is well-remembered for her "Dances of the Elements," in the last production, "Heaven Forbid."

IT WAS ONIL natural that a person with such capabilities and interest in the organization would be appointed producer of the 1953 Sandspur show. In addition to her role as producer, Miss Stokes will again assume the responsibilities of choreographer.

Members of the staff include Bob Foley, Business Manager; Kitty Culpepper, who has had previous theatrical experience in Nashville and other cities, set designer; Garret Marks, stage manager. John Baxley, leader of the Johnny Bee orchestra, in charge of music arrangement; Bob Gutting, publicity chairman; and Mr. Rymer of the speech department, advisor on scenery construction.

ANOTHER innovation for the production will be the music of the Johnny Bee orchestra with additional musicians, playing for the entire program.

A huge publicity campaign has been arranged in line with the orchestra by Miss Stokes. Recordings of music from the script will be made for replay over local radio stations and in dining establishments.

ORGANIZATIONS that will play prominent parts include the Sigma Kappa sorority which will furnish a lovely choral group for one scene, and members of the nationally famous Seminole gymnastic team.

Don Holder, Joe and Carmine Regna, Pat Signorelli, Rapheal Lacuona, Bill Kosolw, and Jim Fadigan, will deviate from their roles as gymnasts to dance under the direction of Miss Stokes.

ALL MADE UP . . . Ron Martin being made up as the King in last year's production of "Heaven Forbid." A very appropriate title.

Flambeau Initiates Several Innovations

The first three months in the life of The Florida Flambeau of 1953 and '54 have been filled with a whole host of startling innovations and changes in the policy of past Flambeaus.

First came a heated controversy over who would fill the post of editor-in-chief when editor-elect Marcia Morris failed to return to school in the fall. Although, for a a while it seemed that the senior staff of the newspaper and the student government Senate would never come to an agreement, a common meeting ground was finally reached and all concerned agreed to place Bruce Galphin in the position of editor. Galphin, who ran a very close second to Miss Morris in the elections last spring, had been slated to fill the position of managing editor of the Flambeau.

ONE OF the big "firsts" that the campus newspaper has incorporated this year is a new plan for soliciting the advertising which is such a vital necessity in financing the paper. This year the gigantic task of selling ads has been taken over by Florida State University's two advertising fraternities, Alpha Delta Sigma and Gamma Alpha Chi. This new system not only involves a great many more solicitors who can bring in more advertising, but it also frees the regular business staff from the tremendous job which business staffs have had to perform in the past.

Another first this year has been the introduction of a new system which employs the services of the students of the reporting classes in the School of Journalism in writing articles for the paper. This system serves a twofold purpose. First, it offers journalism students an opportunity to get practical experience writing for a real newspaper rather than writing just to fulfill classroom assignments; secondly, it expands the number of students who are contributing to the paper, thus lightening the load of work on the regular staff and producing a more well-rounded newspaper.

A WHOLE series of changes have been made on the editorial page of the Flambeau this year. One addition has been the introduction of guest columnists to supplement the regular editorials. These guests have written on subjects ranging from classical music to modern motion pictures. The editorials this year have expanded their scope of subject matter. Instead of discussing only issues which are of especial interest on the campus, they have spread out to include current events in the state and national government.

Public Relations Office's Work Varies From TV Shows to News Stories

By OSCAR JOHNSON

A television series featuring piano music by members of the FSU School of Music faculty will be broadcast over WMBR-TV in Jacksonville every Saturday beginning January 9, 1954, announced Roy Flynn, who will produce the series. Flynn, director of public relations, added that the exact time has not yet been decided.

While commenting on the main functions of the Public Relations Office, Flynn stated that it, "informs the public regarding activities on the FSU campus, interpets FSU to the general public, and serves as a contact between the public and the university."

THE NEWS BUREAU of the office, headed by Mr. Ola Olsen, processes all news concerning FSU. News stories are released by Mr. Olsen to a variety of outlets, such as radio stations, state newspapers, television stations, and wire services such as Associated Press, United Press, and International News Service. A story which has interest for persons out of state is given wider circulation.

The news bureau often cooperates with the Hal Leyshon Advertising Agency which handles out-of-state affaris of the Advertising Commission of the state of Florida News of a scientific nature is handled by Science Service, Inc. Also sent out by this office are still pictures, taken by the university photographer, Bob Mauldin.

MR. FLYNN, who is in general charge of the office, has radio and television as his chief responsibility. Television stations all over the country are supplied with films produced by the office. Flynn added that, "Our latest film, 'Garnet and Gold Sketches,' has been seen by an estimated audience of ten million on television." Mrs. Betty Anderson works with Olsen as a news writer.

Assisting Flynn in the radio and television activities of the office is Mrs. Sarah French.

Sports publicity is handled by Mr. Bennett Land, whose office is located with the Men's Physical Education Department.

THE PUBLIC RELATIONS Officecooperates activity involved in major exhibits at fairs, expositions, and so on. It recently cooperated with the Department of Arts and Physics in presentation of an exhibit on atomic energy, seen at the North Florida Fair. The same exhibit will be taken to Tampa for the Florida State Fair in February.

Miscellaneous services performed by this office are too numerous to list, but a few are: preparation of "This Week," a calendar of events at FSU; scheduling of faculty members for off-campus talks through the Speaker Bureau; arrangement of campus tours for visiting groups; assistance in the preparation of brochures and bulletins by various offices. The first two items listed are handled by the Public Relations Office secretary, Mrs. Katherine Vernon.

SUMMING UP the services performed by the office, Flynn declared, "Our purpose is to be of assistance to the faculty, students an dthe general public, in the interests of improved relations between the university and the people of the State of Florida."

MIXING WITH THE HOYTY-TOYTY . . . Typical of the relaxed atmosphere among music students is this scene of their getting together with Mack Harrell, Metropolitan Opera baritone who was here on Artist Series last month. Harrell participated in a three-day convention of the Florida State Music Teachers Association here.

Busy Students Of Music School Find Time For Relaxation, Social Activity

By DOT THOMASSON

Behind the knowledge and kill that goes into making our Music Department nationally amous we find a group of students and faculty members who have learned a way to make college life happier and more interesting. Study and practice, of ourse, come first but then there is a stimulating social life which is experienced by all those connected with our School of Music.

If you asked someone from his school what impressed him he most about his training you ould find that it is the informal tmosphere existing between the nstructor and the student. This brought about by the great mount of individual training hat is given. Very often you may nd a student or group of students being entertained at the ome of an instructor. This atosphere is priceless for social d personal development.

AN EXAMPLE of fun after ork is their Hallowren party st month. There faculty and udents showed what a real "fun or all" is. It is often believed hat a professor, especially of music, must continually be serious, but this is proved false beond doubt as one watches them et down their hair" on such an ccasioo. Socials similar to this e held three or four times a ear. The next one scheduled is e Christmas party which is eceeded by their traditional hristmas tree. This tree is original in that the decorations are ade by those who feel inspired s they pass it in the main hall. any a crazy ornament is rigged from the variety of tinsel on e table beside the tree. As a imax before the Christmas vaation this trre becomes the ener of their large annual Christas party.

In addition to music organizaions which are recognized in the School of Music curricula we find aluable extracurricular ones. First is an organization of all music students headed by the Student Officers of the School of Music. The officers for this year are Donna Byl, President; Susan Lucas, Vice President; Don Westbrook, Secretary-treasurer; and Ellen Snow, Social Chairman.

Recently the group was host to the State Convention of Florida State Music Teachers Association. They took pride in conducting visitors through their Music Building which commands international admiration for its functionalism and beauty. Receptions are often sponsored by this group for local and visiting artists who perform on the Artist Series.

SECOND IS the Light Opera Guild which produces musical comedies and light operas that are established productions in music halls and theaters all over the world. These productions have been so popular on campus that they have always had to turn away crowds. This condition has caused them to extend the number of performances from three to four nights. A social atmosphere prevails over their practices for all the participation is voluntary and non-accredited. Plans are now under way for the Metropolitan Opera version of Die Fledermaus, a comic operetta in three acts. Adding to enjoyment that is received from being a part of such a production are the well-liked Dr. R. L. Briggs, in charge of production and musical direction, and Miss Betty Jane Grimm in charge of staging and choral direction.

Active chapters of student musical organizations chartered on the campus include Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Sigma Alpha Iota, professional music fraternities, Pi Kappa Lambda, music honorary; and student chapters of the Music Educators National Conference and the Music Teachers National Association.

Languages Department Strives To Top 'Actives' List Here

By PAT FLYNN

There is a lot of activity taking place in the modern languages department at Florida State University this year.

Dr Victor Oelschlager from Claftronia has taken over the duties as head of the department. Also, three other faculty members have been added to the list. Mr Richard Schopubach and Mr Kart Fickert are teaching classes in German, and Mrs Adolph Karl has a group of students in a Russian class.

THE STATE Association of Teachers of Spanish held a conference at FSU Nov. 7-8. Dr Dorothy Hoffman, president of the association, presided. Mrs Azzurra Gwens, of the FSU faculty is secretary of the association.

Lectures have held importance this year in the modern languages department. Dr Herbert Lacayo is in charge of a special lecture series, conducted primarily for the humanities department of the school. Dr Margaret Campbell lectured recently in Jacksonville, and Miss Eva Mae Atwood spoke at the Womans Club in Waycross, Ga. on a program for United Nations Wrek.

DR. LINCOLN CANFIELD, formerly of the FSU faculty, is teaching a class at Rochester University in New York by television now. Mr Wilson Micks has edited his third bood, whleh is on display in the University Book Store—' New Fundamental Frenc Store—"New Fundamental French."

It is all not entirely work, however, for Dr G. S Del od spent his summer in Spain and Portugal delivering lectures at intervals. Miss Betty Ackerman spent her vacation in California, New York, New Jersey, and Canada. Miss Myrtle Dalbee spent her summer months in Lawrence, Kansas.

AS AN AID to FSU students, Dr. Albert Leduc has charge of the Fullbright scholarship program here. He receives applications for these scholarships.

Mr Karl Keul, formerly of the teaching staff at FSU, is on leave this year to get his doctora degree.

TO KEEP any visiting alumni up on the latest happenings Miss Marjorie Judy has an interesting scrapbook which contains clippings of the various members of the modern languages faculty.

Lewandowski Finds Time to Paint, Too

In addition to tha execution of a large mosaic mural for Marquette University in Milwaukre, Wisconsin, Professor Edmund Lewandowski head of the Department of Art at Florida State University, finds time to paint and exhibit a steady stream of easel paints which are literally shown from coast to coast.

In the 1953 Annual Exhibition of Contemporary Painting held at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York City, from October 15 to December 8, Mr Lewandowski is represented by a semi--abstract oil painting, The Mutuels, which he painted while in New York last summer. The Mutuels is painted in warm greys with accents of red, yellow and green to symbolize the strident activity of raca track habitues.

At almost the same time Lewandowski's Circuit Breakers was being shown on the West Coast in one of the most ambitious exhibitions of American art to be seen in recent years. Painting in the USA, 1721-1953 was held at Pomona, California, in the Art Building of the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds from September 18 to October 4. Painted somewhat earlier than The Mutuels, Circuit Breakers is reminiscent of Lewandowski's earlier conrern with an almost exclusively industrial subject matter. Certainly, in tha extensive scope of the exhibition, which ranged from Copley and Gilbert Stuart to Baziotes and Sheeler, Lewandowski's relatively realistic treatment of one phase of modern industrial life was well chosen as a representative of our time and culture.

Earlier this year Waterfront, a casein painting on paper by the professor, was shown at the Walker Art Center in Minneapolis, Minnesota in an exhibition called The Classic Tradition in Contemporary Art. In the Minneapolis exhibition, paintings by Demuth, Sheeler, and Lewandowski could be found beside their European antecedents: Juan Gris, Albert Gleizes, and others of a classic-abstractionist tendency.

To round out the nation-wide activity of Mr. Lewandowski as a highly productive exhibition artist, the South, his new home, conferred on him the distinction of receiving a purchase award for his watercolor, Steel Mill at the Eighth Southeastern Annual Exhibition at Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Lewandowski was unable to atthend the formal opening of this exhibition and the dinner where the awards were made, but he expressed his deep appreciation for this honor, which he felt was especially significant because of his activity as a teacher in Florida.

The fact that paintings by Lewandowski were shown in the North, East, South and West of this country within a period of a few months was purely coincidental (his work was also being shown at the Alan Gallery in New York and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts) as far as the artist himself was concerned. As an artist-teacher, the important thing, he said, was to paint, to continue exploring the possibilities of color and line and those possibilities are andless. Exhibiting is merely the natural, almost inevitable outgrowth of the work in the studio.

"There are a growing number of artists who are either native to Florida or who now live here," he said in a recent interview, "and their work quite naturally reaches out into many different sections of the nation. I am happy to be a part of that small group; it still comes to me as a pleasant surprise when I am identified as 'that artist from Florida.'"

Ogburn Urges Students Ask Selves How They 'Know' It

How do you know it?

That is the question Dr. William Fielding Ogburn, world famous sociologist, who is a visiting professor at Florida State University this semester, urged students to use as a healthy check on themselves and others.

Addressing an FSU class in sociology recently, his advice was to use the question discriminately.

There are times in life to be very scientific,' ha said, "and other times, particulaly on moonlight nights, when it's best not to be at all scientific."

Pointing out differences betwee knowledge, ideas and beliefs, Dr. Ogburn warned how principles and facts sometimes come into conflict. He told of his own experience with the Russians back in the early 1930's when he was director of President Hoover's research committee to determine social trends. In answer to a query, the Communists came up with, "The facta must be wrong."

Dr. Oaburn is 6' 3" tall, scholar, public speaker and an impressive conversationalist. His voice is soft, clear and even. He raises an eyebrow for emphasis when speaking.

Ha looks and acts like a southern gentleman which is what he is, as well as a top scientist. Born in Butler, Ga., he earned his first degree at Mercer University in Macon and then taught a year in Savannah before moving North.

This semester at FSU, ha is back home in his native Southland for his first extended visit since leaving. He is now on leave from Oxford University. He was invited there to introduce sociology after his retirement at the age of 65 from the University of Chicago where he was head of the sociology department for many years. He plans a return to England next spring, to Nuffield College at Oxford, only for graduates in social sciences.

In Tallahassee, Dr. Ogburn is working daily with his old friend and collaborator, Dr Meyer Nimkoff, head of the FSU sociology department. They are revising their textbook on Sociology, first published in 1940. And they are finishing up a research book on Technology and the Family they began five years ago.

Independently, Dr. Ogburn is currently working on another book which recommends the decentralization of cities. He believes the atomic and H bomb threat is much greater than people realise, and that much of the danger is being withheld.

"There is much talk about disbursing industrial centers, but talk is about all it amounts to," he said. Also, he believes our government policy should continue to postpone war, and that if the postponement can last 20 to 25 years, disbursing of large cities could be accomplished effectively.

Whether Dr Ogburn completes this book while at FSU depends on his other activities. In addition to being in demand as a speaker at FSU, Florida Southern College, University of Florida and University of Tennessee, he has numerous interests and hobbies making a bid for his time.

The former president of the American Sociological Society ond of tha American Statistical Association, Dr. Ogburn is throwing himself into campus life with all the enthusiasm of a freshman. He has already stirred up tennis partners among faculty, staff and students for the several sets a day ha likes to play, and is becoming a familiar figure on the university courts.

He said he is determined not to miss a homa FSU football game, and would like to work in a daily swim and perhaps some squash racket. He said the chance to take long walks with his field glasses along to study flowers and birds is one of Tallahassee's greatest rustic charms for him after his many years of living in large cities.

At FSU Dr. Ogburn is enrolling in a seminar as student, as well as lecturing. Because of his interest in birds, he has signed up for an ornithology seminar. His own seminar on "Modern Social Trends," twice a week, is primarily for graduate students, but also proving popular with professors.

Social Welfare Students Intern In Jacksonville Seven Weeks

By LOUISE HOYER

Florida Stata University's School of Social Welfare has been functioning as a separate school since the fall of 1949. Previous to that year it had been a part of the Division of Applied Social Sciences which included such departments as hotel and restaurant management, journalism, business, social welfare and public administration.

The undergraduate social welfare program prepares one for immediate employment in social work as well as offers a foundation for future professional study.

UNDERGRADUATE social welfare majors may receive a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree. In addition, they may secura a certificate to teach in nursery, kindergarten and elementary schools or qualify to teach social studies in high school.

Social walfare students receive training for such important fields as school attendance workers, recreation leaders, and religious workers. The undergraduate students may also take the equivalent of a major in such fields as psychology, economics, political science, public administration, and home and family life in connection with their program of study in social welfare.

THE INTERNSHIP of the senior undergraduates is a practical and interesting program, for seven weeks during the second semester the seniors move to Jacksonville to work with the various welfare agencies located there. They accompany the social workers of their cases and learn the complete structure of a social welfare agency. Mrs. Margaret C. Bristol, associate professor of social work at FSU, supervises this senior internship program.

Graduate students from all parts of the world have received training and degrees in the two professional programs in social work FSU offers.

ONE OF the programs, marriage and family living, leads to the Ph.D. degree. FSU granted its first two doctor's degrees in this field in the spring of 1953.

Tha other field of graduate work leads to the master's degree in social work. Approximately 100 graduate students have enrolled in this course since it was first offered in 1948. The first degree was awarded in the spring of 1950.

STUDENTS who complete only tha first year of tha two-year field are granted a graduate professional certificate in social work.

Three new instructors have been added to the social welfare staff this year. One of them, Dr. D. Hart Krans, professor of social psychiatry, serves as the university psychiatrist.

THE OTHER new staff members are Dr. David Levine and Dr. Robert Schmidt. Dr. Levine has had excellent field experience in social work in Minnesota while Dr. Schmidt, in addition to his social welfare teaching, is a Baptist minister.

AGAIN, WHY DON'T WE . . . The big question today during judging of house decorations is whether Pat Renick will do it again. For three straight years, her ideas have won top honors in the judging. Shown in the inset in the lower picture of last year's Seven Dwarfs display, Pat looks up at parts of this year's Peter Pan theme. Peter Pan represents FSU, Captain Hook Stetson and the Crocodile Coach Tom Nugent. Holding the pieces are Don Kaiser, Dot Kannon, Walter Edwards, Betty Miller and Betta Weeks.

Library School Offers Sole Degree In State for Professional Training

By RUTH UPTON

The Library School at Florida State University is the only accredited professional school for the training of librarians in Florida.

Offering a master's degree program as well as the bachelor's degree. The school provides training for all phases of library work.

LIBRARIANSHIP has become one of the most exciting and glamorous careers open to men and women today. About 10,000 librarians are needed badly. There are jobs open right now with good salaries.

World War III is a "War of Ideas." The main component of the American psychological army are the 200 United States libraries in the countries located this side of the Iron Curtain. These libraries are manned by 2,000 trained professional librarians who disseminate our way of life in competition with the information provided by the Soviet bureaus of information.

THE VERSATILITY of librarianship is shown by the fact that librarianship deals with all media of communication, including books, magazines, newspapers, motion pictures, records, radio programs, television, museum objects and any other media which will convey ideas and information.

A librarian's educational function is dissemination. His high mission in life is to see that people are adequately informed. The library's basic principle is to provide information of all sides of all issues.

Professional librarians are opposed to book-burning such as has been going on in some of the Iron Curtain countries, and as is occasionally threatened in some of our Western countries.

FSU LIBRARY School graduates are in demand by government agencies, industry, all three branches of the armed forces and audio-visual agencies everywhere.

FSU graduates are now serving all over the world. One is in Germany and another in Okinawa. Four of the last graduating class went to the Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, where they are doing research librarianship.

THE CALIBRE of tha faculty is much tha sama as that of the school. Dr. Shores is dean, while Mr. Clapp is in the field of academic librarianship. Drs. McBride, Ritchie and Mitchell are in the field of audio-visual service. Miss Gregory in children's materials, Mrs. Srygley in school library service, Mrs. Rockwood in public library service and Miss Marinelli in cataloguing classification and documentation, complete the faculty.

The school boasts three Fulbright Senior Scholars on the faculty. Miss Marinelli was a Senior Fulbright to Italy, Mrs. Rockwood was a Senior Fulbright to Thailand, and Dean Shores was a Senior Fulbright to the United Kingdom.

The versatility of librarianship can be illustrated by what the Library School does on this campus. It conducts weekly film previews on Tuesday nights in Westcott 303. It has filmed every football gama aver played by the FSU Varsity football team. It operates the movie services on this campus, public address systems, and runs a film-rental library which rents films all over the state.

THE LIBRARY School Library, which is known as the Materials Center is a demonstration center of information. Last year it pioneered tha introduction of music in the reading rooms of the Materials Center. The Audio-Visual Service of the Library School serves all departments on the campus.

These ara evidences of the services the school renders to the students and of the kind of work librarians are called upon to do.

McBride Says Audio-Visual Set Up With Three Purposes

The Audio-Visual Center of Florida State University is set up with a three-fold function: Instruction, Service and Production, according to Dr. Otis McBride, Director.

Beginning with an undergraduate course called Introduction to Audio-Visual Materials, the Center offers a rather wide variety of training open to undergraduate and graduate students; including such phases as construction and use of graphic materials, administration of an Audio-Visual Center or County Audio-Visual Program, utilization of audio-visual materials, selection of audio-visual materials, cinematography, etc.

The Center furnishes various kinds of audio-visual materials for faculty on this campus. Any teacher may procure a film, a projector, and a projectionist to show a film at any specified hour by calling ahead of time and scheduling the service. Filmstrips, opaque projectors, overhead projectors, etc., may be scheduled in the same way. The university furnishes a rental service for the state of Florida and the surrounding area. A one-reel, 10-minute film, may be rented by any public school or any other agency for $2.00.

Instruction is given in class work in the production of various types of audio-visual materials. In addition to that the Audio-Visual Center will participate in the production of films, filmstrips, tape recordings, etc., for members of the faculty, departments, or the university as such things are needed and as funds are available.

Though many phases of audio-visual work are not new, certainly audio-visual materials do add something to the interest and the effectiveness of teaching. It is the purpose of the service to serve in as many ways and to serve as broadly as possible, concluded Dr. McBride.

Experts Don't Agree About Anthropology

Anthropology is the youngest and perhaps least known of the social sciences. Most people are not sure just what the study is and would guess at anything from the study of apes to digging in the earth.

Actually, anthropologists themselves are in disagreement as to what are their primary objectives. In general, anthropology involves the study of cultures and civilizations artifacts, customs, beliefs, and the like.

THERE IS an element of truth, then in the misconceptions about anthropology. Ancient civilizations and ancient men almost back to ape stage are studied, and anthropologists certainly make many field trips doing what would more properly be called archeological work.

Some anthropologists feel that co-workers are straying too far afield from the central study of anthropoligy; i. e., culture, and that in doing so they are letting many important problems go unstudied.

CHIEF AMONG the dissenters from this modern trend in anthropology is Leslie White, in whose book The Science of Culture the radical concepts of culture are most clearly and completely stated.

White so dislikes the tendency for anthropologists to become involved in studies he considers rightly to belong to psychologists and sociologists that he even suggests a new name for his field of interest: culturology. He believes that culture is an entity which can be studied separately from the people who compose it: he thinks laws can be stated which describe and explain large cultural movements.

THUS IT is possible that what is now called anthropology will in the future be broken down into narrower fields.

Whatever the particular direction taken in anthropology recently, however, there has been considerably more taught and studied in the last few years.

WRITING in the American Anthropologist, Erminie W. Voegelin said, "Anthropology is now well established both on the graduate and undergraduate levels in American universities. It is represented in all except one of the state and territorial universities of the United States, and in nearly all of the large, old, or progressive private colleges. Notable regional growth in anthropology occurred in the South between 1945-50 . . ."

However, the science has not matured by any means. "That anthropology has not as yet achieved full academic growth is indicated by the recent establishment of several new departments in the South, by the fact that it is now represented in only 304 of the 820 universities and colleges in the United States, and that, as yet, only a few Canadian universities offer courses in the subject."

Leadership Is Goal For Administrators

The School of Public Administration at Florida State offers an excellent opportunity to students interested in local or state government. The aim of the school is to train young men and women for positions of leadership in government.

THE SCHOOL offers unique training opportunities, being the only school of government in the South and one of the few in the nation. It's location in the capital city of Florida offers unusual advantages for students to see first hand, the making of state government.

Every year, prominent officials of the state lecture to classes. Federal officials are also scheduled as speakers throughout the year. In the last two years, these officials have included the Secretary of Commerce, and the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the TVA.

IN ADDITION to the opportunity to hear and to meet leading officials, students have a chance to intern for one full semester. Departments of the state government along with city and county governments cooperate with the school in this respect. This experience provides an inside view of government agencies at work and frequently leads to good employment.

The students also benefit from the school's research program which consists of study and analysis of major government problems. The problems are undertaken at the request of officials from either state or local levels. Thus, the students render a real service to the state while gaining practical experience.

A BACHELOR OF Arts and Bachelor of Science degree is offered on the undergraduate level. On the graduate level the Master of Arts and Master of Science degrees are available. Students who do not plan to obtain a degree may qualify for a certificate in Public Administration.

Many of the graduates have served in the executive or administrative offices of both federal and state governments. Some of the positions filled by FSU graduates are: State Budget Director, Assistant Personnel Director of the State Road Department, Executive Secretary to the Florida Board of Law Examiners, City Manager, Field Representatives of the Federal Security Agency and many other important and in fluential positions.

These young men and women are answering the challenge of public service, which is greater today than ever before.

Sociology Department Offers Only Social Science PhD

By SALLY TOMBERLIN

Florida State University's rapidly growing Sociology Department recently inaugurated a new Doctoral program, the only social science department at the University that offers a Ph. D. degree.

The sociology department found its way into the FSU curriculum first in 1918 with a staff of only one sociologist. In the following years, several professors and sociology courses were added to this neophyte field.

THROUGH the years, sociology has become one of the most significant subjects offered to a regular or graduate student at the university. In 1950, Dr. Bellamy who headed this department for 32 years turned his duties over to Dr. M. F. Nimkoff, who is now head of FSU's sociology department. The staff now consists of seven faculty members.

The course of graduate and undergraduate study was recently revised in order to strengthen the program. It no provides instruction, research facilities and community and state research services.

UNDER THE doctoral program, the sociology department offers work in the areas of social organization and social change and disorganization.

A significant new development is the sociology research laboratory, with space and facilities in 306 Westcott. The laboratory is a workshop for the training of graduate students in methods of research and a center for studies that are underway. A number of projects are now in process. The one which will interest alumni of FSU most is a study of Florida's capital city, Tallahassee, which will be a continuous research. It will be a study of how the residents of the community feel about the facilities, opportunities and leadership of Tallahassee, and the goodness of life here. The study wil be interested in the causes of community satisfaction.

DR. WILLIAM F. Ogburn, a recent addition to the staff, is now working in the Ph.D. program. A real southerner, coming originally from Georgia, Dr. Ogburn formerly headed the department of sociology at the University of Chicago.

"Sociology in the United States has been developed mainly in the east and far west," stated Dr. Nimkoff. "The opportunities for the development of sociology in the south are therefore good and especially here at FSU. They are very challenging indeed."

Opera Guild Sets December 4-8 As 'Fledermaus' Date

The Florida State University Light Opera Guild will present the Metropolitan version of Die Fledermaus, comic operetta, December 4-8 in Opperman Music Hall on campus.

The production, to be presented in a new English version, is sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota, women's music honorary. Production and musical direction will be by Dr. Robert L. Briggs, associate professor of music education. Singing and choral direction will be by Miss Betty Jane Grimm, assistant professor of voice.

PRINCIPALS FOR the operetta, announced by Dr. Briggs, are: Delano Driver, Ellen Snow, Harrison Fisher, Wendel Bartholf Jack Jarrett, Robert Parrish, Bette Jo Armstrong, Barbara Foster and Don Van Nus.

Also Shirley Daniel, Sandra Darling, Charlaine Weeks, Merrella Clardy, Helen Crooks, Shirley Dallas, Flora Herrison, Lynn Longbotton, Gerold McClelland, Jean Rohme, Mary Spencer, Shirley Traxler and Martha Willis.

Social Welfare

A unique feature of FSU's social welfare department is its marriage counseling service. Professors specially trained in marriage and family living problems staff this counseling clinic. It is open to all students and town people.

THE HUMAN Relations Institute, run jointly with the psychology department, is another counseling project of the School of Social Welfare. Although it is not fully staffed by the social welfare department, it is supervised by Dr. Vernon Fox, associate professor of social welfare at FSU.

Exhibitor Says Public Misses 'Backstage Story'

By TOM HALL

The art gallery now has a new exhibition and the work of constructing the show is ended. Tiazo Miake, or better known as Mike, has completed his job of arranging the exhibit. The job of setting up an exhibit is one with which the public hasn't been too familiar and Mike has stressed some facts about the relation of exhibitor to viewer.

The first step in the organization of the show must be physical labor. To better balance the pictures, they are broken into groups and in order that this be done, the room must be partitioned off. This requires the construction of panels or walls that are set up at various angles throughout the center of the room. Usually the first day is spent in the building of these walls. The major reason that these sections are built is to break the monotony of entering a room and seeing all of the pictures at one glance. They give the appearance of a blur if you see them all at once and the viewer is not able to enjoy each picture as a separate work.

TO ATTRACT attention and act as a greeting, the most striking pieces of work, usually sculpture, is placed in an advantageous position. The paintings are also arranged in a similar manner, with the best work placed so that it may be seen first. This is done so as not to make the onlooker weary of looking at comparatively uninteresting pictures first. By uninteresting pictures, it is not meant that they are dull or dismal, but this arrangement is concerned only with the viewers outlook. This responsibility rests in the hands of the curator, who in many instances finds it a difficult decision to pick the best and next best.

Some of the elements entering into the judgment of pictures by the curator, would be, dynamic balance and psychological balance. This means how well picture balances with its surrounding pictures — how colors blend—how it affects vision when it is viewed with contrasting colors. Another fact that is considered is that of putting the right sizes together. Larger pieces call attention to smaller ones and therefore a larger painting would be used in a position where it would draw the eye of the viewer to the smaller ones as well as itself.

MANY TIMES in contemporary exhibits, structures around which the paintings or sculpture are centered become accessory or just plain decoration without meaning. However, if the piece is exhibited in a fairly clever manner with shadow effects (light shown across a sculpture and giving pleasing shadows) the extra structures may then benefit the object instead of detracting.

It should be fairly clear that pictures are not just hung on the wall or thrown up in any careless manner. Plans are laid for construction of an exhibit with as much precision as is used in formulating house plans.

WORKING with Tiazo Miake are, Jim Van Eimeren, graduate assistant, Annlein Bach, Frank Adams and Pat Hampton, student assistants.

Political Science Staff Busy Selves With Contributions to Major Field

In addition to their regular teaching, members of the Political Science faculty are busy with various projects in writing and research, according to Dr. Marian Irish, department head. Dr. Irish was on leave of absence last year at Harvard University on a Ford Fellowship, and has just resumed headship.

The Public Affairs Press has recently published Interstate Co-operation by Dr. Vincent Thursby; the introduction by Carl Swisher of John Hopkins observes, "The study will have a high rating among monographs dealing with the techniques of adapting governmental machinery to the pressures of modern needs." Dr. Andre Van Assenderp, who spent many years in the Far East with the Dutch Foreign Service, is now at work on a book-length study of Political Pressures in Pakistan and Indonesia.

DR. JAMES Prothro has recently published a long article, which has been widely commented upon, in the Journal of Politics, "Business Ideas and the American Tradition." He has just received a grant from the University Research Council for a study of Voting Behaviour in Congress, a project which he is undertaking with Dr. Malcolm Parsons of the School of Public Administration. Dr. Stephen Roady is one of a selected group of political scientists in the region of collaborating with Dr. Alexander Heard of North Carolina on Money in Politics.

Miss Daisy Parker is continuously at work as national editor of the Mortarboard Quarterly. Dr. Irish has completed with Laurence Paquin a textbook in American government for the high schools; published by Charles Scribner's Sons, The People Govern, will be available for local and state adoption in the winter term. She is also working on a biography of Justice William O. Douglas; an article on "Mr. Justice Douglas and Judicial Restraint" will appear in the fall issue of the Florida Law Review.

THE DEPARTMENT co-operates with Economics, Geography and Sociology in the general education course Introduction to Contemporary Civilization. Out of their joint experience and successful co-operation now emerges an introductory textbook for the social sciences under contract to McGraw-Hill. The four authors of the forthcoming textbook are Dr. Vincent Thursby, Political Science Course chairman; Dr. Raymond Bellamy, Sociology; Dr. Harrison Chase, Geography; Miss Sadie Young, Economics.

WHILE THE department subscribes wholeheartedly to the liberal arts philosophy that it is best to educate the whole man in a broad cultural background, it also recognizes the economic importance of carefully planned pre-professional curricula. This it has recently published a small brochure entitled Career Opportunities in Political Science, which points to the political science major for pre-law students, teaching and research in social sciences, government employment, foreign service, effective citizenship, politics, and public affairs. Interested students may obtain copies of the brochure in the political science office, 221 History. Pre-law students should consult with Dr. James Prothro. majors in international relations with the special advisor, Dr. Van Assenderp, Hillside.

Economics Makes Bid on National Scale For Better Understanding of Its Importance

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Economics, like so many of the social sciences, suffers from the fact that it is but vaguely understood by the public. The average citizen, if he knows anything about economics at all, usually looks upon it as a theoretical, impractical, abstruse study.

Actually, nothing could be further from the truth, and in an effort to acquaint people with the science, the Florida State University Economics department has prepared a booklet explaining some important aspects of economics and its applications to everyday living.

NATURALLY the study of economics can help prepare a student for a career in professional economics. The booklet notes that at present there are about 13,000 people in the United States serving as career economists. Of these, about 1,000 are in business, 8,000 in government service and 4,000 in colleges and universities.

Being a social science of tremendous interrelation with other phases of modern life, however, economics is studied by many people as a background for such majors as public administration, political science, business and many others.

THE LOCAL department teaches courses in the general education area in which it tries to present to many students the implications and import of economics on modern political thought. The booklet points out that economics is looked upon as training for citizenship. It explains that economics helps a student learn the answers to such practical questions as: What determines a family's income? Why is the dollar worth only fifty cents today? Should the federal budget be balanced? What is the real cost of civilian defense? Who pays the taxes? Are Fair-Trade laws good or bad? What happens during depressions? What causes depressions?

FINALLY, and perhaps most important, the department looks upon economics as training in straight thinking. "An educated person is one who can think clearly and reason logically," says the brochure.

One of the first things taught in basic economics is to beware of logical fallacies that lead to muddled thinking about economic (and indeed of many other) policies. For instance, it explains the fallacy of composition, whereby people reason falsely that what is true of the part is also true of the whole. It then follows through with concrete examples, such as showing that while debt may be bad for an individual, it means quite another thing on the governmental level. That is, debt may actually be used as a tool to regulate economy: to prevent too serious depressions and inflations.

THUS ECONOMICS is really a very practical study for training in professional economics, as a background for other careers, as training for citizenship and as training for straight thinking.

New Geology Building Provides Room for Collections, Classes

By BETTY BISHOP

During the past three years the Department of Geology, which was originally established on the campus in Jan 1949 has grown appreciably.

At the present time approximately 300 students are registered in geology courses, of which 45 are majors The demand for courses in geology has increased to such an extent that it has been deemed wise to give the department more space. This is being done by the erection of a new building, the skeleton of which is located directly west of the Student Center.

THE NEW geology building has been designed for the teaching of geology and for the preservation of the many specimen collections from all over the world that the department is assembling.

Small exhibits of the natural resources of the state of Florida are now no display in the present quarters of the geology department in the basement of the new dining hall.

IN THE new building these collections will be greatly enlarged. There will be space for displaying the recent shells of the Van Hynning collection which was purchased for the department about a year ago. This collection consists of well over a quarter of a million specimens.

The curriculum of the department, which offers a bachelor of science degree in geology, is now stabilized so that the graduates from Florida State University are on equal footing with graduates from any other department of geology in the United States.

"OF COURSE." Dr. J. S Cullison, of the geology department said, "the reputation for good geologists is earned rather than bought, and as a consequence, the reputation of the department will spread only as far as our graduates go and be only as good as are our graduates."

Thus far the department has been very successful in sending men as far away as Columbia and Venezuela in South America and in having graduates spread from Florida to Alberta.

IT IS hoped that by Homecoming next year the department will be settled in the new building and can have all of its displays arranged so that the returning alumni will be able to enjoy some of the beautiful exhibits that are now packed away in boxes.

VALENCES AND TITRATIONS . . . Dr Jack Eichanger teaches 101 students to mind their P's and Q's (plus and minus) chemistry-wise in the large science lecture hall.

Expansion in Chemistry Department Here Has Caused Growth in Many Other Areas

The chemistry department at FSU has expanded rapidly in the last few years and now occupies three stories of the new Science Hall.

The increase in laboratory facilities was made in 1950, after Dr. Karl Dittmer assumed the position of department executive to effect the reorganization and expansion of the department The staff has also increased from 10 to 23, six of whom are post-doctoral research associates.

The graduate enrollment increased from 13 in 1950, to 22 in 1951, and this year there are 45 students Two, Mrs. Jack Shapira and Dean Keeley, are National Science Foundation Fellows

The graduate program permitting the awarding of the Ph. D degree was approved in 1950 To date five Ph D's have been granted and eight more are expected to receive Ph. D's in chemistry this year.

A number of research grants were initiated at FSU during 1951 The number has steadily increased until now there are 22 research grants and contracts supported by various agencies, institutes and companies

In biochemistry Dr Karl Dittmer and Dr. Earl Frieden are directing six research projects. Research in inorganic and nuclear chemistry is supported by three grants under the supervision of Drs. Raymond Sheline and Roland Johnson. Physical chemistry has an outstanding spectroscopy laboratory under the direction of Dr Michael Kasha He and Dr. Grunwald have four research grants.

The organic chemistry faculty consists of Drs Werner Herz, John Leffler, Russell Johnson, and Harry Walborsky They are directing seven grants.

Dr Russell Kiers and Dr Harold Beard have two grants to study spectroscopic and other methods of analysis.

The following are engaged in the teaching of general chemistry: Katherine Hoffman, Mary Lester, J. B. Kelley and Howard Smoyer.

Germ Hunters Are 'At Home' In Newly Remodeled Quarters

By LOUIS TILLERY

If returning alumni were given directions for finding the Bacteriology Department they'd be sure they were being sent to the Laundry That's right, too, for the Bacteriology Department is new occupying the old Laundry's space in the Physical Education Building. This space has been converted into attractive classrooms, offices, laboratories and stockrooms to care for expansion of the department.

In 1951 the first M A degree was given by the department. At the present time eight graduate students are working on their masters' degrees.

DR. MARY Noka Hood, Head of the Bacteriology Department since 1941 said, Because our department is not associated with a professional school such as medical, agricultural, or dental, we can offer a more general and better balanced program than would otherwise be possible." The Bacteriology Department is also a service department to majors in medical technology, nursing, dietetics, and education in broad fields of science.

Many different phases of bacteriology are being taught in this department. For example, a class studying the bacteriological testing of food and dairy products learns to determine safety of food supplies. Another class is studying the flora of various types of waters from swimming pools, streams, reservoirs and wells to detect harmful bacteria and methods for destroying them. A class in marine bacteriology is also being taught. They study the role of bacteria in the economy and productivity of the sea. These and other courses prepare students for entering the fields of medical technology, teaching, government research, or public health work.

IF YOU really want to see what the department's new quarters are like, go down for a visit and look around. They'll be happy to see you

Heredity Is Aided By Study of Flies

Is there a "fly in your ointment?" Bring it in to Dr. Chester Nielsen's laboratory on third floor of the History Building. If it's a fruit fly, (Dr. Nielson calls it by the impressive and beautiful name Drosophila), it may atone for spoiling your ointment by making a contribution to human progress.

Students in Dr. Nielson's Genetics course have been crossing various strains of fruit fly, such as white-eyed ones by red-eyed ones, or gray body color by ebony body color, or various types of wing characters.

ABOUT three pairs of flies are put into each bottle containing banana mixture. After the parent flies have laid their eggs, they are removed and the eggs are left to hatch. The sons and daughters, who can number anywhere from about 50 to several hundred, are studied with hand lenses or dissecting microscopes to see how many came out which way.

From various experiments, students formulate laws of heredity as scientists did first in the 19th century

THE COURSE takes the dry statistics of the textbooks and brings them to life. Human eggs and sperm, too, are studied under the microscope to see how the cells divide

Known as course 326 in Botany and Zoology, it has proven valuable to students in the fields of psychology and Home Economics as well as in Biological Sciences.

Zoology Enrollment Increases About Four Times Since 50

By OSCAR JOHNSON

The FSU Zoology Department graduate student enrollment has been growing steadily for a number of years.

Dr R W. Yerger, commenting on the growth added, "The graduate training program here has grown from 3 or 4 in 1950 to 18 now." Dr. Yerger, who is Associate Professor of Zoology and Acting Head, said that the primary function of the Zoology Department is to train students. "We are here to train zoologists for teaching and research positions," he added.

Recently the Zoology Department cooperated with other science departments at FSU in holding a science camp here The camp was held in June for High School Juniors and Seniors selected from high schools all over the state for their interest and ability in science. The purpose of the camp was to give the students a better understanding and view of the scope of the physical and natural sciences.

MEMBERS of the Zoology Department have had articles published in various scientific periodicals during the year For instance, Dr Charles B Metz, a new member of the faculty, wrote an article on his electron microscope studies at North Carolina State University. The studies concerned locomotor apparatus in protozoans, in which specimens were magnified up to 40,000 diameters. Dr. Metz has brought with him a research grant from the American Cancer Society. These grants are awarded on the basis of the individual's reputation in the field of research, for recognition of previous studies. Dr Metz plans to take part in the broad range of research work going on all over the world to try to find new facts about cancer.

DR. ROBERT B Short of the Zoology Department has published a number of papers in scientific periodicals. His latest is about a new species of parasite in the heart of the speckled trout. He worked on this study at the Oceanographic Institute.

Dr. Yerger has published a study of the behavior of the chipmunk, dealing with its territoriality and home range The work was done in New York State, but was published since Dr Yerger joined the faculty at FSU.

Local Plants Subject Matter For Aspiring FSU Botanists

By MARY KING

Botany at Florida State University offers many opportunities for study and research. Quantitative and descriptive studies of factors contributing to the growth, development and distribution of native plants and plant communities in the Gulf Coast region are in progress.

A cacti collection is now on display on the sun porch or solarium. Unusual and interesting local species of plants are also available for physiological, morphological, and cytological investigations.

DR. S. L. MEYER is head of the department that consists of eight professors on the staff. Each summer the department aids the Science Camp that is available for attendance by high school students. At the camp, the students learn what science is really like and they participate in various types of laboratory work.

The course offerings of the wepartment have recently been revised in order to provide a well-rounded program at both the undergraduate and graduate level. In the graduate level, students may work toward a masters' degree or a doctorate of philosophy. Staff and graduate student research is supported by grants fro mthe office of Naval Research, the National Institutes of Health, the Society of the Sigma Xi, The Florida Academy of Science, the Indiana Academy of Science, and the Research Council of FSU.

MOST STUDENTS come in contact with the botany department when they are enrolled in General Biology, the basic course which meets the general education requirements.

Aquatic Students Work Underwater; Seek Data On Marine Life, Habits

By TOM HALL

How would you like to walk on a wet sandy tidal flat on a cold windy day and dig into the sand with your bare hands? The students of the Survey In Marine Biology class have this opportunity every Saturday, when they journey to Alligator Point where the laboratory of the Oceanographic Institute is located.

Survey of Marine Biology (Zoology or Botany 430X) is the Oceanographic Institute's basic introductory course. Although primarily a graduate course, it is open to undergraduates. This course was designed by Dr. Harold J. Humm and is concerned mainly with first hand experience in collecting and observing living marine forms and working with modern equipment for marine work.

MARINE BIOLOGY introduces the principal subdivisions of oceanography and is subdivided as follows: marine bacteriology, marine algae, plankton, marine animal ecology, physical oceanography, ichthyology and fisheries biology. Emphasis is upon the biological, especially ecology or the relation of the plant and animal to it's environment and upon extensive field work.

The course cover the aspects of commercial and industrial importance of the plants and animals, such as, how certain environmental conditions would affect fish and in turn the fish industry.

WHEN WEATHER conditions permit, dives are made with the use of an aqua-lung and students are able to observe marine forms in their natural habitat. The dives are usually made from the Sea Quest, which is the motor vessel used to take the class on numerous field trips. However, field trips in the boat have been limited due to motor trouble and weather conditions unsuitable for diving.

Substituting the tidal flats for the boat, the class explores for specimens of marine life. Walking along the sand with shovels and buckets, very often getting wet feet in cold water, the students dig burrowing worms, clams and other shell fish from the sand. Samples of algae and seaweed are collected and then along with the plants and animays they are returned to the laboratory for examination and identification. The identification and examination are done in much the same manner that Biology 101 and 102 students learn the phylums.

THIS SORT of expedition is very often cold and wet, but none the less interesting due to many fascinating things that are discovered. For example, a moray eel was found lying on a sand flat and hurriedly scooped up and brought back alive. The eel is quite dangerous in many instances and it is rather uncommon to find one in cold, shallow water such as Alligator Point. This is just one of the many fascinating things that are so frequently found on the field trips.

At the present time there are nine students enrolled in the class. Eight of these are graduate students, except one, Pat Carter, who is the only undergraduate and only girl enrolled.

LAST SUMMER, Survey In Marine Biology was given at Alligator Harbor. The students lived right at the laboratory on the coast and "lived the subject" in a concentrated six weeks study experience. Tentative plans are in order for giving this same course next summer at the Oceanographic Institute's field quarters on Mullet Key at the mouth of Tampa Bay, following the pattern now established at the Alligator Harbor station.

The Oceanographic Institute offers a wide variety of courses in marine sciences of which Survey In Marine Biology is of most general interest.

Students Seek Clues to Body Mysteries With Aid of Physiological Concepts Here

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The Physiology Department at FSU, headed by Dr. F R. Hunter, is conducting extensive research, much of which is subsidized by United States Government agencies.

Members of the staff are participating in three general areas of teaching They conduct service courses at the introductory level, teach courses for undergraduate majors and teach graduate courses. Many of the graduate students are active in the research programs which will be covered by this article.

THE RESEARCH programs have been enlarged considerab., in the last five years, particula since 1950.

Graduate courses are being offered in the general areas of Mammalian Physiology, Sensory and Electro-phisiology, and cellular and comparitive physiology, in conjunction with the research projects

DR. HUNTER and his students are interested in problems related to the metabolism of cells, cell permeability and factors involved in maintaining differences in salt concentrations between cells and their environment One project, which is supported in part by the Office of Naval Research, involves a study of enzymes present in red blood cell of different species of anim Dr. John Spitzer and his students are interested in the problem of fats in blood. This research program is of interest in conection with research on hardening of the arteries, known scientifically as arterial sclerosis. For obvious merits, this program is subsidized by the U. S. Public Health Service.

Dr A. C. Higginbotham is studying heat regulation by mammals, particularly cats and possums.

DR. ARLISS DENYES is studying changes in the blood of hibernating and non-hibernating mammals when subjected to low temperatures.

Dr Lloyd M Beidler and his students are investigating the physiological properties of chemoreceptors. Modern electrophysiological (We'll boil that word down shortly) equipment is used to record the nerve messages from the taste or olfactory nerves of mammals when the sense organs in the tongue or nose are stimulated with various chemicals. The projects are supported by the office of Naval Research, Army Quartermaster Corps, and the Armour Research Institute.

THE ACTUAL NERVE reactions of test animals can be recorded on roll graphs, tape from a loudspeaker which has made sound through electrical variations in the nerve impulses, or film recording the electrical image of the response as seen on a device similar to a TC set.

The physiology department is full of experiments. In one room a student was subjecting red blood cells to a furious shaking in order to pulverize them and extract the enzymes.

WHEN THE GRADUATE physiology students aren't at work they may be found in a room decoraetd liberally with photos of Marilyn Monroe.

That, too, is physiology.

Meteorology Recognized As Most Important Here

By CONNIE COLEMAN

A hurricane off the coast of Florida could be offset by the power unleashed by 100 properly placed atom bombs. By this we see that someday man will be able to counter with the forces of nature. It is with concepts like this one that the meteorologist deals.

The history of meteorology goes back to the time of Aristotle. But the science as we know it today is still young and ever developing. Meteorology is concerned with such seemingly unrelated subjects as radar, fruit frost and atmosphere on Mars, to name only a few. The study is a composite of chemistry, physics, and mathematics.

FSU IS ONE of 14 colleges and universities in America which has a meteorology department. This department has grown, since its beginning in 1949, to be one of the best in the South. It has won both national and international recognition.

The increasing importance of meteorology is being recognised by the United States Government. The air force has used the FSU department in its training program since 1951. Twenty-five second lieutenants are in the basic meteorology division, and one first lieutenant and five captains are now candidates for the M.S. degree.

THE DEPARTMENT is under contract with the Air Force Cambridge Research Center. Research is being conducted on weather conditions in the Gulf of Mexico, the Caribbean, the tropical Atlantic and the Mediterranean. FSU meteorologists working on these projects are Dr. Sherman, Dr. La Seur, Mr. Landers, and Dr. Gleeson.

Vital information will in this way be recorded for the government. The knowledge gleaned by the researchers will be useful in military operations. This fact was brought out by World War II.

ANOTHER part of the department's research, conducted by Hess for the Office of Naval Research, deals with the "why" of the weather. Many paradoxes of the weather can be explained mathematically.

The editorial offices of the "Journal of Meteorology" are located in the meteorology building on Jefferson street. Dr. Werner A. Baum, head of the department of meteorology, is editor of this bimonthly professional publication. The journal has won international recognition for its contributions to scientific thought.

INTERNATIONAL flavor has been added to the School of Meteorology by students from Siam, Japan, India, Formosa, and the Philippines.

FSU alumni and students may well be proud of the university's School of Meteorology which is headed by some of the nation's top meteorologists. These experts are contributing both statistics and theories to modern scientific thought.

Young Englishman Surprised At Campus With Palm Trees

By BOB FOLSOM

Dr. Arthur Finch

Dr. Arthur Finch, a young, lean English chemist arrived on a Sunday to join the Chemistry Department staff here as a research associate and visiting scholar.

A Ph.D., only 23 years old, he was setting up an experiment when we dropped in at the chemistry laboratory. He stopped, and greeted us generously in the quick and darting manner you find in most young Englishmen. He was wearing a black checked tie white shirt, work pants and sandals.

In England his research had dealt with the effect of heat and light on the stability of inorganic and organic salts.

What particularly was he working on now? He said, looking at the table containing his experiment, "I'm attempting to determine the stoichiometric mean ionic mol fractional activity co-efficient phase right now." Laughing he brought it back down to earth by "measuring vapor pressures." His British accent emphasized the r's.

Dr. Finch was born in northern England, and went to London at the age of 18. For the next five years he attended the Royal College of Science at Imperial College in London, graduating in August of this year with his doctor's degree. Asked if their curriculum differed from American universities, he replied, "Yes, I think we specialize much earlier in England than here. In England you graduate at 16 from what is the equivalent of your high school here. Our Ph.D. is awarded purely on the basis of research."

He was inquisitive about this country, and discussed broadly the differences in American and British newspapers, various books, magazines, and at one point, asked, "Have you ever read the New Statesman? No? It's a British labor magazine, left-wing. Your Senator McCarthy called it an anti-American rag. I never could understand why."

Actually had he seen much of the United States? "Miami-Tampa-Tallahassee. I docked at Miami, went to Tampa and then here. I hope to see more, maybe go through New York City on my way back." His first impression: "The weather, was fine, the beer was rotten."

"You know, we have nothing quite like a campus in your sense. I can't get used to a university with palm trees around it."

Dr. Finch will spend one year at Florida State University and then return to England. Has he any plans upon returning to England? He said, smiling, "I'm going to be conscripted in the army." He climbed up on the experiment table and proceeded to mend a cracked test tube with a blowpipe. Someone stuck his head in the door and asked if anyone was for coffee.

Dr. Finch said "yes," hopped down, looked at us. "No? If you'll excuse me," and shook hands.

Had he any particularly sidelights besides chemistry? "Yes," he said, pulling on his coat and calling back over his shoulder, "Chinese Witchcraft and Oriental Demonology."

Wade Names Various Jobs Open in Math

By BARBARA BACHMAN

"Mathematic majors are now in great demand for positions in the government and in industry," reports Dr. Thomas L. Wade, head of the math department at Florida State University.

The graduate work that is being developed in the department will serve to train more students toward careers in industry and government. The courses that are set up are a good preparation for students wishing responsible positions in these and other fields.

FOR INSTANCE, at this time, three graduate students of Florida State are now employed with the Navel Canomine Station at Panama City, Florida. Another is working at Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and one at Eglin Air Force, Pensacola, Florida. The work involves analyzing data that is collected from the physics department, among other duties.

Four of Florida State's graduates are employed as teachers in large high schools and junior colleges around the country.

THE SHORTAGE of mathematics majors is great, and with improvements being made every day in many fields such as science, more demands must be filled each year. The department at Florida State is set up to train graduate students for such positions.

Freshmen majors at Florida State usually number about twelve a year. While some stay in the Mathematics Department, others choose allied fields. This may include physics, chemistry, or pre-engineering.

DR. WADE, head of the department, has developed a new book for calculus students. This book is being used by students preparing for many fields. There are between eighty and a hundred of these students enrolled at the university.

The Department of Mathematics employs thirteen full-time professors. Eight of these hold a Doctor of Philosophy degree in the field. Of ten graduate students working here, nine are assistants in the school.

Tots Educated 'Modern Style' At Nursery

By BARBARA BACHMAN

Forty-four children between the ages of 2½ and 4 met their teacher, Miss Pearson, at the Tallahassee airport Monday as part of their nursery school program.

The children are from the Florida State University nursery school next to the post office, on Call St.

BESIDES TAKING the field trip to the airport, they have visited a dairy and are planning on watching the FSU Circus set up their equipment this Friday.

Supervisor of the school is Mrs. Barbara H. Finck. Mrs. Finck was a teacher last year at the school; she was recently named director.

THE TOTS HAVE facilities especially for them, and built to their size. Outdoor equipment includes swings and a tree house. Inside they have special chairs and tables; closets with their names on them, and many practical toys. Everything used at the nursery is scientifically constructed to meet the particular need of the little people. Many have the specific purpose of developing certain muscles in the body.

Hanging on the walls are finger paintings and drawings which were done by the tiny people. Their play periods are free, as they are too young to follow any organized plans.

A HEALTH RECORD is kept for each child, and every morning when they arrive at the school, Mrs. Nan Rafferty, a registered nurse inspects them for fever or colds. Only children that have normal health may be accepted in the school.

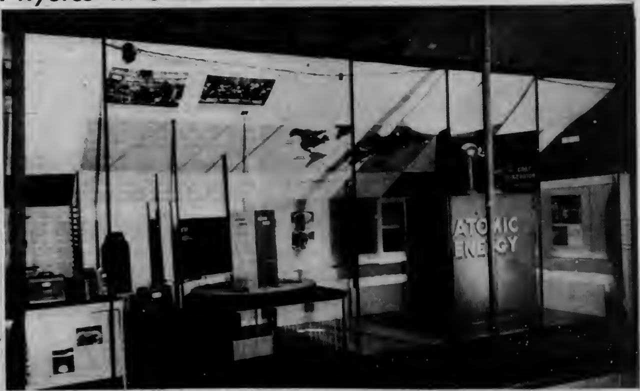
Entrants are taken into the school in order of their application. There is a balance maintained so that there is always an equal number of boys and girls. Also, age groups are equalized. At this time there is a long waiting list for new entrants. Many are children of FSU faculty and staff or graduate students, and many are from Tallahassee families not connected with the University.

THE CHILDREN are divided into four age groups. Miss Ruth Jefferson teaches twelve children between the ages of 2½ and 3. Miss Lamittice Pearson has sixteen children in her group of 3½-year-olds. The third group is led by Miss Harriet Harlon with four-year-olds. Mrs. Sarah Blackford heads the five-year-olds in the afternoon kindergarten. A masters degree is necessary in order to teach.

The nursery school began under the Work Projects Administration (WPA). During the war it was used as a Lanham Act nursery. It became part of the Child Development program under the head of Dr. Ralph Witherspoon in 1948, and now serves as a laboratory for observation and research purposes. Students from the schools of Home Economics, Education, Psychology, and Social Welfare, may be seen observing the children at the school any time.

MAKES APPLICATIONS KNOWN

Physics Informs Public With Exhibit at Fair



COME TO THE FAIR . . . The FSU Physics department had an exhibit on atomic energy at the recent North Florida Fair. Above is an overall view of the set-up, while at the left is a close-up of Geiger counters, radioactive plants and the like.

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The Physics department at Florida State University not only teaches courses in general, advanced and graduate physics but also believes in making known some interesting applications of the subject to the general public.

Take the exhibit it prepared for the university at the North Florida Fair last month. The show, displaying various aspects of atomic energy, will be repeated later this year at the Florida State Fair in Tampa.

THE FIRST thing one notices is the cracking of miniature lightning bolts from the horn arc and the Van der Graff generator, but these eye-and-ear-catchers lead on into the exhibit proper.

The set, designed by Mr. Taiso "Mike" Miake of the Anthropology department and executed by Mr. Lew Eckart of Physics, is seen in the accompanying photographs.

WALING IN on one side, one can "see" nuclear particles ejected from a radioactive source through a device known as a cloud chamber. The traces are made in alcohol vapor colled by dry ice.

Next is a display case containing fluorescent rocks and equipped with regular and ultra-violet lighting. Under ordinary light, the rocks appear commonplace, but under "black" light they glow eerily and beautifully.

BEHIND THESE displays are panels illustrating the applications of radioactive isotopes to medicine, biology, agriculture and engineering. They show, for instance, how radioactive materials in plant food can be traced through the plant to see how food is assimilated. A lighted map on the angulated ceiling shows the world's supply of uranium, radium and thorium.

Other exhibits include a high-frequency oscillator called the Tesla coil which allows the conduction of electric current through the human body. Thus it is possible for a person to "light up" a light bulb or tube by holding it and standing near the coil. People at the North Florida Fair were amused to see this arrangement, because elsewhere at the Fair was an "electric lady" who was mystifying the customers with a similar trick.

A MODEL of a neutron pile in the exhibit is able to convert the silver in a dime into cadmium, thus fulfilling the medieval alchemists' desire to change one element into another.

Various other samples of radioactive materials are displayed, including monozite sand from Florida beaches. This sand is a potential source of radioactive thorium and may be used if the richer sources are depleted.

FREE BOOKLETS distributed at the Atomic Energy exhibit explain in elementary language many of the basic ideas and applications of nuclear and atomic physics.

Bookstore Has Growing Pains Says Wheeler

By WARREN COBB

The University Bookstore is having growing pains.

Manager Gordon Wheeler says the Bookstore must keep pace with the FSU 50-year plan.

LOCATED IN the new Student Union Building at the northwest end of the campus, the Bookstore has about htree times the space now that was available when Wheeler came here in 1937 — but it served about 1,500 students then to a little over 8,000 now.

Tentative plans, subject to approval by the State Legislature, have been made to add another floor adjacent to the east side of the Bookstore mezzanine. This would serve for supplementary bookkeeping and storage space.

"IT WILL be so designed," says Wheeler, "that we will be able to utilize the additional space to best suit our needs."

All construction amounting to over $10,000, however, must be approved by the Legislature, and so this program is not a certainty as yet.

MANAGER WHEELER has seen the University Bookstore moved first from Westcott to the Dining Hall and from there to its present site in June, 1951.

"We definitely need additional space," says Wheeler. "We are stocking more and more new items for students and offices as a service to the university, and this program of expansion will necessitate the facilities to accommodate them."

In a recent unit evaluation Wheeler has said:

"THE PURPOSE of the Bookstore is to supply students, faculty, and staff with books and supplies at lowest possible prices.

"We are making every effort to make our unit one motivated primarily by desiring to serve rather than by making a profit.

"WE CAN IMPROVE the store by being able to employ better qualified personnel. Better qualified sales personnel would mean more efficient operation of the store."

Five to six students are employed each year by the Bookstore, thereby helping them to work their way through college.

ONE FORMER bookstore employee is Dan Boda, class of '53, talented violinist who now has a scholarship at Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y.

Another former student employee is Bob Reid, who graduated in the summer of '52. Reid, who is now married and teaching in Clearwater, Fla., was featured in this month's Coronet in an articles dealing with the cost of living in Florida.

"Your hair's no yoke" bellowed Sheedy's gal. "These cowlicks look awful. Why not take the bull by the horns and get yourself some Wildroot Cream-Oil, America's favorite hair tonic? Keeps hair combed without greasiness. Makes you look cud-dly. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Relieves annoying dryness. Contains Lanolin. Non-alcoholic. Music Organizations Near Finale Of Coming Year's Concert Plans

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

Plans for the year's activities of music organizations at Florida State University are almost complete. Directors of these groups report a series of concerts and productions for the enjoyment of people at FSU and throughout the state of Florida. One group has several out of state performances on schedule.

COLLEGIANS

The Collegians men's glee club, have already entertained all of the sororities and women's dormitories with three serenades this semester. Many cards of appreciation from the girls followed the serenades.

PROFESSOR J. Daytono Smith, director of the Collegians said that the next public performance will be in Ashford, Alabama on Dec. 10. A concert will be given there, sponsored by the Lion's Club, for the benefit of the Sight Saving Fund.

On Jan. 14 the group will sing in Moultrie Ga. This concert will be sponsored by the high school chorus of Moultrie.

THE GROUPS now has tentative plans to leave Feb. 3 for a nine day tour of east and central Florida M. Smith said. "Seven evening concerts and about 14 assembly programs in different high schools are planned for this trip."

The tour will be climased with the annual Winter concert which will be held in Opperman Music Hall on Friday Feb. 11.

ONE UNIQUE piece of music that the group is presently working on for the concert is Robert Elmore's The Prodigal Son sometimes called "A Sermon in Swing."

The organization is also now developing plans for a Negro minstrel to be held next April 15 and 16 in Opperman Music Hall.

PROFESSOR SMITH said that he'd like to see more new blood come in next Spring. "We want the Collegians to be a representative of all men on campus. There are no auditions and all we want is men who want to sing and enjoy singing" he said.

UNIVERSITY SINGERS

The University Singers, a mixed choral group with a membership between 60 and 70, is now in its fifth year at FSU. This is a highly selective organization. Members are selected not only on voice and musicianship but also on personal qualifications suche as leadership and organizational ability. Each year there are 300 to 400 tryouts according to Dr. W. L. Housewright director of the group.

DR. HOUSEWRIGHT said that the Singers have changed some of their ideas this year. For example, he said, "We are planning to take the organization out to the public instead of having public come to us as we have in the past." He said that the organization would be concentrating on giving greater service to the campus community as well as the community at large.

Instead of the regular concert, this year, the group is giving a series of Christmas serenades. Serenades will be given at time and places to be announced in the near future.

THE SINGERS will sing a couple of numbers during Thanksgiving and Christmas vesper services of the Student Christian Association. A program of religious music is also planned during Religious Emphasis Week next Spring.

A short trip is planned for the group on Jan. 11 to 13. This will be the first out-of-town trip for the year and the first time in West Florida for the group. Concerts will be given in Panama City, Pensacola and Blountstown. Tentative plans are also being made for a tour to the east coast and central Florida during the first week in March.

THE TWO home concerts in Opperman Music Hall this year are scheduled for Jan. 20 and March 14. Some of the works to be done at the concerts include two motets by Jacob Handl of 16th Century; a group of French sacred numbers by Faure and Paleidilhe; Paul Hendemith's Chanson, four gypsy songs of Brahms; and Brazilian Psalm, a major works by Jean Berger.

The group is also making use of composition and arrangements of two Singers who are composition majors in the School of Music. They are Jack Jarrett and David Ward-Steinman, accompanist of the group.

IN ADDITION to the above Singers will also give three selectionos from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess, several Negro spirituals arranged by William Dawson and Hall Johnson, and several folk songs.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

The Women's Glee Club, directed by Professor Joseph M. Running, is the oldest choral group on campus presently composed of 55 members. It was organized when school was Florida State College for Women. Running said that the group has a distinguished record of performances on campus, throughout the state, and elsewhere in the South.

THEIR traditional vesper services which date back to 1916, will be held Dec. 13 in Opperman Music Hall. For this program the girls are doing two works which Running said, "We believe to be the first performance in Florida."

They are Jan Meyerowitz's Two Litanies, a work of medieval texts bot written in most advanced contemporary style; and Domingo Santa Cruz (Songs of Christmas), which are sung in a capella. The latter works is by Cantares De Pascua who gives original compositiono but base ideas on ecclesiastical and folk-song sources.

THE GLEE CLUB will use their new garnet colored robes this year for first time at the Christmas program.

The group has not yet planned any tours but a short tour is usually taken in the spring. The year's work will climax with the traditional spring concert.

PROFESSOR Running asked to remind all co-eds that the Glee Club is open to all members of the student body. He said, "We would like to welcome girls from outside of the School of Music for next semester."

A number of sororities have expressed their gratitude to the Glee Club and its director for the experience they have gained which proves so valuable to them in the annual Little Brown Jug contest and other singing activities.

CHORAL UNION

THE CHORAL UNION, directed by Professor Herman Gumer Jr., is the largest choral group on campus. It is a mixed group composed of students, faculty and towns' people with no limit to its membership.

The group is presently working on Messiah which will be presented Dec. 11 and 12 with FSU Symphony Orchestra in Opperman Music Hall. This will mark the eighth annual production at FSU for this great work of Frederick Handel.

SOLOISTS for the performance are now being selected through a series of tryouts. These tryouts are held in the Choral room (223) of the music building and everyone is eligible to try for the positions. Over 30 soloists have been heard to date. The next tryout will be Tuesday night, Nov. 17 at 7:00 p.m.

Also in their rehearsal schedule for this semester is a major choral works composed expressly for Choral Union and soloist by Mr. Bertil Bor of the School of Music faculty. Performance of this works is tentatively scheduled for late January.

PREPARATIONS are also being made this semester for a full production of the opera, Il Trovatore by Verdi. This opera will be presented in May but much work is already being done toward getting the production in rehearsal early next semester.

Professor Gunier said, "opera patrons who packed the music hall to hear Cavalleria Rusticana last spring are eagerly anticipating the return of grand opera to our campus, staged and sung by our own faculty and students."

GUNTER ASKED that people be reminded that Choral Union is open to all faculty, students and towns' people. He said, "We will be glad to welcome at the beginning of next semester any who may not now be singing with this group of over 150 choristers."

UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY

The University Symphony Orchestra is open to the entire university as an activity, and credit may be earned by those that desire it. The personnel of the orchestra is about 65 in strength and the instrumentation is of full symphonic proportion with the more unusual instruments owned by the university.

THE ORCHESTRA is now planning to join with Choral Union for Messiah production in December.

Professor Robert N. Sedore, director of the group, said that next performance of the orchestra will be in January. At that time two appearances will be made with the Modern Dance Group, playing Masquerade Sweep by Katchaturian.

THE ORCHESTRA's winter concert will be held in Opperman Music Hall on Jan. 15. Other activities for the year include the spring concert in April and performances during Music Week.

Professor Sedore said that the University Symphony is also the nucleus of the State Symphony of Florida which is conducted by the dean of the School of Music, Dr. K. O. Kuersteiner. The latter organization has just played a complimentary performance for the Florida State Music Teachers Convention which will be followed by the regular Tallahassee concert series of four concerts beginning Dec. 17.

SEDORE SAID that this helps instrumental students in the Symphony to prepare and learn to know through first hand experience a large seasonal repertoire.

LIGHT OPERA GUIDE

The Light Opera Guide is an organization which produces a comedy or operetta each year. Director of the group is Dr. Robert L. Briggs. Stage and chorus director is Professor Betty Jane Grimm.

DR. BRIGGS said, "We endeavor to get shows which have been popular in the U. S. and abroad."

This year's production is Die Fledermaus by Johaon Strauss, which will be given Dec. 4, 5, 7 and 8 in Opperman Music Hall. Rehearsals are now being conducted.

HE CONTINUED "I believe this to be the first and most exciting production that we have done yet, since it has been a tremendous hit through the years."

Music of Fledermaus is by Strauss. The lobretto is written by Garson Kanin who has written broadway successes such as Born Yesterday. Lyrics are written by Howard Dubt, who has written such popular hits as the Band Wagon.

IN THE PRODUCTION, there will be a chorus of 50 members, ten principals and an orchestra of 45 members. A dozen more people, assisting with make-up, staging, etc. will sum up approximately 115 people who will participate in the show. This will primarily be a student production but help of faculty will be used.

Ticket sale will begin after the Thanksgiving holidays. Students are urged to get tickets for earliest performance. Dr. Briggs said that many people have been turned away at the last two performances during most of the previous shows.

Alumni Never To Forget Show, Opines Whitcomb

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

Music organizations at Florida State University are hoping to give the alumni a homecoming show that they will never forget. That seems to be the opinion of Manley Whitcomb, Marching Chief band director, and in charge of homecoming musical activities to be given by the band and choral groups.

The Marching Chiefs will begin their debut tonight, during the Pow Wow at Campbell Stadium. There they will present a variety of Ray Anthony numbers including 'Dragnet,' "Trumpet Boogie," and a specialty with the Marching Maidens on the "Bunny Hop."

Tomorrow the band will begin their day by furnishing music for the homecoming parade.

The most outstanding show will come tomorrow afternoon at Campbell Stadium when FSU Seminoles and Stetson Hatters clash on the gridiron.

The band will begin the half-time show by forming a teepee with the idea of making all the people from all parts of Florida feel unified. While the band is in their teepee formation, cheerleaders will lead fans in the "scalping" yell. The band will then spell out the word "Fight" and fans will sing two verses of the "Fight Song."

The tempo will then change slightly as the band will form a crown and introduce the Homecoming Queen with a fanfare.

Following the crowning ceremony, the idea will change to the 'All-Florida' theme. To begin, the band will outline the state of Florida while playing "Old Garnet and Gold" and "Grand March."

At the same time, the University Singers, Collegians, and Choral Union, consisting of about 350 voices, singing "Old Garnet and Gold" will come on to the field and fill in the map.

They will then sing a medley, including "Your Land and My Land," "Way Down upon the Suwanee River," "Going Home," 'Home Sweet Home," and "Auld Lang Syne" to express welcome of Tallahassee community to Alumni.

During first part of medley singing, members of the Collegians will spell out names of cities in Florida. Then, during "Going Home" they will march to "Tallahassee" where the cities suddenly spell out WELCOME HOME ALUMNI. Show will be concluded as everyone sings the Alma Mater.

Anthony Too Busy With Band To Play in Movie About Miller

Ray Anthony, whose record of "Dragnet" is the biggest orchestral selling record of recent months, is one former Glenn Miller sideman who will not be seen in the upcoming film version of the late maestro's life. The young man, who joined the group in 1940 and left to go into the Navy in 1942, is too busy with his own band to take time off to do a stint in the films. After his four-year hitch in the service, the leader took up his trumpet and formed his own band, playing the top spots in the country. He is Capitol Records' number one band, and previous to "Dragnet" his biggest hit was "Nevertheless."

Talking about "Dragnet," there's a plethora of recordings from television, following the same pattern set by all the discs based on film themes in the last few years. There's "Melancholy Serenade" from the Jackie Gleason show: Johnny Desmond etched "Danger' from the action program of the same name, and to lighten it all up now, there's "Mr Peepers" from the comedy half-hour starring Wally Cox.

LOOK FOR an upsurge on the dancing front. The National Ballroom Operators of America are getting behind the move to get more people on the dance floors. There'll be a special contest during the summer, with loads of prizes for the best dancers; and a National Dance Week, promoted by Down Beat Magazine, with tie-ins with television and radio programs.

Eddy Arnold won Down Beat's first country and western disc jockey poll. Over 500 deejays ware polled, and Arnold won the male singer's division; Kitty Wells, the female: Pee Wee King, the large band: Homer and Jethro the small units, and the Carlisles, the vocal group slot. Biggest C&W record was "Your Cheating Heart": and the best tune, "Crying in the Chapel."

COAST TURNS . . . Eddie Cantor does a little better than the late Al Jolson, who warbled for Larry Parks in his life story. Cantor, who does the songlog for Keefe Brasselle in the film, "The Eddie Cantor Story," gets credit in an introductory prologue. Probably your folks remember better than you do, but Walt Disney films have inspired more song hits than any other source. Way back in 1933, Frank Churchill of the Disney staff knocked out, for "The Three Little Pigs" films, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf" and then, until his death several years ago, did more than 30 hit tunes. His biggest success was "Snow White," in which he had eight hit numbers.

Jazz Scene . . . Look for some action on the English Musicians Union, which has banned American band appearances in Britain. Sensational tours just finished by Lionel Hampton and Stan Kenton, have the fans in an uproar. More than 3,000 Kentonites took special trains and boats from England, to attend the concerts by the maestro in Ireland . . . incidentally, Kenton cancelled his scheduled tour with Duke Ellington, claiming that it was all a mistake, and that both were too big to do joint concerts . . . Dixieland is still strong, a recent bash on the Coast bringing in a smash $18,000.

DOWNBEAT FIVE STAR Discs now being released are: Popular: Les Brown—"Invitation." Martha Kitt—"I Want to Be Evil" Donald O'Connor—"Biggest Bloomin' Bumbershot in the World" and "Love is in the Air." Jazz: Stan Getz — "You Go to My Head." Modern Jazz Quartet — "Prestige LP."

Camp Flastacowo adds to the list of "New Faces" around campus. New bath houses, snack bars, boat sheds and concrete piers, plus more boats and equipment have made FSU's private "Estate" a showplace around town. . . . Hostess Mrs. deKalb makes all comers feel at home with warm greetings and a helping hand with all parties and the like. Alumni will exclaim over the changes when they go out tomorrow noon to the barbecue prepared specially in their honor at the new Flastacowo. . . .

Cavaliers, Cotillion Selected On Ability, Looks, Personality

By JIM JINDRA

Posters announcing the Cavalier and Cotillion tryouts begin to appear in buildings on and around campus at this time every year. "What's that?" someone will ask. "Who are they?" What do they do?"

Freshmen, transfer students, and even battle-scarred veterans of FSU learn sooner or later that these organizations are social dancing honoraries for men and women.

CAROLYN Cola, President of Cotillion, and Joe Regna acting President of Cavaliers said, "Qualifications for membership are few but they are important. Men trying out for Cavaliers and women trying out for Cotillion are judged on their dancing ability, their appearance on the dance floor, their personality, and their willingness to work on the projects which our groups carry out."

Cavaliers and Cotillion usually work together in acting as hosts and hostesses at the annual Play Nite Dance and at the May Dance. They also work together in giving the free dancing lessons which were just concluded at the Student Center last week. The two groups act as hosts and hostesses at various functions sponsored by the university.

THE ANNUAL Cavalier Talent Night each spring gives students the opportunity to compete for prizes in the Opperman Music Hall, and the Cavalier-Cotillion Ball is one of the social highlights of the year.

Cavaliers and Cotillion are known as honorary organizations, but they have taken on a number of projects in recent year whereby they render services to the student body which give them the nature of service honoraries.

CAROLYN Cola and Joe Regna both emphasize that, "Neither Cavaliers nor Cotillion are "prestige" organizations, since members are required to attend meetings and take an active part in the projects. Cavaliers and Cotillion are not made up of professional dancers either. Certainly, members must enjoy dancing, but more than that, they must be able to help others to relax and enjoy themselves on the dance floor."

New Cabinet System at FSU Pays Governmental Dividends

Newest part of Florida State University's Student government is the Cabinet system. An integral part of many governing bodies, its value as an advisory board to the President has often been demonstrated. FSU's Cabinet system, now in its second year, has proved its worth by a long list of achievements.

The Cabinet is, of course, headed by Student Body President Milton Carothers. Student Body Vice-President Gene Lawler, Women's Vice-President Lillian Avis, and Men's Vice-President Wayne Terry are considered ex-officio members.

APPOINTED Cabinet officers are Peter Nimkoff, Attorney General; Judy Simkins, Secretary of State, Margaret Jean Parham, Secretary of Organizations; Bill Stancik, Secretary of Elections, Jack Houser, Secretary of Finance, Beverly Lacayo, Secretary of Forums; Arthur Kennerly, Secretary of Recreation; Floyd Risley, Secretary of Labor; and June Convery, Chairman of the Honor Committee.

Each Secretary has a committee to help work in his particular field. A group with enthusiastic and concientious members cannot fail in its task of carrying out duties, whether small or large in scope, for the welfare of the students at F.S.U.

AMONG THE achievements of the Cabinet this year was an Organizations Conference supervised by Secretary Parham. Officers of all campus organizations and faculty advisors were invited to attend and discussions were held on major problems of leadership

A perennial concern of the Executive branch is the conduct of the students elections. Under the leadership of Secretary Stancik, this fall's Freshman Elections were conducted with outstanding efficiency. Arrangements are being made to utilize voting machines in the spring Student Body Elections.

Secretary Houser has been in charge of an investigation to determine the possibilities of a Social Union on the FSU campus. This Social Union would coordinate social functions of the University and would be similar to the Florida Union at Gainesville.

HOUSER'S FINANCE committee was also responsible for initiating the following salary changes recently approved by the University Senate: a salary of $75 per month for the President, $405 a year for a student assistant to the Traffic Court, and increases for the editor and business manager of Smoke Signals.

Several decisions have been made on the joint advice of the Cabinet. Among these was the recent move to combine the Tally-Ho and the student government versions of the Hall of Fame. Plans are also being made by a committee under Attorney General Nimkoff to select the FSU nominees for Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

CABINET was also instrumental in causing FSU to withdraw from the Florida Intercollegiate Student Government Association and join the infant Southern Universities Student Government Association.

Other efforts have included the appointment of a Library Commitee to work with Dr. Kilpartick, libraian, on such projects as circulation of books and magaaines in University housing units, changing of library hours, and revision of reserve book regulations.

A CHAMBER of Commerce Committee, composed of townspeople, faculty, and students, to coordinate Tallahassee and University activities is also under consideration.

Other projects have included such diverse items as selecting male cheerleaders and running the Freshman Convocation. Suggestions are now being considered for class attendance regulations, the choosing of candidates for Gator Bowl Queen and Maid of Cotton Contest, the planning of a student government banquet, and a program for cementing faculty-student relations.

An Artist Views Gymkana

SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT POINT OF VIEW—Gymkana may never look like this through plebeian horn rims, but through the eyes of semi-impressionist George Milton it's a different story. Milton was commissioned to paint one of the three murals in the longe of West Hall, FSU's modern new dormitory. The mural stands on the far north wall of the 11-story building's snack bar.

on news commentators, but I turned the other way.

The great white father Bruce Galphin smiled at me. "Having fun writing your column," he asked. "Yes," I meekly retorted. He smiled again and walked off. The next issue had a story on different types of thrice-dimensional apparatus . . . I was cornered, so with pen and ink . . . I thought of an ideal way to foil them all.

None had as yet written about the recording industry so I set out to find everything I could find on the subject and put it in my next Etceters Etchings. Bang! The next issue, Folsom returns. This time with a feature on Patti Page . . . Bob Stu.ne hits with an opera review of records . . . my column sandwiched within the four pages again misses.

At last, I have some news which will astonish all and I still keep in my category of show-business. In the country of Latvia, now under Russian rule, a Latvian dance is rumored (because everything out of a Russian-ruled country is rumored) to be called the "Travetsky." Every year a multitude turns out for the "Travetsky finals" and the winner is nationally acclaimed. There is some talk that the dance may be introduced in this country and join other immortal steps like The Black Bottom, Collegiate, Charleston, Bunny Hug and others. Well, there's the fabulous news . . . at least I'm pretty sure nobody else will write about dancing in Latvia.

As this is an extra column written in addition to my other piece of-ahem-journalism on the editorial page, I wish to say to the homecoming visitors that this is all in jest and that—no Galphin . . . put down that whip . . . ah, thank you—where was I? Oh yes, really, we get along fine at the Flambeau office . . . what's this—? Hmmm . . . round . . . black with a protruding cord that sparkles . . . throw it away . . . a bomb? Don't be silly . . . why would the staff give me a . . . (Editor's Note: Anybody want to write a show-business column?)

such as I Guess It Was You All the Time, written by Hoagy Charmicheal, and Johnny Mercer; Baby, Baby, Baby, a Theresa Brewer special written by Mack David and Jerry Livingston; and a new catchy tune entitled Chick-a-Boom, by Robert Merrill.

The Bell Sisters, thirteen-year-old Kay and seventeen-year-old Cynthia, who won their first fame for the writing and recording of Bermuda, make their debut in the filmworld as two of those redheads from Seattle.

While on campus, look over the offices of the three FSU publications . . . FLAMBEAU, SMOKE SIGNALS AND TALLY-HO have all taken tremendous strides in the move to bigger and better news, editorial comment, humor and general appearance . . . dig out some late copies and look them over . . . Flambeau now has a news-gathering staff numbering in the 70's plus a junior and senior staff of 30; Smoke Signals has become one of the number 1 humor magazines among southern colleges with its unusual art work, layout and choice of literature; Tally-Ho, the year-long production has become a first-class annual complete with original pictures, delightful theme and full coverage of all clubs.

University Senate Keeps Tab On Problems of Campus Life

By PHOEBE JACKSON

"Why did you run for Senate?" is a question put by many a freshman to the members of the legislative branch of the student government. The answer is usually that of the various elective offices Senate offers the greatest opportunity for service to the student body and to the University. It is in the Senate that most of the rules aoverning the students are originated and improvements in university life are discussed. Here is the very heart of student government.

THE UNIVERSITY Student Senate mets once a week en tote to transact business pertaining to the student body as a whole. Student Body Vice-President Gene Lawler presides over these metings. This group divides into Men's Senate and Women's Senate to hold meetings for business concerning each of the respective sexes. The Men's and Women's Vice-Presidents, Wayne Terry and Lilian Avis, wield the aavel at these sessions. There are three men and three women Senators from each of the four classes.

MOST OF THE groundwork for bills and resolutions is accomplished in committee meetings, the results of which are reported to the Senate by the committee chairmen. These suggestions are then considered by the body and if passed, are usually sent to the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs for final approval.

The Rules Committee, headed by Senator Hollis, considers regulations pertaining to the actual mechanics of Senate's operations. An example of their work was the formation of the rules governing absences from Senate meetings.

Chairman of the important Constitution Committee is Senator Young. This group studies the Student Body Constitution and suggests amendments which, if passed by Senate, must be voted upon by the student body. This committee has begun work on a plan allowing the various dorms to set their own class requirements for dorm officers.

THE ELECTIONS and Appointments Committee handles questions pertaining to the election laws, studies presidential appointments, and occasionally handles the first stages in impeachment procedures. Senator Moore is chairman of this committee.

The Organizations Committee, with Senator Jackson as chairman, receives problems concerning the various campus service, social, and honorary organizations.

The Finance Committee, headed by Senator Shaw, studies any matters dealing with the Student Activity Fee distribution and the budaets allocating this money. One of the measures suggested by this committee and passed by Senate this fall was the granting of a salary of $75 a month to the President of the Student Body.

SENATOR COULTER is chairman of the Labor, Student Services, and Education Committee. One of the first duties this year was to arrange for a special cheering section for freshmen at home football games. They also negotiated for laundry pick-up service for the sorority houses and washing machines for the women's dorms.

The Recreation and Social Committe is chairmaned by Senator Halford. Due to this committee's work we now have co-educational visitation in the University Infirmary.

THE JUDICIAL Committee, whose chairman is Senator Graham, handles any matters dealing with the court system.

Appointments by President Carothers must be approved by the Senate before going into effect. Outstanding appointments passed through these channels this fall were Bruce Galphin, Editor of the Flambeau; Roy Chapman, Senior Senator; and Shirley Traxler, Campus Chest Chairman.

THE SENATE has its full force now, since the freshmen representatives were elected in the November elections. There are many measures still in committees which will be presented and voted upon in the near future.

It's Homecoming Again

So it's homecoming, with the colorful parades, the gorgeous gals, gala decorations, floats and noisy bands. Then there's grads of, course wearing the steps to the Alumni building thin.

Homecoming. Seems like we've forgotten something. Lessee, now. Oh yeah, almost forgot—football Now isn't that a silly thing to mention at a time like this? But its homecoming.

And despite the popular belief each homecoming still sees 22 well-muscled young men revert to the lower forms and do-or-die for ole Alma mammy in between smokers dancing and dining.

Seriously, however these homecomings seem to always carry you back a few years. Lets backtrack then and look at some other homecomings, although short on memory packed the thrills.

HOMECOMING 1948. FSU 33, Tampa 12. This was our first big homecoming and we made the most of it in a game that settled the Dixie Conference Championship. Neither team was able to break the ice in the first period, but Don Veller's Seminoles racked up a pair of TD's in the second and third stanzas and added a six-pointer for good measure in the final Ken Maclean, who coached the junior varsity squad here last season, and Buddy Strauss, a home-town product ate up the yardage while Norm Eubanks, Bo Manuel Ralph Chaudron Ernie Reddick and Ken crossed the double stripe. Hugh Adams who went on to receive Little All-America fame, freshman name of Bill Dawkins and Joe Marcus were the stalwarts up front.

Found Out The Hard Way

HOMECOMING 1949. FSU 40 Millsaps 0 This was a rough week to be playing the Seminoles as the Millsappers quickly found out, for FSU had suffered its only loss of the season the previous week to Livingston State 13-6 Livingston was ironically coached then by present Tribe aide Vaughn Mancha Strauss was again the big offensive gun with 82 yards net rushing. Chris Banokas, Dick Peterson Red Parrish and Dud Kendrick were the Seminole point-makers while Dawkins, Jerry Morrical, Glen Allen and Kendrick led the undented FSU defense that held the 'Sappers to a minus 34 yards via the ground.

HOMECOMING 1950. FSU 14 Sewanee 8 Rumors were flying thick about the time that a FSU-Florida match was in the offing and as a result the Seminoles went into this one with that in mind and were nearly rocked on their bottoms. After a scoreless first half, the visitors went ahead 2-0 in the third period on a safety And they nearly had to tie down Veller lest he shed his coat and join the fun. However, the Doleful One's fears were quickly quelled as Ted Hewitt skipped 54 yards with an intercepted pass for a touchdown and Nelson Italiano, who had 84 big yards rushing for the afternoon, put the game on ice by twisting 15 yards for the Tribes second TD. Veller then jerked his regulars and Sewanee proceeded to add another tally. Dawkins, now a junior, again rose to the occasion to lead a tight FSU defense.

HOMECOMING 1951. FSU 13, Stetson 10. It was Stetson this time and the record crowd of 13,701 hardy souls that filed into Doak S Campbell Stadium probably haven't forgotten it to this day The Hatters' Bill Johnson, who possessed a passing arm the likes of which most of the football faithfuls had never seen, booted a beautiful 14-yard field goal in the first period and by halftime those three big points were all that stood between the two squads

But the Seminoles were not to be denied this day, and they came back with Mike Sellers and Preston Bradley climaxing determined drives with pay-dirt pushes. However Ramblin' Roy Thompson's 98 yards in seven carries was the big difference. Dawkins, by now a senior, was playing his last one before the home folks and he was in true form at his linebacker post, displaying the talents that won him Little-All-American honors.

You Name It, Cuz

HOMECOMING 1952. FSU 0, Furman 9. Veller and company had yet to win and the high-geared South Carolina eleven offered no consolation. It marked FSU's first homecoming loss and it was their first whitewash of the season But Furman had to dig for this win A newspaper account put it this way: "Fumbles, intercepted passes and an overabundance of penalties just proved too much to overcome" And they did.

A below expectation-crowd of 8 000 saw Stan Dobosz grind out 109 yards along the ground but to no avail Actually the Seminoles, or rather Dobosz, crossed the goal in the first period only to have the play nullified by a penalty.

However Veller's young charges kept knocking, but not quite enough. A pass interception by Buddy Bryant had carried them to the Furman eight. Another drive ended on the nine. But the scoring punch wasn't there—an item which hurt them all season.

HOMECOMING 1953. FSU ?, Stetson ? You name it. Shucks, Cuz That's easy The boys downtown say this one's gonna be another Louisville. Is it? Maybe so. But brother, when these two meet, better to throw all past records along with all if, ands and buts into the nearest heap.

Someone remarked the other day to the effect that Stetson doesn't consider a season successful unless they whipped FSU. That being the case, then the Hatters haven't had a successful season since 1947 when they banged out a 14-6 win.

At any rate tomorrow afternoon's tussle will be quite a contrast to the 1951 battle when both teams were basking in the sun of a successful season. This time neither are from the standpoint of the won-lost column. Both, of course, have met top-flight teams —Stetson, Auburn and Florida, FSU, Miami, Furman and Mississippi Southern. And both have been through the till.

But as Nugent has put it several times this season, "Our boys seem to be up one week. Down the next." And they were apparently down last week, so maybe this is their week to be "up." We hope so.

Hatters Own 3-4 Mark Backs In Top Shape

By DUNCAN PARDUE
Special to the Flambeau

DELAND — The Hatters have been hard to "dope" this season. While upsetting two highly rated teams they have lost to two teams of their own caliber.

Stetson has beaten Western Kentucky, Tampa and Morehead State Two SEC teams—Auburn and the University of Florida—downed the Hatters. Wofford College and East Carolina State found the Hatters down and walked away with victories.

Western Kentucky, 1952 Refrigerator Bowl champion, was the first to go down before the Hatters. Stetson won, 18-7 and Hatter fullback Harold Knowles was selected "Florida Back of the Week" for his feat of 127 yards in 12 rushing tries

Stetson's next victory was again Tampa — the first since 1949. Hank Boyer, older brother of FSU's George Boyer won "Florida Lineman of the Week" honors in this 14-7 tussle

They did everything right to breeze to a 41-0 rout of Morehead State for its third victory.

OPENED WITH AUBURN

Auburn was the opening foe for the Hatters winning by a score of 47-0. Florida won, 45-0, Wofford 26-0 and East Carolina, 40-6.

If the Hatters' previous routine follows its pattern, they should be "up" for the FSU clash.

For the first time since preseason days Coach Joy Pattee has four quarterbacks who are able for duty.

John Imgrund, who was billed the number one passer before the season started, had been laid up until last week with an injured knee received in the Auburn opener. Stan Marks, a senior from Miami, and Fred Driver, a sophomore from Niagara Falls, N. Y did most of the quarterbacking until the Hatters met Morehead two weeks ago.

In this game, Coach Pattee found a surprise package in Freshman Fred Semanie who uncorked 10 passes for seven completions—the best single game mark of the year.

ONE CHANGE

The remaining Hatter backfield has changed its starters only once this season Knowles, the leading ground gainer with 343 yards rushing in 54 tries, will be called on to lead the ground attack.

Left halfback Gene Stephen will also be in line to start along with right half Nick Colantuono Art Park, a sophomore from Atlanta, Ga, has started one game and remains first in line for substitution in the backfield.

Two setbacks were suffered in the Hatter line against East Carolina Saturday. Second team tackle Ted Revak, a 192-pound freshman, and starting guard, Charles Appel, a leading offense and defense man, are sidelined for the FSU game. Revak suffered a badly twisted ankle and Appel re-injured a leg

"We realize FSU has an excellent coach, a corps of hustling players and a winning spirit this season," Pattee reasoned. "They will be hard to hold, especially in their homecoming."

GEORGE VS. HANK

Boyer Brothers Face Each Other

Brothers may have been pitted against each other in the war between the states but seldom do two brothers meet in college football playing the same two positions.

This will be the case when Stetson and FSU meet tomorrow afternoon. Stetson's center-tackle Hank Boyer will be playing across the line from his younger brother George Boyer, FSU center-tackle.

Hank, a two-year letterman, played offensive tackle last fall and began the present campaign as a tackle. Three early games left the Hatter center position in depleted condition due to injuries.

Hank, who had played center only for one year in high school, was called upon to take over snapping the ball with only three days to make the transition.

Hank definitely did a splendid job in making the switch. In fact, he did so well against the Tampa Spartans—a game which he co-captained—that he was proclaimed "Florida Lineman of the Week," by state sportswriters.

Since that time the Hatters have played three games and Hank has started each of them at center. He will also start the FSU game.

Hank is a senior. George is a sophomore. Hank stands six feet even and weighs 185 pounds. Brother George, although younger is a 6-2, 220-pounder.

Both played high school football at Fletcher High at Neptune Beach.

Taylor Gives Seminoles Nod Over Stetson

By BOB TAYLOR

As FSU goes, so goes our average Two weeks ago we picked the outcome of the FSU game right, and had a 78 per cent average Last week we guessed wrong on the Seminoles, and dropped to low 59 per cent total. That gives us an overall eight week average of .686.

Hoping to get on the straight and narrow again, we predict the Indians to get off their back in time to take Stetson, even though the Hatters have pointed to this one all year. If it's half as good as the 13-10 win we scored over them in '51, it should draw a capacity crowd.

Otherwise locally, Leon is idle, but A&M will have their hands full. Southern U plays here tomorrow in what is billed the Negro colleges' game of the year. Both are undefeated and untied, and we give the nod to the Rattlers, though they may enter the game as underdogs.

SOUTH

Rounding the nation in a hurry, it's: Maryland over Alabama in the week's top game . . . Auburn over Clemson, but no crip . . . Georgia Tech over Duke, the Jacket's nest is stirred up now . . . Wake Forest over Furman.

Georgia over Mississippi Southern, in what could be another shocker . . . Citadel over Davidson . . . South Carolina over Wofford . . . William and Mary over Washington and Lee.

Kentucky over Tennessee, for the first time in years . . . George Washington over Richmond . . . North Carolina over Virginia . . . West Virginia over N. C. State . . . and Tampa over Appalachian State.

Princeton over Dartmouth . . . Yale over Harvard, in an ancient rivalry . . . Pitt over Penn State . . . Fordham over Holy Cross . . . Columbia over Rutgers . . . and Boston U over Temple.

MIDWEST

Notre Dame over Iowa, another four horsemen in Neil, Ralph, Joe, and Johnny . . . Michigan State over Marquette . . . Wisconsin over Minnesota, Ameche and Giel in a battle of all- Americans . . . Purdue over Indiana.

Illinois over Northwestern . . Ohio State over Michigan . . . Oklahoma over Nebraska . . . Kansas St. over Arizona . . . and Missouri over Kansas.

SOUTHWEST

SMU over Baylor, after last week, anything . . . Rice over TCU . . . Texas Tech over Houston, the giant-killers silenced . . . Detroit over Tulsa . . . and LSU in a comeback over Arkansas.

FARWEST

1903 FSU Eleven Beat Bainbridge In Season Opener

"Excited and a little scared." That was the air that prevailed the day way back in 1903 when Coach W. W. Hughes sent the then Florida State College football team against a squad from Bainbridge, Ga.

The Bainbridge outfit was made up of several University of Georgia veterans and outweighed FSU. It was quite a ball game here in Tallahassee that memorable day fifty years ago, with Florida State coming through with a 5-0 win over the Georgians.

There were two more tilts on the FSC schedule that year both with Florida Agricultural College (now University of Florida). The first was played in Tallahassee with FSU coming out on top 6-0 (take note Gators), but in the return match at Lake City the outcome was reversed. This time FAC won 6-0 So was Florida State's first gridiron season completed with a record of two wins against a single loss.

Tomorrow afternoon when Tom Nugent sends his young Seminoles against Stetson 1903 may seem like some distant era, but the atmosphere will probably remain the same.

Dobosz, Griner Lead Seminoles Against Hatters

Right halfback Stan Dobosz and Fullback John Griner, roommates in private life, have been named by Head Coach Tom Nugent to co-captain the Seminoles in tomorrow's homecoming game with Stetson.

Both Dobosz, the stocky little Polish power from East Chicago, Ind., and Griner, billed as "the world's lightest college fullback" (168 pounds), from Jacksonville, are sophomores.

Dobosz led the Tribe in rushing and total offense as a freshman in 1852, but a shoulder injury has hampered him this season. Griner has run surprisingly well from fullback, a position entirely new to him. Griner was a quarterback in '52, playing mostly on defense.

Seventh Meeting For Two Elevens

Fiveash, Graham, Dobosz, On Ailing List More Freshmen May See Action Tomorro

week, contact work has been held to a minimum so as not to aggrevate tha Indians growing injury list.

In fact, several Tribe regulars are "question-marks" for the contest. Bobby Fiveash, who missed the Mississippi Southern tilt because of a shoulder injury, reinjured the ailing limb against Furman and may not play at all. On top of this be was sent to the University infirmary with fever earlier in the week.

RIGHT HALF Stan Dobosz who sat out the Furman clash with another shoulder ailment should play, but will probably see only limited action. Billy Graham will be slowed by a broken thumb and Al Makowiecki by a sprained wrist

With the halfback ranks worn thin, Nugent has moved up "B" squadder Gerald Davies and Fred Dollar to the varsity. He also indicated that reserve back Carl Grenn who showed to advantage last week, will see more action.

Afraid that he may have overworked the team for Furman, Nugent has purposely decreased the tempo of drills this week Monday they reviewed the Furman movies and went through a long blackboard session before taking the field.

TUESDAY, Wednesday and Thursday the passing game—both offense and defense received a thorough going over along with the kicking and defensive aspects. This afternoon, of course, they will go through the usual pre-game tapering off.

Stetson, however, has had its share of the rough stuff, work for the most part on FSU's dif cult "I" and "T". One rep out of DeLand had the Hatte practicing last Sunday.

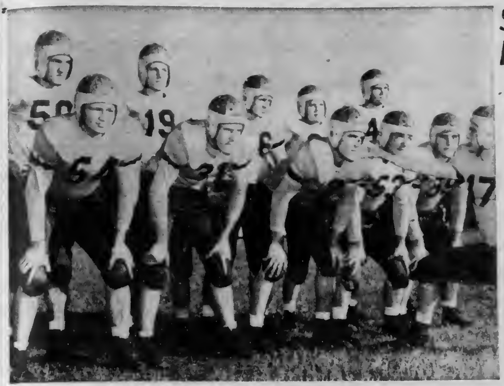
Attendance Mark Sure To Be Set Here Tomorrow

A new home attendance mark will go into the Florida State University football record book here tomorrow afternoon when the Seminoles entertain Stetson.

In four home games this season, 38 000 fans have filed into Doak S. Campbell Stadium, just 4,000 shy of last season's record of 42,000. Two home games—against Stetson this week and North Carolina State next Saturday—remain.

The record one-game home attendance mark was set two years ago when Stetson furnished the homecoming opposition. FSU won that game, 13-10, before 13,7 onlookers



1947 BROUGHT THE FIRST MODERN-DAY TEAM

Seminole Football History Is Short But Filled With Color, Excitement

Florida State University's grid history may be a brief one, but it's certainly a colorful one—and interesting when you consider the rapid growth the school and football team has made since 1947.

Or better yet, let's go back to 1901 when the then Florida State College fielded its first football team. No definite records are available for that year more than a half-century ago, but several alumni recall that they broke even in a two game series with "town teams" from Bainbridge, Ga. and Tallahassee.

Then there's a lapse from 1902-04 since no records were kept, but the following year—1904—State racked up four wins against a single loss to Georgia Tech, who fielded a pretty fair country team in those days. Included among the victims were Stetson, Florida Agricultural College, Jacksonville All-Stars and East Florida Seminary (Florida). "Pee Wee" Forsythe was the coach and the team was awarded a silver cup designating them as state champions.

In 1905, the women took over and ruled supreme until 1947 when the school became coeducational. There was, of course, no football team during those years. But with the war boom, men students and an enrollment of over 5,000, it was only inevitable that football would make its bid.

So with a group of rusty war vets and a bunch of kids fresh out of high school, Ed Williamson (present intramural director) and Jack Haskins (circus director) were called upon to make a football team. And considering what they had, they did well. They didn't win a game in five outings, but they battled much-heralded Stetson off their feet before losing 14-6 in their opening game. At any rate they started the ball rolling and that was the important thing.

The following year the school began to take itself serious athletically and a Indiana gentlemen named Don Veller was imported from Hanover (Ind.) college to take the grid reins. And take them he did. That first year under Veller's guidance, the Seminoles clicked off seven wins in eight tries including the Dixie Conference championship, which was a loop made up of the South's smaller colleges. They were on their way.

Tackle Hugh Adams, one of the greatest defensive performers ever to wear the Garnet and Gold was the first Seminole to gain nation-wide recognition by being awarded a berth on the Little All-American eleven.

1949 was even better. Save for a 14-6 loss to Livingston (Ala.) State, they would have gone unbeaten. Veller's charges ripped through a nine-game card, winning eight and went on to record a stunning 19-6 triumph over Wofford in the Cigar Bowl, breaking a 23-game victory string for the Terriers. Adams was the captain.

The 1950 season, of course, was the greatest. Undefeated and untied in eight games—the first white college in the history of Florida playing a full intercollegiate schedule to turn the trick. Loren (Duke) Maltby, a fine tackle was the captain.

1951 saw the schedule get a bit tougher but six wins still came through the till against only two losses—35-0 to Miami and 14-6 to Tampa. Captain and guard Bill Dawkins, who could have played on anybody's ball club was named Little-All-American. Veller's four-year coaching record was now 30-4, one of the best in the land.

Then came last season and the first lean year since '47. Won one, lost eight and tied one.

It was disappointing, of course, for Dr. Don. But he simply didn't have the guns to go with that rough schedule (Ga. Tech, N. C. State, Miami). The lone win was over Wofford (27-13) and the tie was with Stetson (6-6). So last February the good doctor stepped down of his own accord, and Tom Nugent was brought in from VMI. It's been interesting, colorful and its getting more so each year.

HERE'S THE FSU COACHING STAFF

MEET THE COACHES

TOM NUGENT

Tom Nugent, originator of the 'I' formation, the typewriter huddle, the double quarterback, and recognized as one of the nation's brilliant young grid mentors, picks up the reins this fall for his first campaign as headmaster of Florida State University football fortunes.

Nugent came to State from a highly successful four-year tenure as boss man of VMI's colorful Keydets of the Southern Conference. In four seasons at the Lexington, Va. school, Nugent injected new life into the VMI eleven. His record there was a respectable 19-16-2.

Nugent's coaching record dates back to his college days. After starring on the Ithaca College eleven three seasons and graduating in 1936, Nugent coached Ithaca frosh while doing graduate work.

A native of Lawrence, Mass., Tom returned to his home town the next season where he became head coach of football, basketball and baseball at Essex Training School. Three seasons there produced two undefeated grid teams.

The Air Force summoned Nugent in 1941, interrupting his coaching career temporarily. But Tom and football soon joined forces again. He was named head football coach of the Rosencrans, Mo., Air Base Flyers.

Other duties included writing, directing, and presenting shows for the entertainment of troops.

After his discharge in 1946, Nugent was appointed head coach at Williamsburg, Va. High. His '46 team was undefeated in league play and also copped the state basketball, baseball and track crowns, bringing about the reclassification of the school to Group II.

Tom moved to Hopewell, Va., of Group 1 caliber in 1947. His '47 eleven posted a 7-2 mark. His 1948 team won eight and lost two, the losses both by a single point. So, three years of high school coaching produced a record of 24 wins, four losses for Nugent.

BIG CHANCE

Then came Nugent's big chance—head coach at Virginia Military Institute of the Southern Conference, a school steeped in football tradition but one which had been in the circuit's doldrums.

Armed with the same "optimistic" outlook and that "Nugent Golden Touch," Tom stepped into the VMI job. His first season there, 1949, was a 3-5-1 effort but the VMI folks were pleased. His team was a hustling hard-running eleven.

The season of 1950 was a good one. The Keydets won six of 10 games including two resounding upset wins over Georgia Tech and William and Mary.

The 1951 season was Nugent's best at VMI. The Keydets won seven, lost three, to share the Southern Conference title with Maryland. The 1952 VMI team won three, lost six, tied one.

In his coaching career, Nugent has developed three major football techniques. His first was at Matthew Whaley High in Williamsburg, where he found two quarterbacks on his squad, one a left-hander, the other a right, so he put both behind the center, and baffled the opposition. Notre Dame picked it up a year later. The typewriter huddle was employed first by Nugent at Hopewell High in 1947. Latest and most startling of the Nugent innovations, however, is the 'I' formation.

WINSTON SIEGFRIED

Winston Siegfried comes to FSU this fall after eight highly successful seasons of coaching at the prep school level in Virginia and South Carolina.

A player under Wallace Wade on the 1938, '39, '40 and '41 Duke University teams, Siegfried was an all-Southern conference and second team all-America fullback selection in 1941. He played in the Rose Bowl game that year against Oregon State.

Siegfried served in the Navy three-and-one-half years, getting in two seasons of play with the Bainbridge (Md.) team. He played pro ball with the Washington Redskins in 1945, then coached two seasons at Fork Union (Va.) Military Academy. His next step was a two-year stand at Varina High in Richmond where his teams had a 13-5-1 mark.

Siegfried continued his climb up the prep coaching ladder and in 1948 served as backfield coach at Hampton, Va., where the team won the state title.

The 1949 and 1950 campaigns found him at Sanford (N. C.) High as head coach where his teams posted identical 9-3 marks and gained two regional titles.

He moved to Benderson (N. C.) in 1951 and there his team won nine, lost none, and tied for the Eastern championship. His 1952 team was runnerup for the North Carolina AA championship, losing in the state playoff, after copping the regional and Eastern crowns.

VAUGHN MANCHA

Vaughn Mancha, former all-America center at the University of Alabama, begins his second season in Seminole livery as an assistant coach, working with the forward wall. Symbolic of the Tide's greatest era, Mancha lettered on the 'Bama teams of 1944, '45, '46, and '47.

He was an all-Southeastern and all-American selection as he helped pace the Red Elephants to an undefeated season and to a 34-14 win over Southern Cal in the 1946 Tournament of Roses. Big Vaughn played in two Sugar Bowl games (New Year's of '45 against Duke and New Year's of '48 against Texas).

After receiving his bachelor's degree at the Capstone in 1946, Mancha played a year of pro ball with the Boston Yanks. He then re-entered 'Bama and received his masters degree in 1949. He came to FSU last season after a highly successful three-year tenure as head coach at Livingston (Ala.) Teachers College. His teams there posted a respectable 21-7 mark.

BOB HARBISON

Bob Harbison, an outstanding guard for the late "Bo" McMillan at Indiana University in 1945, '46, and '47, is in his sixth season as an assistant coach at FSU. Harby is one of the Tribe's line coaches.

Harbison came to FSU in 1948 under the then head coach Don Veller. He has worked with guards and tackles, primarily, here, and is credited with developing Bill Dawkins, little All-America guard in 1951 and Hugh Adams, little All-America tackle in 1949.

A native of Evansville (Ind.) Harbison was elected to the North squad for the annual Blue-Gray game in Montgomery in 1947.

Harbison received his masters degree in physical education at FSU in August of this year.

A rock 'em sock 'em player in his days at Indiana, Harby likes the same brand of play from his charges.

MIKE LONG

Mike Long joins the FSU football and basketball coaching staffs this fall after 10 seasons in the Florida high school ranks.

Long assisted with football until Nov. 1, then went to work with the basketball team.

A graduate of the University of Minnesota in 1937, Long was a standout track performer there. He copped the regional Olympic tryout title in the pole vault in 1936.

For the last seven years Long was head cage coach and assistant football coach at Ft. Myers High. Previously, he had coached three years at Sarasota High.

VINCE RAGUNAS

Vince Ragunas commences his first season with the Seminoles, coming to State from VMI where he served as backfield coach three seasons under his present chief, Tom Nugent.

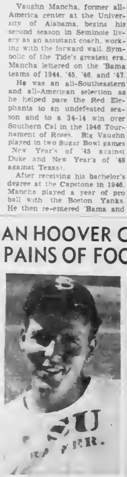
Ragunas is a graduate of VMI where he played fullback and blocking back on the Keydet varsity teams of 1946, '47, and '48. He had played on the frosh team in '42 before going into the service and three years with an Army tank corps in Europe.

After graduation, Ragunas played a year of pro ball with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

After a year with the pros, Vince heeded the call to join Nugent back at old VMI. He served with Nugent at VMI during the 1950, '51 and '52 seasons.

At FSU Ragunas works with the backs.

MEDICINE MAN HOOVER CATERS TO ACHES AND PAINS OF FOOTBALLERS



FRED HOOVER

Just like the old lady that lived in the shoe, there's someone at FSU who hardly knows what to do.

That would be 23-year-old Fred (Doc) Hoover, the Seminole garbed in white who takes care of more "children" than the old lady of nursery rhyme fame ever dreamed of.

Officially, Hoover is Florida State's head athletic trainer. Unofficially, he's a trainer, medicine man, nurse, dietician and bugler, all rolled into one.

Generally regarded as the youngest college trainer in the nation, Doc does a king-size job in looking after the Tribe. He's the one who gets them ready, physically, for the ball games. He's also the Senior Hall alarm clock, waking the boys up in the morning (6:45 a.m.) and putting them to bed at night (10:30 p.m.)

In his "spare" time, Fred checks them in at training table when meal-time rolls around. And that's three times every day.

NATIVE SON

One of FSU's own sons, Doc started on his training career here as a student assistant. That was four years ago, in 1949. The Jacksonville native put in hours and more hours studying athletic injuries, how to prevent them, and applying the book knowledge to actual torn ligaments, pulled muscles, sprains, bruises, etc., in the training room.

He's come a long way since he wrapped his first ankle. Besides advancing from an assistantship to the top rung of the training [illegible]der, Hoover has set up the [illegible] training-room operation in Seminole history. With the training rooms (two of them) in Doak S. Campbell Stadium for the first time this season, Hoover has seen that the FSU training room has become one of the best equipped anywhere.

If you walked in the door, you would probably get lost in a world of vaporstors, whirlpools, paraffin baths, Ultraviolet and Infra Red heat lamps, tape, wraps, bandages, etc. The place looks almost like a drug store.

Although the big reason Hoover is around is to care for Seminole injuries, he says the main attention is focused on prevention, or keeping the injuries from occurring. That is accomplished, in part, by requiring all players to have the ankles carefully wrapped before taking the field, whether it be for a practice session or a regular game.

LIST DOWN

The Seminole injury list has been at a minimum this season, partly because of Hoover's watchful care and partly because of "the excellent co-operation with the University Hospital," as Fred puts it.

Another reason is that FSU's freshman head football coach, Tom Nugent, places almost as much value on training as he does on ball-handling.

Most of the fans don't realize it, but long before they file into the stadium for a game, Hoover is working over the players, taping and wrapping and seeing that all injuries are protected. Something like 60 ankles must be wrapped before the Seminoles take the field.

If you think that's not a big operation, look at the quantity of tape and bandages used during the course of a season. With some quick addition, Hoover estimated that at least two-and-a-half miles of tape and one-and-a-half miles of ankle wraps are used each season. And that doesn't count much of the "minor" bandaging.

Hoover gives much of the credit for a successful training-room operation to his three student assistants, who are getting their start just like Hoover did. Helping Fred are Steve Walker, Bobby Waites and Jim Atwood, who is a pretty good athlete, too, when baseball time comes each spring.

Dr. Danford Heads Up Physical Education

By DAVE KENNEDY

The Department of Physical Education for men at F. S. U. came into being in 1947 under the guidance and leadership of Dr. H. G. Danford.

DANFORD

It was established as an important part of the school of Education. In the short span of a few years, programs were set up for the study leading to the Bachelor of Science degree, followed by the Master of Science and a few years later by the Doctor of Philosophy and Doctor of Education degrees with a minor in Physical Education.

The Physical Education major student requires a broad background in all areas of the field. An understanding of the human body and its functioning is gained through courses in Physiology and Kinesiology.

Under the auspices of its nationally recognized athletic director, Dr. Howard G. Danford, the FSU Department of Athletics has been expanded greatly.

Under Danford's guidance the FSU Department of Athletics has been expanded greatly, both from a standpoint of curriculum and personnel.

NINE SPORTS

A well-rounded program has been developed at FSU. The university competes in nine intercollegiate sports (football, basketball, swimming, tennis, gymnastics, volleyball, golf, track, baseball). In addition the university athletic department sponsors the nationally famous student circus, "Flying High," and the equally renowned production, "Gymkana."

From a pick-up schedule of five games in 1947 with minor teams to a full 10-game slate in 1953 including VMI, Furman, Miami (Fla.), North Carolina State and others sums up the growth of FSU football under Dr. Danford.

A varied group of nine sports makes up the varsity program at FSU. Majors in Physical Ed. are encouraged to participate in or more of these activities as an invaluable addition to their professional training.

Not to be slighted by the major competition, the intramural sports program provides a rich laboratory in which the Physical Ed major gains practical experience in playing, coaching and officiating.

LARGE STAFF

The growth of this program is made possible through the constant striving of Dr. Danford and his staff which number 16.

Danford came to FSU in 1947 from Madison, Wis., where he had served as director of health, physical education, recreation and safety for the Madison public school system.

He received his bachelor's degree from Ohio University and later was awarded his masters and doctorate degree at NYU in 1943.

Author of numerous magazine articles, Danford has held positions of prominence in national organizations. He is current president of the College Recreation Association and regional representative of Region VI of the United States Volleyball Association. He is past president of the Florida Recreation Association and is chairman of the public relations committee of the Florida Health, Physical Education and Recreation Association.

Frat Battle Is Still In Doubt

Grid Playoffs To Begin Next Week

By ART KENNERLY

Harassed by the homecoming hubbub, campus intramural touch football teams tensed themselves this past week for the grinding task of getting within grappling distance of the winner's slot.

With the scratching of Magnolia Hall and the Rebels due to illegalities, the Pentnouse Gang and Senior Hall slugged it out in the finals of the dormitory league Tuesday. The gang from the "penthouse," sporting a rugged team as well as a cagey name, played diabolical ball to down the scrappy Senior Hall team on first downs. The score was 6-6, but the Penthouse Gang had three more first downs than the Senior Hallers.

SPE and ATO will meet next week for the fraternity championship. SPE topped the Phi Delts 12-6 and ATO beat the KA'S 8-8 in games yesterday.

JUST WAITED

The Penthouse Gang sat back and waited to see who would survive the fraternity league and be eligible to play them for the campus championship.

Last Wednesday the fraternities went into the first round of the semi-finals. After successfully braining Theta Chi 6-0 and Lambda Chi Alpha 12-0, Phi Delta Theta beat Kappa Alpha 7-0. The KA crew executed some fancy field maneuvering, but slingshot-armed Art Hemple of Phi Delt called the tune and spelled the difference.

Sigma Phi Epsilon whipped Alpha Tau Omega on Wednesday. Press-agented ATO did not live up to its newsey horn blowing. And they were white-washed with a varied assortment of brushes by the SPE's 8-0.

Since both of the losers, KA and ATO, were leaders in their leagues, the Phi Delt and SPE wins can be considered as upsets.

ED WILLIAMSON

Directs Intramural Program

Intramurals Had Beginning In '47

A long time ago, back in the bleak ages, Florida State University professors used to lecture before classes of skirts, sandles, and lipstick. Nowadays the FSU professors have all of that plus students in dungarees, dirty white bucks, and crew cuts.

A little more than a half-dozen years ago, the state decided it was high time that FSCW gave the University of Florida a little competition. And so the boys came. With them came other things. One thing: rough and tumble intramural play.

Intramurals at FSU for the men students is divided into two leagues, the fraternity league and the dormitory league. The fraternity house has, in the past, usually been the hottest of the two divisions. In the last two years the dormitory league has come out of the shadows into the spotlight. This year's dormitory action, sometimes up and sometimes down, has been the best yet. Ed Williamson is intramural director, Bob Koontz, his assistant.

The year 1947-48 was the first time intramurals at Florida State got to operating in an organized way. The males lived on out-of-the-way West Campus, and they played their games there too. The fraternities had teams and the barracks dormitories had their squads. That first year of intramurals saw barracks 701 lower floor win the dormitory title as the bunch with the best overall teams. Phi Delta Theta was the overall champ of the fraternities.

BIG YEAR

The next year, 1948-49, things really began to function in the intramural program. Alpha Tau Omega won in badminton, bowling, and football to take the fraternity crown. Phi Delta Theta won in golf, tennis, track, and volleyball. Kappa Alpha took the chips in softball and swimming. Theta Chi was king in basketball, Sigma Alpha Epsilon was on top in horseshoes and ping-pong. Pi Kappa Alpha took the handball throne.

The dormitories had barracks 526 as the bunch with the best overall sports ability. 528 won basketball and golf. Barracks 514 had the best bowlers. Barracks 849 claimed the softball championship and 701 took the wet swimming throneship. Ping-Pong was won by 537, football by 394, and 663's upper floor took tennis.

When 1849-50 came and went, the Phi Delta boys had captured the championships of badminton, golf, and tennis singles to top the fraternity league. Theta Chi got squeezed out even though they walked off with softball, swimming, track, and volleyball.

Football and gymnastics were won by Kappa Alpha. Sigma Alpha Epsilon took the ping-pong title and Alpha Tau Omega took the bowling title. Pi Kappa Alpha dribbled to the basketball crown. And Kappa Sigma took the tennis doubles.

The dormitories let barracks 394 lower take the overall championship. Barracks 849 upper floor won bowling and swimming, and a group called the Married Men captured basketball and football. Barracks 505 won volleyball. Barracks 537 took softball.

KA'S ON TOP

Year 1950-51 produced, Kappa Alpha as the king in the fraternity league. Kappa Alpha won in golf and volleyball. Alpha Tau Omega was on top in bowling and softball. Phi Delta Theta rode in the saddle through track and tennis doubles. Theta Chi won badminton, Pi Kappa Phi took basketball, Pi Kappa Alpha won in swimming, and Sigma Phi Epsilon captured tennis singles.

The dormitory league had the lower floor of barracks 849 as champ. Number 849 was tops in badminton, bowling, golf, softball, swimming, tennis doubles, and volleyball. Other winners were Campus Side in basketball, the Oilers in tennis singles, and barracks 390 lower floor in track.

The following year, 1851-52, saw Alpha Tau Omega grab the crown for overall winner when they won basketball and tennis doubles. Sigma Nu ran off with bowling, softball, and track. Theta Chi snatched the winnership of badminton and swimming. Phi Delta Theta took the tennis singles. Pi Kappa Phi captured the football and volleyball titles. Kappa Alpha was the golf winner.

The U. S. Air Force team was king in the dormitory league. The airmen won in basketball, tennis singles and doubles, and volleyball. Barracks 384 was the champion in softball and track. The top floor of barracks 848 won badminton, and golf. Newman Club was tops in swimming. Senior Hall outbowled all comers.

Only Three Seniors Dot Seminole Football Roster

By PAT HOGAN

The "Three Musketeers" of Florida State football—Steve Kalenich, Buddy Bryant and Jimmy Messinese—start walking their last football mile tomorrow when the Seminoles ignite a giant homecoming smoke-up against Stetson.

Messrs. Kalenich, Bryant and Messinese, you see, are the only Seminoles Irishman Tom Nugent will wave toodle-de-doo to when the curtain falls on 1953 FSU football in Tampa, December 5.

Although there are two games left on the agenda after Stetson, tomorrow's homecoming hassle will probably be the one the three seniors will remember best (Homecoming games, with all their color, excitement and crowds, are the easier to recall, grey-haired athletes of the past tell us.)

For Kalenich, affectionately known by his teammates as "Pops," tomorrow's affair will be the last of four FSU Homecoming clashes. And there's quite a story crammed in the four years Kalenich has stunted in Seminole livery.

Steve first traveled the 1,000 miles from his Akron, O., home to FSU in 1950. He was a wide-eyed 167-pound "kid" then, fresh out of high school.

FROSH STAR

Well, all he did as a freshman here was make Dr. Don Veller's starting eleven—at center, which is his post this year—and become a ring-leader of Florida's first undefeated, untied college football team.

He saw plenty of action in his first homecoming game, when FSU trimmed a stubborn Sewanee team, 14-6. Steve was still hiking the ball between his legs in 1951, when the Tribe came from behind in its Homecoming contest to subdue Stetson, 13-10, before the largest crowd ever to see a football game in Tallahassee—13,701.

Earning his third straight letter last year, Steve did it by playing end, guard and other assorted positions. In '52, he had the disappointment of playing in his first Homecoming loss, a 8-0 licking inflicted by Furman.

A social welfare worker who'll be carrying the ball, so to speak, for the United States Air Force a year hence, Steve today is a mature young man of 24. The 5-11, 190-pounder may coach after his service tenure is completed.

Kalanich may be known as "Pops," but the true Seminole grand-daddy is Bryant, the slender Seminole who hangs his hat 52 miles down the road at Perry.

It could be said that Bryant knows more about FSU's modern football history than anyone, maybe with the exception of Doak S. Campbell, the Seminoles' most ardent booster. That's because 25-year-old Bryant was a member of FSU's first football squad, way back there in 1947. End Buddy was a center then (see picture on Page 15), playing 60 minutes "in the younger days." Buddy dropped out of school after that frosh season, however, and didn't rejoin the Seminoles until 1951.

Buddy gets a feeling of nostalgia when he thinks of his football-playing days ending. But he figures to stay close to the game. As a physical education major, Buddy may step into some coaching shoes soon.

The third member of the Seminoles' senior triumvirate, probably the most unheralded player in State's history, is Messinese.

Genial Jimmy landed at FSU two years ago after a hitch in a Mississippi junior college. Since his arrival here, he has been one of the hardest-working Seminoles on the field. Handicapped by his comparatively small stature (5-10, 170), Messinese more than makes up for his size with desire and hustle.

Jimmy is studying history and science, but he plans to go back to his prep surroundings at Jacksonville Beach and coach after he graduates.

Kalenich, Bryant and Messinese have shed buckets of blood, sweat and tears on FSU gridirons. But you can bet your moccasins these Seminoles won't be overjoyed when they lug their sheepskins out FSU's front gate.

Seminoles Were Winning As Far Back as 1902 and 1904

As far back as 1902 and 1904 Florida State University presented the Sunshine State with winning football teams. FSU was then known as Florida State College.

The 1902 squad went on a victory skein and won two games while losing only one. During these days, 12 or 13 men did all of the playing. It was in this iron-man era that a player was allowed to almost go the limit in eliminating an enemy for the cause.

The mentor of this proud team was Coach W. W. Hughes, graduate of Vanderbilt University. Asa Clark guided the eleven in its three tilts as captain. Heading the line were Wyche Dickey, Guyte McCord, Weldon Mullin, C. W. Peters, Dan Williams, and Lawrence Murray.

The 1904 grid team was presented with a silver cup as "Florida State Intercollegiate Champions." Coaching the pride and joy of North Florida was "Pee-Wee" Forsythe, a former star at Clemson College. Members of this championship eleven were Weldon Mullin, C. W. Peters, Dan Williams (captain), F. W. Buchholz, Lawrence Murray, J. K. Johnson, Ed Watson, David Cook, Fred McMullin, Moses Liddell, Vincent Green, Charles Puleston, Church Whitner, Guyte McCord, H. H. Wells, and Frank Gammon, manager.

Carmine Regna Is One Of First FSU Gymnasts

By BOB GUTTING

This week's article pays tribute to one of FSU's outstanding gymnasts of the last three years, one of the original members of Dr. Hartley Prices record shattering Seminoles. He is Carmine Regna from Jersey City who will still compete for FSU this year in AAU meets even though he is ineligible for competition in the National Collegiates.

Carmine arrived at FSU in 1950 and first entered competition under the Garnet and Gold during the team's eastern tour of that year. On this tour Carmine took a first place on parallel bars against mighty Maryland.

After this tour came a trip to Los Angeles and the Nationals where he came out among the top ten in the all-around. Then the team came back to FSU and the Florida AAU's where Carmine took first place in the rope climbing events.

Eastern Tour

Following this was another tour east where Carmine did a spectacular job on his specialty by again beating out Maryland for a first place on parallel bars and went on to another first place win over West Point. Annapolis proved to be a tougher opponent by edging him out of first place. But Carmine came out of that meet with a close second on parallels and a third on high bar.

Next came three meets and six wins in quick succession, including the '51 National Collegiates at Ann Arbor, Mich., the National AAU at Detroit, Mich., and climaxing with the Southern Intercollegiates at Hattiesburg where Carmine walked off with three firsts—high bar, rings, and all around.

Carmine was really hitting his stride now and started off the new year by taking first on high bars at the Southern Intercollegiates and a first parallel bars, second high bar, and third all around at the Georgia AAU.

Don Rapp

Rapp To Bring Chuckles With Polished Juggling

By DOT THOMASSON

Don Rapp will be one of the bright lights of this year's Gymkana production, Seein' Is Believin'. His amazing and comical juggling will prove hilarious entertainment for the crowds from Nov. 30 through Dec. 5. He will appear with Ann Tucker and Jim Fadigan in a combination act of juggling and unicycle.

As a result of Don's coming to FSU the Tumbling Tots are learning to juggle. Each afternoon they may be seen practicing under his direction on Landis green. He has attempted to break juggling down to a point where "anyone" can be taught. From the looks of things the Tots not only now like juggling, but they also like their fascinating juggler.

JUGGLING first came into Don's life thirteen years ago when he went to Carthage College in Carthage, Illinois. Football, track, cross country and basketball took much of his juggling time. After graduating from college with a B.S. in Physical Education he again was able to use his juggling skill in the army. He was often asked to entertain the service men. Contact with professional entertainers during that time greatly added to his interest in performing.

After leaving the army in November 1952 he returned home and worked until coming to FSU to do post-graduate work in elementary physical education. While working he was able to do amateur show work. He got one of his biggest thrills when he performed for ten thousand people in a show last July 4 at Pekin, Illinois. His reaction was "I felt like an ant in an armory."

ONCE when he was performing for some kids, he found that perfection is not all that counts. He could not make them laugh until he made a mistake. The rest of the act was made up of nothing but mistakes.

Don's definition of juggling is "absolutely nothing . . . . done well." He attains this through methods other than the actual juggling. Watch his eyes? Combined with his "clowny' smile, they make his act stupendous.

Filipina's Garments Get Our 'Convertible' Look

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON
Feature Editor

What is the latest formal fashion in the Philippines? Fifty years of American influence has brought the convertible idea into the modern Filipin wardrobe.

Mrs. Sally Acosta, the only Philippine student in the international set on the FSU campus, models the old and new. Beginning with the Spanish era, and coming down to the 20th century Sally displays four outfits which reflect the changes in style.

The Maria Clare, named after the sweetheart of Dr. Jose Rizal, the Philippines' greatest national hero, was worn during his time. The full skirt is striped with wide black velvet, and the hand-woven blouse, called pina, or pineapple cloth, shows the typical long, dangling sleeve of that era. A black velvet ribbon with a medallion attached, was worn for decoration.

Next, is the patadiong and kimono, worn then and now for working. It is most widely used in the Visayan Islands, a central group in the Philippines. Housework, laundering, or cooking, calls for this attire, the blouse of which is removed for bathing and the skirt wrapped around the chest in sarong style. The step-in shoes are made of abaca or wood.

Getting back to the formal dress, Sally models the terno or mestiza dress made of rich delicate brocade material. A must for this attire, was the stiff panuelo, a one-square yard piece of material folded triangularly and worn around the shoulders. Made of the same material as the panuelo, the sleeves are still long, but stiffened and pressed upward.

Delicate embroidery in the panuelo and sleeve carry out the design of the material in the dress. In the early 30's, the skirt had a long train; but with the influence of American styles, it disappeared and the lines of the formals were patterned after Vogue, Bazaar, or Adriao.

The Filipin latest mode is the balintawak, the dress used for afternoon teas, special picnics, or formal occasions. The 1953 panuelo is made of a soft material and worn many ways, the the American shawl, stole, or kerchief is worn. For strict formality, however, it is folded rectangularly, and worn draped across the shoulders.

The sleeves are detachable, and the dress is easily converted to a modern strapless formal such as the red and gold plaid modeled by Sally in the fourth picture.

Although Sally has noted for us the influence of American style in the Philippines, and is familiar with our way of dress, she says she still can't get used to the color and attractiveness of the Americans and their clothes.

"I haven't seen an ugly American yet," states Sally. "To me," she says with a wide grin, "seeing a blonde girl in a lavender sweater eating a strawberry ice cream cone, is beauty and a picture to remember."

It looks as though another circle has started in the fashion world. The American woman sighs for a French original, and the Filipina copies the American style. Who knows, perhaps the French will head for the islands next year for a revolutionary idea?

Dr. Robert Miller Interviewed On Importance of Philosophy

By DICK VICTORY

Dr. Robert D. Miller, Dean of the School of Philosophy, when interviewed on the importance of Philosophy today, stated that although his department knows that vocational opportunities are limited, he feels that "courses in Philosophy have a great deal of practical value," because they deal with "the larger things in life."

DR. MILLER said that the department also offers a major in religion. Florida State University is one of the schools recommended by the American Association of Theological Schools on pre-seminary studies. Dr. Samuel R. Neale, Chaplin, is the Professor of Religion.

Courses in philosophy, Dr. Miller continued, are taken mainly as electives by students and relatively few seek degrees. He urges students to familiarize themselves with its principles by taking one of the general courses offered.

DR. MILLER will soon travel to Princeton, where he will be chairman of the committee to study the Humanities Graduate Record examination, which is the standard deferment test in general humanities.

Other prominent members of the staff are Dr. Anna Forbes Laddell and Dr. Edgar H. Henderson. Out of only eight experts to be chosen from the United States to write on "the meaning of freedom," they were both selected.

University Heads Interviewed; Reveal Duties, Plans for Future

Doak S. Campbell

J. Broward Culpepper

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

The people who constitute the administration of a university are responsible for the physical, intellectual and moral development of the students. In their hands also rests the task of building the university — building for the future.

What are the important figures in FSU's administration like? What are their duties and their responsibilities? What are their plans for the university's future? How do they aid and assist the social, intellectual, physical, emotional and moral growth of the students?

TO FIND OUT, this reporter interviewed four top figures in the administration. Dr Doak S Campbell, president of the university, Dr Louis D Corson, Dean of Men, Miss Katherine Warren, Dean of Women, and Dr J. Broward Culpepper, Dean of Student Welfare.

DR. DOAK S. CAMPBELL

When Dr Doak S Campbell arrived at Florida State to take over the office and duties of president on October 1 1941, the enrollment was 1 858 women. It was then called Florida State College for Women.

SINCE THAT time, under his capable leadership, the enrollment has grown to 6,044 not including students in extension courses taught by FSU professors. Florida State University is the name, and it ranks with the best of co-educational institutions.

Under Dr Campbell FSU will grow, according to present plans, to 10 000 students.

THAT, in brief, is the growth of the Florida State University since Dr Campbell came here. How much of it is he responsible for? A lot.

When he ascertained, in 1947, that FSCW would soon be co-educational, Dr Campbell went to the Board of Control and requested the appointment of a nationally known firm of architects to formulate a plan for the systematic growth of the physical plant.

HIS REQUEST was approved. It named the Master Campus Plan. Many parts of it are already in evidence and many more buildings are soon to be added.

Dr Campbell takes pride in the Master Campus Plan. But, as he pointed out at the Freshman Convocation earlier this year, a university is not buildings or a name or professors. It is a combination of many elements, said he, and he feels that the students are among the most important of them.

FAMILIARITY does not breed contempt in Dr. Campbell's opinion. He knows the students and likes them. He estimates only that he knows "hundreds of them." He has invited them to his home. He [illegible] with them at the Student Center.

This reporter asked him if students ever bring their problems directly to him. He replied that in some cases they do but added that they are very considerate of his time.

"SOME STUDENTS," he added, "come just to get acquainted."

Dr Campbell has on occasions encouraged that.

DR. CAMPBELL believes that a university is no stronger than the educators in it, and he makes sure they are competent ones. He tries to interview each prospect for a position after the prospect's written records have been passed on.

"I would say we have been fortunate here in securing outstanding scholars and teachers . . . I spend a great deal of time and energy promoting fine relationships among the faculty, students and staff. Students do better if there is a reasonable amount of that morale."

DR. CAMPBELL is a busy man—he makes numerous trips and fulfills many speaking engagements. And "when I'm resting" as he puts it, he administers the budget, which amounts to several million dollars a year.

Dr. Louis D. Corson

The office of Dean of Men is one with which most of the alumni are more than likely to be unfamiliar, as FSU had no Dean of Men until the university became co-educational in 1947.

UNFORTUNATELY, all too few of the students themselves really understand the Dean's mission. Popular literature and cartoon art depict him as some sort of ogre.

'Tain't so.

FSU'S DEAN OF MEN, Dr Louis D Corson, was another of the administration who was interviewed by this reporter. Dean Corson's description of his own duties ran like this:

"It used to be that the Dean of Men was both Father Confessor and Chief Disciplinarian. He is no longer the Chief Disciplinarian but he is still the Father Confessor."

DEAN CORSON preceded the arrival of this year's freshman class by only two months. In a talk to the freshmen men during orientation week he expressed his desire to help them when he said, "Come to us with your problems before we have to come to you about them."

That, in a nutshell, implies what his duties are. He supervises the entire counselling program in the men's dormitories and fraternity houses. He supervises housing for married students. He handles personal problems of an outstanding nature and some that aren't so outstanding. Only a small percentage of his time is devoted to disciplinary action.

WHEN disciplining is done, it is done with regard to the student and case involved. Part of Dean Corson's job is to refer some cases to the University Court and he serves on a faculty committee which reviews serious judgments.

His job involves an understanding of psychology and sociology and a responsibility to keep abreast with the latest developments in those fields.

SOMETIMES a student with an individual problem is referred to Dean Corson or the assistant Dean, James Carr, by the student's counselor.

If the matter is one of dissatisfaction, they can work with the student and show him how he and the institution can work together to help himself.

THERE IS no limit to the problems that come to him.

"That's what makes the job so interesting," he commented. "There's something new every minute."

"WE WANT to work with the students in their social, mental and moral development. We also have a tremendous responsibility for the development of school spirit."

When an honorary fraternity or society requests a student's grades the validity of the request must be ascertained by Dean Corson and approved. He also corresponds with parents concerning their sons, if the parents wish it.

MISS KATHERINE WARREN, Dean of Women, came to Florida State College for Women in 1935, when she became assistant Dean of Students. Since she took over the office of Dean of Women in 1947 the female enrollment has grown from 1,800 to 3,000. Her duties and responsibilities have increased also.

"So little of the dean's time goes into disciplinary action," she

Education Department Gives Report on Graduates of '53

By DERWYN McELROY

FSU's Department of Business Education, under the guidance of Dr. Glen E. Murphy, prepares students to enter the field of teaching through a four-year curriculum of business and education.

The program is designed to give the business education major a sound background in knowledge and skills, as well as leadership training, which are important objectives for teachers.

IN ADDITION to curriculum opportunities, provision is made through extra-curricular activities for the acquisition of these objectives. Pi Omega Pi, national honorary fraternity for business education majors, and the Future Business Leaders of America are active organizations in the department and are open to majors in this field.

The enrollment has been increasing in the past four years, and the department has met the rising tide of students by broadening the courses of certain areas and adding new ones. Newly offered this year is a course in machine accounting, which is taught by Mr. William A. Richards, Assistant Professor of Business Education.

THE DEPARTMENT also offers a service course to non-business majors. Personal-use typing is open to the entire student body, regardless of major.

A new faculty member is now teaching in the program. Mr. Calvin Miller recently joined the staff as an instructor, coming to FSU from Hershey, Pennsylvania.

Business Education majors participate in the intern-teacher program. Nine students who recently left for an eight-week training period in the business departments of the following schools in the state are: Mavis Stewart and Juanita Davis, Pensacola High School; Beverley Berry and Jean Hinson, Lively Technical school of Tallahassee.

ANIBEL TYRRELL and Betty Kerzan, Leon High school, Tallahassee, Betty Zoll, South Broward High school, Hollywood; Emma Jean Folsom, Quincy High school; and Charles Brandies, Lee High school, Jacksonville.

Seven of last year's graduates are teaching throughout the state. Clara Jo Milligan Teel is teaching at Baker High school, and Betty Carlile is teaching at Andrew Jackson in Jacksonville. Harriet Owsley is at Pensacola High, and Nancy Friend is teaching at Hillsborough High in Tampa.

ANN PABOR is teaching at Gulf High in New Port Richey, and Betty Sarlile is teaching at Miami Jackson in Miami. Bette Lu Kabeary is an instructor at St. Petersburg High school.

Other graduates of '53 are at business jobs in the state also. Jo Stewart is working at Whiting Field near Milton, Florida, and Sonya Snipes Hagler is secretary for the Business Education Department at FSU.

Last year the department moved its offices to East Campus from its old site on West Campus. They are now located in the Dining Hall, opposite the museum.

Shows Convey Incorrect Ideas About College

By DIVAD SIERD

Movies have the wrong impression of college students at least in connection with this campus. Oh sure, you Homecoming visitors can't spot it, but students who pack assignments in their notebooks from day to day will probably agree with this writer.

For instance, in one college movie they show a dance and every girl is a prize winner. Now, if you've frequented the stomps around this campus, you know that while a few pretty lasses are in view (and that's the place they usually stay) the females who push against each other to the tune of a local orchestra are regular, ordinary gals.

TAKE THE football games in movies. Every picture shows upset after upset by the hero's team. Now, if Frank Merriwell couldn't make every point for Yale in the 1813 fictional series . . . what's Hollywood trying to prove? Nobody will argue the point that FSU hasn't hit the glory road and everybody this side of the stands is claiming them the heroes and the visitors the villians. Nope, the producers of screen fare have it all wrong.

When they show exam week Ha! That's really the error and nobody . . . not a single person on this campus is going to say that it happens the way the films portray it. Every student is wearing crisp white clothing. The men have reserved ties and their faces and bright and shining. The young damsels are as usual stunning. Around here, most students go to their exams with the taste of No-Sleep tablets in their mouths, wrinkled clothing draped on their frame and tears in their eyes. The men need shaves; the girls need to comb their hair, but this is genuine . . . no airs put on . . . this is the REAL exam time.

AS FOR school spirit, now there's where Hollywood shines because naturally every student at FSU jumps up and down and cheers wildly as a throng of ninety thousand fans sings the hymn. Okay, buster . . . you cheer, but ninety thousand fans? In Doak Campbell? Yes, I've heard of the Fifty Year Plan, but ninety thousand . . . I mean . . really? No kiddin' . . . well, what d'yw' know . . . maybe the films aren't all . . . gee I can hardly wait till I come to a Homecoming and find its been built to such an extent . . . that—y'know, you Homecoming visitors must be getting the same sensation I'll probably get sometime in the future.

Faculty Keep Active Beyond Teaching Law

By DIANA DURSTON

The members of the faculty of the Business Law Department, which includes Insurance and Real Estate, lead an active life between their instructional duties and their activities in Alpha Kappa Psi, national Business Fraternity for the Southeast District of the United States.

DR. WESLEY C. Harter, head of the department and district counselor last year, and Eddy Nelson, President of the Florida State University Chapter, received the Perfect Achievement Award for the Alpha Epsilon Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Psi Business and Professional Fraternity from the University of Georgia in the impressive ceremony at the Commodore Hotel in New York City in September.

They were presented with their awards by Grand President Raymond Woolever of St Paul, Minnesota. There were only eight college and university chapters out of the 81 in the U. S to receive this award and FSU can proudly boast of a perfect record for the past three years.

DR. HERBERT J. Vogt, associate Professor of Business Law and Insurance, and Division burg, and in other cities in Florida of the Alpha Kappa Psi Business and Professional Fraternity, recently returned from Florida Real Convention at St. Petersburg.

While in Tampa he contacted Tampa University Authorities about organizing a new chapter at the University. Dr. Vogt also hopes to organize new college chapters at Stetson University and at Florida Southern. He plans to proceed with plans to organize Alumni Chapters in Jacksonville, Tampa, St. Petersburg, an din other cities in Florida as soon as the number of alumni so warrant.

THE CHAPTER recently pledged 44 men who are majoring in the School of Business or the Department of Economics. Previous to the pledging, there were only 31 active members of the fraternity on the campus this semester. The maximum mem-

Neophyte Journalism School Moves Toward Professional Training Plan

By ELKE FRANK

The School of Journalism, one of the youngest colleges at FSU sends out circulars which state that "you may choose the field of journalism in which you want to prepare" and which list a number of courses covering a wide variety of journalistic training. That shows how rapidly the program of the school has expanded since its establishment in the Fall of 1950 under its first dean Laurence R. Campbell.

FSU has provided courses in journalism since 1928 but on a very small scale. It is within the last years that training in the major fields of journalism including newspaper, radio-television, magazines, advertising, public relations, teaching as well as library, home-economics journalism, professional writing and photo journalism has been offered.

AT PRESENT all majors are classified as advertising or editorial majors and the main features of the program for undergraduates include general education, a field of concentration in journalism and an allied field: for example, sociology or art. There is also a modest graduate program.

One of the particular assets of the School of Journalism at FSU is its location in the state capitol. The fact that the capitol is one of the leading news centers gives students of journalism a unique advantage of studying the press.

"Learning by doing" is one of the major aims of the school, and a great emphasis is placed upon laboratories. Future journalists at FSU handle school news by working with the various campus publications such as the Flambeau, Smoke Signals and the Tally Ho, as well as community news. They also cover county and state affairs and sometimes even federal news.

IN EDITING courses they learn to handle Associated Press wire news, typographic courses acquaint them with typesetting, and they learn to take photographs and to develop them. More emphasis will be given to field work and internship as the school grows.

While stressing technique, the faculty members also emphasize the social responsibilities of the journalist by conducting studies of the role of mass communication in history and in public opinion.

THE SCHOOL OF Journalism is not only very active in working together with other colleges and departments on the campus, but is also host to journalistic conventions, sends delegates to press meetings and conducts programs for high school students interested in journalism.

Next summer there will be the FSU Southern Press Institute, a two weeks program of study and recreation open to all high school students who qualified for journalism. Last year students from various parts of the country including Pennsylvania, Indiana, South Carolina, Louisiana, and Virginia, as well as from Florida, attended.

ANOTHER ACTIVITY is the conducting of the School Press Tournament by Mail which gives awards to the most outstanding editorials, news reports, photographs, advertisements, feature stories, and sports stories of the month to Florida high school publications. This coming spring the school will also be host to the state-wide convention of the What's A Graduate Student? Could You Recognize One?

By ROXANNE SARLO

How can you tell a graduate student from an underclassman? Well, there's not such an accentuated difference that strikes the spectator, but there are many characteristics which separate the graduate student from the frosh to senior group.

If you see a slightly older well-dressed person strolling around campus you may be right in assuming he is a graduate student. Perhaps he is carrying a brief-case containing numerous important-looking papers. If you get close enough there will more than likely be a band on his third finger, left hand signifying his married state.

THE GRADUATE student — unlike many underclassmen — works full time in order to get through his post-graduate education and at the same time support a family.

Thus it is correct to think of the graduate student as being less the "Joe College" type. He does not run around in a hot rod or use those "dig that crazy . . ." expressions. No, the graduate student is older in mind as well as years; and he acts his age.

IF YOU listen to his conversation he will probably be talking about getting someone to stay with junior while he and his wife take in a movie. So if you want a job as a baby sitter, go over to one of the apartments at West Campus or Dale Mabry Heights.

The graduate student is less likely to take part in the extra curriculum activities. There are athletic leagues he can join, but due to the many outside responsibilities he finds that he cannot take time to participate in these events.

IT SOUNDS as though the graduate student is a completely different person from the underclassmen. But if you could have been at the square dance on the lower floor of Landis a couple of weeks ago, you would have seen that they were really having fun, and if you did not know that they were graduate students you might mistake them for freshman—at this particular time.

So it seems as though the graduate students' interests are not isolated from any other college person. He may be a little older and a little wiser, but he is just as anxious to meet more people and enjoy himself as the other people at FSU.

White Will Serve As Contest Judge For Maid of Cotton

Nancy White, fashion editor of Good Housekeeping magazine, will serve as chairman of the board of judges at the 1954 Maid of Cotton contest, the National Cotton Council announced recently.

Finals of the 1954 Maid of Cotton contest will be held at Ellis Auditorium in Memphis on the evening of January 6. The winner will be announced over a nation-wide NBC radio network.

THE JUDGES will select the 1954 Maid of Cotton from girls representing the 18-state cotton producing region. Candidates are considered on the basis of poise, personality, and intelligence as well as appearance.

Winner of the contest will represent the 13 million members of the cotton industry as its goodwill and fashion ambassadress on a seven-month, 65,000-mile tour. She will be outfitted in a stunning wardrobe of cotton fashions, created by 35 of America's foremost designers, filling 22 pieces of Amelia Earhart cotton luggage. At the conclusion of her tour she will be awarded a Ford convertible by the Memphis, Tenn., District Ford Dealers.

THE CONTEST is open to any girl born in a cotton state who has never been married, is between the ages of 19-25, and at least five feet five inches tall. Richey Called 'Synonymous' With Accounting's Growth

By SUSAN WISENBARGER

Miss Louella Richey, professor of accounting, in the School of Business was singled out last fall for a national honor. Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional business honorary, awarded a plaque to her for long and meritorious service. This was the first time such an award had ever been made in the United States.

The story of Miss Richey's 37 years at Florida State University is in large measure synonymous with the story of the growth of academic instruction in the field of accounting here. When Miss Richey came to Tallahassee in 1916, FSCW was one of the first colleges to have academic training in business. In fact, Harvard and Stanford were among the few other colleges offering a similar course. Soon afterwards, World War I broke out, and numbers of Tallahassee women enrolled for business courses at FSCW to train themselves to fill the places left vacant as more men left for the war. Later, with a faculty of three, this was expanded into a four-year program offering a BS degree in commerce. Then there was a merging with economics to become the department of economics and commerce.

IT WAS about this time that Miss Richey passed the CPA exam to become the first woman CPA in the state of Florida, a distinction she held for 18 years. Even now she is one of only three women CPA's in the state. There was a good bit of national publicity some years ago about a woman CPA being one in a million because there were exactly 130 in a national population of 130 million. Miss Richey was, of course, Florida's one in a million.

One of the by-products of making the University co-educational is that the majority of students now majoring in business are men, Miss Richey said. Although business courses had been very popular with young women, with large numbers choosing business for a major, classes in business are now predominately male.

MISS RICHEY'S special field in accounting is the subject of Income Tax. She holds a license to practice before the United States Treasury Department.

Enjoying the success that many former women students have had in accounting careers, Miss Richey takes pride in the number of young men students who have passed the CPA examination. Among them is E. C. Allen, '48 Leon County Alumni Club president, Tallahassee, who was awarded a plaque for receiving the highest grade in the state on the CPA examination.

"THE CPA EXAMINATION," Miss Richey says, "is a uniform one given throughout the country on the same date."

An earned degree in Business plus a year of graduate work or a year's apprenticeship in a CPA office qualifies a person to take the exam.

MISS RICHEY doubts that the CPA exam today is more difficult than it was when she took it in 1927, but the content has changed. Her undergraduate degree was received from Ohio Wesleyan, and her graduate degree from Ohio State.

A few years after Miss Richey's arrival on campus, one of the seniors on graduation day said, "I'll be back in 10 years and look you up."

MISS RICHEY replied, "I won't be here 10 years from now. I won't stay in any place that long" . . . but she's been here 37, the longest period of service of any FSU faculty member holding the rank of full professor.

Dr. Cate Avers Courses Bring Foreign Study

Florida State University's Food and Nutrition Department takes pride in the fact that it has two foreign students this year, who are working toward degrees in dietetics.

Dr. Helen Cate, head of the food and nutrition department, expressed the feelings of the Department by saying that they are happy, "because FSU has been chosen as a center of home economics study by foreign students."

THE DEPARTMENT had one foreign student last year—Anna Marie Erdman, from Holland, who received a master's degree in dietetics. Miss Erdman won a scholarship through the International Pilot Club, and chose to do her work in the field of dietetics at FSU.

Mrs. Salud Acosta, from the Philippine Islands, is here this year doing her intern work in the university dining hall. She will complete her graduate work and receive a master's degree next year, after which she plans to return to the Philippines and teach dietetics to her people.

ANOTHER OF the outstanding students in the food and nutrition department came from Thailand, Siam. She is Mrs. Ra-ana Suddharrett who is attending FSU through the Foreign Operation Administration program. Mrs. Suddharrett has a bachelor's degree in liberal arts, and is now working toward a Master of Science at FSU.

Mrs. Suddharrett received her A.B. at the Technical Institute of Bangkok, which Dr. Ralph Eyman, of the School of Education, designed. Dr. Eyman ha.

Hotel Department Will Honor Outstanding Restaurateurs

In the fall of 1947 a handful of students, mostly from the southeast, gathered at Florida State University to learn hotel and restaurant management. One instructor was on hand to do the job. Today three full time faculty members and several part time instructors offer more than twenty specialized courses in Restaurant and Hotel Management. Over 100 different students are currently taking restaurant and hotel courses.

THE FIELD of Restaurant and Hotel Management spreads out into the management of all types of food service, industrial catering, club food service, shipboard stewarding, and chain store feeding. The placement opportunities far exceed the number of graduates and the prospects are even better for future years.

The Department plays a vital part in the state's economy since the tourist business is by all odds the largest revenue producing business of the state. Florida today has more than 4,500 motels, 1,500 hotels and about 13,000 restaurants. Nearly 5,000,000 tourists come into the state each year. What was formerly a winter season business now attracts hundreds of thousands of visitors in the summer as well.

THE DEPARTMENT is well aware of the importance of maintaining close relations with the industry. The faculty are invited to speak at meetings of the industry between two and four times a month. Associate Professor Hall has been elected President of the Southeastern Conference of Hospital Dietitians and Professor Lundberg is taking an active part in the formation of the American Hotel Institute, a home study program sponsored by the American Hotel Association.

Each spring students in the Department are invited to take part in field trips to the Southern Hotel Exposition in Atlanta and to attend the Florida Hotel Annual Convention. The convention this year will probably be held in Bermuda, Nassau or Cuba.

MANY OF THE students have had considerable experience in the hospitality business before enrolling in the Department and the graduate students include students from Iowa, California, the Philippine Islands, and a retired army Colonel. About half of the undergraduate students come from out of state.

Each summer students are encouraged to take positions in clubs, hotels and restaurants all over the country and to take employment in different jobs each summer so as to round out their practical experience.

TODAY AND TOMORROW marks the date that the Department will honor the twelve outstanding restaurateurs of the Southeast. Students will act as hosts and escort the honored restaurant men to the homecoming football game. Each honoree will be awarded a certificate of merit by the University and the Florida Restaurant Association.

Prof Travels Athens to Get 1st Hand Facts

Spending the summer in Athens is one way to get first hand information for courses taught in the Classics Department. Miss Edith West, Assoc. Prof. of Classics did just that this year, and spoke about her trip at the meeting of the Florida Classical Association in Ocala, November 14

OTHER MEMBERS of the Department are busy this year with translations, revisions of books, aside from teaching their courses in Greek and Roman history, literature and religion.

Miss West, assisted in part by other members of the Department, has been working on a revision of the textbook, Our Ancient Heritage, used in Humanities 101.

DR. OLIVIA N. Dorman, Prof. of Classics, is currently engaged in a translation of the letters of the medieval Latin writer, Lupus of Ferrierès.

In the process of being published, is a volume edited and translated by Dr. Francis Walton, of the works of Diodorus, a late Greek historian.

DR. WALTON was recently made acting editor of the American Philological Association which is one of the oldest national learned societies in the country. The organization, to which most teachers of classics belong, will hold its annual meting in New York during the Christmas holidays.

He will speak on the Age of Hadrian and the religion of that period at this national convention. Faculty members who will attend the meeting, are Miss Lynette Thompson, Asst. Prof. of Classics and Dr. William C. Kirk.

THE CLASSICS Department offers courses at all levels in the study of Greek and Latin, as well as a number of other courses which require no knowledge of these two languages.

A new course dealing with Greek and Roman religion will be offered for the first time next semester to be taught by Dr. Francis Walton.

Campuswide Projects Busy Artists; Talent Seen Much in Demand Here

By E. ANDREWS

From packing galleries to decorating the new men's dormitory pretty well describes the activities of the Department of Art since homecoming last November.

Over 5,000 people witnessed a display of student art in a ten day exhibition last January.

WHEN the eleven story, "skyscraper" dormitory was opened this fall as a residence hall for men students, the ground floor snack bar and recreation lounge was enlivened with three mural paintings by a faculty member and two students in the art department.

The murals, all concerned with subjects of natural interest to young men, had been painted during the previous semester under the direction of Edmund Lewandowski, head of the department.

THE MURALS were done by Guy Johnson, part time instructor; George Milton, now a graduate student; and Franklin Adams, now a junior. There is no question of choosing among the three paintings for better or worse. Each one seems absolutely right for its location.

Four $25 prizes given during the year for outstanding performance, went to Cynthia Sweatt, a freshman, Franklin Adams, a sophomore, Irene Winterle, a junior, and George Milton, a senior.

FOR QUITE some time it has been customary for the department to "re-do" a room a year. This year they remodeled room 310 Westcott into an art history lecture room . . . new drapes, new color schemes and new lighting.

A new teacher, Jack Waldheim, has been added to the art faculty. He is the designer of the contour chair which not only gives your arteries a break, but also does wonders for your bulges.

GUY JOHNSON, who got his masters degree last June, is teaching at a college in Kentucky, and several of the "old crowd" are working for T.V.A.

In addition to painting a large mosaic mural for Marquette University, Professor Lewandowski, head of the department, finds time to paint and exhibit a steady stream of easel paints which are literally shown from coast to coast.

IN THE 1953 Annual Exhibition of Contemporary Painting held at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York city, Mr. Lewandowski was represented by a semi-abstract oil painting, "The Mutuels," which he painted while in New York last summer.

At almost the same time, Lewandowski's "Circuit Breakers" was being shown on the West Coast. Earlier this year, his "Waterfront," a casein painting on paper was shown at an art center in Minneapolis, Minnesota. His work was also being shown at the Alan Gallery in New York and at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

TO ROUND OUT the nationwide activity of Mr. Lewandowski as a highly productive exhibition artist, the South, his new home, conferred on him the distinction of receiving a purchase award for his water-colored "Steel Mill," at the Eighth Southeastern Annual Exhibition at Atlanta, Georgia.

The Student Honor Show has been put up in the art gallery at this time so that the visiting alumni might have an opportunity to see it.

Departmental moves since many alumni last visited their Alma Mater include the new offices and classes of the School of Business and the School of Secretarial Science . . . Upstairs from the Seminole Club are located, in the former Lafayette Dining Hall many classrooms partitioned off in the air-cooled hall containing new typewriters, business machines and the like; a step forward in the rapid expansion at Florida State University.

Skeleton for the New Westcott Auditorium is just appearing after the famous old hall was torn down last year following a decision that it was too old to be safe . . . see th plans of a brand-new, air-conditioned auditorium, larger and more fully equipped than the one alumni remember . . .

Marketing Department Steadily Expanding; Graduates Usually Offered Choice of Jobs

By BETTY BISHOP

The marketing department of the School of Business is steadily expanding its activities and is offering new courses. It is responding to the interest of all types of businesses in the effectiveness of their marketing operations, which has been an important business trend, especially since 1930.

Today business leaders almost universally affirm their belief that much of the success of the country's economy from this day forward will hinge on its ability to successfully sell and distribute the products of its vast productive capacity.

DR. W. G. SHOVER, head of the marketing department, said that, for the reasons given above, businesses are constantly looking for capable college graduates. They want students who are well grounded in marketing, and Florida State University is furnishing more of such students each year, Dr. Shover said.

The department of marketing works through the office of vocational guidance and placement in arranging many job interviews for students.

In recent years, the marketing student has usually had a choice of jobs from several sources

Marketing graduates from FSU have studied salesmanship, sales management, advertising, sales promotion, retailing, buying, credit granting, warehousing, pricing, grading, marketing research, and other distribution techniques.

BECAUSE MANY FSU students plan to go into some phase of retail store work, a special sequence of retailing study is offered here within the department under the direction of Dr. W. Bruce Weale.

Dr. J. Richard Stevens is new on the marketing faculty this year. Dr. Stevens came to FSU from the State University of Iowa, in Iowa City, where he taught in the marketing department of the College of Commerce. Dr. Stevens has had years of business experience, with an advertising agency and as a sales representative for a large manufacturer.

ALL MEMBERS of the marketing faculty belong to the American Marketing Association, whose membership consists of teachers and practitioners throughout the U. S.

Two new courses are being offered, one in Problems in Marketing, and one in Marketing Research and Analysis.

GRADUATE STUDENTS in marketing have carried out extensive studies and surveys from time to time in areas of consumer buying, retail operations, direct selling, operation of the University Book Store, and other subjects.

One of the important events of the department is the annual Retail Clinic held on campus in April or May. Last year four top business executives spoke to the clinic, benefiting both students and businessmen in Tallahassee.

recently returned from Siam after being there two years.

HE WAS THERE as technical adviser helping to build the institution at Bangkok for which the United States government paid half and the Siamese government paid half. The Institute is co-educational and was established for the purpose of giving more facilities in vocational training to boys and girls as well as adults.

Mrs Suddharrett became well acquainted with Dean Evman and acted as his interpreter for 18 months. It was through his help partly that she is here at FSU now.

SHE DESCRIBED the school, which Dean Evman designed, and said that it looks very much like some of the buildings at FSU. Incidentally, the colors of the Institute are garnet and gold and dark blue.

Mrs. Suddharrett will go back to Siam and establish a home economics department in the Technical Institute of Bangkok. She and her people are especially grateful to Dean Evman for what he did there, and she asked that she be quoted as saying: "We appreciate his work and we love him so much that we want everyone to know what he did for us."

THE FOOD AND nutrition department will have its doors open and waiting during homecoming weekend for any of the alumni who wishes to see what is being done in that department this year.

Senior Class President Boosts Student Enthusiasm And Unity

By DALE WYNGARDEN

"I'm really interested in having the class feel as if they were a unit or a group" said Colin English, Senior class president. Colin has undertaken the very big job with this year's senior class of building up the school spirit.

Up until this year Colin feels there has been very little class spirit. However, at a recent meeting of the senior class they had an attendance of over 400 students, an all time high.

THE SENIOR class officers have been holding weekly meetings to find new methods for boosting enthusiasm on the campus and the most recent undertaking is an open house at the home of President Doak S Campbell.

When Colin is not busy performing duties for the senior class, Alpha Kappa Psi, Gold Key or the Sigma Chi social fraternity, he can be found at the mansion-like home of his parents who live here in Tallahassee.

COLIN AND his father, who is the former State Supervisor of Education keep eight saddle horses at their home. He goes riding almost ever week along with hunting and fishing which can be done right on his own grounds, which are abundant with dove, quail and squirrel.

After graduation Colin plans to get a job somewhere in the business world, that is providing the army doesn't get him first.

Florida Scholastic Press Association.

Current developments are the establishment of a Bureeu of Media Research and Service, an agency for the study of problems in journalism, which is under the direction of Dr. Sidney Kobre, and an expanded radio and television program, of which details will be announced in the near future.

FOUR MEMBERS of the faculty hold Ph. D.s and there are more instructors of professional rank than at any other school of journalism in southeastern United States. They have various backgrounds, but all have had journalistic experience and counsel as well as teach.

Marine Corps Seeks Women From Colleges

The United States Marine Corps is looking for the best caliber of college women this country has to offer, to serve as commissioned officers in the U. S. Marines, it was announced recently.

This was the main theme of a recent conference in which Col. Julia E Hamblet, Director of Women Marines, was interviewed for college campus publications.

"WE'VE FOUND that college women fill a vital role in the Marine Corps as command and administrative officers," said the head of 2,700 Women Marines. She feels that service in the Armed Forces is one of the most rewarding opportunities in life. In addition, as Colonel Hamblet pointed out, a career in the Marine Corps is a profitable one, since a college woman can earn up to $4,250 upon appointment to the rank of second lieutenant.

Women Marine Officers are a permanent part of the Marine Corps, and are assigned leadership positions at Marine Corps bases and air stations in the United States, Hawaii and Europe.

PREPARATION FOR these assignments begins for the individual at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Virginia, where the Women Officers Training Class is held each winter and summer. Qualified young women who are college undergraduates attend two six-week training sessions during their summer vacations. College graduates are trained in one continuous 12-week session during either the winter or summer months. Upon completion of the WOTC, candidates become full-fledged second lieutenants.

"Our Women Officers Training Class helps to build self-confidence and leadership ability," Colonel Hamblet said. "And our newly-appointed women officers are receiving all types of interesting assignments.

Education Majors Assume Positions As Teachers

One-hundred-fifty-nine students of the School of Education left recently to represent Florida State University as intern teachers in 35 counties throughout Florida and one county in Georgia. The group took up their duties as students teachers in various schools. They will return to campus when classes resume after the Christmas holidays.

Forty-two, or almost one-third of the interns, are interning here in Leon county. There are 12 at the demonstration school, two at Cobb Junior High, two at Lively Technical School, nine at Leon High, 14 at the four Leon county elementary schools, and three in county schools.

THE PROGRAM of internships, which began here during the spring semester of 1940, is designed to give potential school teachers an opportunity to get practical teaching experience before graduation.

Directors for the program are Dr. Robert C. Moon, who is in charge of off campus placement; R. L. Golding, director of office and personnel, and Dr. John A Parmenter, who acts as instructor for the orientation of the directing teachers.

IN SPEAKING of the program, Dr. Moon explained that the internship is usually taken during the second semester of the junior year or during the first semester of the senior year. "We prefer," he added, "that the student take his internship so that he can be back on campus one semester before graduating."

remarked in agreement with Dean Corso's opinions. "Perhaps one twentieth of my time goes into discipline. The rest is spent in working with student groups, on faculty committees, helping to select the staff and in individual conferences with women students seeking advice, sympathy or encouragement.

"THE DEANS are here primarily to help and befriend the students," said Miss Warren. "Sometimes the help takes the form of discipline but then it is constructive discipline."

"Discipline," she defined, "means requiring people to live by law which in turn teaches self-control and self-discipline."

MISS WARREN had high praise for the standards maintained by the women students. Since she is in a position to have observed through the transition from FSCW to FSU, we asked her what effect the coming of the men had, if any, on the women's standards.

"They still respect the standards of the university," she answered. Dean Warren added that the standards of dress and conduct maintained by the women have improved the manners and dress of the mael student body. She said that the students respect the university rules as much as they ever did.

DR. J. BROWARD CULPEPPER

THE OFFICE of Dean of Student Welfare is another office which was created along with FSU in 1947. Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, who came here the year before as Director of Educational Research and Service, has been Dean of Student Welfare since then.

His job is to coordinate all services outside of the classroom which relate to students—counseling, educational, personal and social guidance; vocational guidance and health service.

HE IS interested also in student activities, which he helps with advice and assistance. That involves athletics and intramurals, the social program, student help and placement, personnel records, tests service bureau and psychological welfare. Dr. Culpepper does not actively supervise all these services but helps coordinate them and helps them to work smoothly in conjunction with one another.

Student groups needing assistance come to him. More often than not the assistance involves only the untangling of red tape or procedure or perhaps just a little more systematic action.

DR. CULPEPPER meets once a week with the president of the Student Government on matters of student nature. Many other student officers come to him for conferences or assistance.

His duties include: serving as chairman of the Student Welfare committee, member, athletic committee; member, student publications committee; member, student affairs committee, which reviews major decisions of the university government; member, council of deans; member, curriculum committee, member, schedule committee; and member, graduate council committee.

DURING HIS active day Dean Culpepper leaves time open for impromptu conferences with students who may have immediate problems.

For instance, one day he helped some worried cheerleaders find a loudspeaker for a pep rally.

ON ANOTHER DAY he helped a Flambeau reporter fulfill a feature story assignment for the Homecoming edition.

Students To Act As Santa Claus

Florida State University students play Santa Claus to many American sailors who have to be on the high seas this Christmas. It is the first time that members of the Baptist Student Union and of the Episcopal, Presbyterian and the Methodist student organizations on the campus participate in "Christmas on the High Seas," a program sponsored by the American Red Cross.

Many small boxes containing books, magazines, candies and other gifts which are allowed to be sent outside the U.S. have been giftwrapped and packed by the members of the different organizations, and they are ready to bring a Christmas surprise to the sailors according to June Conyers, president of the Interchurch Student Fellowship. June also feels that this program has been a success because "different church groups' have been taking part in it, and it was done very quietly without any discussions arising."

Course Utilizes Capitol Center In Research

To students of the School of Public Administration, the state capitol center has long been viewed as a second campus because of the opportunity which it provides for them to see at first hand governmental problems and processes and because of the close cooperative relations which have existed with the officials of our state government.

A new course to be offered next semester by the School of Public Administration will mark a further step in the school's program of utilizing the resources, experience and training available in Florida's capital city.

The new course will be on governmental budgeting. Its instructor will be Harry G. Smith, the State Budget Director of Florida, aided by members of his staff. The course will be a practical approach to the process of budgeting, with special attention to the problems and needs of Florida. It will deal with such matters as budgetary organization including the central office staff and departmental staff, legal restrictions and requirements under Florida law, preparation of budget estimates, review and revision of budget estimates, preparation of the budget document, legislative consideration and action on the budget, and budget execution.

THE COURSE will be designed mainly for state employees and officials who have budgetary responsibilities, and will be offered in the evening from 7-9.30 p.m. each Tuesday. Students of FSU with a background in public administration will also be eligible to take the course.

The course will carry three hours' academic credit and may be counted toward a degree in public administration or a certificate in public administration.

English Heads Offer Informals Discuss Works

A recent innovation, sponsored by the English department, is the English Coffee Hour, an informal get-together every Friday afternoon at 4 p.m. in Westminster House. A variety of subjects concerning literature down through the years is offered at the program.

THE BIGGEST fonetion of course, is teaching Freshmen English, because all but a tiny fraction of each entering class and assigns the teaching.

Last year a theme projection room with an opaque projector was added to the department's equipment for class analysis of written work.

Another function is Junior English, a clinic under the direction of Miss Martha G. Chapman, where advanced students do intensive drill in spelling, grammar and sentence structure, to bring their work up to the level the University expects of them.

THE MAJORITY of the department's courses are in literature, ranging from Introduction to Literature, which is open to freshmen, to such graduate courses as Studies in Spenser and Modern English Literature.

COURSES in creative writing hava recently been developed. One new course, Writing and the Teaching of Writing, is the keystone to tha new M.A. program designed especially for teachers of English. The department offers both masters and doctors degrees.

Mortar Board Reveals History, Current Plans

By BEVERLY LACAYO

Mortar Board alumnae will be gathering at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hazel Richards Sunday morning for the breakfast which she gives them every year after the roar of the homecoming weekend settles to an exhausted whisper.

Mortar Board, a national honorary which recognizes leadership, service, and scholarship in Senior women, was established on this campus in 1931 and so has had many years in which to accumulate alumnae. The "Torchbearer" Chapter was established on our campus as an outgrowth of our own senior women's service group which had existed since 1928. A brief history of Mortar Board is given in the membership booklet as follows:

"Mortar Board was founded in 1918, its formation a natural outgrowth of the existence, on numerous college campuses, of senior women's honor societies whose purpose was to serve. These groups, founded independently to meet the needs of different campuses for thoughtful, coordinated, impartial student leadership, discovered each other and felt that much could be gained from comparing standards and programs.

THROUGH the pioneering efforts of four such local societies, at Swarthmore College, Cornell University, Ohio State University, and the University of Michigan, the national organization called Mortar Board came into being. The founding convention in February of 1918 chose its name, which had been that of two of the local groups represented, over vigorous advocacy of a Greek-letter appellation. Selection of the pin and drafts of the ritual, the constitution and the expansion policy also came out of that original convention.

From this beginning Mortar Board spread over the campuses of America to become a dynamic part of college life, its aim always to give that life more significance. At the end of 1952 Mortar Board was serving through 88 chapters, all of which had begun as independent local societies."

UNLIKE most other organizations, election to Mortar Board is for the Senior year only. The chance to serve the campus through this organization has always been considered the most coveted honor a senior woman may receive at Florida State. Members may be recognized by the small black and gold pin they wear which has the shape of a mortar board.

This year's class has started the year with the required study meeting in which a thorough study is made of the Constitution, the purpose of the organization, and the traditions of the chapter.

THE GROUP also decided on the service projects which they would undertake. Traditional projects have been talks on Scholarship to the Freshmen, private tutoring for students who have a difficult time adjusting from high school study habits to those required in college, presenting a scholarship plaque to the freshmen girl with the highest grade average, and sponsoring the leadership training program given every spring for the newly elected officers in student government. This year's 'extras' will be the editing of a Senior Black Book to be sold to incoming Seniors next fall at a price covering only the cost of materials and printing; and cooperating in every way possible with the Secretary of Honor and the Chief Justice in a program designed to establish the honor system as a way of thinking and acting on this campus.

ALTHOUGH the Torch Bearer chapter has concentrated mainly on projects designed to oil the wheels of the internal campus affairs, this is not necessarily the only type of service the National Organization encourages. From the 1949 Chapter reports the range of projects included the awarding of scholarships, career conferences for seniors, lectures on preparation for marriage, civic and campus coordination, working towards the adoption of the National Student Association on their campus, sponsoring round table discussions on international affairs and their relation to the life of the student, and other projects which reached out to the life which lay ahead of graduation.

The Torchbearer chapter and Florida State University feel the loyalty to Mortar Board quite strongly for several reasons. The national Mortar Board poem called "The Torch," and familiar to all of us, was written by a Senior at F.S.C.W. Also, on this campus we have the national Editor of the Mortar Board Quarterly, Miss Daisy Parker of the Political Science department, and the National Historian, Mrs. Hazel Richards, wife of Dr. Richards of the Physics department. In addition there are many faculty members and wives of faculty members who are Mortar Board Alumnae from other Campuses.

Air ROTC Units Number Near 300; Military Program Gets Big Revision

By DICK VICTORY

The Air Force Reserve Officers program at FSU has as its main objective, the training of men for qualification to begin instruction in flight training after they receive their commissions.

The program was established in 1949 under Colonel Bernice S. Barr, who was recently reassigned after four years of duty here as Professor of Air Science and Tactics.

PRESENTLY, under the command of Lt. Colonel Paul W. Campbell, the program includes 295 cadets, divided as follows: 154 freshmen; 76 sophomores; 29 juniors; and 36 seniors. Cadet Colonel Charles M. Booth Jr. is commander of the cadet corps.

The freshmen and sophomores attend two hours of class per week, while the advanced students meet four times a week in the classroom. One hour drill periods on Tuesday and Thursday are required of both.

THE TRAINING program was climaxed last April by the annual inspection of the unit by a team of officers from Headquarters, AFROTC. In addition, the unit marched in the Armistice Day parade, the inaugural of the late Governor McCarty, and the local Armed Forces Day parade.

Also included in last year's program were orientation flights for more than 100 various cadets. During the flight, they were allowed to handle the controls for a short time under the supervision of qualified Air Force pilots.

CADETS WHO have completed their third year of Air Science are given the opportunity of becoming acquainted with life on an air base by attendance at summer camp. During the period, the cadet observes the latest design of military aircraft, and gets his indoctrination flight in jet aircraft.

MILITARY

The Army ROTC Unit at FSU was established in September of 1951 as an ordnance unit, but was changed this year into a General Military Science Unit.

The new curriculum now stresses the production of junior officers who will be well-rounded in the fundamentals of their profession, rather than for just one branch of the service.

LT. COLONEL P. S. Greene, Professor of Military Science and Tactics, is now in command of the unit. He replaced Lt. Colonel Cornell D Booth, who was reassigned. Assistant to Lt. Colonel Greene is Capt. Rex T. Henry, who was assigned to FSU this summer following a tour of duty in Japan.

At the present time, the enrollment of the unit consists of 98 Freshmen, 42 Sophomores, 19 Juniors, and 11 Seniors. Over-all military direction is provided by Headquarters, Florida Military District at Jacksonville.

DURING MILITARY Science 1 and 2, cadets are provided with complete officer type uniforms. Advanced students get the uniforms plus $27 per month as a cash payment in lieu of rations. Between his Junior and Senior years, the student normally goes to summer camp for six weeks. Transportation is furnished and he is payed $114 for the period.

Cadets, who are deferred from the draft if they maintain a "C" average, are provided the opportunity of joining one of the ROTC extra curricular activities. The Pershing Rifles at present is made up of 35 cadets and is commanded by Cadet George Cornelius. Also included in this category is the Scabbard and Blade Society and the Rifle Team.

DURING WORLD War II some 100,000 graduates of ROTC served in the Armed Forces in all ranks from Second Lieutenant to General.

Half of American women who reach age 65 will live 15 years longer and a third of them will live for 20 years.

Baptist Students Hold Open House Following Rally

The Baptist Student Union will hold open house this evening immediately following the Pow-Wow from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m., and tomorrow afternoon from 5:30 to 8:30 immediately following the Stetson game.

The Training Union is sponsoring a hayride tomorrow night beginning at 7:15 p.m. The group will leave from the Student House. The cost is 25c per person, and those wishing to attend should sign up at the Student House by this evening.

Plans are being completed for the Thanksgiving Vesper Service, Tuesday, November 24 at Student House. All International students on campus will be guests for supper and for the Vesper service to follow. A play "We Call It Freedom" will be presented by the Baptist Players under the direction of Jenny Lu Kent. Those planning to come for supper are asked to sign up at the student house. Price of supper is 75c.

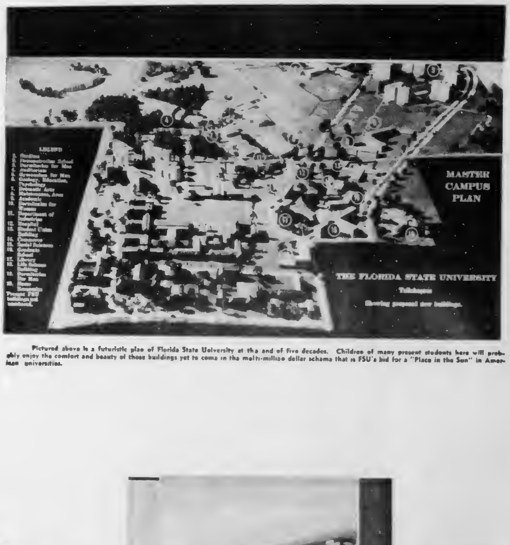
Above left . . . West Hall stands in regal splendor as tallest building in the City of Tallahassee. Equipped with snack bar, indoor fountains and sun decks on every floor, it is an architect's pride. Above right in the shadow of the 11-story residence hall . . . steady construction is making the FSU Geology Building a milestone in scientific centers. The 3rd and 4th story structure will house a small museum, classrooms and offices of the geology department.



Pictured above is a futuristic plan of Florida State University at the end of five decades. Children of many present students here will probably enjoy the comfort and beauty of those buildings yet to come in the multi-million dollar schema that is FSU's bid for a "Place in the Sun" in American universities.

Horizontal lines accentuate the beauty of Florida Hall's futuristic theme . . . Intended originally for women, the building at present houses 240 men students in comfort and convenience. Plans include turning the building over to co-eds as soon as men's residence space becomes available.

Air conditioning and soft music coupled with functional architecture accompany the book-buyer, the browser and the souvenir-hunter to the FSU-operated bookstore. Shelves well-stocked with art supplies, popular books, stationery and sundry supplies make the bookstore a center of student purchasing.

Confirmed by unanimous vote were Bob Folsom to be Pow-Wow editor and Bob Rice to be undersecretary of State. Folsom succeeds Al Pierce, last year's editor. Rice will be in charge of a promotion and publicity committee, according to Student Body President Milton Carothers.

Other actions taken recently included the election of Chris Young to be President protempore of the Senate. This officer presides in the absence of the Vice-President and succeeds to that position in case of a vacancy.

A resolution by Coyle Moore commending the Marching Chiefs, University Band was passed unanimously.

Absent from this week's meeting were Senators Young, Wetherall, Graham and Tavel excused. Last week's absences were Senators Shaw, Young, Wetherall, Coulter, Hays, excused, Graham, excused and Tavel, excused.

Results Revealed In Debate Tourney Held Last Month

The results of the Fifth Annual Intramural Debate Tournament held November 3, 10 and 17, have been announced by the FSU Department of Speech.

There was a tie for first place involving two affirmative teams, Warren Cobb, and Raymond Simmonds; Norma Tripodo, and Carolyn Close. Both teams had four wins and no losses.

Second place was a three way tie between teams made up of Cary Fitzgerald and Ron Martin; Suzanne Alford and Bill Mahaffey; Harold Stewart and Pat Gatini.

Recognition was given to Norma Trippodo, for the best individual speaker ratings in the tournament. Runner up was Warren Cobb.

The results show the tournament was basically affirmative with teams winning 60 per cent of the debates.

Speaker Cites Funds Trouble In Universities

Hultz Talks To 100 At Luncheon Meet Of Board Members

Currently there is an almost unanimous resistance on the part of state officials to appropriate adequately for higher education.

This is the belief that Dr. Fred S. Hultz, president, North Dakota Agricultural College, expressed at a luncheon meeting of some 100 members of the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions held on the campus of Florida State University Wednesday.

THE ASSOCIATION was in Tallahassee for a one-day visit as a part of their annual convention held this year in Gainesville November 30 through Dec. 5.

At the luncheon, held in the cafeteria, Dr. Hultz stressed in his address, entitled "The College As an Effective Community Asset," the need for cooperation and understanding between institutions of higher learning and the communities in which they are situated.

HE ENUMERATED some of the assets which college towns enjoy: "An assurance of stability," a real estate opportunity, and the advance of other business opportunities.

On the reverse side Dr. Hultz stated that aside from performing business services for it a community can do the greatest good for its college by giving it support.

THE PRESIDENT believed that this is necessary because of the resistance of state officials to appropriate adequately for higher education.

"On the side of Federal money I think we are in for some severe jolts." He quoted an item which appeared in "Educator's Dispatch" recently, saying "The 48 State governors have been told all Federal grants for vocational courses should stop by June 30, 1955.

DR. HULTZ added that in his opinion the greatest difference between ourselves and most of the other countries of the world may largely be due to our system of public higher education.

"Dare we ignore or deplete these public institutions in times such as now exist?" the speaker questioned. "These institutions in which the very roots of Democracy are entwined?"

AFTER THE LUNCHEON members visited the State Capital and Florida A&M University.

Before returning home the association will also travel to Lake Alfred, Sarasota and Miami where they will tour the University of Miami.

ED. NOTE: President of the FSU Student Body Milton Carothers and Vice-President in charge of Women's Affairs June Conyers spoke at a panel discussion before the Gainesville meeting of the Association of Governing Boards yesterday. Also on the panel discussion designed to present the feelings of student bodies at state Universities, were two student body representatives from University of Miami and two from University of Florida.

Guild To Give Strauss Opera FSU Premiere

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

Tonight will climax the completion of rehearsals and work by the Light Opera Guild of Florida State University as the curtain goes up at 8.15 in Opperman Music Hall for the first FSU presentation of Johann Strauss' comic opera, DIE FLEDERMAUS.

The musical will play four nights, tonight, tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday.

DIE FLEDERMAUS is traditionally a New Year's Eve operetta and sparkles with a brilliance which Strauss himself never surpassed, according to Guild director, Dr. Robert L. Briggs.

This is a new version of the production, in English, prepared by Howard Dietz and Garson Kanin of Hollywood and Broadway fame Dr. Briggs said that it has achieved a tremendous success in America since its presentation at the Metropolitan Opera House three years ago in the revised form.

DR. BRIGGS SAID, "The combination of many elements must be successfully achieved in order to accomplish this particular medium of entertainment."

While the principals have been rehearsing for several weeks on their roles, a chorus of fifty voices, under the direction of Miss Betty Jane Grimm, stage and chorus director, has been working separately on their part in the production.

THE FINAL WEEK of rehearsals found the principals, the chorus, the orchestra and the production staff combining efforts to achieve the ultimate success of the presentation.

The operetta will feature a cast of 10 principals, a chorus of 50 voices and an orchestra of 37 players.

LEADING ROLES will be sung by Walter James and Delano Driver. Others in the cast are Ellen Snow, Wendell Bartholf, Robert Parrish, Harrison Fisher, Jack Jarrett, Bette Jo Armstrong, Barbara Foster, and Don Van Nus.

Members of the orchestra are a select group of university musicians.

TICKETS may be obtained at the school of music office or the University Bookstore. They will also be sold at the box office prior to each performance if they are available. All seats are 75 cents. There will be no reserved seats.

Dr. Briggs suggests that students and townspeople purchase their tickets in advance to assure themselves of a seat. Past performances by the Guild have always been sellouts.

FSU To Send Four Debaters To Gainesville

Four Florida State University students will represent FSU at Gainesville December 10, 11 and 12 appearing in the third annual University of Florida Invitational Debate Tournament.

Competing in the annual collegiate event will be Florida Staters Beverly Duperouzel, sophomore, Beverly Lacayo and Bill Twyford, seniors, and Pete Nimkoff, junior. Twyford, who recently received a certificate of excellence at the Alabama Discussion Conferences, will lead the group while at the University of Florida.

SPOKESMEN FOR the Speech Department here said yesterday that all four of the contestants have "represented FSU honorably in at least one previous tournament."

Notables at the Gainesville tourney will include Congressman D. R. "Billy" Mathews, who will speak at the tournament banquet on the subject of free trade. Informal discussions will precede the six rounds of debates. Talks will be led by professors from the Economic department of the University of Florida.

SUBJECT OF the entire debate will be the Free Trade Resolution.

West Hall Elects Kelley, Silver And Peacock Officers

In recent elections held in West Hall, residents voted into office, Phil Kelley, Governor, and Sid Silver, Lieutenant Governor. Fred Peacock, incumbent, retained the office of Secretary-treasurer.

The voting was not overwhelmingly large, according to elections officials, but considerably more than half of the dormitory's population voted

THE DORMITORY had previously violated a rule by electing freshmen to the offices of Governor and Lt. Governor.

The whole situation began when freshmen were named to the two top executive posts shortly after school began. Since freshmen cannot hold dormitory office under the student government constitution, they were removed from office. A group of lesser dormitory officers then set up a provisional government but were soon brought before the University Court and charged with setting up a machine government.

THE PROVISIONAL government was thrown out but that did not solve matters. The determined residents sent delegates to an intra-dorm constitutional committee which named Fred Roberts chairman. A constitution was drawn up and approved later at an open meeting of the entire dormitory.

According to the constitution West Hall's top offices will be filled annually by a vote to be held the second week in February. The officers elected at that time will hold office for a year.

GOVERNOR Kelley ran on a platform promising well-run elections in February, since the officers and government recently set up are actually only temporary ones.

Jap Prints Shown In FSU Gallery At Present Time

A showing of Japanese wood block prints from the Robert Lee Gallery of Newton, Conneticut are currently on display in the Promenade Gallery of the Educational Building. The display opened Tuesday and will be shown through Thursday, December 10.

Sponsored by the Arts Education Department, the exhibit contains prints of modern landscapes, birds and flowers, nature studies and moonlight series. Represented in the exhibit are the well known works of Koson and his bird studies, Keisan and his horse sketches, Korin and his Animal studies, and Hokusai and Horoshige with their landscapes.

Student Art Works Shown In Gallery

The Florida State University department of art announced the opening of the Little Gallery Wednesday, with an exhibition of student work available for purchase.

The Gallery will be open from 9-5, Monday through Saturday, until Christmas, with an exhibition of drawings, prints, watercolors, and small oils, all priced under ten dollars.

The purpose of the Little Gallery is to make very reasonably-priced art originals available to interested students, faculty, and townspeople, as well as to give the creative and productive students of the department of art a ready outlet for their work.

Chest Contributes $300 Of Funds For Xmas Seals

A donation of $300 is being made to the local sponsors of the Christmas Seal Sale in connection with the Campus Chest drive at Florida State University.

This donation will come from Campus Chest funds, and is considered a contribution from all FSU students who gave their time and service, along with their money, to Campus Chest.

THE ANNUAL Christmas Seal Sale, sponsored by the National Tuberculosis Association, was launched Monday November 16, being sponsored locally by the Ochlockonee Tuberculosis and Health Association.

All students are being sent a leaf of Christmas Seals through the campus mail. Any student wishing to make personal contribution to the Seal Sale, can send their donations to the University Campus Chest Chairman in the enclosed envelopes.

THIS STEP is to allow any students who wish to make a further personal contribution to the Tuberculosis Association to do so. The Christmas Seal Campaign on the campus, directed by Shirley Traxler, Campus Chest Chairman, will continue until December 13.

Two radio programs will be presented by FSU students in connection with the drive, over the local Tallahassee stations. The first is a program entitled, "How the Christmas Seal Came To Be." Later, a presentation of the Problems of Tuberculosis Control in Leon County is to be featured.

NO GOAL has been set for the drive on the campus, because the contributions are made solely by those wishing to aid in the fight for Tuberculosis prevention. The Campus Chest committee asks only that the students give what they can, if they can, and if they want to give.

New Museum Exhibit Traces History Of Civilization Through Million Years

STUDENTS STUDY EXHIBIT—Vincent Cremate and Martha Webb examine a display in the university museum. Agricultural period of man is represented in the background.

High points of civilization down through a million years are illustrated in a new exhibit showing in the Florida State University Museum until January 10.

Dr. Hale Smith, director of the museum, said the development of man's culture is presented in relation to the basic law of energy because all living organisms require energy.

"TO SURVIVE, organisms must control and utilize energy in one form or another," the director said.

He explained how "by means of tools and weapons, social organization and knowledge, man is able to harness the forces of nature and put them to work for him." That is what Dr. Smith calls culture or civilization.

THE EXHIBIT shows four main sequences with continuity apparent because a large part of the culture of an age is passed on to the next. The periods presented can be classified roughly as "primitive," "agricultural," "steam" and "atomic."

Five hexagonal display area structures are used. Effect of the introductionary one is a fast revolving mass of vivid colors. The others are used to show a wide range of artifacts, from a bone awl to modern examples of ceramics. A painting of an industrial plant by Edmund Lewandowski, head of the FSU department of art, and a photograph showing destruction at Hiroshima are included.

A SIBILANT, popping sound effect, an electrical device carrying 17,000 volts and supplied by the FSU physics department points up the modernity of the exhibit.

Dr. Smith was assisted by students Taizo (Mike) Miake, Vincent Cremate, Glen Allen and Lewis Eckhart in assembling the exhibit.

THE EXHIBIT POINTS out how the amount of energy harnessed and put to work rates culture of an age as high or low. And it shows culture in this light on the increase down through the ages.

A crucial question prompted by the exhibit is, "will the vast powers of atomic energy be used for constructive or destructive purposes?" A hopeful note sounded by Dr. Smith is that social evolution has moved forward with technological advance in the past and may do so again.

"IT IS POSSIBLE that the military use of atomic energy may break down the political barriers that now divide the human race . . . and this may be done without crippling civilization." Dr. Smith said.

He warned that after uranium has been exhausted as a source of energy, it will be necessary to return to solar energy, and that will call for new techniques to harness energy since by then stored solar energy, coal, oil and gas will also be exhausted.

Big Industry Grows Aware Of Specialization Danger

There is a growing awareness on the part of big industrial concerns of the importance of having broadly trained, nonspecialized employees. The 21 November number of Saturday Review carries a series of articles which point to this awakening and make suggestions for channeling colleges out of their present trend toward narrow, one-sided professional training.

The series grew out of an exchange between representatives of industry and the liberal arts at a meeting of the College English Association Institute at Corning, New York, last October. It includes articles by highly placed officials of big industry, by educators and by an editor of Fortune magazine.

The problem before industry, and indeed before the whole nation, was clearly and concisely stated by Courtney C. Brown, assistant to the chairman of the board, The Standard Oil company of New Jersey. He lists a number of reasons why he believes "the liberal arts may in the future come to have a far greater attraction to business than they have in the past."

He notes "It is gradually becoming realized that a liberal arts education, a broad education rather than a narrowly specialized education, lies at the very heart of the great Western tradition which ultimately provides the climate in which business can best function.

"The characteristic and products of such an education, it seems to me, are broad comprehension, the ability to undertake appraisal in a calm, deliberate manner, an ordered capacity for reason, a sense of toleration, and a critical inquisitiveness—all of which are the basic ingredients of a free society in which enterprise can flourish."

". . . by and large the world of specialists is a narrow world, and it is difficult for the man who has lived in it to understand the overall effects of his actions and decisions, both within the business in which he works and on the relationship of that business to the outside world. As business has become bigger in its organization and in its units it has become increasingly important for top management to understand the impact of its decisions upon the society of which it is a part."

(Another) "reason why business is broadening its interest in the liberal arts is that we are realizing more and more that the mechanics of running a business are really not so very complex. Most of the troubles with which management is beset arise directly from the fact that businesses are composed of human beings."

Albert J. Nickerson, vice president and director of foreign trade for the Socony-Vacuum Oil Company, put it in a slightly different manner: "Every highly technological industry, will, of course, continue to need highly trained and skilled scientists and technicians. But science is concerned with the measurable, and when you have summed up all the factors of a man that can be measured, you still have not described or understood him. Science's dimensions seldom, if ever, attain to the level of moral values, and if we receive from the schools and colleges people whose experience is truncated by a lack in these wider dimensions we may end up with business staffed by men whose attitudes and concepts may be inadequate to deal successfully with the broad social and economic problems with which they are sure to be faced."

Other writers in the series suggested specific methods by which business firms and colleges could better prepare students along these broad lines and assure them a place in industry after graduation. The Flambeau will consider these methods in a later editorial. What is significant is that business, in whose name the so-called "practical", specialized courses are being injected into college curricula, is itself growing aware of the dangers of too narrowly trained employees.

● APPLAUSE FOR GYM TEAM

Throughout the year the "big" sports, notably football, get the lion's share of publicity, praise and money. No one thinks a game is successful unless it is attended by the lusty cheers of thousands. The idea of skill in a sport is almost submerged in the fanfare.

Yet with the team Florida State University should be proudest of having the case is quite different. The FSU gym team has no outstanding outlay of money. Its audiences are small and quiet by comparison with some other sports, and its publicity far less. But year after year, Coach Hartley Price's gym team unobtrusively captures the nation's top honors in its field. Few if any other college gym teams have won so much so consistently.

To watch the gymnasts in action is to understand why they are so highly honored. In one excellent act after another in this week's Gymkana show, the team members demonstrated the ultimate in athletic skill.

The Flambeau would like to do its part in calling attention to such slighted sports. We deeply regret that our publication schedule made more publicity for this year's Gymkana show impossible.

To the gym team: hats off and three honest cheers.

THE BOOKLIST

'Battle Cry' Sympathetic To Service

By BOB FOLSOM

Novels about the Second War are still popping up even though it is now going on nine years since it ended. Authors are an uneven lot when it comes to writing on war. Generally the two or three works considered the finest to come out of the First World War were Three Soldiers, The Enormous Room and A Farewell to Arms. The first two came very soon after it was over, and Farewell did not show until 1929, eleven years later.

In our time, war novels have been well spread over the space of years since Number Two ended, and notwithstanding, some of the really great postwar fiction has dealt with that conflict. In another aspect, too, the war novels such as THE NAKED AND THE DEAD, FROM HERE TO ETERNITY, THE CAINE MUTINY, and many others never saw the service in a good light. The authors, in one form or another, displayed clearly their dislike for the service. It has been pointed out that the characters seemed to hate the service as much as they did war. In this respect, writers like Dos Passos and Cummings and Hemingway hated war rather than the service, as their writing amply showed.

The newest war novel, Battle Cry by Leon Uris, is one of the very few books that praises the service in addition to realizing and presenting the misfortunes of war. Battle Cry has been almost nine years in coming, and it was worth the wait. It is one of those books hard to put down once you pick it up—and the first written in praise of the Marine Corps. Mr. Uris served in the Corps, and contrary to popular legend concerning authors who were service bound and hated the routine, he is exactly the opposite.

This is his first novel, and it ranks up among the top of its kind. It is a polished work but not without faults. The narrator of the book is Mac, "The name is unimportant," a thirty-year man who relates the story of Danny Forrester, a high school lad who joins the Marine Corps at the outset of the war, instead of pursuing a football scholarship at Georgia Tech. The picture of Danny Forrester does not seem to be completely grasped though there is lengthy parts dealing with his background, his home life and his love for Kathy, his high school sweetheart.

Also there is Constantine Zvonski, "a real feathermerchant" and seemingly throwback to "Maggio" of From Here to Eternity fame, only slightly milder. Marion Hodgkiss, the music playing, classic reading intellectual; Andy Hookans, the Swedish lumberjack, Joe Gomez, a renegade troublemaker, Lighttower, the wise-cracking Indian, and Captain Max Shapiro, as vivid a character of war fiction as you will ever want to read.

Each is treated with compassion. At a certain moment, each seems to realize his place in war.

They are members of a radio communication outfit called "Huxley's Whores," a part of the Second Marine Division. Major Huxley, who shapes the outfit into "the finest combat team in the Marine Corps," is another you will not easily forget.

The book takes you through their training at San Diego, to Australia and long waits between combat, and later the campaigns at Guadalcanal, Tarawa and Saipan, in which the Second Marine Division carved a heroic niche in history.

The boot training at San Diego is particularly vivid. It is dealt with at perhaps too long length, but painstakingly.

Battle Cry should be notched at the top of the must read list.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

"Boy, I'd hate to be going into THAT locker room!"

Let It Be Said

By DICK VICTORY

A interviewee was once heard to say:
Each little dog will have his day
But the crazy kid forgot
That usually it's at the burial plot

The annals of time have produced many great issues, yet none greater than Shakespeare's enduring query: "To be or not to be." And now, in our time, there rises a somewhat similar debate: "To study or not to study."

It proves to be a pressing question. A survey to determine what the superior college mind would say about such a subject was conducted. It proved nothing, conclusively. Here are the highlights.

The question: "Do you study?"

Former freshman Carl Coot said: "To hell wif it!" (Send mail to Pfc. Carl Coot; Icicle, Greenland.)

Harriet Harmone says: "Steady? So who's to go steady with yet."

Malcolm Moneybelt, a member of Beta Bottlela Beer says, "Shoot! I knew I was forgetting something."

"Study? Books? I'll wait until they make it into a movie," states Dorothy LaMost.

Earl Encyclopedia says: "It's better to study, although I will agree that it causes many hardships. I don't even have time to read Folsom's reviews."

The prime quote is attributed to Brandon DeMild. He declares: "I thought I had a fool-proof system. My girl, (Marilyn Ono) and I used to study for hours in the basement of the Amber House. But she got to be a pain in the neck. Yeah, she was a real pain."

But it was acute pain.

Pain! Pain! Come back, Pain.

Dear Mama Seminole . .

Dear Mama Seminole,

Your little brave, as usual, make big show like he study. Me make big vow; no more pink paper. Me find big teacher think me readum thick book. He writum me note—try get me tell him what in book. Me too smart though; I buy my boko, he buy his book—I readum five dollars worth ,he payum on five dollars.

When I came to reservation my friends tell me we got papoose chiefs who sit in council. Me hearum they want to make new teepe chiefs law. Me hearum mighty thunder crack.—Big Wind say no make law. Me thinkum big papoose chiefs too easy. Whole law book make easy blow by wind . Maybe Big Wind allow papoose chiefs limited law book that Big Wind no can touch. Maybe when papoose chiefs get certain un-restricted powers, student B. support student G. by v-o-t-e? Me hope some brave clear up papoose chiefs council organifusion.

Big shows made on reservation this week. One make you pay dollar to see families take morning exercises. Braves make still like hunter when he spot deer, then everyone beat hands together—make lots of noise. In other show everybody cry so bad can't talk plain. Everyone who stand in light when big man in chief's clothes come in. He try to tell something but everyone yell so loud he can't hear what he say. Everyone must like noise, for when actor stop, they make more by beatum hands together again. Everyone say both shows big success.

Me hear really big noise next week. They make bang scrape pull and blow on many shiney things all at one time while man stand on stump and wave stick try get-um stop. We writum next week, see how he come out.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole

Correction

Editor of the Flambeau:

The Homecoming Issue of the FLAMBEAU carried a feature story regarding the Department of Sociology which stated that Sociology is the only Social Science Department now offering the Ph.D. degree. If "Social Science" is defined as the Social Science Research Council defines it, then Psychology is to be included as a social science. At the Florida State University, however, the Departments of Speech and Psychology are classed with the social sciences for certain administrative purposes, and both the Department of Psychology and the Department of Speech offer the Ph.D. degree. I shall appreciate your carrying this correction in an early issue.

Thanks For Help

To the Editor:

By written verification I would like to thank all the Landis Hall group which helped in executing and carrying out my design for the Landis decorations. They were a great hard working group with such enthusiasm and spirit that it was a pleasure to work with them and leave the project in their hands during my absence. All this makes Homecoming a pleasure and adds to the spirit which in many phases of school activities has so greatly increased this year. This is the culmination of what is being built up for a strong spirit that will make FSU the "go" school.

I feel proud to have been in a small way a part of this program. Each year that I have thought and worked on Homecoming decorations it has been

CAMPUS CARAVAN

Times--And Ideas--Have Changed

By BEVERLY LACAYO

The whole campus awaits with bated breath an ex Cathedra statement by the Physics club on the reality of flying saucers. This subject was discussed hotly in their Tuesday meeting. Dr. Schwarz refuses to comment until he consults with the club president, Steve Edwards.

Conversation gleaned in the Longmire Soda Shop (We've moved from the Amber House) produced the following interesting flashbacks:

—A gorilla from the Sigma Chi Homecoming skit loping across the Opperman Hall Stage at concert time in an effort to get from one side of the Amphitheater to the other unnoticed.

—A girl failing to graduate in Music Education last Spring because she didn't know how to play the Star Spangled Banner. (Discussing the situation in earnest were Carolyn Simonds and June Conyers who both agreed that this would make wonderful Russian propaganda.)

—A news sheet called "Youth Time" appearing suddenly all over campus several years ago and creating quite a stir among students and administration by publishing administrative 'Scandals.'

The good old days, when it was considered chic to be anti-everything, are they gone? We predict that along about February, when the semester is just beginning and restless minds have nothing meatier than Sandspur to dwell upon, there may be a renaissance.

Two of our outstanding students are in Gainesville this weekend (together with students from Miami and Florida) discussing What's Right and Wrong with their respective Universities. Among the subjects to be discussed are a proposal to merge two state universities.

Now as a friend of mine recently pointed out, this talk of merging the two universities is quite a practical and beneficial idea. We would have a Law School and an Engineering School and they would get a School of Nursing and a School of Business. Not only that, the campus would get a lot of new land, our football team would become nationally famous, and we could have high quality artists such as Marian Anderson on our programs. He went on about the great advantages, and he was speaking, of course, of the most sensible merger of all—that of Florida State and Florida A&M.

All of this deep thought was brought about by a recent editorial in the Tallahassee Democrat. In defiance of all public opinion, and showing true pioneer courage, the Democrat climbed out on a limb by supporting equal but separate educational facilities for the white and Negro races.

The Supreme Court should not throw the two races together. The constitution was never meant to be interpreted in such a manner, they argue with righteous indignation. Equal but separate facilities, only are called for. Of course the facilities have not always been equal, but that is not the issue at hand, they continue —not so righteously. At any rate we should keep up the separate facilities because that's the way our forefathers meant things to be. A limp finis.

It may be of some amusement value to the editors of the Democrat and Tallahassee readers that there are many southern college students who are informed enough to realize that Negroes will never receive equal educational support from State governments as long as the Governments continue to maintain two independent school systems—a situation which is financially unrealistic for not-so-rich Southern states. Even funnier is the fact that almost as many of these students are mature enough not to shudder at the thought of being in the same classroom with people who have 'an extra tan.'

There have been opinion polls conducted on this campus which show that the Democrat is fighting for a lost cause (lost among this generation of students at least). So with a crop of enlightened young men and women entering adult life and perhaps a push from the Supreme Court, the South Will Rise Again.

Lack Of Bias In Writing Impossible

By BRUCE GALPHIN

One of the most telling measures of maturity is the extent to which people can give up the fancies of childhood. Even the wisest among us, though, cling to certain cherished ideals, no matter how hopelessly unattainable they are.

Regarding newspapers and other writing there is one outstandingly unrealistic yet widespread ideal people hold: they think a writer should be unbiased.

Even writers themselves are largely unaware how impossible such a goal is, or else they hypocritically delude the public by demanding their fellow-writers be unbiased. Almost never does a writer grapple with the central issue and honestly say he cannot be unbiased.

An unbiased piece of writing would be one which presents all the facts about a situation and does not weigh any more heavily than the others, but a little consideration shows this thing cannot exist.

When a person writes about a subject, he obviously cannot tell all the facts: time and space make it impossible. It is the function of a writer to decide what are the most significant details and write only these. One of the things that makes "unbiased writing" a paradoxical phrase is this very act of abstracting. Obviously, one person is going to consider certain points more important than others. Given the same mass of facts, a dozen writers would compose 12 different versions of the same story.

What we don't know is even more biasing than what we do know. Among the things we don't know should be included not only unlearned facts but also all the prejudicing experiences of life up to the present: those habits of thinking which make us believe things as we know them are the "natural" way. In the eyes of a Hindu, a man who did not think eating beef was a sin would be prejudiced. To a Frenchman, a Southerner writing from the point of view that segregation is a natural phenomenon would seem biased.

The way we live prejudices each of us in our politics, our social outlook, our taste in literature and music. This should not be thought of as a shocking statement but merely another way of saying that each of us has different experiences.

Most people are thinking about honesty when they say they want an unbiased account, and this is quite another matter. I am hardly trying to excuse deliberate falsification or distortion of fact. A writer can and should strive to be truthful, but even so we must remember the concept "truthful" includes some important qualifications. In practice, truthful means factual to the limit of the teller's knowledge and background.

Another commendable attribute of a writer is taste and discretion in putting over an idea, but again this should not be confused with the idea of bias.

If we can assimilate the notion that what we are reading, even though it be "straightforward" news, is merely one person's account, then we will not only get more out of what we read but will save ourselves no end of useless worry over a demand for a lack of bias.

Straight Quizzes Are On Way Out

By DAVID DREIS

If you're a listener of quiz programs—and thousands of people are, you're listening to a perfected version of something which was test-tubed on the public during the headless chicken days of radio.

In the past, when an emcee or a quizmaster was needed the studio announcer was handed a list of questions and the program went on the air. There wasn't much to it—that was also the audience's viewpoint and the programs folded.

The first quiz as we know quizzes today was "Professor Quiz" which was revived to the airwaves a few years ago, but returned to its archives when its prizes appeared slightly thimbled in connection to other programs of the same calibre. Still, on the revival, something was used which wasn't on the first productions—showmanship.

Now, the quizmaster is a perfectionist unique in his styling of asking questions. The serious quizzer has almost vanished and the comic emcee is before the wires. One thing that has the straight emcee-quizmaster technique these days is the panel show (What's My Line, Information Please, Who Said That?)

Some of the top emcee-quizmasters these days were never much as announcers and if quizzers hadn't come along they no doubt would be frosting. Of course, you don't have to have been an announcer—today. It's all the better if you know nothing about said subject before you ask questions.

Bert Parks, quizzer of Stop the Music for many years and Break the Bank and Double or Nothing now is one of the genial type always ready with a smile. H started out as a singer went into announcing and is probably the best emcee in radio-tevee.

Groucho Marx, probably is the best comic-quizmaster on audio and video today with his You Bet Your Life. This program wraps itself around more of Groucho's interviews with contestants and his rollicking retorts than the questions. No complaints out of me or a multitude of listeners.

Art Linkletter and Ralph Edwards are the practical-joker emcees with Art on People Are Funny and Edwards on Truth or Consequences. Of course Art delves into human relations with his ABC House Party and Ralph handles the heart perking This Is Your Life very ably.

Clayton "Bud" Collyer emcees video's Beat the Clock and numerous other quizzes, but he worked his way up from the announcing ranks and the acting ditties. For instance, Bud played Superman on the kiddie serial. He is called "the most liked emcee of all." We like him.

John Reed King, who Arthur Godfrey says used to be known as John Edward Reed King until he went in for monogrammed shirts, emcees more shows than any other quizmaster. Only 36, this boy really has it on the ball and has more showmanship than most people give him credit for. He puts a show together and makes a live person out of the dullest contestant anyone could find. We've seen him work in person and his magnetism is bewildering.

Other emcees and quizmasters who are perfectionists in this field are: Tommy Bartlett, (Welcome Travelers); Bill Cullen, (Winner Take All); Tom Moore, (Ladies Be Seated); Jack Bailey, (Queen For a Day); Red Benson, (Phrase That Pays); Herb Shriner, (Two For the Money); and Bob Hawk, (Be a Lemac).

Yep, it's a big business—not extra, but full-time.

TAMPA ORCHIDS

No Orchids Given For Truman Reply

By ORCHID ALONSO

Truman's recent "answer" to so-called charges is a gentle reminder of the freshman English courses. Every freshman should take advantage of that speech on: take it to class as a first class example of a "loaded spech," sprinkled liberally with virtually every device known to man for avoiding the issue.

In his sensational attack on the Harry Dexter White charge and on the present administration, the former president proves beyond a doubt his lack of polish, the complete lack of political finesse that so characterized his stay at the White House.

If with his name-calling etc., Mr. Truman thought he was going to fool all the people, he was mistaken. His co-workers in the party report that thousands of telegrams poured in, ninety-five per cent of these being in complete accord with him.

The figure is theirs, but there is hardly any doubt about it. The people who were wise enough to realize that Mr. Truman made no move whatsoever to vindicate his actions except through one statement that disagreed entirely with J. Edgar Hoover's statement the following day, would hardly take the trouble to denounce him. Truman's ignorance is apparently not worth the effort.

Other than the statement about Harry Dexter White being kept on in agreement and concordance with the FBI, Truman made no notable contribution to the American people, though he took up quite a bit of their time.

The remainder of the speech was strictly aimed at discrediting the present administration, accusing them of trying to discredit his administration. Possibly his most avid use of appealing to the masses, was in bringing out the name of Fred Vinson.

The American people like to play fair; they don't like the idea of slandering a man whose first duty was to his country, and who had since died.

The reaction may or may not have been favorable. No comments were made, but Truman got his point across. In the minds of many people listening in, Attorney General Herbert Brownell is a scoundrel who has slandered not Truman, but a beloved person.

It may be well to note, that on the following day, J. Edgar Hoover, the revered head of the FBI, stated in no uncertain terms that Vinson had disapproved of keeping White, but could not prevent it.

Is it then slander against Vinson to charge the Truman administration was aware that White had security risk tendencies, when although Vinson was a member of the Cabinet that conferred with Truman on the matter, he disapproved of the chief executive's point of view?

Truman's rabid charge was that Brownell was insulting a

University of Dacca students in East Pakistan happily unload a van of books sent as a goodwill measure by Florida State University recently. More than a goodwill stop, the books fill a great need in the Near and Far East for practical knowledge, a phase of education just beginning there.

Practical Books Unknown In Pakistan As FSU Continues Sending Carloads Off

Florida State University's friendly, international gesture of sending a carload of books to the University of Dacca in East Pakistan paid off in appreciation.

It all started last spring when Stanley Maron, former FSU faculty member, now teaching at the University of Dacca, wrote friends at FSU of the desperate need for boks in the Pakistan university.

"Practical books are unknown here. Not only textbooks, but all kinds of books in English will be deeply appreciated. The students are hungry for them," Maron wrote.

The FSU Division of Humanities answered the call, spearheading a drive to collect books. The International Students' Club, with a membership of 70 students from many countries, worked hard on the drive. Students and faculty from all departments cooperated in massing together books and more books, also postage money.

Hundreds of books were collected and sent from FSU to the University of Dacca.

And now comes the thanks from the United States Information Service, Dacca, Pakistan. The service highly commended FSU, sending front page clippings from the Dacca newspaper Markin Parkkrama with an appreciative story and pictures showing Dacca students unpacking the FSU books.

Restaurant Executives Make Awards To Southerners At Convention Here

Outstanding restaurateurs from eight southern states were honored with awards in ceremonies on the campus of Florida State University recently, it was learned yesterday.

The awards were presented in a Salut Aux Restaurateurs breakfast in the Student Center, climaxing a two-day meeting of the Southern Division of the Restaurant Trade Association Executives here.

THE RESTAURATEURS who received the awards—given for outstanding work in the food handling industry and for community and civic leadership are:

Honoree for Florida, Charles Creighton of Daytona Beach; Walter Oathout of Little Rock; James T. Casey of Savannah; L. J. Bliss of Greensboro; Lloyd Bearden of New Orleans; Morris Zager of Nashville, and Leon Scholsburg of Greenville. Roy P Etchison honoree from Houston, Texas received his award in absentia.

SPECIAL GUEST and principal speaker at the Sunday breakfast was W. O. (Bill) Wheeler, Indianapolis, president of the National Restaurant Association, who was also presented an award for distinguished service.

Dr. Charles Rovetta, dean of the FSU school of business and former head of the University of Chicago school of business gave an address of appreciation at the breakfast.

BEFORE INTRODUCING state executive secretaries who in turn introduced their honorees, Rodger Herndon, executive vice-president of the Florida Restaurant Association, outlined the qualifications by which the honorees were selected.

Herndon said they were judged on "having ten years or more in the food service field with five or more years in their present locality, for operating exceptionally clean and attractive food service, with sanitation standards rated as excellent and above."

HE SAID further, an operator must have an honest business reputation with a good credit rating; also, he must have earned and maintained a high regard from both patrons and employees.

"Not only that but be a person of high moral repute who takes an active leadership in the community's civic, social, welfare and religious activities," Herndon added.

THE FLORIDA vice-president said the honoree must be an active leader in the local and state restaurant association, and if reasonable to expect, the National Restaurant Association.

The program began with a luncheon at the Floridan Hotel. Later the group were guests of FSU president Doak S Campbell in his box at the FSU vs. Stetson football game. A get acquainted party later was followed by a dinner at the hotel at which Dr. Campbell was the principal speaker.

THE EVENT was planned by Dr. Donald Lundberg, head of the FSU department of restaurant and hotel management and Rogern Herndon, executive vice-president of the Florida Restaurant Association.

Conference Will Feature Dem School Musicians

By J. GARY CAMPBELL

Grades 7, 8 and 8 of Florida High School, the Demonstration School of Florida State University, have been invited to perform at the Music Education National Conference in Chicago next March.

Members of these classes have been organised as a chorus under the direction of Dr. Irvin Cooper, professor of music education at FSU. Dr. Cooper is presently working with FSU students in a laboratory section of the course offered in junior high choral methods.

Dr. Cooper will direct the students at their performance in Chicago. They will sing at the conference during the opening session of Vocal Music in High Schools.

The reason fo rtheir invitation is not to display choral skill but rather to illustrate the full four part potential of singing groups in junior high school, Dr. Cooper said.

New techniques have been developed with boys' voices in junior high school. According to Dr. Cooper, these techniques have been applied to choral teaching in the Demonstration School during the past year with gratifying results.

In Chicago, the students will show what might be achieved in these grades of any similar type school by using boys' voices throughout their various stages of voice-change during adolescent age.

Every boy and girl in the three grades is a working member of this group. Dr. Cooper said that the new theories and techniques make it possible for every child to participate with a great deal of interest.

"The day is passed," he said, "when boys experiencing vocal difficulties are automatically eliminated from outlet of their most natural musical expression, that is the singing group."

A day following the performance of the students, Dr. Cooper will direct a clinic in Chicago, using a group of junior high students from that area. He will demonstrate vocal classification and teaching methods based on his new theories. Similar clinics have been conducted by him in most of the southern, eastern and mid-western states.

Dr. Cooper said that FSU presently appears to be the center of new activity in overcoming vocal problems prevalent in junior high school. Teachers from widely spread parts of the country are coming here to learn these new techniques and theories of teaching.

V-A Urges Vets Check Courses Pending Approval

Veterans who want to learn whether the courses they wish to take under the Korean GI Bill hav been State-approved may get this information from their newest Veterans Administration Regional Office, VA sad today.

In urging veterans to seek such information from their VA Regional Office, and not from VA headquarters in Washington, VA explained that each Regional Office maintains an up-to-date record of courses approved by the State for Korean veterans. This information is not kept in Washington. It couldn't be, VA added, since changes occur constantly, and it never could be completely current.

VA also suggested that veterans do not ask their Regional Offices for complete lists of approved courses in all fields. Instead, a veteran should have a fairly good idea of the type of training he wants, when he contacts the VA for information on GI approved courses. This way, VA easily can furnish him names of schools offering courses in his chosen field, so that he can decide where to train.

If the veteran isn't sure what kind of training to take, he may avail himself of VA's vocational counseling. Through tests and interviews, the counseling process enables him to understand his capabilities and aptitudes, so that he's in a much betetr position to make a wise choice.

Politicians Wait For Supreme Court

By WARREN COBB

"In case of the impeachment of the Governor, his removal from office, death, resignation or inability to discharge his official duties, the powers and duties of Governor shall devolve upon the President of the Senate for the residue of the term, or until the disability shall cease; and in case of the impeachment, removal from office, death, resignation or inability of the President of the Senate, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the Speaker of the House of Representatives. But should there be a general election for members of the Legislature during such vacancy, an election for Governor to fill the same shall be had at the same time."

This is section 18 of Article IV of the state constitution. Upon the Supreme Court's interpretation of this paragraph rests the persistent question of whether there will be an election next year for Florida's highest office or whether acting Governor Charley Johns will remain in for for "the residue of the term"—considering this to mean the next three years.

The State Supreme Court met Monday to determine whether or not it had original jurisdiction in the suit filed by State Rep Ayres contesting Secretary of State R A Gray's acceptance of Brailey Odham's qualifying fee as a candidate for governor in 1954. Ayres stated that he was using this method of questioning Gray's legal right to accept Odham's fee in order to settle this vital question which has stirred up so much controversy and dissent throughout the state.

The Court concerned itself Monday with the question as to whether Ayres had sufficient interest, as a taxpayer and legislator, to bring the suit and whether the court could take original jurisdiction.

Ayres contended that any citizen, though not a candidate, had the right to file this suit and that the Supreme Court had jurisdiction because of the "supreme public importance" of the issue.

The court agreed. It brought the matter before it by issuing an alternative writ of mandamus calling on Sec. of State Gray to cancel Odham's qualification, thus saving the time and expense of having the issue come before it—as it ultimately must—from a lower court.

There has been considerable question as to why Johns himself has not settled this question by asking the Supreme Court for an advisory opinion. He is the only one who could do this. He did not.

After the court decided to take jurisdiction, it met yesterday to hear arguments from both sides.

Ayres, though personally holding the opposite point of view, presented the argument that "no vacancy exists in the office, the term, or the succession."

He said that no vacancy existed in the office because, according to the Constitution, any citizen exercising the powers and duties of an office actually fills that office and it cannot be vacant.

In other words, according to Ayres' argument, when the "powers and duties" devolve, so also the office itself must devolve.

A significant point here is that when Ayres made this argument, Justice Mathews reiterated his statement made Monday: "This court has already held (in the advisory opinion to Johns as to his title) that the 'powers and duties' of the office devolve upon the president of the senate, not the office itself!"

Ayres contended that there was no vacancy in the term because "there is never a moment . . . when the office of governor is vacant."

He then maintained that there was no vacancy in the succession because there are legal provisions for filling these vacancies.

The Court then asked Ayres what would have happened if Gov. McCarty had died in March when Sen. Sturgis was president of the Senate? Would the "powers and duties" have devolved upon Sturgis only until Johns was elected president of the Senate, and would they have then fallen to the latter? In other words, do they devolve upon the office or the individual?

Ayres stumbled on this point, but finally stated that he thought the "powers and duties" devolved upon the office rather than the indivdual and, therefore, Sturgis, then Johns, would have been "acting governor."

Ayres, in attempting to explain the last sentence in the succession law which provides for the filling of the vacancy, contended that this applied only when the "powers and duties" devolved upon the Speaker of the House.

Justice Mathews pointed out the inconsistency in Ayres' argument. He asked how the Constitution could be interpreted to mean that there could never be a vacancy when in the next sentence it provides a means to fill a vacancy?

Again, Ayres floundered.

Attorney Ward, presenting Johns' side of the case that there should not be an election next year, stated that the last proviso did not make sense so long as the phrase "for the residue of the term" was included in the section. He advocated disregarding the last sentence.

He also asked the court for more time to prepare his brief.

Attorney Walton, representing Johns, said: "I have come to the conclusion . . . that he (Johns) has a vested estate that amounts to a property right of which he cannot be divested except by impeachment. I cannot see how this court can divest him of the office."

Attorney J. Lewis Hall, representing Odham, pointed out that Johns was elected by only one district, not the Florida electorate. He further pointed out that in the last century Florida had a lieutenant-governor who, in the case of the governor's death, clearly succeeded to the office. This man, however, was elected by the entire state, said Hall, and had the framers of the State Constitution in 1885 wanted the office to fall to the President of the Senate—since there was no lieutenant-governor—they would have said so just as explicitly.

"But," said Hall, "the '85 constitution was designed to call for an election as soon as a man became governor who had not been elected by the entire state electorate."

Hall maintained that the "residue of the term" phrase applied only to the period prior to the next general election — in this case, the spring of next year.

The Court granted Attorney Ward his request for more time to prepare his brief since he had only been notified by the Court at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

So the question will hang until Monday.

But as an observer of these proceedings, it seems clear to me that there is little doubt as to the outcome of this controversy. The Supreme Court is going to rule in accordance with Justice Mathews' repeated assertion that only "the powers and duties devolved upon the president of the Senate, and not the office itself," they are going to hold that the office of governor of the state of Florida is vacant; and they are going to rule that the people will decide next year on the authentic successor to Dan McCarty.

Association Elects Garrett President Of College Clubs

Five Florida State University students have been initiated into Omicron Nu, national home economics honor society.

La Verna Jennings, president of the honorary at FSU, was in charge of the initiation program which emphasizes scholarship and also featured the Borden Award winner and cup winners.

STUDENTS initiated were Bette Srygley, Marie Sims, Rovanna DuParc, Helen Finch and Marguerite Reeves.

Miss Srygley, senior in home economics education, was also presented $300, the Borden Home Economics Scholarship award, by Dr. Ruth Connor, FSU professor of child development and family life.

ESTABLISHED at FSU by the Borden Company Foundation, Inc., in 1944, the scholarship is one of about 20 given annually throughout the country to encourage scholarship among undergraduate home conomic students. Borden scholarships are established only at colleges and universities maintaining high standards of home conomics work over a period of years.

The Omicron Nu silver scholarship cup went to Jean Carol McFarland and Donna McNab and honorable mention to Helen Espenlaub, all sophomores in the FSU school of home economics, for highest scholastic averages during their freshman years. The awards were made at a joint meeting of the honorary and the FSU home economics club.

Strauss 'Tossed Off' Operetta Fledermaus In Just 43 Days

By JOYCE POTTER

Perhaps Johann Strauss would like a reserve seat for the comic opera "Die Fledermaus" that the students of FSU are presenting Dec. 4, 5, 7, 8. Although Strauss wrote this reknown opera it would be difficult for him to attend this performance for he wrote it back in 1874.

Could Strauss have visualized the great heights that his opera would rise to when he was writing it? In the terms of time that it usually takes to write an opera, Strauss wrote it very hastily. After secluding himself in his villa at Heitzberg, he emerged 43 days later with the complete score.

DURING this time Strauss would write whenever he was inspired. He would write the music on his cuffs, on napkins, on envelopes or anything else that was handy. Most of his writings were done at night.

At first all of his work probably seemed in vain, for "Die Fledermaus" was not an immediate hit. Due to the state of bankruptcy and depression that Vienna was in, the people were not in the mood for comic opera. April 5, 1874, was the premier of "Die Fledermaus" in Vienna, but it only ran for sixteen performances.

HOWEVER, not to be daunted, the producers took "Die Fledermaus" to Berlin. Here it was met with great ovations. The play became the thing; it was a social necessity for every Berliner to have seen it.

In Paris even though presented in a garbled version called La Tsigane, The Gypsy, it was highly successful. As most people came to realize it was the beautiful, gushing score of Strauss' music that was important and popular. No deviations in the plot could change this.

AFTER these successes, Viennese producers were encouraged to try again. They cautiously inserted it into their repertory. It caught on and was soon the favorite of all operas.

The greatness of the music has been proved by the amount of tinkering which it has survived. Across the years, "Die Fledermaus" has served singers, librettists, lyricists, directors, producers and musicians.

IN VARIOUS forms the work has been produced as "The Bat," "The Marry Countess," "Champagne Sec," "A Wonderful Night," "Rosalinda," "The Masked Ball," "Fly by Night," and so on.

The version that will be presented at FSU was commissioned by Rudolph Bing on behalf of the Metropolitan Opera Association. It has been derived from both the Meilhac-Halevy and the Haffner Genee arrangements, with the special aim of providing the best possible and most unobtrusive frame for the wonder of Johann Strauss. The score is the original.

BROWARD DANCE

Broward Hall, freshman women's dormitory, will hold their formal dance in the dorm parlor tomorrow night. The girls and their dates will dance to the music of the "Collegians" in decorations depicting an Old-Fashioned Skating Pond.

Highlights of the evening will be the crowning of the Snow Queen and her King. Following the coronation will be featured entertainment presented by campus performers.

Donna Lou Harper, social chairman, appointed Edna Runnals as formal dance chairman. Shirley Seaman is mistress-of-ceremonies. The following are chairmen of their committees: LaVerne Craig, decorations; Donna Dillon, coronation; Marilyn Skinner, entertainment; and Mary Dressler, invitations.

MODERN LANGUAGE

Three FSU faculty members, Dr. Victor Oelschlager, Dr. Herbert Lacayo and Dr. G. S. Deland were elected officers of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association at a recent meeting held in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. Oelschlager and Dr. Deland were named co-chairmen of the Spanish Section of the association, and Dr. Lacayo chairman of the Teacher Problem section.

dead person whom no one could distrust, because that person had been aware of the situation. I repeat, Vinson disapproved.

It was especially amusing that Truman brought out his record as an infantry captain during the First World War. It was amusing, because in a column written in the Flambeau this summer by me, it was noted that the only action of which Harry Truman could be proud of—in that he did it wholly from out of behind his mother's apron—was his participation in the First World War. Other than that, various sources and authorities are quoted as saying Truman was a "mama's boy," except during his stay in the armed forces.

Dr. Randal Announces Advantages Of New American Studies Program

American Studies, according to Dr. Randal of the Florida State University English Department, is one of the newest developments in higher education.

Dr. Randal said that, instead of a "vertical" or "cut-and-dried" course of study as in literature, history, sociology or art, the new treatment offers a horizontal major to those interested, which crosses department lines. In this way, Dr. Randal said, the individual student is left to choose his own program, subject to the University's Director of American Studies, who is, on FSU's case, Dr. Randal.

THERE ARE FEW restrictions on what the student may choose, according to the information. One stipulation for the program states that the courses selected must have an "American subject-contact" or, a source in the United States relating to the field.

As yet, Dr. Randal noted, in selection of student programs in American Studies, no two programs have been the same. He said this is due to the fact that there is such a variety of program combinations available. These programs are contained in at least eleven departments here, he said.

ALSO A pre-requisite, Randal noted, is the requirement of all planning to use their own type program in the Studies course to take the Pro-Seminar in American Studies, an introductory course to the civilization that is involved with the different available subjects.

Dr. Randal added that American Studies should not be used by the average, the below-average students, or the student who has a specific vocation in mind. He said it is rather for the superior student who would like to range far afield in the world of knowlenge. In other words, to know something about everything. He noted American Studies is an ideal background for those studying law, foreign service, writing, teaching and other professional fields.

Service Honorary Outlines Events For Coming Months

Alphi Phi Omega, national service honorary, has big plans for the coming months on the Seminole campus.

Ever since 1950 when the Iota Rho chapter was organized on this campus, a used book exchange has functioned in the basement of the Alumni building selling books at prices the owners themselves charge for them. The used book exchange is usually a project of Alpha Phi Omega in most of the leading universities of the country. In the four chapters of APO in the state, three of them sponsor the service.

THIS YEAR the service fraternity plans to hold a state convention in Tallahassee with FSU as host. Led by President Bert McIntosh, the local chapter has sent delegates to the University of Miami and the University of Florida to personally invite their chapters to come.

"It's certainly a big job to be host but it will only fall on us once every four or so years . . . each chapter will sponsor it a year and we hope to add the names of Stetson University, Tampa University and Florida Southern College to the Alphi Phi Omega roster. Florida, Miami, Florida A&M and FSU have chapters already established.

DATES FOR the convention have not been officially set, but the University of Miami has requested that May 7-9 be adopted. The chapters are slated to meet in the legislature.

Later in the second semester the first annual Ugly Man contest will be under way. The Ugly Man contest is usually sponsored by APO in most of the country's universities and was originated by the service group at Georgia Tech. The University of Miami and the University of Florida both operate this affair to find the "ugliest man" on their campuses. Chairman David Dreis commented, "Actually, we hope that a student will feel 'honored' to win the coveted award and while most contests exhibit beauty, this distinction will be quite interesting, we believe."

THE BOOK exchange will again open at the end of the semester and continue through the first weeks of the second semester.

Membership in APO is open to all male students and rushing is held twice a year. Officers are: Bert McIntosh, president; David Dreis, vice-president; Tom Simmons, secretary; Hal LeVay, treasurer and Gene Lawler, historian.

Victim Getting Blood Supply From Brothers

Phi Kappa Tau's at Florida State University are "blood brothers" as well as fraternity brothers of Don Anderson of Miami.

The 20-year-old Miamian was badly hurt in a diving accident in May, 1952, just before completing his freshman year at FSU. Swimming with a group of college friends, he dove head first into shallow water at a Panama City beach, crushing several vertebrates and severing his spinal cord.

HE HAS BEEN paralyzed from the neck down since the accident. In undergoing a series of spinal operations, his primary need has been for extra blood.

And his FSU fraternity brothers have kept him supplied. Periodically they each give a pint of blood which is sent to the hospital where Anderson is a patient.

MOST OF HIS last 18 months have been spent in Florida hospitals. He was taken to Bay County hospital after the accident, and remained there until August, 1952. He then had a brief interlude at his home in Miami where his mother, Mrs Teressa Schneider, took care of him.

Next he was moved to the Harry-Anna Elk's Hospital in Umatilla, then to an Orlando hospital, then back to the Umatilla hospital. Next he was taken to a children's hospital in Miami, and finally to the Jackson Memorial hospital where he is now a patient.

WHERE HE GOES, the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity blood follows. In fact the Florida State University student-body is back of Anderson in his fight for recovery. Over $1500 was raised for a campus-wide "Don Anderson Fund."

Tarpon's Show Theme Secret Until Opening Night Is Near

Florida State University's famed Tarpon Club, composed of women students with outstanding ability in swimming and water acrobatics, will present its annual show on February 15 through 20, it was learned today.

A theme has been chosen for the forthcoming show, but will not be revealed until near show time, spokesmen for the group said.

THE HONORARY swimming club, which has gained national recognition with the two outstanding aquabatic programs it presents each year, will have 43 girls participating in the show.

In the tryouts held earlier this year, 23 girls were chosen to be "Minnows," to complement the 20 members already in the club. The girls had to know various strokes and stunts in order to be members.

IN PAST YEARS, the Tarpons have taken part in water demonstrations for the Women's National Aquatic forum, have given water demonstrations for the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation in Atlanta, and have collaborated with other campus groups and nearby organizations desirous of furthering an interest in rythmic water skills.

The skill and beauty of movement portrayed in various Tarpon routines has been featured twice in Grantland Rice's Sportslight movie shorts.

OFFICERS of the club are: Lou Shrine, president; Jan Eichinger, vice-president; Betty Ann Theobald, secretary; Ardis Bourland, treasurer; Ann Coryell, publicity chairman; and Miss Paula Keiser, co-sponsor.

Dormitories Play Host to Amiable Yellowish Kitten

A large, yellow cat is a regular visitor in the Florida State University women's dormitories.

The animal, thought by some to be part Persian, turns up every few days in a different dormitory and wanders through the halls until someone leads him outdoors again.

Who owns the cat and where he comes from is a mystery. One dormitory house manager stated that he has been seen on FSU's campus for the past two or three years and is fed by many of the dormitory residents.

The cat, known as Sylvester to some of the students, is quite particular about his dormitory habits. He insists upon a bed for his sleeping quarters and absolutely refuses to ride the dormitory elevators.

Sylvester is usually gentle in nature but occasionally displays resentment at too much handling by the students or when removed from someone's bed.

Two Swan Songs In One

In addition to being the season finale for both squads, tomorrow night's grid outing in Tampa may well mark the finale of the FSU-Tampa grid relationship as well.

At any rate, for the time being unless Seminole athletic officials ere bent on plowing through an 11-game schedule next Fall. And with the likes of Villanova, Georgia, Auburn, Furman, VMI and Mississippi Southern already on the agenda, it doesn't appear too feasable

Of course only nine games are officially in the fold for '54, but look for Abilene Christian to be named as the tenth opponent and fill that Sept. 25 home date, possibly within a few days.

But back to Tampa. A great deal depends on this game, even if the home folks are willing to even talk about an 11-game card for next season. Tampa sent up a signal a month or so ago to the effect that they were being crowded off the Tribe schedule. But their fears were quickly subdued and FSU officials said they would talk about a game as soon as the season ended.

But since that incident a lot has happened. Georgia and Villanova were added, and the Seminoles achieved major college classification, a goal they've been after for two years, only to be set back by scheduling difficulties.

Wrestling Match or Football?

In the past at some of these FSU-Tampa frays, fans have been ard pressed to decide whether they were at a wrestling match or otball game, especially when the games were played at Tampa. addition, the officiating has left a great deal to be desired—en played in Tampa. Memories may be short, but it takes a t one to forget the slugfest which took place on Phillips field 1951

At any rate, tomorrow night's affair should find the Spartans heir best behavior of the season if they're still interested in her year on the Seminole schedule. But as far as we've been e to ascertain, Tampa has not officially negotiated with FSU a return match.

Unconfirmed rumors have it that the Tampans are about ready to throw in the towel as far as the grid sport is concerned. Just rumors, mind you, but a lack of dollars in the athletic pot at the non-state supported institution is no secret. And in this heyday of inflation those dirty ole greenbacks are the basic ingredients in the running of a college football team, despite the oft-repeated virtues of desire, hustle and spirit.

This was borne out in Tampa's lengthy schedule this season—games, the majority of which were played at home before slim owds. However Tampa officials are hoping for upwards of 12,000 fans at tomorrow night's tussle which would by far exceed the tendance at a college tilt there this year. If so, it would probably help keep the Spartans in the financial running for another season.

Taylor, Fiveash, George, Mack

Surprise of the Associated Press Little All-America eleven, of se, was the naming of Jimmy Lee Taylor to a second team end But from our standpoint, overriding the surprise is the satisfaction.

Jimmy's had a great season and is perhaps one of the most underrated players on the squad, save possibly for guard Jerry cobs.

Look at his record. The junior flankman has already hauled 20 passes for 377 yards, the latter mark an all-time school record h he broke only last Saturday. He's only four passes short eing the single mark established by Curt Campbell last

Tom Nugent probably best describes his worth. Asked the other night for an opinion the head man quickly replied: "You can tell what I think of him by how much I play him. He's in there every minute unless he's hurt or tired." That's probably the best evaluation a coach can give of a player.

Boundin' Bobby Fiveash, of course received honorable mention, nd if injuries hadn't kept him sidelined half of the season he t might have been placed on the first eleven. State scribes e that high on him. After the Abilene Christian tilt here early he campaign, a Texas writer compared him to the fabulous Mr. Doak Walker, and you need no introduction to the Doaker.

Also on that same second team was another home-town boy—Sammy Marshall, giant tackle of Coach Jake Gaither's undefeated Florida A&M team, national Negro champions. A fine pro spect, he's rated among the finest college tackles in the land.

If you read the selections, you no doubt noted the name of Hugh Laurin Pepper on the first team ballot. Yessir, we'll vote him, too. The Mississippi Southern star didn't do much damage to the Seminoles this season, since he was shackled by an kle injury, but oh, what that nasty man did the one before er in Doak S. Remember?

When the time rolls around for All-State selections it wouldn't surprising to see four Seminoles on the first team. Not that ey will make it, of course, but from this corner it's hard to see ow you can keep them off.

Taylor and Fiveash should have little difficulty in making the uad, but how can you keep Al Makowiecki and large George Boyer down? Boyer has copped Lineman of the Week honors ice running as has Fiveash in the beckfield. Makowiecki received e honor once. And Boyer and Big Mack have played some fine otball this season as evidenced by the tackle charts. May stice triumph.

Tribe Hoopsters Face Miss. State

STATE COLLEGE, Miss.—Mississippi State's Maroons and Florida State's Seminoles start on the first lap of the 1953-54 college basketball race here tonight. The game, set for 8 p. m. (CST), will serve as the season opener for both teams.

Coach Paul Gregory's Southeastern Conference Maroons and J. K. ("Bud") Kennedy's Seminoles will be meeting for the third time in the intersectional cage series. FSU walloped the Maroons, 82-52, in Tallahassee last season after Mississippi State trimmed the Floridans, 75-47 in their first dual here two years ago.

Florida State, pronounced "ready" by Kennedy, has seven letterman back for its seventh season of basketball.

SAME FIVE

With one exception, junior forward Jerry Weathafer, the Seminoles will open tomorrow night with identically the same starting line-up that drubbed the Maroons on their "coldest" night last season. Westhafer, a 306-point man in '52, made the trip but a recurring back injury and a recent ankle sprain will keep him almost glued to the bench.

Otherwise, the Seminoles will have an experienced man at every station. Junior Ham Wernke, a Helms Foundation All-America selection and Florida's hottest pointmaker last season, will open at one guard. Wernke potted 468 points in 22 games for a 21.3 average last season. He dropped in 23 points in that defeat of Mississippi State.

OLER AT GUARD

Starting at the other guard will be Jimmy Oler, the 5-11 floor general who was the outstanding freshman find last year. Rick Benson or Gary Wold, both 6-7, will open at center and Duane Gordon (6-4) and Dick Artmeier (6-1) at the forwards.

Other players who are likely to see action — the 12-man squad is quartered in Columbus—are forwards Ed Wursback and Tom Dellahan, center Edwin Reeves and guards Tom Burst and Tom Nisalki.

"We're in as good condition as we can possibly be at this point of the season," Kennedy said today. "But Mississippi States is perennially a fine basketball team. We'll have our hands full."

Swimming Card Announced By Danford, Stults

A 16-meet slate for the 1953-54 Florida State swimming team has been announced by athletic director Howard Danford and swimming coach N. B. Stults.

The slate lists eight home matches.

The schedule is the most attractive and the toughest ever carded for an FSU tank team. Matches with Georgia, Kentucky and Georgia Tech of the Southeastern Conference: duels with Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference, and Texas A&M of the Southwest Conference are listed.

A strong nucleus of fine performers return from the 1952-53 tankmen which posted a 7-1 dual meet mark, best in the South, and finished seventh in the NCAA tourney at Yale this spring.

The Tribe unofficially opened its season last night with the annual Garnet-Gold intra-squad swim meet in the East Campus gym.

The first home meet is with Jacksonville Navy on Dec. 12.

Theta Chi Meets Lambi Chi Alpha For Chest Benefit

Theta Chi will meet Lambda Chi Alpha in Doak S. Campbell Stadium Saturday, a week from tomorrow at 2 p.m. when the two fraternities clash for the benefit of the Florida State University Campus Chest.

The two men's social groups meet Saturday for their third annual football game, the proceeds of which are donated in full to the yearly Campus Chest Drive, the local counterpart of the national Red Feather drive.

SPOKESMEN FOR the two teams have announced there will be a "Bowl Queen" chosen at the event. They said each of the 12 FSU sororities have been asked to submit a candidate for the title. Judges from among the fraternities will select the winner and two attendants, they said.

Preceding the game Saturday, a parade will be staged. Starting at the FSU Student Center the procession will be led by several convertibles and Lambda Chi Alpha cheerleaders.

SPOKESMEN FURTHER urged everyone on campus to support their Campus Chest drive through purchasing a ticket to the Charity Game, even if he can't plan to see it. They said this will be the year's last contribution the charitable drive, urging a large turnout at the game.

Tickets are selling for 36 cents and may be bought at any one of a number of points around campus. All members of Theta Chi and Lambda Chi Alpha have blocks of tabs, and they can be contacted at their respective houses.

Volleyball Team Vies Tonight In St. Pete Meet

The Seminole volleyballers will make their first appearance of the season tonight in St. Petersburg when they vie in the fourth annual St. Petersburg Invitational Volleyball Tournament.

Two years ago, Coach Bill Odeneal's charges were runner-up to the Miami Firemen in the event. They did not participate last year since they were playing in a tourney at Pensacola where they placed second to Pensacola Navy.

Six letterman will be on hand for tonight's opener—Howard Gould, Wallace Cox, Ray Johnson, Stan Humphries, Phil Slaton and Joel Carter. Newcomers set for action include Len Kaczmarek, Arnold Bobson, Harold, Stone, Bernard McCann, Lyle Iazrire, Jack Lewis and Jack Margens.

"The squad has more depth this year," said Odeneal. "However, most of the boys are new to the game."

"You know, it takes several years of experience to make a seasoned player. First comes the fundamentals, then you have to work together as a team.

"But the boys have put in plenty of night practice in the west campus gym and I hope we can come up with a winning combination.

I hope we can get out of the habit of being runnersup and finish first for a change," he added.

Tonight's affair will be the squad's last outing until after the Christmas holidays. Then in rapid succession they defend their State AAU title, and face here teams from Macon, Columbus, Albany and Atlanta, Ga.

Highlight of the season is the Southern Intercollegiates to be held at Davidson College Feb. 26-27. Odeneal said that a complete schedule would be announced later.

Phi Delts Snatch Frat Net Singles

Not satisfied with the gridiron championship alone, Phi Delta Theta snatched the tennis singles to put them way out in front in the bid for the intramural athletic trophy.

Last Monday Phi Delt Spafford Taylor out-swatted Kappa Alpha gentleman Kingman Brittain to take the tennis singles title. The Phi Delts won last year too.

The tennis singles marks the end of intramural play until after the Christmas holidays. After the holidays, in 1954, track, tennis doubles, volleyball, and bowling will take the stage in the intramural spotlight.

Seminoles At Tampa For Curtain Ringer

The Florida State University footballers are scheduled to leave here by plane today for Tampa where they will ring down the curtain on their '54 grid campaign tomorrow night against the University of Tampa. The Phillips field clash is set for 8 p.m.

FIVEASH

TAYLOR

And if pre-game forecasts run true to form, a rough-tough high-scoring battle is in the offing.

In fact, Coach Tom Nugent has already predicted it will be the Seminoles' roughest of the campaign and he looks for plenty of scoring

"Tampa's record is no indication of the type ball of which they are capable," Nugent said. The Seminole head man pointed to the fact that the Spartans have not been held scoreless this season.

The Tampans, with a 8-5 record for the year, have rolled up 186 points in their 11 outings.

DOUBLE MEANING

The game will have a double meaning for Nugent's charges. The Tribe, 4-5 on the season, will be seeking to climb to the .500 mark and will be looking for its first win over Tampa since 1950.

Tampa upset the favored Indians at Tampa in 1951 and last year they turned a tossup tilt into a 39-8 victory here.

Another feature of the tilt is the fact that the mythical Florida Small College Championship will be at stake. Tampa has lost to Stetson while the Seminoles edged the Hatters 13-8. However, it will mark the Tribe's last appearance in the "small college" class. They attain major ranking with the start of next season.

Leading the Seminole offense Saturday night will be Jimmy Lee Taylor, junior end from Tampa, who was selected for the Associated Press second team Little All-America squad Taylor, who has caught 20 passes, recently broke an all-time FSU pass receiving mark.

In the backfield, breakaway runners Bobby Fiveash and Junior Matts will carry the load from their halfback posts. Fiveash, the Indians' leading scorer with 36 points, was accorded honorable mention on the AP squad. He has been named Florida Back of the Week twice this season—the only player to turn the trick two times.

Nugent's cause for alarm is justified. The Spartans boast a top passer in quarterback Bill Minahan and have a hard-running fullback in Tom Spack. End H. L. Hiers is a fine pass receiver and a good defensive player.

FSU drills this week have emphasized pass defense as preparations are made for stopping the aerial artistry of Minahan.

Several key Seminoles are on the injured list and their usefulness Saturday night is a question mark. Halfback Carl and Robert Grenn, Stan Dobess, and Billy Graham are not in top shape.

GAME WEDNESDAY NAMES INTRAMURAL GRID KING

By ART KENNERLY

Next Wednesday night at 8 p. m. fraternity-conquering Phi Delta Theta will play touch football with the dormitory champion, the Penthouse Gang to see who will be crowned king of campus footballing intramuralers.

The dormitory team will be shooting for a goal: the first campus football championship for a dormitory.

All of the fraternities were out to get Phi Delta Theta this year. But they did it again.

For the second straight year, the boys from the Phi Delt House captured the touch football spot in the fraternity intramural league.

The Phi Delts nosed out a surprisingly sharp Sigma Phi Epsilon team last week in a nip-and-tuck duel that ended with the score meshed at 6-6. The Phi Delts took the game on first downs, 4 to 2.

It was a heartbreaker for the SPE's, who played grade-A football to become an unexpected contender for the football crown. Powerhouses Kappa Alpha, Alpha Tau Omega, Theta Chi, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Delta Tau Delta were all gunned down one way or another during the final two weeks of play. The little SPE all of a sudden became big SPE.

NO STRANGER

When the SPE's met the Phi Delts, they weren't strangers. Last week the SPE's scrapped with the Phi Delts on even terms.

But in the last five seconds, Phi Delta Theta's specialist of specialists, Art Hemple, bombed the SPE defense with aerials and pulled the game out of the grave.

Tampa Spirit High For Seminole Tilt Coach Reports

TAMPA. — Tampa's hot and cold running Spartans who seem to play their best games when in the role of underdog, have put in a full week in preparation for their final game of the season here tomorrow night against rival Florida State.

Contact drills and plenty of scrimmaging occupied the majority of Coach Marcelinio Huerta's gridders during the week as they seek to record their third win in three years over a FSU team.

The Spartans who have plowed through a tough 12-game schedule this season, have looked like a different team this week according to some observers.

Huerta believes the squad has more spirit this week than at anytime since it upset previously unbeaten East Carolina here Nov. 7.

"The boys really want this one," Huerta said yesterday. But the young Tampa mentor felt that his charges would have to play their best ball of the season if they win.

Tribute To Educator Includes Works By Classics Faculty

Two members of the department of classics have papers in the recently published volume of Studies Presented to David Moore Robinson on his Seventieth Birthday.

Dr. William C. Kirk, Jr., assistant professor, writes on the literary technique of Plato as seen in two of the dialogues. Dr. Francis R. Walton, professor of classics and department head, writes of the historical background of a Greek poem by Callimachus, of which a copy on papyrus was recently discovered in Egypt.

Professor Robinson, in whose honor more than 200 American and European scholars have contributed papers to this volume of Studies, is the dean of American archaeologists. His most important excavations have been at the 4th century B. C. city of Olynthus in Greece; the results of these excavations have been published in fourteen volumes. Long a member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins University, he is now teaching at the University of Mississippi.

Oberlin College Editor Reports Visit To Moscow University, Newspaper

This account of Soviet student life was written by Daniel Berger, co-editor of the Oberlin College Review and is reprinted here.

Berger was one of three college newspaper editors who returned recently from a two week visit to the Soviet Union.

I met no anti-eggheads in Russia.

Indicative of official Soviet attitudes toward higher education might be newest, largest and most streamlined architectural show-place in the capital, Moscow University.

FROM the 32-story top one gets a fine view of Moscow in the distance, and of the immense University spreading out beneath. On the way down, in the only streamlined elevator I saw during my trip, a student proudly told me the descending sped. "How fast," he asked, "do elevators descend in your university?"

He was a blond peasant from the Kursk area, proud of his streamlined university which began classes Sept. 1, proud of having worked two years on it's construction prior to studying philosophy. Entrance exams, we later found out, were waived for student volunteer workers on building.

THE MOSCOW University, name of the student newspaper, publishes twice weekly. For 18,000 students in the new building and on the old campus in downtown Moscow, it prints 1,500 copies. Subscriptions are 16 rubles a year, single issues 20 kopeks. Most are read by students from wall bulletin boards, a practice similar to the posting of metropolitan newspapers on walls outside.

Four full time workers and over 100 others put out the paper, smaller in format than the Review, but without advertising. Editor Avenir Zakharov has been a Party member since 1946. Previous journalistic experience includes editing a military paper after serving with the Baltic fleet. He says he is now a graduate student with the faculty in journalism.

SECOND in command is the secretary, bald Semyon, Gurevich, also a Party member. His job corresponds to managing editor. His desk, covered with dummy sheets and copy, was in the outer office where a dozen could easily work. Zakharov has a large, well-appointed and immaculate inner office that would do justice to any executive.

Both men seemed extremely well along in years for student editors. I was impressed that both were Party members, not mere Komsomols. (The Komsomol is the Communist youth organization in the Soviet Union.) Zakharov explained appointment procedure as coming from an annual student elected conference. In answer to my question, whether non-Party members could get the job, he and several others smiled. Yes, he said, it could happen. My impression from the smile is that it doesn't.

THE UPPER left hand, or lead, of a Russian paper is always the editorial. In this paper it is likely to discuss exams, science and the like, according to Editor Zakharov.

Policy is made by a council sitting every week. News is mostly of campus interest, and mostly reads like American publicity handouts. Exception to the local interest rule was the picture of Howard Fast awarding Paul Robeson the Stalin Peace Prize. The same picture appeared in every Moscow daily.

EXCELLENT restaurants, streamlined little rooms with radios—all alike—small sandwich counters and book stores in the halls, rich paneling throughout, made this new building one on which the Soviets spared nothing to make it their finest. Students know it and are grateful.

A small geology-chemical analysis lab was streamlined and efficient-looking. All fittings were Soviet-made. The geology faculty's library had a great number of English and American journals and publications, more in this field, perhaps, than Carnegie Library. First one to catch my eye was Radioactivity in Some Oil Fields of Southeastern Kansas, Geological Survey Publication 988-E, U.S. Government Printing Office, 1953. Periodicals also were up to date.

IN KIEV U., after the usual political discussion was more than usually antagonistic, almost two hundred students ran to look at the Americans. They were extremely friendly and eager to try out their English.

We were guaranteed the library had a good variety of American literature. We were shown the stacks, containing technical magazines and tied up bundles of the New York Daily Worker. We asked again about literature. It was elsewhere in the library, came the answer, but we never saw any.

A TRANSLATOR, who frequently answered us back without translating, was a fourth-year English student with a love for our literature. Twain, Dreiser, Whitman, Poe and Howard Fast are her favorites. We became friends, quoting favorite lines from Poe, until it became evident I didn't know many.

Leningrad University Library, much larger, had a better but still limited collection, if the card catalog I inspected was complete. The director had returned the previous week, he said, from a geometer's convention in Italy. They were the group that seemed most willing to lend credence to what I said of American education and life. The students there, like the rest of the city, seemed markedly more Western.

FROM TALKS with students at all three institutions I gained the impression of great drive; the goal being often the contribution they could make for the Soviet state. Not once did I feel a sense of rebelliousness, or independence from the ideals officially expressed.

Foundation Offers Scholarships to 1954 Graduates

Florida State's college graduate in 1954 may now apply for the Ford Foundation scholarship grants which, this year, will send researching students to Asia or the Near and Middle East to do work concerning these areas.

Sponsored by the Ford Foundation Board on Overseas training and Research, the program is designed to help meet the need for larger numbers of American men and women in such fields as business agriculture, government, education, and the like to acquire a deeper understanding of the cultures, histories and current problems of the Asian people.

In addition to the graduate of 1954, Ford Foundation offers the same opportunity to persons already graduated and in their careers.

Announcements say the applicant must be under 36, and should be a United States citizens or an alien in the process of naturalization. Awards are made for periods from one to three years, and in amounts depending on the applicant's qualifications, experience and particular field of study.

The FSU Placement Office, 203 Westcott, said today application blanks are available to anyone interested in learning further about the Ford Foundation Research Grants.

LATEST COLLEGE SURVEY SHOWS LUCKIES LEAD AGAIN

Last year a survey of leading colleges throughout the country showed that smokers in those colleges preferred Luckies to any other cigarette.

This year another nation-wide survey—based on thousands of actual student interviews, and representative of all students in regular colleges—shows that Luckies lead again over all brands, regular or king size... and by a wide margin! The No. 1 reason: Luckies taste better.

Smoking enjoyment is all a matter of taste, and the fact of the matter is Luckies taste better—for 2 reasons. L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. And Luckies are made better to taste better. So, Be Happy—Go Lucky!

Luckies give you finer smokes,
So buy 'em by the carton—
And if you haven't tried 'em yet,
It's time you got a-startin'!

Students Must Give Number '14' Stubs From Activity Book

Tickets will go on sale at 10 a.m. tomorrow at the Conradi Theater box office for the Florida State University Department of Speech's Romeo and Juliet, second major production of the year.

THE CONRADI box office will continue selling reserved seats from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily throughout the run of the play, December 11, 12, 14 and 15, the speech department said. Curtain time Friday night will be 8:15 p.m. when FSU students will present for the first time their interpretation of the great classic drama.

The production, due to its 24 scene changes, has presented many interesting problems for students and directors to work out according to Dr. Lynn Orr, director. He said the original "poly-dimensional" setting, characteristic of all Shakespeare's plays, had to be adapted to the Conradi stage. "We have worked

APO To Distribute Flambeau; Groups May Request Copies

Distribution of the Flambeau was been taken over by Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, starting with this issue, editors announced today.

Previously, the Flambeau has had its staff members and reporters distribute the student newspaper on the university campus.

ALPHA Phi Omega answered a call after the Flambeau had requested a fraternity on campus take over the distribution. This was due to the shortage of students on the staff.

All members and pledges of APO will help in the distribution according to Vic Mickunas, project chairman. Another in a list of projects taken over by APO, the fraternity had recently shouldered the management of the student book exchange.

ALPHA Phi Omega was founded in 1925 at Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, to carry out service programs for the benefit of the campus, community organization itself, and the nation.

Campus organizations desiring Flambeau distribution are requested to contact Alpha Phi Omega representatives in basement of Longmire building.

Sandspur Begins Rehearsals For 1954 Production Today

Rehearsals open today for "Panorama," the 1954 Sandspur "All Student" production set for late February, producer-director Frances Bailey Stokes said today.

Solo vocal leads in the all-music and dancing show have been posted on the Sandspur call board, according to Leo Andrews, "Panorama" author and co-director. Solo vocalists will include Sandra Darling, Jo Ann Hosbach, David Dreis, Jim Bradley and Ricky Powell. Also, Delano Driver, currently starred in the Light Opera Guild's "Die Fledermaus", Thalia Whitehurst, and Ray Kickliter.

CHARLIE SINGER and Jimmy Hanks, notable since their arrival here last year for their original vocal and string accompaniment novelty numbers, will appear in the vocal roles as will Ed Franklin and Dick Puckett, who remained in the public eye throughout the football season this year with their antics as baton twirlers at the head of the FSU Marching Chiefs.

Andrews explained there will be more vocal roles cast later this week. "Also," he said "Choral and dance positons on "Panorama's cast of characters will be announced soon."

THE ANNUAL all-student production is scheduled for February 17 through 20. Deviating from the traditional lines of the musical comedy "Panorama" will feature on all-musical-all-dance theme. "Love in several different situations will be portrayed," Andrews said. He noted the one-and-a-half-hour show will interpret "Love in New York," "Love in the French Quarter," and "Love on the Campus", to name a few. "Each scene has its own leading character," he added.

Climaxing the yearly performance Saturday the 20th will be the Sandspur Dance, formal and a traditional closing to the featured week. No band has been chosen for the affair yet, according to Sandspur business managers. However, a name orchestra is usually contracted, they said.

Newman To Award Miniature Oscars To Martin Players

Three miniature "Oscars" will be given Thursday night to the top performers of the recent Martin Theater Guild production, "City of Kings," Newman Club, Catholic student group said today.

Trophies will be awarded the three outstanding actors at a special semi-formal banquet honoring the cast at the Newman House Thursday evening. Newman Club said other honored guests will include Fathers Amino and Connelly, Dr. and Mrs. McDonough, Mrs. Marion Sharkey, Newman hostess and Miss Genevieve Scheur. John Pistone, president of Newman Club here will be master of ceremonies. Father Profetta, of the Newman Club group will award the "Oscars" following an address by Dr. O'Dea of the FSU School of Education.

MARTIN THEATER GUILD, a new dramatic group, spurred this year and sponsored by the Florida State University Catholic students, presented their interpretation of the celebrated Broadway play "City of Kings" to eight packed houses two weeks ago, Newman spokesmen said. "The Guild will cast for its next production following the Christmas holidays," they said. Rehearsals for "Savanarola" will begin January 10, 1954.

Row Culminates In Resignations At U. of Georgia

National attention was drawn to the University of Georgia campus with the resignation of editors from the Red and Black, student newspaper, and a series of angry charges and countercharges centering around Roy V. Harris, member of the Board of Regents.

So far the affair has resulted in the resignation of at least four editors as a result of censorship imposed by the University administration following an anti-segregation editorial a month ago.

IT ALL started with the November 7 issue when the Red and Black editorialized: "With Communism knocking at the Negro's back door, we cannot afford to let educational segregation barriers stand. It is as plain as the red flag in Russia that continued segregation and suppression can and will cause the death of democracy in the hands of its own leaders."

Roy V. Harris, University regent and publisher of the Augusta Courier then stepped in. "I brought the editorial to the attention of the regents and found that there were two young students present covering the meeting for the Red and Black . . . I frankly told them that the money for the operation of the Red and Black would be discontinued unless they did a better job."

WITH FRONT-PAGE editorial, cartoon, and news story the Red and Black editors replied in the next issue. Asserting that Harris was trying to squelch their freedom of the press, they stated, "Mr. Harris has given us two choices — to stand up for what we believe and lose our voice or to acquiesce and lose face. We choose the first course."

Harris replied in the Augusta Courier, "There is no question of freedom of the press involved. The question is whether or not the board of regents will be dictated to by a little handful of sissy, misguided squirts . . . Everytime I see one of these little sissy boys hanging around some college, the more I think every one of them ought to play football. What we need today is more he-men and fewer sissies."

IN ORDER to see that what went into the newspaper "was in the best interests of the University," the administration set up a student-faculty board to censor all news and editorial copy that went into the paper. Editor Walter A. Lundy and managing editor Bill Shipp resigned in protest, as well as their successors, Priscilla Arnold, and Gene Britton.

Messiah Becomes Tradition At FSU, Instances Reveal

By OSCAR JOHNSON

Christmas wouldn't be the same without The Messiah, annual presentation of the Florida State University Choral Union and the University Symphony. This year will be the seventh time The Messiah has been presented here.

Proof that students appreciate The Messiah is offered by Herman Gunter, Jr., assistant professor in the School of Music, who directs the Choral Union. He said, "I know of specific instances where people have re-entered FSU after military service with the purpose of joining the Choral Union, and help them in presenting The Messiah."

TO ASSURE the students a good performance, the 172 members of the Choral Union and the students in the University Symphony, directed by Robert Sedore, assistant professor in the School of Music, have worked all semester on it.

More chorus work will be done this year, but emphasis has also been placed on solos, four of which will be given. Miss Edith C. Faculty Members Choose Six Deserving Men As Nucleus For Cooperative Living Group

Six 17 and 18-year-old freshmen at Florida State University are striving to prove that working your way through college can be easy if you have the determination and cooperation.

Banded together in a Cooperative Living Organization to help each other toward getting through college are students Billy Campbell, Jimmy Geoghagen, Brun Davis, Wayne Pitts, Rudolph Henderson, and Enoch Hanna.

CLO, which became popular in big state universities in the early '30s during the depression, is an organization bringing together serious-minded students who have to work for their education. It has served a purpose on campuses during war and inflation periods, as well as in lean years.

The living organization was launched last September at FSU. The six men were chosen by FSU faculty members as deserving high school students from rural Florida communities who needed advices on earning a college education. All of them made good scholarship records in high school and were highly recommended by teachers and principals.

VOLUNTEER ADVISERS to the new FSU organization are Robert Brewer, director of residence for men; Dr. Marion Hay, professor of education; and Dr. Mode Stone, associate dean of the School of Education.

The advisers established the men in an old army barracks on West Campus, formerly occupied by an FSU faculty family. The apartment is roomy but hard and expensive to heat in cold weather. The CLOs hope to get better quarters nearer campus in the near future.

PLANS ARE NOW underway to charter CLO at FSU as has been done at other universities. It will simplify financial matters, enable members to have a cooperative bank account and perhaps borrow money for constructive purposes.

FSU faculty members have become quite interested in the boys because they are willing to work. Sometimes the interest results in household gifts, the most unique to date being 17 domestic ducks which the boys are planning to fatten up and eat during the months ahead.

HENDERSON AND Campbell have general education state scholarships which means they get $200 a semester. But they must teach in Florida after earning degrees for as many years as they take advantage of the scholarships or pay back the money with five percent interest.

Henderson also has a regular clerical job as a student assistant in the FSU Alumni Office. The others are on their own, and dependent on developing jobs to stay in the university. Dr. Hay, one of the advisers, said that five of the boys are free on Saturday and are interested in doing jobs such as lawn cutting, gardening, painting or other such type work.

Anyone interested in contacting one of the boys may find them at the FSU Demonstration School lunchroom on weekdays. All six earn five meals a week there by washing dishes.

DR. HAY HELPS the boys in their food buying. She goes marketing with Davis, a business administration major, every Friday afternoon. They cook and eat breakfast and supper together on weekdays, occasionally have three meals at home on the weekends.

The charter members of CLO at FSU appear enthusiastic about their living arrangements and are determined to stay with it a full four years. They must all favor new members, and plan to put candidates on probation before admission into the organization which calls for unity above all else.

TWO OFFICERS have been chosen. Campbell is chairman and Davis is business manager. As spokesman, Chairman Campbell said, "When we leave FSU in four years, we want to leave a CLO of 50 or 60 members."

Usually Brewer, and perhaps another of the advisers, meets regularly with the boys once a week. They are planning to expand, and will probably take in four more boys next semester.

MR. BREWER SAID, "The CLO is proving very successful with the present six members and we hope that it will continue to do so in the future."

FSU advisers are all for the proposed growth of CLO. They are also interested in starting a similar organization on campus for girls. Dr. Hay summed up their sentiments on the subject by saying, "What we are doing for six, we can do for 60."

Wig Burning Is Sad Episode In Romeo, Juliet Production

By MARTIN DYCKMAN

As far as the FSU Department of Speech is concerned, Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" is now called "The Burning of the Wigs."

When a History Building janitor conscientiously swooped down upon some "empty" boxes lying around and took them to the incinerator he had no way of knowing that those boxes contained about $100 worth of wigs to be used in the four performances.

WHAT WAS gone was gone, and play director Dr. Lynn E. Orr placed a rush order for replacements, which were to come air mail special delivery. As this story was written he was sweating out weather conditions which had grounded all planes.

Any Shakespearean play has multiple production problems. A great number of scenes and locations necessitates the use of a poly-dimensional stage with special lighting effects, all of which have been worked out in time for the opening of the Second Major Public Speech Production of the year.

ANOTHER problem was costumes. The material normally used for Shakespearean costumes, velour, is very expensive. But the Department of Speech economized in that respect. Having inherited the old red velour act curtain from the now non-existent old Westcott auditorium, the producer dyed certain parts and made their costumes mainly from that. The costumes were constructed by Doug Russell and Nancy Dickinson.

This, as far as Dr. Orr knows, is the FSU premiere performance of Romeo and Juliet. He predicts a good performance

Georgia Case Demonstrates Freedom Of Press Fragile

The press is free only so long as it does not criticise the status quo.

That doesn't quite sound like the noble American ideal, but it corresponds more to reality. It is just as true for the metropolitan daily as for the college newspaper, but in the latter case the example is often made in a sharper, less mistakeable manner.

As a case in point, take the recent forced resignations of two editors of the Red and Black at the University of Georgia.

The two students expressed points of view objectionable to the powers that be in the University and the State of Georgia. They referred to Governor Talmadge's strong stand for school segregation as "the Mr. Hyde side of his political personality." The Red and Black, furthermore, commented editorially, "With Communism knocking on the Negro's back door, we cannot afford to let educational segregation barriers stand. It is as plain as the red flag in Russia that continued segregation and suppression can and will cause the death of democracy by the hands of its own leaders."

Admittedly this was a surprising thing for the people of Jim Crow-ridden Georgia to hear from their own folds, but the opinion was stated in the best traditions of democracy, and as far as we can determine from the excerpts we have read, were written in a respectful, sober vein.

Even though the opinions expressed were unpopular ones, the students should have had the right to express them. The only things for which they should have been called down are inaccuracy and irresponsible writing.

The subsequent handling of the case, however, was blatantly based on the ideas expressed. There seemed to be no embarrassment among the Georgians who handled the case that they were trampling democracy beneath their clay-splattered feet. They were incensed that a taboo had been broken, and they acted in blind fury.

One of the Georgia primates, University Regent Roy Harris, threatened to ask the Board of Regents to cut off appropriations for the Red and Black if it did not "stop running editorials advocating the abolition of segregation." The paper printed his threat in the midst of chain reaction that was exploded throughout state political circles. There was even a motion in the Georgia legislature to have the students ousted, but it was decided the matter would be left up to the university. This meant that it would be up to the university to oust them.

Oust them it did. At least it made the work repugnant to them by foisting on them a board to censor before publication all material that might be "prejudicial to the welfare of the university." Naturally anything of a controversial nature could be interpreted as being "prejudicial to the welfare of the university," and having been enucleated by the hierarchy, the students resigned.

The basic issue was clearly expressed by the Red and Black in an editorial written between the segregation editorial and the formation of the censorship board.

"The issue involved is not whether we are right or wrong in our stand on segregation. It is simply a question of whether or not we continue as a free organ of independent thought or a propaganda sheet dominated by state political elements."

Harris' retort is so typical of the blind reaction of the unthinking people who control our schools that we reprint it without further comment:

"Now there is no question of freedom of the press involved. The question . . . is whether or not the board of regents will be dictated to by a little handful of sissy, misguided squirts who have just enough knowledge to think they know it all.

"Every time I see one of these little sissy boys hanging around some college, the more I think every one of them ought to be made to play football. What we need today is more he-men and fewer sissies."

• IDEA CENTERED

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (IP)—"The Identification and Criticism of Ideas" is the keynote of a new curriculum offered to freshmen and sophomores at Brown University and Pembroke College. Emphasis in the new program will lie on discussion, analyzing, and the studying of ideas instead of collecting information. President Henry M. Wriston said it was an effort to develop freer and more mature expression from freshmen and sophomores by applying teaching methods reserved for the junior and senior years

Significant books will replace the textbook. Each course will be based on several classics which will be read intensively and analytically to see where the ideas came from, where they went, and what their meaning has been.

The curriculum committee plans to accept ten or twelve experimental courses. Faculty members have suggested almost twice this number. All the courses are designed to emphasize the difference between the memorization required in school and the real thought and reflection necessary in college.

Acceptance into the course is based on college board exams and rank in secondary schools. The program lasts only during the freshman and sophomore years after which students revert to the regular curriculum.

A quarter-million-dollar grant from the Carnegie Corporation is making this experiment possible. The money will be used over a five year period to pay the salaries of teachers replacing those professors giving "idea" courses. Although curriculums similar in some features have been tried at other colleges, the Brown plan is essentially experimental. It will be subject to constant obsevation, and improvements will probably be made.

President Wriston said the new courses are designed to treat the intellectual capacity of the younger Brown and Pembroke students with utmost respect and thus encourage their best efforts. According to Dr. Wriston, a major mistake in American education has been underestimating the capacity of the student.

• 'FLEDERMAUS' COMMENDED

We were immensely pleased with the production of Die Fledermaus. Its fine polish, its smooth running and its excellent vocal work indicated that you, the cast and the crew put a lot of work and thought into the production.

The improvement over last year's Light Opera Guild show was noticeable and promises great things for the future.

Special praise also goes to your fine groups of principals.

Jack Benny Is An Artist At Humor

By DAVID DREIS

There are comedians who have made their names in movies, others who have made their names on the stage, but no one has even come close to the man who made his name on radio in the comedy field. That man is Jack Benny.

Benny is an artist and there are few judges of comedy who will deny this. He has perfected his comedy so much through the years that his jokes are not ones that can be lifted for use on another show. Only Benny can put them over.

"In the past twenty years," Benny confides, "American humor—accelerated by radio—has come out of the barnyard. It has been cleaned up, perfumed, and sparked by those unsung heroes, the gagwriters. Today, the ether is so full of good gags that even the ghosts have hysterics." Benny ought to know, starting in 1932 on Ed Sullivan's radio show and getting his own vehicle the following year.

"I will go out on a limb and say that radio has done for comedy what it took vaudeville fifty years to do . . . Gags were in their infancy then. They were unsteady as a baby and had to be changed as often. A comedian used to throw a gag at a vaudeville audience with a swing and a prayer, never knowing whether it would roll 'em in the aisle or roll up the joint." Benny's jokes evidently have been rolling 'em in every aisle from here to there and he's rated as the number one radio comedy show in the country . . . over quipster extraordinaire Bob Hope and . . . well, you name it.

"Radio audiences are funny. They fall in love with a comedian because he's a particular type of character on the air—or has a certain style of delivery . . . Every once in a while I think I'd like to change my character, but feel that a lot of listeners would tune off if I did." Benny once did a series of Buch Benny Rides Again and did it so often he got sick of it. He gave it up when a few fans agreed with him, but when he did, he received thousands of letters asking for it back

"Some comedians are great in night clubs, but what kills audiences in the clubs often gets yawns from the radio listener." Benny's format is something which would hardly be night club material — it's clean.

Actually, it's not Benny who makes the show, but the characters he is related with such as sarcastic Mary Livingstone, flip Rochester, mother's boy Dennis Day and fat Don Wilson who clicks his heels to sell his product. These characters have built themselves up to such a degree that Benny only unites them all. Phil Harris, always the brashy, drunk had to play

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

"So I happen to enjoy basketball—what's that got to do with the way I grade in this class?"

Dear Mama Seminole

Dear Mama Seminole,

Weather heap bad here on week-end. Big talk on radio make weather heap worse. Me no worry over weather though. Me think about big quiz next week. Me do-up study for last six weeks all this week-end

Big game play on week-end. Big Seminole success. Big overdress braves knock ball in air, then other braves catch, then all braves run to one spot and make heap big fight. Whistle blow, then all line up, then toss ball, then fight, then whistle, then line up, for long long time. Me thinkum treaty be good thing No fight—just toss ball, whistle.

Me hear big beef up Georgie reservation. Reservation bull sheet, U. of Georgia Red and Black, make big editorial to express opinion. Big regent name Roy V Harris say shut up or shut down. Red and Black say Harris try stop press freedom. Harris call Red and Black "juvenile damn foolery," he say editors, "sissy, misguided squirts . . Harris, (present editor of Augusta Courier), write . . "every one of them ought to be made to play football. What we need today is more he-men and fewer sissies" Me seem to see less need for HE MAN HARRISES who possibly should have learned good taste and judgment in writing of editorials instead of play football?

Me have teacher here on reservation who like white floor For hour each day he throw white powder sticks in and air drop um to floor while he tromp back and forth on them and talk about dead people Sometimes he say dead people make stupid mistake like we make every day so all laugh real big He call hour, History lecture

Everyone here begin to make ready for celebration of Christmas All people are special friend of all other people for long season Me like such spirit in air. Make me feel goo, very much. It put sunshine in my heart.

Love all,
Georgie Seminole

West Hall Resident Screams, 'Shut Up'

To the residents of West Hall:

Since it is impossible to make myself heard above the never-ceasing tumult at West Hall, I am using this means to express my long-silent suffering.

It is impossible to see why West Hall is called a dormitory A dormitory is a place to sleep. West Hall is a place where sleep is impossible.

On the other hand, it is the easiest thing in the world to see why 65 per cent of the residents got pink unsatisfactory slips recently. Uninterrupted study and sound sleep are undispensable prerequisites for good grades.

Nearly every night around midnight or later the driveways and parking lots around the aforementioned "dormitory" sound like the Indianapolis Speedway, Army-Navy game and Battle of the Bulge rolled into one

And as for the individual floors—all unruly TEN of them'—Ye Gods, By the Beard of the Prophet and everything else that will get by the censor, you'd think that by the time a man gets to college he should have learned how to shut up by 10 o'clock so that someone can sleep or study.

It is unusual when any of the floors have calmed down to a mere uproar by ONE a.m Shouting, cursing, running fighting, water fighting, pillow fighting and beer parties—they are endless.

Technically speaking West Hall's quiet hours run from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m Those quiet hours are a farce.

The quiet hours have never been and are yet to be observed

"At all times residents who wish to study or sleep will be given first consideration." This phrase is supposed to be the governing rule of West Hall. H——' To listen for ten minutes to the dormitory around midnight would convince any outsider that no resident wishes to study and that no resident ever sleeps.

There is nothing the residence counselors or house fellows can do. They are only human. They can not, nor should they be expected to, patrol the entire building all night. They are entitled to their hours of rest and quiet, but if they are getting them they must have sealed and soundproofed their rooms

And as for the house fellows—there is one on each floor. It would take TEN per floor, all armed with every conceivable riot squad armament, to keep those floors quiet at night

If the troublemakers would merely act the part of civilized, mature college students, these conditions would not exist. I cannot accurately describe in print they way they are acting now.

Signed,
GROGGY

Editor's note: You forgot to mention the screaming, water-throwing apes on fifth floor.

Will Students Defend Our Freedom

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The forced resignation of the University of Georgia editors (see news story and editorial) set me wondering.

It's always easy enough to criticize a condition outside one's immediate vicinity. They could have criticised slum and crime conditions in Chicago. They could have berated the Communist regime in Russia.

But when they spoke about something sorely pressing at home, it was their doom.

To me the issue was clearly one of freedom to express personal opinions in a restrained manner versus the stifling of that freedom by those whose prejudices made them react blindly. Just a few short years ago, the political climate of our country was such that there would have been bitter denunciations of Georgia's actions, on this campus as elsewhere. But our generation has grown timid, either afraid to express opinions or just not interested in them.

So I began to ask myself, what would happen if the Flambeau should take some highly controversial stand that aroused the ire of the state's political sub-intelligentsia? Would students leap to the paper's defense? Would they understand that freedom of the press was as vital to them as to the paper? . . . that freedom of opinion isn't restricted to popular opinions?

As a basis for forming a sort of rough estimate, I talked to a number of people about the Georgia case. I explained the nature of the editorial which aroused the well-placed ires and the subsequent handling of the case. "Freedom of the press doesn't mean much, does it?" I asked.

"Yeah, but what an editorial" was a typical reply. In other words, the students deserved what they got.

Are we so blinded by personal beliefs that we do not understand the necessity of controversy in a democracy? Do we not understand that criticism plays the vital role of correcting errors in a dynamic society such as ours? Evidently not.

We are not sufficiently acquainted with the first principles of democracy to defend them. This explains our acquiescence to tyranny. This explains the growth of the mold McCarthyism.

I fortunately do not speak of all the students of this university, but I see too clearly how many of them would react if the Flambeau were in trouble. If they thought about the matter at all, they would salve their consciences with any of a number of trite excuses.

They would agree, for instance, that the Flambeau had written material "prejudicial to the welfare of the university." Since there are bigots who have positions of influence in the state, this would of course be true The point is, though, that retreat along the line of reasoning is a complete negation of freedom of the press.

Another excuse is that the university is acting as a "father" to its student children and must act as a benevolent dictator until they are able to think for themselves. Translated, this means it must crush all signs of resistance to the status quo.

A third is that school papers must have editorial censorship just as commercial papers do. It is true that commercial newspapers have what are in effect censorship boards, but we must examine why they have such boards. They do so because they are devoted to running a successful business. College newspapers, on the other hand, are often devoted to ideas and are thus in some ways unique (Some of the best commercial publications are not so weak-kneed as their shakier sisters, I might add.)

The excuses go on and on, but consistently they evade the issue. I really wonder how many students would be deluded by them if the case should arise.

THE POINT IS

On Gorgons, Georgians, 'Shine, Ideas

By BOB FOLSOM

It is very likely most Gorgons, cultured and non-cultured Gorgons alike, still believe in the old adage—take 'em out and shoot 'em down like dogs—when something near and dear to them is violated.

In the same light, it seems there was a story handed down that told about some people who lived in a mountain community in Gorga. The community was settled back in the mountains, but not too far from a main highway which led to civilization. The community was fenced in and posted signs warned all strangers and other people to keep away.

The mountaineers were of the typical type you've heard of or read about from time to time, perhaps. Possessed of long, black beards, wide-brimmed black hats, overalls held up by suspenders, they were tobacco-chewing, backward characters who hated outsiders and would take pot shots with their long muskets at foreigners who accidentally happened to run across their mountain colony.

If they caught the wrong people on their ground, no one ever heard of these unfortunates again

The leader of the community was somewhat different from his subjects. He was a short, fat man who couldn't grow a beard He had a double chin, wore rimless glasses and smoked a long, black cigar, instead of chewing tobacco His word was law and he made many of the rules which governed the mountain people The short, fat leader prevented the community of Gorgons from expanding and adopting new ways which might harm his position in any way. There was no such thing as a book or newspaper in the community He let them make and drink all the moonshine they wanted. Maybe this was what made them so contented, for the thought of rebelling against their leader never entered a Gorgon mind.

For years peace reigned in the Gorgon community. Only when certain outsiders would trespass would there be great furor in the town The leader would personally dispose of the violator. Nothing would be said afterwards. It was just a part of the actions of that society

The leader had created hard fast laws: there were no weaklings in the mountain town. At an early age, all males were inducted into what might be termed "Spartan" training. To develop his muscles and strong bodies, they would be made to chop wood. This would begin at the age of twelve and continue through twenty-one, at which age the leader considered them to be strong and able. During this growing up they would be nourished on white moonshine, sometimes known as "white lightning." There was a darker type of moonshine the older folks would drink, but the young men were forbidden to touch any.

The short, fat leader said this was not good for them. He wanted them to grow up to be strong, and he said drinking dark moonshine was not part of their training

One day, so the story goes, a young boy about eighteen was brought before the leader. He had drunk some of the dark moonshine, forbidden to all Gorgons of his age He told the short, fat leader that he did not see anything wrong with that.

The leader blubbered over with anger. He called the lad a no good weakling and sissy, and told him he could not drink anymore dark moonshine. And what is more, he said, the lad should retract the statement that he did not see anything wrong with it. The lad said no. The leader blubbered over with more anger He raved to the young boy that he was violating a law that was set down and should not be violated. The youngster, frightened as he was, did not alter his opinion

The leader then sent the boy into the mountains, and told him never to return to the Gorgon community. No one weeped for the boy, for he had violated a rule of their society, and was now paying the penalty.

The leader, though, set up an even more rigid system in the backward community.

That is just one of the stories Today, the Gorgon community still exists, the same short, fat leader still rules, and the same laws are enforced by him.

Time Changes Constitution's Meaning

By GENE LAWLER

With commendable restraint and understandable oversimplification the Tallahassee Democrat replied Sunday to Beverly Lacayo's Flambeau column of last week. "The courts cannot properly and lawfully change the meaning of the Constitution" asserts the Democrat in upholding its pro-segregation stand. " . . . we thought all university students knew that."

True the courts cannot change the meaning of the Constitution, but time can. Most trivially, we seriously doubt that our founding fathers took a stand on the Constitutionality of the Federal Communications Commission or decided whether motion pictures were protected by the first amendment

In other words, the Constitution takes on new meaning with the times. It is a living document, not one yoked to the culture of 100 or 150 years ago.

For instance, the eighth amendment states that no "cruel or unusual punishments (shall be) inflicted." Just what is cruel or unusual depends on current mores. The courts recently ruled that the Army could not sentence a soldier to bread and water in excess of three days. Conceivably, the eighth amendment could someday be construed as outlawing capital punishment.

In like manner, the interpretation of the fourteenth amendment is bound to change somewhat in terms of today's social order. The doctrine of "separate but equal" is now seen to be both practically unattainable and logically paradoxical. In view of previous decisions of the Supreme Court, a fundamental reinterpretation of the Constitution seems to be necessary and inevitable.

Like it or no, the South is in radical transition. The failure of the Southern people to open their minds will not only prolong the anguish but retard the economic and cultural advancement of the region. Entirely apart from the Constitutional merit of the question is plain truth that in clinging to racial segregation the South suffers immensely.

It should be evident that segregation costs money. Duplication of universities, school systems, and other public facilities is unnecessary and wasteful. One football stadium in Tallahassee is adequate yet A&M will construct another. One state law school would suffice, yet U. of F. and A&M must each have one. And so on and on. The cost is staggering.

Secondly, segregation is used to confine the Negro to an inferior position. Gene Talmadge used to say that there were only a certain number of good jobs in Georgia and weren't enough to give any to Negroes. What Talmadge didn't know, but what almost any economist will tell you is that in depressing the Negro's standard of living the white man depresses his own.

At this point emotion enters. A typical Southerner might grudgingly admit that segregation is economically questionable but he will rarely admit that it is morally reprehensible. The Southern attitude forms an emotional spectrum. Some comments heard on the FSU campus are:

"Combining FSU and A&M would be all right with me, but what would you do about the dormitories?"

"Don't you know it's the Communists that are against segregation?"

"We shouldn't even consider non-segregation on the university level. There just aren't any Negroes smart enough to stay in class with us."

"Negroes like segregation. Our yard boy told me that."

And, inevitably, "Let niggers go to the same schools as whites and soon they'll be marrying whites. Would you want your daughter to marry a nigger?"

Admittedly these comments don't do justice to those exceptional students who have grown up under the shadow of the KKK and are still able to approach the subject with fairness and sympathy. It is to them, the tolerant and understanding, that the South must turn today.

Curiosity Big Help In Learning—Gay

ATLANTA, Ga. (IP) — "Give me a boy who has at 18 the curiosity he had at six and he can get a college education in one year and a doctor of philosophy degree six months later," declares Dr. J. Samuel Gay, former chairman of the chemistry department at Emory University.

Dr. Gay said that students come to college poorly equipped in essentials of reading, writing and arithmetic and are thus unable to undertake college work successfully. He said his entire sympathy is for the student. "Colleges should either select students more carefully or select subjects more carefully" and let the level of instruction fit the student. Deploring the large numbers of students flunked out of colleges, Dr. Guy said, "The extreme mortality—20 to 40 per cent—in colleges is the worst business I know of."

He added that the most experienced teachers should handle the elementary courses and that the heads of departments should teach the freshmen. "No man should teach freshmen unless he has at least 10 years' experience," Dr. Gay said.

Seminoles Finish Season With Win Over Spartans

The Sportlight

by Dave Kennedy

Flambeau Sports Editor

Football in Hibernation! Following in the footsteps of the big Papa bear, who goes into hibernation till Spring; the Seminoles of Florida State last Saturday nite at Phillips Field in Tampa wound up their '53 football season by walloping Tampa 41-6. Thus, football ceases to be the talk of the campus until next Spring when the gridiron heroes take to the field again.

Though the Indians may be taking it easy till Spring practice, I doubt seriously that Coach Nugent and Company will be whiling the time away. With the opening game sporting Georgia as the Inian opponent, the "Brains" behind the "big machine" will undoubtedly be plotting various and sundry new formations, a follow up, perhaps, to the infamous "I" formation.

FSU FINISHED it's first season with Tom Nugent at the helm with a creditable 5-5 record. The more so, when you think that the Indians held Mississippi Southern to a 21-0 win—This same Southern team, in pulling one of the biggest upsets of the year, whipped Alabama and more recently put away Zeke Bratkowski and his cohorts in beating Georgia. Yetp, its been a good year for the wearers of the Garnet and Gold.

Next season should prove even more eventful, for the never tiring Nugent has been scouting the Country for new talent to blend with his no "sessoned" players. With this combination coupled with the fact that FSU will be getting a taste of football powerhouses, and the obvious potentiality of its present team. and . . . anything can happen . . . an undefeated season ???? It's possible!!

LITTLE ALL-AMERICAN . . . Well, the news has finally arrived and Jimmy Lee Taylor can put his mind at ease, he no longer has to continuously scan (with a magnifying glass) the sport sections to see if his name was under a certain heading—yep—it's out at last and Jimmy Boy, you've made it at last . . . your ultimate goal has been achieved. YOU are a Little All-American.

The only sore-spot of the season was the limited action seen by the teams' leading scorer, Bobby Fiveash, who received Honorable mention to the Little All-American team. Bobby, without doubt could plan on anybody's ball-club. Bobby, although only a junior has used up all of his eligibility—seems there was a mixup when Bobby transferred from junior college. We feel confident that, barring injuries, Fiveash could undoubtedly have made the first team, Little All-American.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS to both, Jimmy Lee and Bobby Fiveash!

ALL-STATE . . . Now that the season has neared an end, I find myself confronted with the prospect of naming an All-State team. Instead of having the usual 1st and 2nd string alignment, I've just named two men at each position. And in the case of the center, it was impossible to name just two when there were three such as Boyer, Tobey and DeLa Torre.

Ends
Jimmy Lee Taylor, FSU	Jackie O'brien, Florida
Jim McDonald, Miami	H. L. Hiera, Tampa
Tackles
Dan Hunter, Florida	Al Makowiecki, FSU
Ed Bucelli, Miami	Sam Chapman, Florida
Guards
Nick Waytovich, Tampa	Joe DeAugostino, Florida
Art Wright, Florida	Jerry Jacobs, FSU
Centers
George Boyer, FSU
E Tobey, Miami	Steve DeLa Torre, Florida
Backs
Bobby Fiveash, FSU	John Griner, FSU
Gordon Malloy, Miami	Whitey Rouviere, Miami
Imgrund, Stetson	C. Harris, Tampa
T. Haddock, Florida	Harry Spears, Florida

FAMOUS LAST WORDS . . . I wonder just how Jonnny Varidan felt after the pasting Tampa U took last Saturday nite. Varidan was down scouting FSU for the Tampa game a couple of weeks back and made a statement to this effect, "I'm really disappointed, all this talk I've heard about this ball-club—They don't show me much." I wonder if he can see any better now? Mr. Varidan, never underestimate a Seminole!

ANOTHE BEVO FRANCIS?? To quote in part from a dispatch from State College, Miss., "Gee, look at that No. 10 will ya?" . . . "That No. 10 is great isn't he?". . . "Stop that No. 10!" Of course they were talking about Hammering Ham Wernke, "FSU's answer to Rio Grande's Bevo Francis" . . . Swoosh . . . and the score board lights up with another two points . . . Basketball is here heralded by the onslought of some teams. Judging from the fast start boys such as FSU's Wernke, (32), Francis, (32), Cliff Hagan, (51) and Bob Petitt, LSU who scored 32 points in his opener, this promises to be an exceptionally high scoring season.

For a preview of the highlights of mid-season form, get out to West Campus Gym Tuesday night to witness the first home game of the season when the Indians take on Mercer at 8:15.

Tampa University Fails To Halt Brilliant Offense, Fired Up Seminole Team Capitalizes On 'Breaks'

By DAVE KENNEDY

Florida State, after spotting the University of Tampa a touchdown in the opening minutes of play, roared back to score a convincing 41-6 win before an estimated 8,500 fans at Phillips Field in Tampa last Saturday night.

Massey kicked off and Nuznoff, a sophomore back took the oval on the 18 and raced back to the FSU 38 yard line where he was caught from behind by Eddie Johnson. In all, the play covered 45 yards.

STEVE KALENICH
Seminole Co-Capt.

On the first running play, The Tampans drew a five-yard backfield in motion penalty. Leathers gained six and Spack garnered eight diving over left tackle. Leathers promptly made a first down when he brought the ball to the 27. Spack got away for three and then took a pitchout to the 13 for another first down. Reverting to Leathers again the Spartans got another first down on the three. Spack, on his second try, plunged through center and dove acrcoss for the TD. Colvard's kick was wide and Tampa led 6-0 after five minutes of play.

8	Passes Completed	3

32	Punting Average	33

TAYLOR TOOK Green's kickoff on his own 37 and returned it to the 43 before he was hit hard by three Tampa tacklers. Dobosz went for three over center. Massey tried a pass from the I formation but it failed. Another attempt at passing failed and Fiveash punted to Harris on the Tampa seven and returned it to the 12.

Taylor, in one of his usual spectacular performances, threw Harrja for an 11 yard loss back to the Spartan 1. Tampa was fined five yards for backfield in motion, but the Seminoles refused and Colvard punted from behind his goal line. The ball went to the Tampa 33 where Bryant hit it and it bounded out of bounds.

DOBOSZ AND FIVEASH, working together, picked up a first down at Tampa 21. Fiveash skirted the ridght side and went to the seven before he could be stopped by Gnagy. Metts flashed around left end for the score with Fiveash throwing the key block that turned him loose.

Massey did the honors by booting the extra point to put FSU ahead 7-6.

Tampa couldn't gain after the kickoff and Colvard punted 30 yards to the FSU 29 yard line. The Seminoles rolled to a score with Fiveash getting the last five yards on a right end sweep. The play that set it up was a Massey to Metts pass, good for 47 yards. Massey kicked the point and the score, FSU 14, Tampa 6 Spack ran the kickoff from his 15 to the 31 as the frist quarter ende.

TAMPA OPENED the second quarter with a passing attack with Minahan throwing from the double wing. Working all the way down to the FSU 27, the Spartans had a pass intercepted by John Griner, who made a brilliant run of 85 yards for a TD. Graham booted the point that made the score 21-6.

Corso, getting into the act, intercepted a Minihan pass on the Indian 32 and returned it to the Tampa 43. The Spartans stopped the threat when a fourth down Statue of Liberty failed. Messinese faked a punt and behind nice interference ran to the Tampa 44 for a first down. The play caught the Spartans napping as they were expecting a boot. Messinese, in closing out his collegiate football career played an excellent game. After several bad "breaks" Fiveash quick kicked to Peck on the Tampa 33 and he returned it to the 42.

SPACK TRYING to throw a TD pass, was caught as Lee Corso intercepted the ball and fell at the Seminoles 13 yard line. Time ran out before the North Florida team could run a play. Halftime read: FSU 21, Tampa 6.

Green kicked to Massey on the FSU 19 to open the second half. He ran the ball back to the 32. Fiveash on a quick opening play behind nice blocking by Griner and Holt went all the way. Massey added the 28th point.

After an exchcange of hands Colvard punted 60 yards over the goal line and FSU got the ball on its 20. The Seminoles proceeded to make the score 36-6.

BOBBY FIVEASH
Seminole Co-Capt.

THE SEMINOLES were right back knocking for another score in the closing minutes of the third period. On fourth down, Skaroulis, back to punt, was roughed and FSU drew 15 yards penalty to mid-field. As he tried to punt again on fourth down, the ball went way over his bead. He picked the ball up and tried to run free but was downed on the 20 and FSU took possession of the ball.

The game ended with FSU in front, 41-6.

TEAM ELECTS CO-CAPTAINS

Florida State's football team took time out from celebrating its 41 to 6 win over Tampa Saturday night to hold a meeting in the Stable Room of the Thomas Jefferson Hotel and elect their co-captains for the past grid season.

The Seminoles elected Bobby Fiveash, junior from Bainbridge, Ga., and Steve Kalenich, a senior center from Barberton, Ohio, as co-captains. Fiveash is a junior in school but has used up all of his football eligibility.

Coach Nugent appointed game captains for each contest during the season.

Phi Delts, West Hall Vie Tomorrow Nite For Grid Crown

West Hall's Penthouse Gang, winners of the dormitory intramural touch football championship, will attempt to defy tradition tomorrow night when they meet Phi Delta Theta, winnerz of the fraternity competition, in Doak S. Campbell stadium at 8 p.m.

Never in the seven-year histor yof men's intramurals has an independent team taken the campus championship. In the past the fraternities hava always triumphed.

HOWEVER, with the addition of three West Hall teams to the contenders, this year's competition was immeasurably toughened.

The other West Hall teams, magnanimously forgetting their defeats at the hands of the Penthousers, have promised support to their team. The fraternities, in the past, have always supported their triumphant teams.

THE PHI DELTS defeated the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity earlier this week by a margin of two first downs, to win their second consecutive intramural-intrafraternity championship. Phi Delta Theta received the Balfour trophy last year for being tops in all sports on campus.

While the fraternities are displaying their traditional enthusiasm, West Hall will get into the spirit with a pep rally and motorcade at 7:30 p.m

Miss. State Defeats Cagers; Wernke Scores 32 Points

FSU's recipient of the Helms Foundation All-American award last year, Junior Ham Wernke last Friday night lived up to all pre-season expectations when he bucketed 32 points against Mississippi State. The Seminoles tasted defeat their first time out this season, despite the dazzling performance of Hammering Ham. The game itself turned out to be a private scoring duel between Wernke and the Maroons' Gerald Caveness.

WERNKE TOOK 20 charity tosses and clashed in on 16 of them. This was enough to shatter Ham's own record of 13, which he set in 1952. The Maroons, in trying to stop the unstoppable Ham, fouled him 13 times. In the last half he was fouled 10 times. Although he was closely checked in the second half Wernke managed eight buckets from the floor to finish an evenings work with 32 points.

Besides his scoring output which topped Cavaness' 29 points for M-State, Wernke stole the ball from the Maroons on seven occasions and chipped in with six rebounds.

IT WAS TIGHT well-played contest all the way. Neither team showed a semblance of opening night jitters, although the Seminoles hit only 22 per cent of their shots from the floor. Mississippi State managed 40 percent of theirs. That being the only difference.

Last year's captain, Jerry Westhafer, saw only four minutes of action due to a severely wrenched ankle.

SOPHOMORE DICK ARTMEIER, a reserve forward last year, started his first college game and played creditably, getting nine points and doing a bang up job on the boards. Center Rick Benson, one of the Seminoles most improved players, bagged 13 points and Jimmy Oler, who had an off night from the field, meshed only 10.

The Seminoles will have a chance to dispell their blues before the home crowd this Tuesday night when they play their first home game of the season against Mercer.

out a system of lighting effects and playing on various levels in different areas to overcome this stumbling block." Dr. Orr said. He added the actors are able, through this adaptation, to move from scene to scene without interruption of the action.

ANOTHER setback came to directors, according to the director, in that large numbers of actors are required to be on stage at the same time. Conradi's limited space necessitated special coaching to enable the student actors to perform "en masse" at the same time without producing a state of confusion of the plot.

Dr. Orr, in commenting on ticket reservations, said he urges anyone wishing to assure himself of a seat at any one of the four productions, should get his tickets early, as the sales are somewhat unpredictable.

Volleyballers Cop Invitational Meet

A superb Seminole volleyball team returned to Tallahassee this weekend after they won the 5th annual St. Pete Invitational Tournament in St. Petersburg.

This annual affair is a round robin tournament with the best teams in the state receiving invitations FSU and Jacksonville Navy ended all tied up with 13 wins and 2 defeats apiece to tie for first place In the play off for the Championship, the Seminoles won 21-16

IN THE PLAYOFF game with Jax Navy, our boys broke a few school records. They set a new team record for kills in one game with 34 Howie Gould, all-American volleyball star, broke two school records. He set a new record of 12 by besting his old one of 9 side out kills, and proceeded to break the one of 10 total kills in one game held by himself, Dan Hobbs, and Ronnie Hambrock by garnering 14.

The team was weakened by the loss of Tonald Hambrock, great all-American star for the past two seasons, who quit the squad to concentrate on his studies However Coach Bill Odeneal was glad to have newcomer Len Kaczmarek, a 6 ft. 2 in., 210 pound giant who joined the squad this season.

HOWARD GOULD led the FSU team in total kills during the tournament with 88 followed by Len Kaczmarek with 73 and Phil Slaton with 40

Dates for the production are Friday and Saturday, December 11 and 12, to start 8:15 P. M. at Opperman Music Hall.

ORIGINALLY, The Messiah was composed of 53 numbers, but Mr. Gunter has selected only those concerned mainly with the birth of Christ, so that the show will last approximately two hours, with intermission.

Following a precedent established last year, an offering will be taken during the intermission, with all money donated to a scholarship fund for worthy music students.

Well-Known Reindeer Tells All

NORTH POLE, ARCTIC. Looking very dapper for an 18-point buck with chalked muzzle and matching white tail assembly, Dasher, famous front-running reindeer for the S. Claus Parcel Service, stated today:

1. Conditions on the northern tundra are pretty much the same as ever. No-o, TV hadn't affected the grazing habits of the middle-class herds.

2. That despite reports to the contrary, you don't ever thoroughly adjust to sub-zero weather, regardless of the warm esteem people hold you in.

3. Rumors of a reindeer strike for Christmas Eve are unfounded. Somebody's got a termite in his antler.

When asked about the most popular Christmas gift down through the years he replied without hesitation: "Menswear by Manhattan. I've helped haul Mr. Claus's sled, roe and buck, nigh unto forever . . . so I ought to know . . . nothing makes a man happier than shirts, sportshirts, ties, pajamas, beachwear or underwear labeled Manhattan. Don't know whether it's the live style that makes a man look and feel so good, whether it's the traditional tailoring detail, or the array of fabrics, patterns and colors that are all so unmistakeably quality. I'll admit one thing. I've kind of wished sometimes that Manhattan would make deerwear."

Change of Bachelor's Degree OK'd by Regional VA Office

Veterans in Florida taking undergraduate college work under the Korean GI Bill may shift from one bachelor's degree to another, without having it count as their one-and-only change of course allowed under the law, Veterans Administration said today in answer to many queries. In order to make the switch, veterans must do it soon enough so as not to involve any more training time than was originally required to complete the course, said H F Dickensheets, Manager of the Pass-a-Grille Regional Office

As an example, Mr Dickensheets pointed out that a veteran who had enrolled for a four-year course leading to a BS degree in agriculture could move over to an AB degree in liberal arts. And, as far as the law is concerned, it would not be considered a change, so long as the overall training time did not exceed the original four years.

THE REASON that changes in degree need not constitute changes in course is that VA lists a veteran's educational objective as a baccalaureate degree, pure and simple, without any reference to his major field of study. Therefore, a change in the type of bachelor's degree obviously would not be a change in training objective, if the training time isn't lengthened, Mr. Dickensheets said.

Mr. Dickensheets added that, even though a veteran might have put down a specific type of bachelor's degree on his application for Korean GI training, his originally-designated objective still is considered to be only a baccalaureate degree. Nevertheless, colleges still are required to inform VA whenever a Korean GI trainee changes the degree he's aiming for. The school must certify that the change does not involve any extension of training time; it also must give the name of the revised degree objective to which the veteran has changed

THE KOREAN GI BILL allows veteran-trainees to make no more than one change of course. A course change usually means a change in the professional or vocational objective for which the veteran is aiming, Mr. Dickensheets explained.

Panel To Discuss Tallahassee Styles In Longmire Lounge

A panel discussion on the subject, "Tallahassee Fashion Merchandising," will answer this and other questions on fashions at the first public offering of FSU's Fashion Institute in Longmire Lounge at 7 30 p m tomorrow.

Four Tallahassee merchants will be members of the panel. Don Mayeron, Mae Wells, Bertha Cook and Ed Miller will participate

Moderator will be Ivan Johnson, professor of art education here.

THE FASHION INSTITUTE is an inter-departmental educational program in fashions supported by the departments of Clothing and Textiles and of Art, the retailing program of marketing of School of Business, the program of Public Relations in the School of Journalism, and the department of Advertising in the Schools of Business and Journalism.

Flambeau Seeks Author Of Letter

This story could be entitled "The Case of the Misspelled Missive" or "Who Hates the Election Committee?"

The Flambeau recently found a note tacked upon the Student Government bulletin board in the Longmire Building. To say that the note criticized the elections committee is to say things in an extremely mild manner.

The writer of the note, who signed it "Z B T. and Friends" must have intended it for publication, or else he would not have addressed it to the Flambeau.

The Flambeau does not print unsigned letters. If the writer wishes, his name may be withheld But the letter must be signed.

If "Z.B T." wishes to dispose with what is an obvious pseudonym and submit a letter with his name on it, that letter will be printed

Syngman Rhee-A Problem To Face

By WARREN COBB

In recent days the newspapers, radio, and television have been primarily concerned with such matters as the Truman-Brownell-White fiasco, the segregation issue, the Greenlease kidnap case, etc.

Closer to home, our interest has been centered on the State Supreme Court and its interpretation of the constitution on the gubernatorial controversy.

It seems that attention has been directed, at least temporarily, away from the powder-keg upon which we are sitting in Korea People are becoming acclimated to peace, forgetting or ignoring the little man with the big monkey-wrench — Syngman Rhee.

The time is growing short now, for according to Rhee the political negotiations to effect a permanent armistice in Korea must end in January.

In what light, then, are we to regard this man Syngman Rhee, who may conceivably exert such a vital influence upon our individual and collective futures?

This is a question which, whether we like it or not, we must face with a positive answer in the near future.

Syngman Rhee has said the present negotiations must fail and the war resume. Indeed, there is ample reason to believe that he hopes they will fail. And he is right. They most certainly will fail so long as the United States is firmly committed to the unification of Korea under Rhee's government.

Promises had to be made to Rhee to prevent him from ruining the truce before it had begun. It appears that the United States promised Rhee that we will not withdraw from Korea so long as he is in danger of attack and, secondly, that we are dedicated to the establishment of his government over a unified Korea.

Quite obviously, we cannot comply with this second promise to Rhee It is ridiculous to even speculate that Red China will surrender at a political conference what she was not made to surrender on the battlefield. The only way in which we could achieve the unification of Korea under Rhee is by an unconditional military defeat of Red China.

We must remember, however, that we did not win the war in Korea, and, consequently, we cannot dictate the terms of the peace.

If we are to achieve a unified Korea, we must do it through negotiation with a country which we do not recognize as having the right to exist.

If somehow we can circumvent this paradox, there seem to be two broad approaches to a Korean settlement.

The first, holding free elections as soon as possible to form an all-Korean government with the responsibility of rehabilitating the country, would not be practical There is little prospect that a competent government could be formed in this manner in a country with no experience in democracy and in the immediate aftermath of a savage civil and international war

The second approach would seem to be more desirable. This approach would give first priority to reconstruction and rehabilitation by the major political powers involved and postpone the political unification of Korea until trade and congeniality between north and south had been gradually reestablished.

There would be no sense in holding an election now between Rhee and his North Korean counterpart.

What, in view of all this, are to be our relations with Rhee? We are entangled with Rhee's government, his army, and the Korean people. We cannot sign an armistice which binds him without his consent. Such an armistice would be meaningless to both sides, for we could not allow Rhee to attack the enemy nor the enemy to attack him

To sum up, Rhee is demanding a free hand, but we cannot give him that free hand. We cannot let him fight his own separate war. Nor can we let him compel us and our allies — such as they are — to fight his war for him on his terms.

We must make clear to him that we cannot — and will not — supply him with the munitions for such independent action. We must make clear to Rhee that we will not stand behind him regardless of our own interests.

On the other hand, we cannot abandon Korea to absorption within the communist orbit. We must continue to exert pressure on the enemy. But it is becoming clear that the only effective pressure we can exert in Korea is not a restrained ground movement — i. e overt but limited action — but rather the ever persistent threat that any future action will be one of maximum consequence. We must make clear that new military weapons have created a new diplomatic situation.

How, then, shall we deal with Syngman Rhee? By forcefully reminding him that we did not win the war, that we are not dedicated to his establishment as a dictator in Korea, and that we will not support his government beyond cooperation for diplomatic settlement of the present predicament — and that the alternative to diplomacy is, in all probability, disaster.

Stetson Receives Donations To Expand Its Law School

Stetson University of Deland, Florida, recently accepted from the citizens of St Petersburg and out-of-state friends a donation to go toward a million dollar campus in that city where a fully accredited College of Law will be opened next September.

The Stetson College of Law, the oldest in Florida, has been on the DeLand campus since it was founded in 1901 at the request of the Florida bar.

DR. J. OLLIE EDMUNDS Stetson's president, said the four main buildings and several smaller structures of early Spanish mosaic architecture, erected in 1927 as a resort hotel, are adequate for classrooms, offices and living quarters for the opening in September.

Stetson plans what probably will be one of the most interesting law centers in America—one patterned after the legal "inns" of England where students and faculty members live and study together. Addition of a model library and courtroom-auditorium in the same architecture is planned.

THE STETSON program includes a plan to invite prominent American lawyers to St Petersburg as "guests-in-residence" to live at the Stetson law center and to lecture to the students as visiting professors. On the campus are recreational facilities such as tennis courts and a swimming pool. An 18 hole golf course is located across the street.

In accepting the gift, Dr. Edmunds said:

"IT IS DOUBTFUL whether any law school in the country has made a more dramatic contribution to the area it serves From this little school have come two governors, an Undersecretary of the Navy, an Assistant Attorney-General of the United States, a member of the United States Court of Appeals and four judges of the Florida Supreme Court. It has produced for Florida scores of judges, mayors and members of the state legislature, as well as other high ranking officials in the Federal Government, and members of the legislative branches of other state governments In almost every Florida city Stetson graduates are among the leading lawyers. It would be difficult, indeed, to exaggerate the influence this school has had, and is having, in the legal development of Florida."

Remaining on the Deland campus will be the College of Liberal Arts, the School of Business, the School of Music and the graduate division of Stetson University.

STUDENTS doing their undergraduate work at Stetson will be given enrollment preference in the Stetson Law School which will continue to be small and selective.

Removal from Deland of the law school came after a committee of law school alumni recommended to the university's trustees that the Stetson College of Law could serve better in a metropolitan area In a city, the students will have the advantages of more courts and more law offices where they may receive apprenticeship training

DR. EDMUNDS recalled that since his student days in the Stetson College of Law that four church-related colleges — Suwanee, Centre, Furman and Millsaps—have given up their law schools because they found that they could not obtain adequate financial support in their local areas.

Stetson, the only Baptist university in Florida, was founded in 1883 and was named for John S. Stetson, the Philadelphia hat manufacturer, one of the school's principal benefactors

Although quite a number of jokes are based on Jack's violin playing, the fact is that young Benny Kubelsky (Jack, natch.) was considered the child prodigy of — yep, you guessed it — Waukegan. When he was 14 he became the youngest member of the pit orchestra there. Jack was a perfectionist and only when he found that First World War sailors preferred humor in concert did he use his fiddle as a prop.

Sometime in the near future we're going to list the types of comedians for as Benny says, "Give Bob Hope Fred Allen's scripts and he'll fall on his face —the same if Fred tries doing the comedy of Bob A leopard can't change his spots."

Circle K Provides Crystal Chandelier For 'Moonbeams'

Something new has been added to the Florida State University, mammoth and historic Suwaonee Room . . . scene of the Homecoming dances and other festivities

Through the efforts of Circle K, a campus service organization similar to but not a part of Kiwanis International, built-in moonbeams have been provided for all campus dances held in the ball room.

THE BOYS of Circle K have raised enough money to buy and install a large revolving crystal chandelier.

Ted Aggelis of Mulberry, president of the 10-member organization, said: "We are a small organization just recently organized on campus, and we wanted to do something that would be of value to the student body. So we decided on the chandelier and raised money mostly by checking hats and coats at student dances."

MEMBERS of the organization who helped raise money are Wayne Terry, vice-president of the organization, Don Dixon, secretary-treasurer; Charles McDaniels, Steve Bailey, Bob Berto, James Soanos, Lyle Lazear, Jr., Al Young, and Harvey Sellars.

Mrs Mary Distelhurst, counselor for social programs, and George Hellman, head men's counselor worked with the boys on their project.

Students Interning With Leon Sheriff For First Time

Two Florida State University students majoring in Public Administration, Doo Rompe and Jack Swike, are completing the first internship in the Leon County Sheriff's office.

The internship consists of clerical office work in criminal and civil fields, courtroom participation, and following cases from time of arrest to the time of courtroom proceedings

They would alternate from week to week between office work and actual participation with the State Beverage Dept., local police and Sheriff's Dept, in handling such offenses as bootlegging and moonshining.

Their experiences varied from 115 m p h. chases after bootleggers to acting as court witnesses for the county.

Rompe and Swike claim that this experience was of particular value because it offered many insights to the actual workings of a law enforcement agency. They recommend such work for anyone intered in police work or pre-law training

The internship is under the supervision of Miss Gibson, instructor with the School of Public Administration.

Church News

Members of the Interchurch Fellowship of Students will visit in the residence halls to invite students who have not affiliated with any church group.

At a meeting held at the Chaplain's request last Thursday, it was decided that several teams of two students each will visit four or five of their fellow-students between now and Christmas. They will invite them to participate in the activities of the church group of their choice

"This is not intended as a project to increase the membership of the different religious groups on campus but rather to give every student the feeling that he is wanted and welcome in any of our church groups," Dr S R. Neel, University Chaplain, said. He also pointed out that this program will help to develop inter-faith understanding as students of several faiths cooperate in the visitation.

Methodist students participating are Carolyn Johnson, Sara Whitehead, Chuck Clark, Harriet Lowe, Mary Catherine Freeman, Bunny Amos, Carroll English; Christian Science are Zois Goodwin, Mary Frances Horn, Carol Hummel, Nancy Hickman, Hillel Foundation—Eva Sass.

From the Baptist Student Union Ray Spears, Jo Anne Setzer, Floyd Risley, Jenny L Kent, Hugh Kinsey, Jo Anne Howard, Jerry Fortune, Bet June Nichols, Bill Chapman, and George Willis; Presbyterian — Nancy Fagen, June Conyers, Iol Arnold, Kitty Wade, Milton Ca-rothers, and Graham Carothers.

Cabot Reviews Communist Effects In Caribbean At Recent Conference

By JACK D. L. HOLMES

The threat of communism throughout the world is evident in the area of the Carribean, but as elsewhere, where communism has succeeded in one or two instances, it has failed in others.

This viewpoint, presented by John Moors Cabot, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, was one of the highlights of the recent Conference on the Caribbean, held in Gainesville from December 3 through December 5. The Conference, fourth of its kind to be held at the University of Florida, had as its general theme "The Economy of the Caribbean Area."

TOPICS DISCUSSED included Resources and Production, Manufacturing and Investments, Caribbean Archives, Transportation and Marketing, Labor and Industry, and Culture and the Economy. Following the usual practice at these conferences, many important figures in the educational, industrial, and political spheres of activity were guests. These outstanding leaders of their respective fields gave papers on the topics ranging from Natural Resources to the influence of music on Caribbean economy.

Perhaps the most controversial topic of the entire conference was the moot question of expropriation. The question was well-covered by men of opposing view-points in their papers, but the real heat of the argument was generated in the following discussion. Percy C. Magnus, president of Magnus, Mabee and Reynard, Inc., an international trade business, gave his side of the question. Mr. Magnus struck out at the recent U.N. resolution No. A 2332: Dec. 18, 1952, which stated all nations had the right to naturalize their own resources. "In the voting" stated Mr Magnus, "the United States said NO!!!

USING THE RECENT expropriation by Guatemala of 233,973 acres of land owned by the United Fruit Company as an example, Magnus stated that future investments by businessmen in areas where such quasi-legal expropriation takes place will be very scanty. Using the outspoken frankness of a good old-fashioned type of American businessman, Percy Magnus represented the argument against expropriation in a startling manner. It was to the consternation of all who attended the session that Mr. Magnus was not present at the discussion period the following morning to defend his side. Instead, taking advantage of such an opportunity, Clarence Senior, research associate of the Bureau of Applied Social Research of Columbia University, blasted the absent Mr. Magnus with full opprobrium and emotional emphasis, exercis-

Staff Editors Urge Flambeau Reporters To Meet Deadlines

Flambeau news staff editors Al Pierce and Bob Folsom at a general reporters' staff meeting Tuesday stressed the importance of meeting news deadlines.

They told a group of twenty-five junior staff reporters that meeting a deadline is a prime requisite of a good reporter.

Stating Flambeau deadlines, they urged attendants to "spread the word" among campus organization desiring news coverage. They said present deadlines are Wednesday noon for the Friday issue, and Saturday noon for the Tuesday issue.

Pierce noted that these deadlines are final. "In order to plan make-up and copy layout for the coming issue," he said, "we must know almost exactly what is to be in the issue at least a day and a half before the issue appears."

Hamner Is Chosen Cotton Maid Entry

Sally Hamner, sophomore, is F. S. U.'s entry in the 1954 Maid of Cotton contest. Now in its 18th year, the contest is expected to draw entries from colleges all over the South.

Winner will be chosen January 6 in Memphis from 20 finalists. Two days after she is chosen the 1954 Maid of Cotton she will fly to New York and receive an all-cotton wardrobe created by 35 outstanding U. S designers.

Representing the 13 million members of the U. S. cotton industry, she will tour nearly 40 cities in the United States, Canada and Europe, making numerous radio and television appearances along the way.

All finalists in the contest will receive gifts such as cosmetics, lingerie, jewelry, and cotton-lace handkerchiefs. The winner will receive a set of luggage, and a 35mm. camera.

Cobb Selected To Aid Johns As Governor

Arthur Cobb, a 1949 graduate of Florida State University, has been appointed administrative assistant to Acting Gov. Charley E. Johns, according to an announcement issued by the governor's office this week. He assumes his duties effective today.

Governor Johns said Cobb, who is now editor of the Fort Walton News, will receive $7,500 a year.

A native of Pensacola, Cobb was one of the first men students in the department of journalism here immediately after World War II, according to Earl L. Vance, professor of journalism. He was on the staff of the Flambeau during most of his time here.

After graduating in journalism Cobb became assistant professor of journalism at Furman University, a position he held until 1951 when he was made editor of the Fort Walton newspaper.

He is married to the former Hettie Camp of Tallahassee, who is also an FSU journalism graduate and former instructor in the department of journalism here.

Cobb's newspaper, The Playground News, has received many awards of distinction since he became editor, having only recently been given the General Excellence award by the Florida Press Association for the best weekly newspaper in its class.

Survey On Pinning Reveals 152 Have "Pledged Love"

By TOM HALL

According to Webster's definition of pinning, 152 campus sorority and fraternity members are fastened, joined, secured or transfixed. Pinning is one of the oldest customs of courtship since the introduction of Greek societies to the campus.

A recent survey of campus courtship revealed that 94 members of sororities and 58 members of fraternities are pinned. Just what is meant by the one-sided ratio is not known, but it may mean that the women have extended their ardor to other colleges.

THE KAPPA ALPHA Theta's are the leaders of the women's order with 10 members pinned. Running a close second are the Chi Omega, Tri-Delta and Kappa Delta sororities with nine each. The others range from nine members to three which is the lowest.

In the men's group the Sigma Chi fraternity leads with 15 members who have been ceremoniously dipped in the pool in front of Westcott. This dipping or drenching may well be the reason for the one-sided ratio of only 58 men to 94 women pinned. However, the Sigma Chi fraternity must have disregarded this ceremony.

IN SECOND PLACE for the men is the Pi Kappa fraternity with six pinned and in third place are the Pi Kappa Alpha's and Kappa Alpha's.

The range in the men's group is from 15 to 0 members pinned. Here again the women have outnumbered the lowest of the men's figures by a margin of three.

FROM THESE figures it might be well for the male element of the campus to retard a greater one-sidedness of the ratio or it may induce the women to an even greater margin.

Tallahassee's Fashions Fall Behind Nation's Top Centers

Women's fashions in Tallahassee annually lag about a year behind what the women are wearing in the fashion centers of the nation.

This was the opinion of a panel of Tallahassee fashion authorities Wednesday night in a discussion sponsored by Florida State University's Fashion Institute.

PANEL MEMBER Don Mayeron said the lag in fashions is characteristic of most small and medium size towns. "What is fashion in New York, Chicago or Atlanta this year, goes over well here the following year," he said.

Mayeron said the slim skirt outsold all other styled skirts in Tallahassee this fall. He said the short hemline skirt was a flop. "Customer reaction to the short hemline here ranged from 'no,' to 'definitely ridiculous'."

"I BELIEVE HOWEVER," Mayeron added, "that if the short hemline persisted and became a strong fashion all the women would wear it regardless."

Bertha Cooke, another panel member, said the trend in her shop was for the women in the Tallahassee area to buy smartly tailored dresses that "can be dressed up or dressed down." She said when the women buy a party dress they go in for a full skirt with either round or square neck, with straps or strapless.

PANEL MEMBER Ed Miller said color choices for shoes and accessories in Tallahassee found black leading all other colors. "By at least 85 percent," Miller said. He said other colors in order of popularity were amber brown, brown, red, navy and gray about equal and green a weak last.

Mae Wells said there is a strong trend for women to buy cotton foundations. "Many customers complain that the nylon and orlon is hot," she said. "However, our customers also appreciate the laundering qualities of nylon and orlon.

THE PANEL WAS the first in a series of public offerings by the new Fashion Institute at Florida State University. The Institute is an educational program to train persons for the growing fashion industry.

Curtain Goes Up In Romeo, Juliet Showing Tonight

Tonight at 8:15, the Department of Speech will present "Romeo and Juliet," its second major production of 1953.

Student tickets are on sale at the Conradi Theater box office for 40 cents, with ticket stub No. 14 also being needed to gain admittance. Tickets will remain on sale at the box office from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily throughout the run of the play, December 11, 12, 14 and 15.

The Office of the Dean of Women announced that women will be allowed to stay through the three-hour performance, provided they return directly to their dorms after the play.

Dr. Lynn E. Orr, play director, said he expected a smooth running show. "Coordinating production elements, such as lighting, scene changes and props have been a tremendous problem," he added, "but, based on Monday night's rehearsal, it should be a fine performance."

TO THE 22 students in the cast, some of whom act several parts, and the 12 students comprising the technical crew, "Romeo and Juliet" has presented numerous production difficulties which have had to be overcome. For instance, when rehearsals started, over six weeks ago, it was decided to cut costume expense by using material from the red velour act curtain which had been salvaged when the old Westcott auditorium had been torn down.

Douglas Russel, of the Speech Department, and senior Nancy Dickinson, who designed all costumes as a special project, decided to use the costume style of the Italian Rennaisance period, the actual setting of the play, instead of the Shakespearean style, which is customary. As Nancy put it, "It suits the mood of the play better, and is more romantic."

AFTER SEVERAL rehearsals, the "Burning of the Wigs" took place, when $100 worth of wigs to be used in "Romeo and Juliet" were accidentally destroyed. The replacements arrived on Wednesday.

Production problems of "Romeo and Juliet" were a large obstacle, since the play has 24 scenes, a large number of actors, and will be set on a small stage. Mr. Charles Riemer, who is in charge of technical problems of all shows

The annual Christmas program by the Florida State University School of Music "The Messiah," will be held tonight and tomorrow night beginning at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

The program, open to the public without charge, will feature The Choral Union, under the direction of Herman Gunter, Jr., FSU assistant professor of voice, and The University Symphony, under the direction of Robert Sedore, conductor, and FSU assistant professor of violin and orchestra.

Soloists will be Edith C. Kaup, soprano from Bainbridge, Ga., a graduate student in the School of Music with varied professional experience in the New York area including opera.

Claude Rhea, tenor from Tallahassee, is minister of music of the First Baptist Church in Tallahassee.

Betty Jane Grimm, also is an assistant professor of voice in the FSU School of Music.

Edgar Evans, bass of Tallahassee, is a teacher in Thomasville, Ga., schools and sings as soloist at the First Presbyterian Church in Thomasville. He is also a member of the Atlanta Opera Association.

Robert Leslie, organist, is a student, and James Staple, will be rehearsal accompanist.

Gunter, a native of Tallahassee, studied voice under professors at the Florida State College for Women. He graduated from the University of Florida and did graduate work at Union Theological Seminary. He has been baritone soloist for the James Memorial Chapel in New York and also sang with the Brick Presbyterian Church Motet Choir.

Sedore formerly taught at the University of Idaho, Baker University and in public schools of Lawrence, Kan. His education background includes a BA in Music from Kansas University and graduate work at Kansas University, Chicago Musical College, the Bayview School of Music and Harvard. He has studied under the noted violin teachers Leon Sametini and Laura Reed Yaggy.

DEPT. OF CHEMISTRY

Radioactive isotope technics is the subject of a special course being offered currently by the Department of Chemistry at FSU under the direction of Drs. Rowland E. Johnson and Ray Sheline. The course is designed to provide training for graduate students in the proper handling and the measuring of radio activa materials.

ONE-MAN EXHIBITION—Taize Miaka, graduate student, exhibits a dr[illegible] based upon his development as a painter at FSU. The exhibit contains more than 20 examples of his work including oil paintings and graphic arts prints.

Tiazo Miake Exhibits Works In One-Man Show In Gallery

The department of art announced the opening Wednesday of the one-man exhibition of Taizo Miake, master degree candidate for the January commencement here. The exhibit is open from 4 to 6:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The exhibit contains more than 20 examples of Miake's work including oil paintings and graphic arts prints. All the works on exhibit contain captions explaining the artist's intent.

The arrangement of the Miake exhibition is based upon his development as a painter at FSU. During his studies with Edmund Lewandowski, head of the department of art, and his principal painting teacher, Miake has developed from a sober use of limited color to a more daring and stimulating expression.

The show is a major portion of the requirements for the artist's master's degree, which also will require a study by the artist explaining his philosophy and intention.

Miake received his undergraduate degree from the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y. In addition to his graduate program in art, Miake has also studied widely in the fields of anthropology, archaeology, sociology and related subjects.

Faculty Club May Be Obtained Say Profs At Meeting

The possibility of a faculty club at FSU was discussed by a panel of five at Monday night's meeting of the FSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors held in Longmire Auditorium.

On the panel were Dr. Ira Holland, chairman; Miss Agnes Gregory, Dr. Maurice Vance, Dr. William Randel and Rod K. Shaw. The discussion was conducted along the pattern of what other schools have in the field of faculty clubs.

AS REPORTED by Dr. Nelson Marshall, president of the local AAUP, the panel brought out that many state universities of size comparable to that of FSU have faculty clubs. Often these clubs are very good as far as physical layout is concerned, he noted.

Dr. Marshall said, "It's safe to say that there was a rather strong sentiment to the effect that it might be well to try a faculty club and start out on a modest basis, perhaps meeting in a room or coffee place as a starter."

DR. MARSHALL added that one of the faculty studies committees has sent out a questionnaire concerning sentiment toward establishing a faculty club.

Routine business was conducted with Dr. Marshall presiding. The next meeting of the local AAUP, of which approximately half the faculty are members, will be the second Monday in January.

Registrar's Office Has Get-Together Before Christmas

The fourth annual Christmas party for personnel and families of the Registrar's office will be held Tuesday, December 15 in Longmire lounge, at 7 p.m. A program of entertainment has been worked out, including Santa Claus and gifts for the children. Mr. Claude Rhea, director of music at the First Baptist Church in Tallahassee, will lead in singing Christmas carols.

President Doak S. Campbell, Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, Dean of Student Welfare, Vice President A. B. Martin and their wives have been invited as special guests.

Students Attend Seminar: 'Get That Job--Hold It'

About 150 students here turned out to hear a panel discussion staged by Alpha Kappa Psi and Delta Sigma Pi, business fraternities in cooperation with the Florida State University Placement office.

Manned by five leading business executives from Florida and Georgia, the panel talked on the theme "Get That Job—And Hold It!"

Henry Wrenn of Tallahassee, Florida Legislative Bureau head and well known former newspaperman, served as moderator.

A. B. Robertson, member of the panel, said "Nobody gives anything away but opportunity." He explained that it is comparatively easy to get a job now, but the hard part is to hold it. After the panel finished its discussions, students present were invited to ask questions.

One student asked if there were any chance of getting the boss' job, and was informed by the panel members that there is a chance if the worker surpasses his boss in ability.

Turning to more serious questions, another student asked about military service. Would time out for compulsory service block their job opportunities? They were reassured by all the panel members.

Details of their education appeared to bother some of the students. They wanted to know if a BS degree from the school of business was better than an AB degree in liberal arts, for example.

Panel members seemed agreed that the kind of college major a job seeker was made little difference. They want bright and alert college men for their companies. But a certain amount of on-the-job training for the special company always follows the hiring of a new man.

When asked about women's chances of getting top jobs in business and industry, there was considerable discussion. It all boiled down to the big opportunities for them being more limited. Often jobs calling for travel are not open to women because companies do not like to assume the added responsibility the matter of sex makes.

A number of women were present, but they were in the minority, about one to five.

The panel discussion was part of the fifth annual FSU job-getting seminar sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi and Delta Sigma Pi, together with the office of Vocational Guidance and Placement.

SPE BALL

The Second Annual Queen of Diamonds Ball, sponsored by the Sigma Phi Epsilon pledges for the active members, was held at the Chapter House on College Avenue, Thursday, December 3.

Carol MacCory, Margie McCreight and Crystal McRae were chosen for the Queen of Diamonds Courts. Carol was selected as the Queen.

Dancing beneath the diamonds and hearts which adorned the walls of the house was the order of the night.

President, Veep Represent FSU At SUSGA Meet

Four Schools Attend Scheduled Sessions At UF Tomorrow

Recognizing the need for an organization of student government associations in the Southeast, student body presidents from four Southern schools will meet tomorrow afternoon at the University of Florida in Gainesville to draw up a constitution for the newly-planned Southern University Student Government Association.

Student Body presidents from the University of Alabama Florida State University, Emory, and University of Florida will attend the meeting. A representative from University of Georgia has tentatively planned to attend.

MILTON CAROTHERS, president of FSU student body, and Gene Lawler, vice-president of student body, will represent FSU.

The meeting will be held in the Student Union at 1 00 p.m. on the Florida campus. Jim Harris, U. of F student body president, has had a model constitution drawn up in cooperation with their Political Science department, which embodies the ideas that were drawn up at Emory University earlier this year.

THE SESSION to be held tomorrow grew out of a meeting of all Southern schools held at Emory in October.

The delegates of the Emory conference proposed the formation of a non-political association of colleges and universities in the Southeast dedicated to the service of the respective campuses from which the Southern University Student Government Association is planned.

A CONSTITUTIONAL Committee composed of the student body presidents of the four schools was appointed. Much of the framework of the constitution was drawn up at the Emory meeting, and the representatives tomorrow will decide on any, as yet, undecided or unpolished matters.

Carothers said he was definitely in favor of this proposed association, composed of state institutions and large colleges. "I think we can benefit from being in a student association with the University of Florida," he said. "We hope that a constitution will come out of this Gainesville meeting that will be acceptable to all the schools that were represented at the Emory conference."

AFTER THE constitution is ratified by the nucleus group at Emory, it will be sent with an invitation to all Southern schools, named in the constitution.

Sports Day Planned Tomorrow Honoring Contesting Teams

Women's physical education majors and faculty will sponsor the second of their annual Sport's Days tomorrow for the benefit of 16 high school girl's athletic teams from several counties in the immediate vicinity of Tallahassee.

Miss K. W. Montgomery has announced that the purpose of these Sports Days, which have been held here for over thirty years, is to bring girl's athletic teams together for contests under conditions that will produce a number of desirable outcomes, for instance, to display a high level of skill, to receive real enjoyment in the play, to develop good sportsmanship, to produce friendly relations with other high schools, and to broaden their social development.

UNDESIRABLE results which are being discouraged by these games are an over emphasis of championship and the feeling of "win at all costs." For these reasons no tournaments have been planned.

Activities for tomorrow include badminton, basketball, bowling, table tennis, shuffle board soft ball, and volley ball. After lunch on Saturday a general assembly will be held at which each school will have an opportunity to present a skit to introduce itself. The demonstration school will be host to tomorrow's groups.

BEARD PLAYS

Ramona Cruikshank Beard, associate professor of organ at Florida State University, will present a Christmas organ program Sunday, December 20, at the Trinity Episcopal Church of Apalachicola. The program will begin at 5 p.m.

Mrs Beard has planned a group of Christmas melodies of various countries following the Christmas story of prophecy, Nativity and Epiphany. Composers represented will include Corelli, Bach, D'Aquin, Handel, Pachelbel and Widor.

CAMPUS STERILITY

(From the Daily Tar Heel, University of North Carolina)

There is an academic pallor around here which pervades everything. Nothing seems to pulsate with the vitality we always associated with education. We swim in a dead sea. We eat stale bread.

Every word from the north tells us of experimentation in education; from the west we hear of expansion; from the south we hear of revolution; but here, we hear nothing except "Move over for the BA school."

Are we sitting here, a calm eye of an academic storm raging elsewhere? Probably so. But it is the calmness not of serenity, but of absolute sterility. It is as if our tubes were tied off.

If we consider the spectrum of thought to proceed (from left to right) from red to blue, we must admit, sadly, that there is nothing on this campus to the left of yellow. The late Bob Taft's political ideas set the campus pace, with the average half way between Sen. McCarthy and Bertie McCormick. In fact, there's not a self-respecting liberal left, and those who make the pretense (and few bother even to pretend) clear their throats and say, "I know you'll think me a Communist for saying this," and then give birth to a mouse.

We wretch.

Our cup runneth over with tepid tea; our lemon slice in molded.

Editor's Note: You are not so lonely as you think. From this southern vantage point, we see no "revolutions."

REAL SERVICE

From all comments we have heard, the distribution of last Tuesday's Flambeau by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity was quite successful.

The project they have undertaken is a service in the truest sense of the word, for it affects the whole university.

APO and Flambeau can judge their thoroughness only by public comment. Those with requests for distribution or other suggestions along this line are urged to contact APO through The Florida Flambeau office, phone 4821.

NOTHING TO IT

From the Daily Reveille, Louisiana State University

"My son, now that you are home from college, tell me of all the wonderful things you have learned. I want to hear all about it, because I never had a chance to get a college education."

"My father, I learned nothing."

"What is this, son? You learned nothing. How can that be? You were there four years. You must have learned something."

"Well, I'll tell you how it was, dad. When I did make it to classes, I slept. I never bought a textbook, much less read one. In fact, I never read anything that had anything to do with college or courses. I never talked to anybody about anything; I just had a good time."

"But, son, you've got a degree. How did you manage that without learning anything?"

"It was easy, dad. I had a system. You see, I only scheduled courses giving objective tests."

"What's that, son?"

"Well, in objective tests, all you got to do is mark a 'T' or an 'F' in a blank, or circle a letter or number in what they call a multiple-choice question, or put a letter by a number in a matching question. That's all there is to it."

"But, son, you've got to know something to put the letters and numbers in the right place."

"No, dad, if you schedule the right courses, know how to make plus and minus marks, how to put a number or letter in a blank, and if you're really lucky, you can get a college degree."

"Then the degree doesn't mean much, does it, son?"

"No, sir. I guess it doesn't."

NOT HERE

In discussing the forced resignations of the University of Georgia student editors, we failed to mention our own blessings. Our privileges are worthy of comment.

The Florida Flambeau is subjected to no censorship boar, either before or after publication. Our news is prepared by our own news staff; our editorials and columns represent our own opinions.

Letters to the Editor . . .

Apology

To the Students of FSU:

You know me by a once-used pseudonym of "Groggy." I used that name on a letter in which I criticized rather sharply and in an exaggerated manner the after-dark quiet conditions at West Hall.

I feel that I should make this apology public and sign it. I meant no slur upon the abilities of the residence counselors at West Hall. I think they have done a fine job.

I meant no real attack on the residents of West Hall in general. The letter was meant to ridicule a few men who have behaved themselves most unbecomingly when others are trying to sleep or study. I meant to criticize some men who don't know how to drive up to the dorm quietly at night.

That my letter was unfair to many I realize and apologize for. That it was rather crude and not as inspired as I thought it was when I submitted it I also apologize for.

The counselors at West Hall are respected men. I did not intend that my letter should show even the slightest disrespect toward them, but it appears that it did show some.

The counsellors have made numerous appeals to those who make noise to shut up. The counselors have appealed to the maturity of the noise-makers. They have done all that anyone could possibly do.

Nobody can make a person behave so that he won't disturb those around him unless that person wants to. Realizing this, I attempted to ridicule the noise-makers in a letter to the Flambeau. That I caused embarrassment to those who did not deserve it was not my intent.

I hope that they will accept this apology.

MARTIN DYCKMAN.

Overgeneralized

To "GROGGY":

It is surprising to me to see you publicly criticize an over-exaggerated fault of our beautiful RESIDENCE HALL—not "dormitory." When speaking of the "noisy West Hall" you were certainly overgeneralizing. If you want to state specifically your south wing of the sixth floor, or of the tenth floor, you would do well to refrain from mentioning the rest of West; your general charges are completely unfounded, and you have committed a great injustice to all of those who have successfully attempted to make West Hall what it is today: the best residence hall on the campus, and, indeed, in the state.

I'm afraid that your complaint has been made not for the reasons you stated in your anonymous letter, but because you want to play your phonograph louder than the other fellow.

If you are such a coward as to wish to remain anonymous, that's your business; however, I would like to suggest to your readers that anonymity invites

TAMPA ORCHIDS

Ruark Would Have Docile Minds

By ORCHID ALONSO

The latest journalistic gem to come to us through the media of the printed page is that apparently, the better meaning college students are "laboring under the delusions" that a marked rise in student political interest is the only means of salvation for the country.

This latest mealy-mouthed attack on the prestige of the college student of today comes from one of our nationally syndicated columnist almost as if he had read the Flambeau's recent editorial and student responses on the need for increased interest in other than the small world that compose the college campus.

Robert Ruark, distinguished writer and critic, blasted the college student, and his apparent lack of sense in anything he did or said.

"The college student is not experienced enough," he countered. As examples, he cited the bloody rebellious actions of our college neighbors across the seas, who often as not take things into their own hands. Another example was his description of the gross ineptness of his colleagues of his own college days to think about much more than flappers and Charleston, with the few students who "wrote fiery essays in the campus papers" coming to eventual no good.

According to Ruark, he himself is an example of the ideal college student, who slept through his college years, and then blossomed his latent expression to become a success, measurably more so than any of the "informed" students.

If we take his words as law, it is obvious that any attempt to induce the youth of today to think for themselves is blasphemy, if not a veritable danger to the foundation of our country, which would then be stocked with know-nothing radicals.

Rouark's poignant remarks strike the writer as being a far cry from the wishes and intentions of the youth leaders. What a far cry indeed, must be our present day youth. To compare them with the flaming youth of the mid-twenties or of Europe would be conjectural.

Ruark made no attempt to analyze, to compare, or even to realize the differences involved, and in so doing, he became from the very outset of his column, a victim of his very criticism.

But more important than that, he did not take into account the good intentions of the American youth today who is trying to gain an understanding of the things going around him, but yet, never pretends to be an authority.

Is he then critical of the interests of the college student who has a grave and intent leaning towards groping his way out of the present day muddle of politics and uniformitive press?

Our present day is not without its faults. The most widely publicised, although not the only factor, is the famed "panty-raids." They not only express cheap sensational outlets, but are inseparable to the realm of thoughtless action.

But these outbursts are not what brands an individual as radical, and that is the bug we're trying to fight.

Mr Ruark would have the world believe that the American campus is reeking with vile radicals, while the American college student would like to think of himself as a progressive prototype of the future citizens that America can be proud of within a few years.

The real decision does not lie in the hands of Ruark or any of his colleagues that might believe as he does, but in the students themselves.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS by Dick Bibler

"I put a desk at both ends of the classroom—Confuses heck out of those students who always sit on the back row."

Let It Be Said

By DICK VICTORY

The Writers are leaving; the presses are dead
Society's plaything has been put to bed,
But still there hangs a heavy dread
Like something important has been left unsaid.

Reporters are a strange lot. Usually driven by some hidden, clandestine motive, they care little for the enriching of society.

With lofty dreams, they seek writings "place in the sun." And they are fruitless.

It is no wonder they are cynical. Hiding behind callous voices, carved pipes, and curt smiles, they just don't care.

And can they be blamed?

Reporting is one of the most thankless of thankless jobs. Yet, still they come.

It is hard to describe the perfect reporter. But, He must look like Gregory Peck, have the curiosity of McCarthy, the talent of Dyckman, and wear dress shirts with soiled cuffs. However, let us deal with the real kinds.

The Steve Wilson type. His paper, "The Illustrated Mess." has great confidence in him. He covers all the big stories. In his latest, he interviewed a nut from the gone house. I mean crazy. Anyway, this guy keeps imagining that he is being tossed and trampled about by a horde of women. He says:

. . . a sea of women came towards me, a huge wave of their bodies engulfed me . . . I was losing my breath."

Yes, but what a way to drown.

The David Lawrence River type. His mother's name was Smith. I know it doesn't make sense now, but it fits in real nice here. It's called a plant. So remember.

He attempts to put the person with which he is dealing on an equal basis with himself. He tries to find something they have in common. His most recent case.

Smith: "My name's Smith.

River: "No kidding. If my mother hadn't married, my name would have been Smith, too."

Also mud.

The opposite of the River type. He is very submissive. He says of the world, "I came. I saw, I concurred."

And then there is the woman reporter. Her name: Brenda Stacked. She doesn't meet many deadlines, but she hears plenty. However, she is happily married to one of the paper's newsboys, Harry Appe. He isn't too brainy, she admits, but "he has lots of hair on his chest."

So does Lassie.

To one and all, reporters, I salute you and your cause. Congratulations for a job smell done.

THE BOOKLIST

Current Issues Contain Good Articles

By BOB FOLSOM

There are some good articles floating around in various magazines on the stands now, and perchance you might be interested, here are seven readable and interesting ones:

HARPER'S MAGAZINE, December. Bernard De Vato, "The Easy Chair." In an article entitled, "Always Be Drastically Independent," Mr. De Vato gives an enlightening rundown on the policies and functions of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the newspaper founded by Joseph Pulitzer. He says there are not more than a half dozen newspapers which can be compared to it, and calls the Post-Dispatch "the finest practitioner of liberal journalism we have ever had."

Esquire, January 1954. In addition to its maze of advertising, cartoons and calendar girls for 1954, this issue comes up with a dramatic lead article by Joseph Wechsberg. "All Quiet on the Eastern Front" is a report of the June uprising in Berlin, as seen through the eyes of the East and West Berliners. He quotes the late Ernst Reuter, Mayor of West Berlin, as saying the uprising will "one day be compared to the storming of the Bastille and to the March days of 1848."

Humorously, he shows, that motormen the world over are the same: . . . said the Customs officer, ". . . That Wednesday afternoon, a (street) car was standing right there when the shooting started. People ran away and crowded into the car, shouting at the motorman to leave before they all got killed. But the fellow glanced at his watch and shook his head and he didn't leave until three minutes later . . . according to schedule."

The music minded might glance over a piece by Edward Robinson, "Two Hours of Recorded Pleasure," in the same magazine. He lists 15 operatic selections totaling two hours playing time. They range from "Gregorian Chants, Vol. 1," and "The Marriage of Figaro" to "Chopin Recital." He reports on the background of each, doing a splendid job.

Incidentally, the makeup of Esquire has been changed. Two columns to a page and new type face improves the looks considerably.

The Sewanee Review, Autumn 1953. Randall Jarrell, better known for his poetry, is writing a novel which will appear next spring. Book V of the novel, Pictures from an Institution, called "Gertrude and Sidney" appears in the Review. The Institution is a university. And the Pictures the intellectually minded Mr Jarrell draws are fresh and different, and influenced by his poetry.

THE ATLANTIC, December. "English As She's Not Taught" by Jacques Barzun, history professor at Columbia University. Professor Barzun says the college bred millions use too much jargon in both language and literature today. "But who cares? Why fuss? . . . Nobody cares much because—we all think—it's the deed (or the thing) that counts, not the words. . . . The power of words over nature, which has played such a role in human history, is now an exploded belief, a dead emotion. . . . The cure is harsh and likely to be unpopular, for it must start with self-denial." All in all, Professor Barzun is pretty concrete about his case.

The Saturday Review, December 12, 1953. Norman Cousins, SR editor, on his recent trip around the world, talked to many of the world leaders. This edition has a report on his talks with Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, of India, and Prime Minister Mohammed Ali, of Pakistan. Taken from tape-recorded spontaneous question and answer session, they are timely and first-hand reports on the Asian outlook by two of its top leaders. Through their opinions and replies both personalities are displayed clearly and a deep insight into the working mind of these two men is gained.

On the SR editorial page, "The Plight of the Novelist" is dealt with by Amy Loveman, an associate editor. In part, she says: "Creative literature is a plant of delicate nurture. It demands for its successful production a proper climate of ideas as well as a soil enriched and vigorous. It needs public response to its stimulus and a pattern of thought capable of stimulating the public. As Matthew Arnold, so quoted in his day, so unfortunately neglected in our own, said long ago: 'For the creation of a masterwork of literature two powers must concur, the power of the man and the power of the moment, and the man is not enough without the moment.'"

Where're You In The Line-Up, Son?

By BRUCE GALPHIN

The following are excerpts from an interview with Roy V. Harrass, distinguished educator and member of the board of regents of the University of Gorga. Mr Harrass' brilliant insight into the problems of education and his lucid comments have done much to make Gorga's educational system what it is today.

This interview followed the latest of Harrass' progressive, thoughtful suggestions for improving higher education.

"Mr. Harrass, I wonder if you would repeat the plan you proposed last week."

"I was just talking about those little punks who write silly ideas about changing the way our folks used to live. They make me so g----m mad. Every time I see one of these little sissy boys hanging around some college, the more I think every one of them ought to be made to play football. What we need today is more he-men and fewer sissies."

"Then your proposal is that . . . to require football of all men students?"

"That's it."

"But what about the women? Are they to play football too?"

"Well, I don't think much o' women goin' to college, anyways, you know, but I guess we gotta put up with 'em now that they're spoiled. Guess we can put 'em to sewing or cookin' or washin'."

"How long had you worked on this idea of making all men play football before you made it public?" Mr Harrass?

"Well, son, it ain't one of those things you think about much. You just feel that way. Git what I mean, son? That's the way I always do things . . . cause I feel 'em. None of them crack-pot theories. A man don't need to read a book to know what's right and wrong."

"I know some football players that are pretty bright students, Mr. Harrass. What are you going to do about the ones that still have time to read books."

"I ain't against readin' books, of course, you know son. Read one or two myself one time. One of 'em was called NEW YORK CONFIDENTIAL. Told all about them yankee crooks and Communists. Another one was pretty good to be written by a foreigner: MEIN KAMPF. That guy sure knew how to handle people. . . . Still, you're right, son. Shouldn't let college kids get exposed to these radicals. They ain't mature enough to know any better. Think I'll just shut down the libraries. All that paper oughta bring a handsome sum."

"Still there are the professors, Mr. Harrass."

"That's where you're wrong, son. There ain't many of them smart alecks left. We know how to get rid of teachers with the wrong ideas."

"Mr. Harrass, why don't you just close down the classrooms, the libraries, the lectures, the plays and music productions, and just leave the dormitories?"

"Son, you sound like you're trying to pull my leg. You don't look so big to me, either. Do you play football?"

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

New Processes Vie With Technicolor

By DAVID DREIS

Back in the late twenties, Doug Fairbanks was swashing his buckles in a fiasco called, The Black Pirate. There was one big difference about this film that set it off from others of this day. It was in color and the flicker frequenting fools favored it famously.

Because there was no color film in these dark ages, each frame on the celluloid was individually painted in oils like the photographer uses on portraits. It had a flicking effect and actors were changing colors in the middle of a scene, but it was good enough to start Hollywood in pursuit of a color film.

It wasn't until the middle thirties that color film was perfected and Trail of the Lonesome Pine was released in Technicolor starring Henry Fonda and Sylvia Sydney. Ah, Technicolor. Once it was a type of film and now it's a corporation with all the ribbon of a corporation . . . including high prices and high wages. Instead of the billing of "In Technicolor" it's now "In Color by Technicolor." Film companies have to get permission to use their films and also every Technicolor film has to have a color consultant . . . that costs loot!

When the corporation hiked its pay it set the individual studios on their ways to find a replacement. Some found their own and copyrighted it. Others signed with a color company to fight Technicolor's rising costs.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer found a replacement in doing the takes and scenes in home movie film and giving the finished product to Technicolor. This cut down on a lot of money because too much of the expensive Technicolor celluloid was ending up on the cutting floor. M-G-M first risked Ansco Color on The Wild North with Stewart Granger. They've since followed with Kiss Me, Kate and Take the High Ground.

Republic made a deal with Consolidated Color and ended up with inexpensive Trucolor. Trucolor, however, is no replacement for Technicolor film. It has a green tint and every color has some green tinge in it . . . even green.

Warner Brothers have been the most successful in getting Warnercolor, their own development, which is slashing costs all around. Warners always went in for a blue filter on their color film and their own product has the tinge right in the film. Of course, like Trucolor, the color tinge takes away some realism. WB released She's Back on Broadway with Ginny Maye and Springfield Rifle with Gary Cooper in Warnercolor.

Cinecolor produces dull colors and is used primarily for outdoor movies. Supercinecolor is a hypoed version of the same, but is different in that every color is rich and full sorta like an oil painting. It's used for indoor epics and at times looks more realistic than Technicolor.

We have used the term 'realistic' primarily because it is such, but don't confuse Technicolor with naturalness photography. Actors wear special makeup, put out by the corporation and trees are given a special treatment with special coloring. Even white horses have to be whitewashed to fit in with Technicolor.

New color television is starting to get the play and sets will sell at $1000 or more. One of the trial productions threw the engineers in a tizzy a few weeks ago. They were operating their dials trying to get a bowl of fruit to have natural colors. A practical joker put a green banana in the pile and the engineers were going wild. Finally, one hurried over to his side and looked. "Yeh, but take a look at the apple . . . it's blue."

THE LONGMIRE RUNAROUND

Presidential Race Burning Already

By DREAR PEWSON

Here's what all Longmire is talking about: the spring elections. Student politicos can't rest unless they have the election lined-up for five months from now.

It will be denied, but there will be plenty of smoke in the presidential race, unless I have my signals crossed. One strong candidate for the presidency seems unable to decide if it's worth it all. Time will tell. I'll make a prediction soon.

Other gossip is centered about the political future of FSU's most Romanesque figure. Wayne says the University of Maryland may claim him. But will he keep his word?

Students are breathfully awaiting the next issue of Smoke Signals. Confidential reports confirm that it will not be on schedule, as usual. It seems editor John Howard mistook some new pictures for old and threw them away. Even the editor can't tell the difference.

This reporter can now reveal an exclusive report of graft in student publications. Opulent salaries are not enough to satisfy Flambeau staffers, they take bribes, too. The sponsor of an event sometimes must forward as many as 5,000 complimentary tickets in order to get on page one. I will submit these facts to a special Senate investigating committee later.

Other scroungings from around the Flambeau lab: Commisar Galphin, violent advocate of journalistic free enterprise, is disappointed that no one is challenging his freedom. "What kind of freedom is it if you don't have to fight to be free?" he asks.

It will be denied, but new facts have been uncovered dealing with widespread subversion in FSU's student government. At least four top student officials are suspected of having faculty connections. This information has been suppressed. I intend to testify before a special Senate investigating committee later.

I can now report that there is no truth to the rumor that the bookstore will give away free textbooks next semester.

And now, for predictions of things to come:

1. Will class be held December 19: No.
2. Will Tom Cundy slander somebody in his next column, "The Hypodermic": Yes.
3. Will FSU and U. of F. schedule a football game for next year: No.

These predictions have proved 48 per cent accurate.

Sands' Slants

by Tommy Sands
Flambeau Sports Editor

They still play good basketball out in the old West ampus arena. And if you were among the 462 heads that ed into the ancient structure to witness Tuesday night's ening tussle with Mercer's Bears, then you probably ed no explanation.

It's been that way for years and it's a rare occasion when sit through out of those g drawn-out one-sided affairs. any rate the curtain-raiser esday night was typical in-deed.

As for coming attractions, this weekend's bill should pack 'em Georgia Teachers, tonight's opposition annually turns out one of the finest small college es in the nation and always ranks high among the scoring leaders. The tall Professors already have been named to participate in the growing Gator Bowl tourney over the holidays.

Saturday night's opponent, Ft. Jackson, takes an an added interest in that Bob Hartman, all-time Seminole cage great is reported to be player-coach of the Army five. Hartman, who holds the school as well as the state scoring record (493 points in 1851) was the big man in the Tribe's drive to the quarterfinals of the national NAIA tourney that year.

The hard-driving Indianan has played several seasons of service ball now. Was a member of a touring five in the Pacific for awhile and won some sort of All-Pacific honors.

Zippy Morocco, who won Southeastern Conference scoring honors at Georgia last season, is also on the squad. Another report has it that ex-Florida ace Casares may come with the service quint. All of which points to the fact that it should be an interesting weekend of basketball.

Coach J. K. "Bud" Kennedy would have this bunch moving with a few games under their belts. They all played together last season, remember, and only one member of last year's varsity gradnated—Bob Pence.

Bud was apparently pleased over Tuesday's win which came against a good Mercer five. He fairly lights up when you remind him that only one of his starters is a senior—Duane Gordon.

And Jerry Westhafer, second in scoring last year to Ham Wernke didn't even dress for the game because of an ankle injury. So better things lie ahead for Bud's crew when Jerry is ready again.

An additional encouraging note coming out of the contest was the play of Jimmy Oler and long Rick Benson. Oler, a late comer last season caught the crowd's fancy with his tricky driving layups and showed that he's going to help Wernke with some scoring this year. Benson, a junior, whose reflexes haven't functioned too smoothly the last two scoring eye since last time.

BOBBY'S NOT THROUGH YET

Bobby Fiveash is all set to play in the annual North-South all-star tilt Christmas night in the Orange Bowl.

The blond bounder who capped a great season with a fine display of offensive power against Tampa which netted him 141 yards rushing and two TD's, is set to report next Friday, which of course, is the same day classes are dismissed for the holidays.

Andy Gustafson, Miami coach, will again direct the Southerners and was probably instrumental in Fiveash's selection. After his Hurricanes whipped the Seminoles 27-0 in the season opener, he was quoted to the effect that Bobby could make anybody's ball club.

Indications are that the Bainbridge, Ga. Bomber will occupy a starting role. Gus was impressed with Fiveash's defensive ability to start with and after his superb display of ball-carrying ability, the Miami mentor was further impressed.

At any rate it's a fitting climax to a fine football player's collegiate career. Before the Tampa tilt, everyone, including Fiveash himself, thought he had another year of eligibility, but a quick check of the records found that he had a year of junior college competition under his belt. That coupled with his three seasons in Seminole satins, dood it.

Fiveash will take a nice little hunk of rushing yardage to Miami. Through the Tribe's 10 games, (he missed one and most of two others) he wound up with a net total of 455 yards on 89 carries and an average of 5.5 per try.

Bobby, however, isn't the first Seminole to perform in an all-star game of this sort. Bill Dawkins, as good a guard as they make—played in and started both the North-South game and the Senior Bowl tilt in 1851.

MEET THE WINNERS
Phi Delts reign as Intramural Grid Champs

WIN 14-12

Phi Delts Snare 'Mural Grid Title

By ART KENNERLY

Phi Delta Theta reigns as czar of campus intramural football today, after defeating West Hall's Penthouse Gang Wednesday night in Campbell Stadium, 14-12.

The boys from Wildwood Drive went out in the wet, slopped around in the mud, and left triumphant. This marks the second year in a row that a fraternity team has whipped a dormitory team in the final football championship. It is the second year in a row for the Phi Delts. They won last year too.

A tight game, the slick-as-grease field made the players on both teams look downright laughable at times. But the final score was not funny to the Penthouse Cagers.

The Phi Delts scored twice in the first quarter. Passing ace Art Hemple pitched to Bob Berto and Ted Lowe for the Phi Delt scores. Joe Parker made both extra points.

Sliding, kicking up mud, and getting nowhere fast, the Penthouse crew racked up two touchdowns before the game closed down. But the West Hall gang could not get the two extra points across to make the score even. Outstanding for the Penthouse gang was Teddy Scholze, who made a long, mad, mud-spattered scamper to keep his team in the game. A sleeper pass play got the Penthouse Gang their other six points.

Tankmen Meet Jax Navy Here

Swimming team makes its first appearance of the season here tomorrow afternoon when it goes against Jacksonville Navy.

The meet, scheduled for the East Campus pool, starts at 3 p.m.

Saturday's affair will mark the first of eight home matches for Coach N. B. "Bim" Stults' charges. Stults, starting his sixth term as FSU swimming mentor, directed the Seminoles to two wins over Jax Navy last season by scores of 43-40 and 50-33.

Seven lettermen and what Stults terms a "Promising" freshman crop will be on hand for tomorrow's meet.

Heading the list of returnees is George Cooper, Southern AAU backstroke titlist, and Ernie Stock, ace backstroker. Other lettermen include Steve Bailey, Larry Beaty, Charles Crowe, Richard Rhoton and Bob Stuke.

Last year the Seminole tankmen rolled up a 7-1 mark, best in the South—losing only to powerful Georgia. Georgia, however, will provide the opposition here Monday night.

Taylor Switches To Cage Sport

By BOB TAYLOR

With nothing left in football except the bowl games, basketball has pushed its way into the national sports' spotlight.

So switching our crystal-ball to the hardcourt, it looks this way nationally:

Nearly every expert and cage coach in the country is picking the Indiana Hoosiers to repeat this year as national champions. Winners of the NCAA tournament last year, the powerful Hoosiers didn't lose a single man through graduation.

But we like Kentucky better. Indiana has one of the country's greatest one-two pnches in all-American Don Schlundt and Bob Leonard. But we like Kentucky's one-two punch of all-Americans Cliff Hagan and Frank Ramsey better.

When you remember Indiana as the NCAA champion last year, you also must remember that Kentucky didn't play last year.

Suspended by the NCCA for one year, Coach Adolph Rupp and his boys are all back — and with a year's practice together under their belts.

And Baron Rupp, still mad about the suspension, would like nothing better than to win the NCAA crown in his first year back in competition. W ebelieve he'll do it, and we elook for the Wildcats with Hagan, Ramsey, and sophomore Jerry Bird leading the way, to be number one in the nation this year.

The Tsp Ten

Indiana's defending champs should be a close second. But

FSU Gymnasts Face Syracuse

With another Gymstavaganza completed, it'll still be no rest for the Seminole gym team when they meet a strong Syracuse team here next Friday.

Members of the Syracuse team coming to Tallahassee include Co-Captain John Barkel, who excels on the side horse and high bars. This should lead to an interesting and close match between Barkel and FSU Co-Captain Don Holder for the side horse title.

Syracuse's other co-captain, Perdie Fournies, may give oCach Hartley Prices' charges trouble in the rope climh but it is doubtful if he can beat out the Tribe's Jack Miles on the flying rings, another of his specialties.

Milan Trnka's specialty is the parallel and high bars but he will probably have his hands full in Holder and Pat Signorelli.

Last man on the invading team but the one who presents the biggest threat is tumbler James "Corky" Sebbe, undefeated in last year's collegiate meets, winning both the Eastern and NCAA titles.

To accomplish this he beat out Sullivan of Illinois, the defending champ, hy two points. It's interesting to note that the previous year Sullivan beat "Corky" for the title by only one point. FSU will counter with Larry Weston and Benny Wallace.

Indians Go Against Georgia Teachers

The Florida State University cagers open a full weekend of activity here tonight when they play host to the high-scoring Georgia Teachers five. The West Campus tilt is set for 8:15.

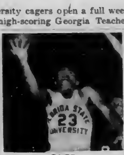
Tomorrow night, Coach Bud Kennedy's five takes on a well-rounded Ft. Jackson quint made up of former college aces.

Tonight's clash will mark the sixth in the series between FSU and the Teachers, with the Georgia quint holding a 3-2 lead. The Seminoles won their only meeting with the Profs last season 68-63.

Noted for hir high-scoring teams, Coach J. B. Scearce brings an experienced five into tonight's tilt, however.

Veterans Chester Webb, Bobby Phillips and Jim Harley provide most of the offensive spark, but freshmen Don Avery, Doug Corry and Don Wallen, are also bright notes.

Webb bagged 16 points in the Teacher's 10-point loss to smooth-working Stetson Wednesday. The defeat was the first of the season for the Georgians.



OLER
Another Scoring Punch?

Tonight's outing, of course, will be the third start for Kennedy's charges.

The Tribe dropped its opener to Mississippi State by a 87-75 count in State College, Miss. last Friday. Then Tuesday they edged a game Mercer quint 72-70 in the home lid-lifter.

Kennedy will probably lineup with the same five that has started the first two games. That means that Dick Artmier and Duane Gordon will open at the guards, Rick Benson at center and Ham Wernke and Jimmy Oler at the guards.

In reserve Kennedy will have such capable performers as Tom Burst, Tom Dellahan, Preacher Reeves and Ed Wursbach. Junior ace Jerry Westhafer still nursing a pre-season ankle injury is a doubtful performer.

Westhafer, a regular for two seasons at forward, and last year's second-ranking scorer, missed the Mercer game and played on three minutes against Miss. State before retiring in favor of the ailing limb.

Holy Day of Chanukah Annually Celebrated With Historic Rituals

Wednesday evening the last candle was lit, and the eighth and final day of the Hanukkah will close the traditional yearly celebration of the liberation of the Jewish people

Long ago in the pages of history in the year 168 B C. the Jews were oppressed Antiochus IV of the Hellenic peoples began the task of converting the Jews by force, into followers of his pagan faith.

CAPTURING a Hebrew Temple, Antiochus destroyed all the symbols of the faith the Jews held near to their hearts In their place were put images of the pagan Greek gods and symbols of the mythical faith The crushing blow to the Jews was the installation of Antiochus' own high priests in their beloved temple whose job it was to tear down their cherished beliefs and replace them with the new and hated tenets

Jews now forced to accept the new way of life and the strange religion became the unhappiest people on earth Some acquiesced to the decree—others refused, and were promptly put to death, joining a long roll of martyrs of this faith down through the ages

SOME, HOWEVER, escaped deat' by fleeing to the hills and mountains of the country and living exiled lives in open caves.

For a time there was no hope for the people except their own faith in what their God held for them. Then a new leader came forward, Mattsthias enraged at the thought of his people's oppression, decided to throw off this yoke of tyranny

ORGANIZING a small band of rebels, including men from every walk of life in those dark times, Mattathias started a campaign to regain the lost land and to end the excesses of the pagans who now lived in their homes and worshipped false Gods in their temple Before he could finish his fight, however Mattathias died and his twelve sons assumed leadership They led the Jews to victory

Returning joyously to their village and homes, the Jews destroyed the pagan idols and re-erected the symbols of their own faith once again Only one symbol gave them trouble The lamp.

A LIGHT MUST always be kept burning in the Temple over the 'Ark' or the receptable for all the sacred writings of the Hebrew faith However legend says, the liberated Jews found only enough oil to last one day in the burning lamp They lit it anyway

Through some miracle, the lamp continued to burn for eight days and nights The people attributed this "miracle" to their God's pleasure at their release from bondage, and they promptly adopted the lighting of eight such lights to celebrate the festival of liberation

THAT IS WHY Jews the world over have, since Tuesday, lighted one candle a night, keeping them all burning and will light their final candle tomorrow night symbolizing the end of Hanukkah, the celebration of liberation, and a victory for their faith in the face of great odds

Modern-day celebrants of the Hebrew Rededication accompany the candle ceremonies with singing and dancing at the outset of the eight-day period. Members of Hillel Foundation, Jewish student group at Florida State University celebrated Sunday at Temple Israel with songs and dances, traditionally characteristic of their ages-old faith To families of the Jewish faith, Hanukkah means the exchange of gifts between members bound by a common faith.

put on by the Speech Departmnet, overcame these problems by devising a unique system of lighting and having various acts on different levels To change scenes, the lights are turned off briefly, allowing actors to change positions, go on or off stage, and scenery to be moved

DURING REHEARSAL, it was found that the actors and stage helpers had trouble moving about on the various levels of the stage in the dark, so Riemer had all walkways lined with luminous paint which they could follow, but which were invisible to the audience As Dr Orr says, "If you could look from above during a scene change, it would look like an airport at night, with a complicated series of inter-connected path-ways

With everything ready except the wigs a full dress rehearsal was held Monday night to iron out any remaining difficulties But the cast had to get along without Mr Riemer during the second half of the production He left "on urgent business,' as he says, His wife was having a baby

SUMMARIZING such occurences, Orr stated "Everything has happened now except the Conradi Theater burning down, and I'd better be quiet about that."

Group Journeys To New Orlean For Art Exhibits

A group of thirty-two students and faculty members from Florida State University will visit New Orleans this weekend on a tour sponsored by the Art Department. They will see the exhibition of "Masterpieces of French Painting Through Five Centuries."

The group consists of twenty-six students and seven adults, headed by Dr. James V. McDonough and Miss Florence Kava, of the Art Department

EXHIBITIONS ARE being held at the Delgado Museum of Art in New Orleans as a part of the 150th anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase The collection is made up of works from leading museums in America, as well as seven French museums including the Louvre. Included will be works by such famous French painters as Manet, Delacroix, and Monet.

The present trip was open to all students of Florida State. Dr McDonough said when asked about possible future tours of this type that, "those interested in the present New Orleans trip hope that such a venture might develop into an annual museum tour to include the Nelson Rockhill Museum in Kansas City, the National Gallery in Washington, and the Metropolitan Museum in Boston."

irresponsibility, and that is precisely what happened in your first letter

Bruce W. Fletcher,
Sincerely,

Refutation

To the Editor:

Speaking as a former mayor in West Hall, and thereby a member of the group of lesser dormitory officers who set up a provisional government here in the dorm. I refute the libelous statement in the Dec. 4 issue of the Flambeau that this group "were (sic) soon brought before the University Court and charged with setting up a machine government " Neither I nor the other two mayors have ever been charged by the Court, and anyone familiar with that trial would realize that this was not the issue brought up there The actual controversy binged around the constitutionality of the three goveroments which had been established up to that time

Furthermore, I think it is highly unfair to discredit the mayors as you did, when they were primarily responsible for backing the work of Bill Aynes, Homecoming Decorations Chairman, who went on to capture first place over the entire campus.

Nor did the "determined residents" have anything to do with the eventual establishment of a constitutional committee This committee was ordered to produce results or else by the court judge

In fact, the attitude of the residents, rather than "determined,' has so far been so rebellious or lethargic that it has been impossible for them to function as a unified group Evidence of this is the fact that Unit Three has assumed leadership of the entire dormitory, led by a handful of capable and hard working members It is Unit Three which eventually produced a championship football team and winning candidates for Goevrnor and Lt Governor, which pioneered a dorm newspaper; and which has sponsorel the only two dances of the year here in West Hall.

after these two, it's a mad scramble.

Duquesne edges out the others for third place because of its pair of ace big men. Both Dick Ricketts and Jim Tucker are all-American candidates and both are six-seven. A double menace for the Dukes' opponents this year.

Number four on the national list is our sleeper, Western Kentucky. The Hilltoppers, led by big Tom Marshall, will surprise everyone this year. Coach Ed Diddle is sitting on a real powderkeg.

Phog Allen's Kansas Jayhawks, always high in pre-season polls, are good enough for fifth this time. Led by B. H. Born, the Jayhawks could give Indiana trouble as the mid-west's best.

LaSalle is ranked sixth on the basis of one player, Tom Gola A sophomore all-American last year, the six-six Gola is rated the best player in college ball today.

Year in and year out, one of the best clubs in the nation is North Carolina State, and this season is no exception. Star sophomore center Ronnie Shavlik should guide them through to seventh place, if not higher.

Another perennial good team is Hank Iba's Oklahoma Aggies. Playing their usual great control type game, eighth place could be selling them short.

Number nine nationally should be LSU With their brilliant six-nine center Bob Pettit back the only team that stands between them and a second straight SEC title, is Kentucky.

Rounding out the top ten is Minnesota. The only big-ten team to dump Indiana last year, the Gophers will re-inherit their giant-killer role this year, watch them in the big games

FLORIDA TEAMS

Turning now to the state teams, we see The Florida Gators winning the state title despite the loss of standouts Rick Casares and Curt Cunkle. John Mauer's boys led by Sonny Rowell, will have to fight all the way though.

FSU with every starter back, should come in a close second With Ham Wernke and Jerry Westhafer as the strongest one-two punch in the state, the Seminoles could break some more scoring records this year

Our pick for third in the state are the Stetson Hi-Hatters Headed by versatile John Imgrund, the Hi-Hatters will have everybody back except guard Jack Osknee They'll give any team trouble before the year's over

Miami is dropped to fourth because of their lack of a standout ball player The Hurricanes had trouble working smoothly last year, and their lack of a "take charge" guy could hurt them again this year

Fifth place goes to the Florida Southern Moccasins. Fred Lapper is all-state material down there.

Rollins' high scoring Tars are sixth. They could easily prove to be the state's most colorful team. They have lots of scoring punch, but little defense.

Tampa, crippled severely by graduation gets the cellar nod Loss of four year man George Brian will really hurt the Spartans.

ing the latter's lack of understanding, emotionalism, and short-sightedness.

On the defending side, a renowned Latin American historian, Dr. Bailey Diffie of the City College of New York spoke out for the rights of the foreign investors, not on moral or ethical grounds, but on intelligent far-sighted grounds. It is to the advantage of the people to allow and encourage foreign capital, and this will not continue in cases of widespread confiscation in the name of expropriation.

PERHAPS THE MOST accurate and descriptive paper of the session was given by Ernst Schwarz, Executive Secretary of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on Labor Organization in the Caribbean today. The sad case of Guatemala in having its labor organization directed by Communists is a lesson for the A.F. of L. and C.I.O., who were too late in going into this area. Now, much is being done by both organizations in the United States, but with adaptations as are needed to fit the cultural area. In talking with Mr. Schwarz following the conference at one of the receptions, I found that regional conferences between different areas of the Caribbean are helping to implement labor organization away from the Communist or Peronista line

THE UNDERSTANDING of different points of view and the exposure of these diverging opinions were two of the most important impressions gained by the author at this Conference. The international aspect of its composition and theme served with the general fellowship feeling that permeated the entire proceedings gives us, indeed, hope for the future, and an added understanding to Inter-American Relations.

ED. NOTE:

The author is a graduate student in the Dept. of Modern Languages He has majored in Inter-American Relations, earning his B A degree in that area at F.S.U. in 1952. In June, 1953, he was graduated from the U of F with the M. A. degree in Latin American history, with a minor in Latin American geography.

Ogburn Advocates Altering Industrial Sites In Speech

Dr William Fielding Ogburn, guest speaker for Sigma Xi Wednesday night, told members that relocation of industry, over a period of 25 years is one answer to the impending danger of war. This distinguished scientist is a visiting professor at FSU

PAST PRESIDENT of the American Sociological Society and the American Statistical Association, he has spent the last several years doing research on the social effects of the use of atomic energy

Dr. Ogburn recommended moving selected large industrial establishments 15 to 50 miles from certain big cities He thinks cities in the northeastern part of the United States and along the seashore are the most probable targets for bombing

BROWARD HALL DANCE

Broward Hall held its annual formal dance Saturday night, December 5. Winter Wonderland, the theme of the dance, was carried out by decorating the parlor with a Christmas tree in appropriate winter settings and a snowman.

Mary Dressler and her escort Jimmy Brunner, were crowned Snow King and Queen. Her attendants were Annette Fountain and Sara Andrews.

Entertainment was provided by the Collegions, Shirley Paonessa who sang "Winter Wonderland" in honor of the Queen and Jimmy Hanks and Charlie Singer who gave their rendition of three songs.

The Bach-Gounod Ave Ma will follow the intermission. candle-lighting ceremony, Tallahassee children participating, will contribute beauty and local interest, a spokesman for the group has said.

MARTHA SLAYDEN, mezzo-soprano, will be guest soloist on the program. The singer, who will be 19 years old on Christmas day, will sing Adam's Cantique de Noel and Gruber's Stille Nacht.

A Christmas Festival of familiar music, arranged by Leroy Anderson, will complete the program.

Collegions Journey To Alabama Concert

Forty members of the Collegians, the men's glee club, gave a concert yesterday in Ashford, Alabama as guests of the Ashford Lions club.

Renditions of college songs negro spirituals and popular novelty tunes were offered by the chorus. Two quartets also were featured. The Memory Four sang barbershop numbers and the Sons of the Beaches sang novelty numbers.

"The prodigal Son" taken from the famed poem, 'God's Trombones" also was presented. It featured freshman Pat Napier from Hollywood as solosit.

The Collegians are again featuring a novelty tune made famous by Comedian Danny Kaye Last year they presented Kaye's famous, 'Tchaikowsky.' and this year they are doing, "Let's Not Talk About Love."

University Has FSU Directories For All Students

Bookstore Handles Student Distribution Robotyper Others

Florida State University's 1953-54 telephone directory is off the press and is being delivered to students, faculty and staff this week. Mailing began yesterday.

Distribution to students is being taken care of through the bookstore and the robotyper department is sending a copy to each member of the faculty and staff through campus mail.

MR. ROBERT T. Leigh, director of Publications, supervised the publication. His department was assisted by the registrar's office and Mrs. Cabelle Singletary who is chief operator of the campus PBX.

The cover design of this year's book is printed in chocolate and black and was drawn by Bob [illegible] a sophomore in the School of Journalism. Mr. Leigh said that he is greatly in favor of having a student design the directory cover page and hopes to continue using student talent in the future.

THE STUDENT section comprises 80 pages of the 131 page book. The names of the students are listed in alphabetical order with their classification, home address, and FSU address and telephone number. The faculty and staff names are also in alphabetical order with their university title, home address, and campus office address and telephone number.

A third section of the directory gives the location and telephone number of all departments on campus plus the residence halls, sororities and fraternities.

Senators Table Present Action About Holidays

Senators at their regular Tuesday session last week passed and tabled a motion that would give Florida State students a short holiday in the Spring semester pending passage by the [illegible] committee. Suggested was the fact that this would replace the recently revoked mid-term [illegible] vacation.

Discussion was started Tuesday by Senator Coyle Moore who proposed a Committee for Labor Student Services and Education recommended to the Faculty Committee that the regular [illegible] holiday coincide with the [illegible] vacation and that an additional holiday be set up somewhere mid-point between Christmas recess and Easter. He said the short vacation could start at noon on a Thursday.

MOORE'S MOVE was accepted by the group and Senator Frank Shaw further moved that a two-day holiday be installed between semesters. This move was also accepted.

Vice-president Wayne Terry, however tabled the motions, proposing to end the discussion at that time. His move was seconded and passed.

BANNING OF CORSAGES received a "no action" vote from the legislative body after a report by Senator Jim Joanos. Joanos listed several reasons why this move would be wise. He said there is no sufficient pressure on the men here who buy corsages to warrant banning them at dances. "Too," Joanos said "since several uptown florists support publications on campus, such a move might result in poor relations." The committee head concluded that since the Homecoming Dance is the only campuswide affair at which a great number of corsages might be worn, it would be virtually impossible to notify all returning alumni and visitors.

Other Senate business consisted of committee reports. Senator John Halford said her group, set up to investigate book prices at other university bookstores was in the process of finding out facts on the book costs. She said there is a discussion planned for the near future with Gordon Wheeler, Bookstore manager.

VICE-PRESIDENT TERRY said no immediate action will be taken on election of dormitory [illegible]. He noted that an informal meeting of Men's Senate was held the other day due to a poor attendance.

NUGENT BEWARE

(ACP)—Veteran football players at Albion College (Mich.) organized a revolt recently and with two games remaining on the schedule forced their coach to resign.

Junior and senior members of the team reportedly threatened to quit unless Delmar Anderson was replaced as coach. Their complaint centered around length and severity of Anderson's practice sessions, and about the use of a star quarterback despite an ankle injury.

Culpepper Will Assume Duties On Board of Control on January 1

Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, who has been Dean of Student Welfare here since 1949, will assume the office and responsibilities of executive secretary of the State Board of Control January 1.

Broward Culpepper

Dean Culpepper succeeds William P. Powers, who resigned Thursday from that post. Board Chairman Hollis Rinehart, who announced Dr. Culpepper's appointment, said the board felt that an educator of his background could satisfy recurrent legislative demands for an educational consultant to help coordinate activities of the three state universities

"THE LEGISLATURE has been telling us we should have an educational consultant," Rhinehart said. "And we felt that since Bill (Powers) was going to leave us we ought to look for a man who has both the ability to carry out liaison between the board and the capitol and an educational background."

Speaking to a Flambeau reporter yesterday, Dean Culpepper expressed fond good wishes for the student body he is about to leave.

SAID HE. "I've enjoyed my years as Dean of Student Welfare working with the students and I think the students, by their own efforts have made most remarkable progress in student government and student activities.

"As I go into my new work, I shall miss my close associations with the students. I wish them continued success in all of their worthy projects, particularly in improving the honor system and in building school spirit."

DEAN CULPEPPER has a long background of educational work in Florida. Appointed in 1946 as director of the Division of Research and Field Service at Florida State College for Women, he assumed the office of Dean of Student Welfare in 1947.

Before his original appointment to FSCW, Dr. Culpepper was administrative coordinator of the Leon County Schools from 1942-1945. Previous to that he was supervising principal at Leesburg. He has also served as principal of the P. K. Yonge laboratory school of the University of Florida and had been assistant professor of education there.

HE IS HIMSELF a graduate of the University of Florida. He also holds master's and doctor's de-

Miake's Impressions Express Personality, Painting Views

By JAYLEEN ROBERTSON

There is personality behind the paint brush which created the current one-man art exhibit at the University Art Museum. Tiazo Miake, a graduate student from Honolulu, does not wear the air of one whose soul is completely given to artistic expression because it isn't.

Of medium stature, black hair, oriental features, and a big ready smile, Miake's views and interests extend far beyond the realm of art.

HIS PAINTINGS, however, denote the serious effort he has put into art.

Miake's personal attitude toward art is that specialization should not come too soon. He feels that the more wide the interests are early in a career, the more sound is the specialization which comes later. He plans to pursue anthropology as well as painting, having studied in the fields of anthropology and the social sciences as well as art.

WHEN ASKED his opinions on old and new art, Miake replied, "I see no separation between the old and the new, in that the new is sort of a continued product of the old. It is through the understanding of the old that the new gets a significance."

Miake feels that in art, one must take in a total cultural significance of the painting, appreciating the economic conditions of the times, the philosophy and background behind it.

THE EXHIBIT displays the development of an artist's works, from first attempts to the more representative and effective style which comes from trial and error. Most artists have a favorite subject which they like to paint—Miake's happens to be landscapes, although his exhibit includes portraits, still life, and some contemporary design

Four portraits of the exhibit are of the same subject, each one done with a different view in the mind of the artist.

THE FIRST of the four was painted to capture the color relations in the face of the subject, the second for the mood, the third, a little more abstracted in color tones, and the fourth as a combination of the previous two.

In the introduction to his exhibit, in which he explains his purpose the methods, Miakes says "humans are never static, even in representation, the artist abstracts to a certain degree."

HIS EXHIBIT is one of the many he has set up for the Art Museum, which is his work as a graduate assistant.

Where exhibits are concerned, Miake feels that art is sometimes too commercial, and should be more educational. In setting up the exhibits for the Art Museum, his aim is to make them attractive and interesting with the use of color and special background effects.

MIAKE HAS A wide and varied background. His interest in art came rather late, he says, as he started in engineering at the University of Hawaii. Interrupted to serve in the U. S. Army during the war, he resumed studies, this time in art, at the Pratt Institute in New York, where he received his undergraduate degree.

Seminole Club Exhibit Features Christmas Pictured On Stamps

By JACK D. L. HOLMES
President, Seminole Stamp Club

A feature of the Christmas exhibitions this week at the FSU library includes an exhibit prepared by the Seminole Stamp Club on "Christmas—as pictured on stamps." This exhibit is the first of such planned by the Seminole Stamp Club a new organization on campus this semester.

Three main types of stamps are featured in the exhibit. Christmas seals from the United States occupy a third of the display. Another third is taken up by foreign Christmas seals. These include interesting topics on the Christmas theme from Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland as well as a block of six from South Australia.

THE CENTER of the exhibit is occupied by regular postage stamps which have in some way something to do with the Christmas theme. Included in this third of the display are a sheet of Christmas Tree stamps from Cuba; severel stamps from Hungary, Colombia and Haiti picturing the nativity; emblematic stamps from Cuba showing the Poinsetta, and Christmas tree; an early Israel stamp showing the Walled City of Jerusalem; and one stamp showing children of various nations because it is "The Children's Season."

An interesting presentation of theme are the two stamps featuring Christmas music composers. On an East Germany stamp, Friederich G. Handel, the composer of the great oratorio, "The Messiah" is pictured. While on an Austrian stamp Mohr and Gruber, the two men responsible for the everpopular Silent Night are seen over the title of their song in German.

THE THEME of art at Christmas is presented on two stamps, which feature the famous Italian painter, Leonardo Da Vinci. A very beautiful stamp from West Germany in full color shows the famous "Mona Lisa" while another from Italy pictures the Nativity scene from one of da-Vinci's immortals.

Any member of the student body, faculty or staff, is welcome to attend future meetings of the University's Seminole Stamp Club.

Students Riot At SAE Lion In Gainesville

BY STAFF WRITER

The University of Florida staged its first riot of the school year last Thursday night and early Friday morning, when approximately 2,000 students turned out with intentions of painting the Sigma Alpha Epsilon lion, traditional symbol of that fraternity.

The fraternity was celebrating the first birthday of Leo II. Leo I got it in the head last year when it was smashed to pieces by sledge hammer blows.

DONNED in ties and coats, their hair neatly combed, the SAE members were having their picture taken with Leo II, who was decked with ribbons and a hat, when the mob descended upon them. Since Leo couldn't take care of himself and eat a few of the culprits, the SAE members tore off their coats and ties, and now attired in T-shirts and dungarees, stood around guarding Leo II.

The first onslaught was repulsed, and the wounded retreated to form again. This time, in large lumbers, they again descended upon the lion.

THE GAINESVILLE police moved in about this time, and arrested a student who was shooting off firecrackers. The mob, seeing that a fellow student was being arrested, forgot about the lion, and moved on the police. An empty whisky bottle and a bucket of paint was thrown at the car and policeman. Both got it right in the neck

The mob appeared ready to overturn the police car, and in an attempt to free the cruiser, the police began showering the mob with tear gas. Beer cans, empty whisky bottles and bricks filled the air, as the mob dispersed.

IN ADDITION to the car and policeman getting it:

1. Radio aerials on cars were bent.
2. Six students were treated at

Cabinet Meets, Passes Approval For Sophomores

Three issues confronting the Student Body Cabinet at last week's meeting were resolved by thet body Thursday.

Approval of Men's Sophomore Council, hanging fire since last Spring semester, got the "go-ahead" signal as far as the Student Body Cabinet is concerned. After reviewing the new organization's constitution along with the rule book of Alpha Council, freshman scholastic honorary, the Cabinet discussed differences in the two.

IT WAS RECOMMENDED by the Cabinet body that the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs accept the Sophomore Council constitution. They further recommended that, should either of the two organizations be disbanded, it be Alpha Council. This leaves the fate of Men's Sophomore Council up to the Faculty Committee.

Hall of Fame, the campus-wide nomination for the top ten students in the graduating class here, occupied most of the rest of the Thursday Cabinet meeting.

UNIVERSITY SENATE recently stated that requirements for Hall of Fame nominations be a scholastic average of 2.00 in the candidates major field and averages are to be compiled by the senate committee appointed to Hall of Fame. Also in the Senate resolution came the statement that any senior at Florida State University can nominate ten from his class. The Cabinet Thursday set up the committees and regulations for the contest.

Cabinet members were then asked to consider and submit a list of possible committee representatives from several areas of student life, including publications, Senate, courts, Cabinet and other student organizations. In the end, each of these areas will have one member on the committee to make final choices of the top ten.

PRESIDING OVER the Cabinet meeting, Milton Carothers, Student Body president noted each senior will be allowed to submit a list of ten choices for Hall of Fame.

Paper Carries Functions List On Calendar

The Florida Flambeau is beginning a calendar service with today's issue, announced Al Pierce, news editor, yesterday.

The new feature was instituted after a recent survey showed students felt The Florida Flambeau was not giving sufficient coverage of club meetings and special events, Pierce stated.

All groups wishing to be included on the calendar must leave a notice including time and event in the Flambeau office or in the Flambeau mail box in the Longmire director's office a week before the event.

Bruce Galphin, editor-in-chief, said, "We are trying to publish a paper which serves the needs of all the students. We only can improve by hearing suggestions from students. We welcome further comment."

Merry Christmas To All . . .

And To All A Good Night!

NO NUT TOO TOUGH to crack . . . Dr. Karl Kuersteiner, dean of the Symphony of Florida, goes over the first symphony program with Martha Slayden, guest soloist for the Christmas concert, featuring Tchaikawsky's Nutcracker Suite.

Many Programs Show Rebirth Of Activities In Men's Dorms

By STAFF WRITER

A rebirth of activity among men students has shown its head recently with Florida Hall and West Hall dormitories vying for the most active in the fields of radio and journalism.

At West Hall, the men are deep in activity about their dormitory newspaper, The Penthouse Globe, which offers news and features about West Hall to its residents. The paper comes out every week.

At Florida Hall, Leonard Montgomery is planning to put into operation his amateur radio station, W4WUM which is registered with the Federal Communications Commission. "I can hardly wait to get going on the operations," confides Montgomery. "I know seven others who are trying to start a university amateur station on this campus.

"The University of Florida has had one for years and now through the newly formed Amateur Radio Club, we hope to have one at FSU very soon." Montgomery is a freshman from Apalachicola where he's operated his station for the past two years.

The seventh floor of the dorm houses WFH, broadcasting daily the classical and popular music the residents request. Junior Don Rogers, a transfer from Syracuse, who operates the station says, "Since WFSU-FM is not as yet operating, I feel that students need some music to help them while studying."

Rogers uses a $7.95 phonograph oscilator attached to a 100 ft. aluminum clothesline. The line is stretched down to a tree seven stories below. "My hours are in accordance with the hours I study. I'm letting myself run the station, not the station run me," says Rogers. Mr. John Cummer, counselor for the dorm, has given his permission to broadcast."

FSU Art Class Designs Mobiles For Polio Victim

By JOYCE POTTER

Visions of floating stars, glittering snowflakes, Santa Claus and his reindeer as well as other imaginative designs will dance before the eyes of many children who will not be able to have a real Christmas like others this year. The youngsters are polio victims in Tallahassee Memorial Hospital, W. T. Edwards Hospital and in the Jefferson Davis Hospital in Houston, Texas.

The gaily colored and glittering designs are mobiles that were made by the Elementary Art Education Class at FSU under the instruction of Mr. Ralph N. Hurst. The class undertook this project after Mrs. Lois Hansen, a friend of the local family of Ann Platt, a polio victim in the Texas hospital, requested that Mr. Hurst make one to send to their child.

HURST, a creative sculptor, was experienced at making mobiles and decided to have his entire class make them to send to other polio victims.

Ten of the mobiles plus one for little Ann will be sent to the Texas hospital where all the victims are in iron lungs. The mobiles will be suspended over the breathing apparatus so the small recuperants can watch them as they revolve

A DELEGATION of girls will also take some of the mobiles to the children in the hospitals in Tallahassee.

The mobiles are constructed of all kinds of materials ranging from wires and clothes hangers, to plastic and tinfoil. Their design is left entirely up to the imagination of their creator.

MANY ARE CREATIONS depicting Mother Goose rhymes. One shows a cow jumping over the moon, the cat and the fiddle and other fabled characters. Others depict Christmas scenes. Santa Claus, his reindeer, and candy canes are prominent in these. Multi-colored snowflakes covered with silver which, glitter as they turn in the air are featured on one.

"Besides being a wonderful thing for the class to do," said Mr. Hurst, "it will give them practical experience in teaching youngsters to make them when they begin their careers." He continued, saying that the mobiles are very easy to make and that they are quite often made by children in the elementary grades.

MR. HURST EXPLAINED that the girls had worked very hard on the mobiles giving them a professional finish. The project has been underway for two weeks and is now in the final stage.

Symphony Plays Nutcracker Suite Thursday Night

Kuersteiner Directs Holiday Specialty In Group's Debut

A special Christmas program featuring excerpts from "The Nutcracker Suite," and traditional holiday music will be presented Thursday night at 8:15 by the State Symphony, it was announced today.

Directed by Florida State University School of Music head, Dean Karl O Kuersteiner, and held in Opperman Music Hall, the Christmas program opens a season of four State Symphony concerts. Commenting on the Thursday night program, Dr. Kuersteiner said, "I have no doubts everyone will enjoy our opening concert."

THE THURSDAY program will open with "The Story of the Nutcracker Prince," played by the symphony and narrated by Roy Flynn. Second number of the evening will be "Ave Maria" with a processional of candlelighters.

Following the "Ave" will be solos of "O Holy Night" and "Silent Night" sung by Miss Martha Slayden, sophomore soprano who recently sang leads for the Municipal Opera in Atlanta

CONCLUDING THE PROGRAM will be a "Christmas Festival", arranged for the symphony by Leroy Anderson.

Second concert of the season, on Feb. 26, will feature internationally known pianist Edward Kilenyi.

THIRD OF THE SERIES, April 26, 2:30 p.m., will display the talents of the solo instruments and the choirs.

Final program of the year, April 26, 8.15 p.m., will feature an array of lighter musical masterpieces, state symphony spokesmen said

DR. KUERSTEINER recently stressed the importance of buying season tickets immediately as they go off sale Dec. 17. He also expressed the hope that "the idea of a State Symphony will be supported so that it is available to the state at large. This could be a tremendous asset to Florida and FSU, particular during the winter season."

He also added, "The concerts promise to be quite the social event. For the first program we are expecting such dignitaries as the Acting Governor, the Attorney General, their wives and many others"

NUMBERING SEVENTY to eighty members, the symphony is currently sponsored by the Service League of Tallahassee headed by Mrs. E. M Watkins.

Entire proceeds of the season's ticket sales will go for scholarships to music majors at FSU and to the Visiting Nurses Fund.

SEASON TICKETS may be purchased for $3.00 at the School of Music office, Jenkins Music Store and Gridley Music Co. until Thursday.

Sandspur To Start Full Rehearsals After Christmas

Sandspur, FSU's annual all-original musical production, will start full rehearsals immediately after the Christmas holidays, announced Director Leo Andrews today.

The 1954 Sandspur production, "Panorama" involves over 100 students but has no dialogue as was the case in the past. The 26 piece orchestra will be directed by John Baxley who began his rehearsals last week. Set designer Kitty Culpepper already has finished her settings and Betty Ann Nasrallah has been chosen to design the costumes.

DANCING PARTS have not as yet been announced, but according to Producer Frances Stokes, they have been chosen and will be announced in the next Flambeau. Miss Stokes also will direct the dancing.

The show will be divided into six scenes with each scene being a small production in itself. The last scene about Love in New York features David Dreis and Jo Ann Hosbach in a comedy sequence. Miss Hosbach will also be a member of the "Stardreamera" quartet featuring Marcetta Napier, Danny Whipple and Gene Corroff.

DIRECTOR ANDREWS made special mention that Charles Singer and Jimmy Hanks will not appear in this year's production because of a conflict with the annual Circus. "The circus has rehearsals and tour shows around the same time," he continued.

● NICE RIOTS?

We hate to disagree with a "cause" proposed by the student newspaper at our sister university, but we feel campus chauvinism has beclouded reason down at Gainesville.

We particularly take issue with the opinion "that the quickest way to quell a riot is to let it die a natural death." The police just should have watched from a respectful distance, it seems, despite the fact that some 2000 students were milling around, fighting, defacing property, throwing firecrackers and the like.

It was all the cops' fault, the Alligator complained, that things got out of hand. It was just a little game before they butted in. You'd think by now, after decades of student riots, the cops would have thought of some "nice" way to handle mob violence.

We're surprised that the Alligator does not understand there is no reason in a mob. When things get to that stage, the only way to meet violence is with strong-arm methods. Sad but true.

The Alligator might have spent its editorial space more wisely by chastising the students for wasting their energies over such a childish cause.

Henderson Views Philosophy In South American Republics

Dr. Edgar H Henderson, professor of Philosophy at FSU, and the department's representative to the Latin American conferences, thinks "we don't realize that people below the border have definite ideas about Philosophy."

Recently, Dr. Henderson contributed an essay to The Personalist, which is an international review of philosophy, religion, and literature. His essay was entitled, "Man in the light of Socratic method."

CONTINUING ON THE subject of the Latin American countries' views, he said, "They emphasize philosophy as we do the natural sciences."

He attended the summer philosophers convention at Havana. The topic they discussed was "The Nature of Man." Whenever free-thinkers get together there is usually little that all will agree on, but this convention did produce one universal characteristic of man: "The essence of man is to be free."

DR. HENDERSON THINKS the relations between ourselves and the Latin Americans need to be strengthened, and quickly. "If we don't, they may go Communist." This, Dr. Henderson feels, might have immediate repercussions. He said if the Communists had airfields established down there, they might bomb some large southern cities first, for purely demoralizing purposes. "Perhaps Atlanta, Miami or New Orleans."

Looking back over his years in philosophy, he says, "It has given me a much clearer understanding of man. When we understand people, we can get along with them, which, is the ultimate value of life."

It was reported that members of the U of F football team instigated the riot, but when they realized mob action was forming, they took it on the lam. A university official said he thought the people who were responsible were "full of beer."

An investigation is being conducted by university officials.

Letter to Editor

Commends Column

Gentlemen:

I should like to commend most heartily your columnist, Bruce Galphin, on his laudable castigation of a certain blubber-gutted, cigar-chewing university regent in a nearby state. If the people who support this foul lump of humanity are so incredibly stupid as he patently is, I must commend their care to a Divine Being for they are surely beyond mortal man's assistance.

Sincerely yours,
S. P. Vandiviere

Women, Too?

An Open Letter to Groggy and Sleepless

Sirs:

Let's face it, men, the residents of our "dormitories" simply are not "civilized, mature college students" and therefore are incapable of acting the part. My educational psychology professor says that the socially immature child is one who

1. Flaunts rules and regulations

2. Cannot accept his share of responsibilities

3. Does not realize that the world "does not revolve around him.

We have a lot of socially immature "children" attending college.

So the men's dorms aren't quite by one? You should try listening to shrill feminine shrieking till two (on weekends—only 12:30 week nights). The trouble in the women's dorms is not the need for more floor chairmen — the nuisances are controlable—but rather the fact that those disturbed (and there are more than make themselves known) are afraid to say anything for fear of being socially ostracized by the loud mouthed adolescents.

The offenders in the women's dorms seem to be seeking recognition and they evidently feel that the only way their presence can be impressed on others is by being highly vociferous, obstreperous, blatant and too, too cute for words.

Social life is as necessary as studies to the well rounded personality, but ye gods! So long, so loud, so late, and soooo continuously?

I thought when I came to college I would find some intelligent beings interested in getting the best use of their money for improvement (of self, culture, government, the world, or whatever other lofty aspirations colleges were set up to help fulfill). I was not prepared for the immense number of girls who are in college merely for the social life, simply to catch a man, to get the prestige attached to attending a college, because they didn't want to work, or because "Papa said I have to." Too bad we can't have separate "Social Universities" for them.

This may not solve our problem, but perhaps with a little in-

Let It Be Said

By DICK VICTORY

Red-nosed Rudolf's back in season
To reap his laurels with good reason
Thus his chums will gather round
And seek once more to gain his crown.

The song, "RUDOLF, the RED-NOSED REINDEER" not only recalls light happy moments of fantasy, but also gives me a strong feeling nausea for the human race. For the song indeed personifies one of the crudest of our tricks.

I am referring to the part of the song that reads: " . . all of the other reindeer used to laugh and call him names, they never let poor Rudolf join in any reindeer games." Then came his claim to fame as Santa's assistant." . . . then how the reindeer loved him, shouted out his name with glee, Rudolf the red-nosed reindeer, you'll go down in history."

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? For fame is a magnet for attracting so-called friends. When it is achieved, they suddenly appear, eager to pat your back, and in so doing gain your favor, now that it means something.

I choose to say, A friend in need is a friend in greed.

Here are three likely causes:

Paul Paranoid: He's actually jealous of his own shadow. Every time he sees it following him, he whirls around and confronts it. Then a lengthy argument follows. The amazing thing is that the shadow usually wins. He is strictly a fugitive from "Harvey."

Charles Borrowa: He is especially attractive to women. He has a very effective line: "Come, let me take you to your cashbog. You and I and it can make such beautiful muzic togezer."

Marilyn Medrid: She's the senuel, senseless kind. Very exotic. As torrid as a tomale. If you watch her dance from behind, you're sure to develop tennis-court eyes.

True, they are real friends. But not many. Most of them find their true category when you leave out the "r."

. . . Congratulations to the Tallahassee police on a job well done, we would like to notify them that their "Dick Tracy" badges are in the mail. Not only do they carry their big pistols, which they use at the least incident, but they carry with them their own press agent who glorifies their every move.

The little incident in front of the SAE house the other night which involved between 100-200 people (according to the Democrat) (the figure should read more like 15-30) was handled beautifully by Lt. Sam Ketchum, Capt. Dick Tracy reported. To make this job thorough they even searched one innocent student. — You can get your shoulder holster at the Co-op boys. Christmas Wish: Passing Of Bigotry

By BRUCE GALPHIN

I once wrote a Christmas editorial in my high school newspaper. It was full of a naive idealism which has long since died from lack of nutrition in the cold winds of reality.

I have become disillusioned with "Christmas spirit" by watching the tinselled appeal of businessmen for whom Christmas is a boom season beginning about Thanksgiving and lasting until the frantic push of December 24.

I have grown disillusioned by observing how inadequately people understand and follow the philosophy of life of which Christmas is the greatest symbol. People profess a faith because it is expected of them, but having made their perfunctory observances, they feel their consciences purged and continue living as they have been. They even distort Christianity beyond recognition by using it as an excuse for almost been. They even distort Christmas certainly cannot have much significance.

Yet throughout this process of disillusionment, of learning reality, I have retained a certain warm feeling about Christmas apart from the pleasure of holidays and being with friends, of giving and receiving gifts. It still means a sharpening of old ties, of writing friends, of feeling closer to others. In short, it means kinship with one's fellow men.

But I wonder how much longer I can cling to this vestige of the Christmas feeling despite the ugly hatred still displayed for men by man. I refer not so much to our inability to get along with other nations but more to learning to live happily among ourselves.

I suppose racial hatred is no worse this year than in the past. Many say it has lessened. But with the segregation question before the Supreme Court, we are reminded more vividly of the situation as it exists.

In the South, racial hatred is a worm that has eaten for almost a hundred years on a decaying corpse. It has thrown up hasty philosophical retreats called "states rights" and "natural differences between the races," or when shoddy reasoning failed, just reacted in white-hooded fury.

But bigotry is not limited to the South, nor has it lived only a hundred years. Its story is as old as man's. It has existed as long as there have been men of little ability who must make themselves significant by comparison. They have developed an excellent system wherein they submerge the rights of minority groups and then scorn that group for being no better than it is.

This is the kind of world we live in. This is the world in which we periodically speak of peace. How distant and indistinct is the dove of peace, clouded as it is by man's hatred for man.

Perhaps achieving understanding is hopeless. Perhaps it is no more easily found than the Will o' the wisp. Yet if we are to receive more than surface inspiration at Christmas, perhaps it will be in this hope. This is a big part of "peace on earth, good will to men."

CAMPUS CARAVAN

'Little' FSU Shows Well At UF

By BEVERLY LACAYO

Business is most easily converted into pleasure when a serious minded student (your columnist) is transported to a faraway campus (U. of F.) for a weekend of earnest, philosophical debate and winds up with a couple of parties, the Florida Players' version of Man and Superman, a pillow fight at 2 a.m., and two banquets to boot.

The Florida Alligator is full of Florida State news these days. They had a news story, an editorial and a column all of which spent many inches in blasting an FSU-U. of F. football game should the possibility become dangerously real. Do we have them worried? Another charming allusion to the State's second largest University was printed in an article on Who's Who In American Universities. The University of Florida and other 'BIG TIME' campuses have dropped Who's Who, BUT, says the Alligator, "Who's Who has been retained by small colleges such as Stetson and FSU."

Meanwhile FSU was lending U. of F. some of the talent which our small college has to spare. Posters announcing Ryan Edwards, Florida State pianist, were seen all over the campus. Ryan is a freshman in our School of Music.

Another pleasant surprise was finding Milton Carothers and Gene Lawler in the Student Body President's office grinding out a constitution for a new Southern intercollegiate association together with Jim Harris, their president, and the student body president of Emory. (So you see they also borrow our brains)

Their student government offices occupy a whole floor of the Florida Union Building which is about the size of Westcott. It is really quite a layout, to use the vernacular. The president of Blue Key and the Chancellor of the Honor Court have office suites the size of our Student Body President's salute. Their version of Westcott also is really dazzling. Now that FSU has a representative on the Board of Control perhaps he will take pity on his ex-colleagues and recommend a more up-to-date hang out.

Meanwhile, back at the campus . . .

Rumor has it that in a recent poll taken by the School of Journalism the Flambeau really got a blasting from certain quarters. A certain gentleman, quite a high rung on the political ladder, received a large charge from being able to give the paper a slam under the protection of anonymity which the poll offers.

Georgia Seminole has finally been uncovered, but the editor refuses to disclose the name of this great writer. "Dear Mama Seminole" has been sent in to the Flambeau on Midyette-Moore stationery as well as being mailed in A&M Office of Public Relations envelopes. For all who are interested the editor of The Florida Flambeau is one Bruce Galphin, six feet tall, crew cut, large dark rimmed glasses, Phi Beta Kappa, ODK and Phi Kappa Phi keys dangling from his watch chain. Please say hello.

I received a post card from one of Tallahassee's religious leaders last week expressing agreement on our previous stand against segregation. It is always a relief for people in such a position to be able to reveal their true opinions on such a touchy subject. It is very frustrating to be restricted, in the pulpit, to subjects over which the congregation will not get too excited. (One needs to eat, you know, even if one is a Christian).

Overheard in French Class: "Many of our Dormitory living rooms are patterned after French designs of the eighteenth century." "Yeah, the Bastille!"

Merry Christmas everyone.

THE SPECTATOR

Cobb Criticizes 'Anonymous' Column

By WARREN COBB

I am breaking a precedent.

Until now I have never mentioned a student's name in this column. But it seems that the time to do so is here — the time to mention names and not pseudonyms. Let the chips fall where they may.

In Friday's Flambeau a new column appeared, a new column with a new purpose. It was rather unique in this respect: for the first time that I can remember since coming to this school in 1950, the student newspaper was used by a prospective candidate for office to disparage another prospective candidate. And this attack even lacked the dignity of an authentic signature.

Well, mine does not.

The column to which I refer was entitled Longmire Runaround and was signed Drear Pearson.

It was written by Gene Lawler.

After his standard pot-shot at Wayne Terry, Lawler commenced his attack on John Howard, editor of Smoke Signals, whom he believes will oppose him for the Student Body presidency next spring. He stated that the magazine "will not be on schedule, as usual" because Howard mistook some new pictures for old and threw them away.

"Even the editor can't tell the difference," wrote Lawler.

Perhaps Lawler believes that if his personal attacks are signed by another name, the students can't tell the difference either.

I believe he's wrong.

In the first place, Lawler's charge is false. The pictures were thrown away accidentally by the printer without the authorization of Howard.

In the second place, this article is indicative of an alarming, though subtle, policy.

When the editor of this paper receives anonymous letters, he refuses to print them. It is disappointing that this policy does not apply to political blasts by columnists who lack the courage of publicly endorsing what they say.

I hope the editor will print this column. Both sides should be heard — and recognized.

Earlier this year I spoke to the University Senate supporting the staff nomination of the present editor of the paper. In that speech I said I believed that he would have the good sense and good taste not to use the Flambeau for personal attacks.

I am sorry — and disappointed — to find that I was wrong.

I am sorry — and disgusted — to see the Flambeau used as a political pamphlet for Gene Lawler.

ETCETERA ETCHINGS

Sound Was Worse Than Depression

By DAVID DREIS

Panic! The years of 1927-30 were bad years for everyone . . . especially movie stars. Swimming pools were drained dry, jewelry was pawned by the carload, mansions became ivy clung monasteries and stars became extras.

The depression was in full swing. John Jones was unemployed and where the actor stood as a symbol of wealth and prosperity, only a shadow was visible. The only ones making money in this industry were the producers, for movies became the most stable shares in the stock market.

Why then . . . the panic? The unemployment of stars . . . ? The answer was the death of many as it shattered career after career as swiftly as a rock passes through glass. The answer was Sound!

"What can I do? I talk with a lisp," moaned the leading man whose publicity copy bannered his mellow tones.

"My accent," muttered the starlet." . . . It's . . . bad."

The public was voice-conscious. Everything had to talk . . . dogs had to learn to bark, horses to whinney . . as the Frankenstein moved into the industry with full force.

The suave leading man whose main forte was to fight off a band of criminals single-handed could not muster up the tones he was expected to have. More Panic.

Expressions of the eyes were as outmoded as yesterday's newspaper. It was words . . . words . . and Sound! Panic!

The change was amazing with Hollywood on the complete move to soundies. Any picture . . . regardless how bad was a success with sound . . while across the street with the best drama available in silence, the theater became a museum.

The threat of the third dimension to flat pictures was never as murderous as the idea of sound. Al Jolson's efforts in the Jazz Singer with two songs had Broadway on its feet for two years. Theaters were bigger and dressier than before, but it didn't matter to the viewers of sound film.

Stage actors found their place in movies for they had always used speech . . . John Barrymore's first film epic Don Juan epitomized the appeal that Broadway stars had for this new revolution. As the guillotine came thundering down on the players of the past, new horizons opened up for speakers.

"I can act . . . I know I can," a starlet would plead.

"Your voice is too high," would be her reply. Mother Nature was now the casting director for films. Still more panic.

With concentration played on voice, companies could no longer afford to combine the 'art' picture with the larynx and audience appeal went to gangster epics. Humphrey Bogart came to prominence in Dead End (1937) but this was years after George Bancroft hit in Underworld (1927) and James Cagney smashed through in The Public Enemy (1931). This, sound could fathom. The shooting of machine guns, the roar of a souped up Model T, the screeching of tires and the tough slangy gangman tald — prominent with Edward G. Robinson's acting masterpiece, Little Caesar (1930) and Paul Muni's dramatic Scarface (1932) in which newcomer George Raft was to go a long way. Sound was helpful in these films. Tears never moved an audience so as when it was caused by the bullet of a revolver. Panic!

—But years pass and novelty wears off . . . a new generation holds its stub at the ticket man and drama and acting are more important than sound. Charlie Chaplin withstood silence until 1940 with The Great Dictator . . . and now since withdrawing his newest film Limelight in sound from the United States and residing in England, I hear no sound . . . there is no panic.

BLAST FOLLOWS BLAST

(ACP) — Officials at Furman University, Greenville, S. C., are hunting midnight saboteurs who, one night shortly after midnight, set off a bomb in a dormitory hall. The blast twisted and tore the garbage can in which the charge had been hidden; it smashed transoms up and down the hall and split open two wooden doors.

No one was in the hall at the time of the explosion, and no one was injured. Commented the Furman Hornet in a front page editorial: "We know that it takes some people longer to grow up than others. When a person enters college it is time for him to put away his childish ideas and practices and begin to think and conduct himself like a man."

They certainly never learned it at home.

Compliment

Dear Bruce:

Miss Parrish, the Alumni Executive Secretary, forwarded to me a copy of a letter sent to her by the Director of Guidance & Counseling at Georgia Teachers College in which expression was made concerning our fine school spirit. I think that the student body would be interested in reading this letter from a visitor to our campus during Homecoming.

After receiving numerous compliments on our school spirit from townspeople and students, I have, on behalf of the Student Body written to Coach Nugent, Mr Whitcomb and the band, and to the cheerleaders expressing our appreciation for their work during this football season. I hope that the fine school spirit shown by the entire student body will continue through the whole school year.

Sincerely,
Milton Carothers, President Student Body.

Dear Sir:

It was my privilege to be the guest of Dr. Malvina Trussell during the past weekend. I thoroughly enjoyed your Homecoming activities and was especially impressed with your fine school spirit so much in evidence all weekend.

It is my plan at this moment, to use your "Pow Wow" fireworks ides for our Homecoming in February If the information is available, I would like to know where the fireworks were purchased.

Again, congratulations on the excellent performance this weekend.

Very truly yours,
Georgia B. Watson, Director Guidance and Counseling.

Too Generol

Dear Editor,

It seems that "Groggy," who is apparently afraid to mention his name, has made a few statements which we in Unit II of West Hall feel are just a bit too general. He has falsely accused the whole of West Hall of roudiness to try to rationalize his carload of pink slips. We, on the sixth floor, have had very little trouble with our grades and we are in the very center of the 'riotous turmoil.' We would be glad to have "Groggy" come visit our unit if you can come out of your mausoleum long enough. If you would take the time to look the situation over you could see what a fine job our housefellows are doing on these floors.

I think that it is just about time for "Groggy" to learn that this place is not a dorm, but a residence hall where men live all the time, not just a place to sleep. This was brought to the attention of us all at the beginning of the semester. If you could trouble yourself to think it over you will find that there is a great difference.

We feel that "Groggy's" irresponsible generalization has unfairly villianized the residents af this hall and has insulted our counselors and housefellows. They have been doing one of the finest jobs on campus and have not yet resorted to tyranny to keep order here. Therefore, we feel that an apology is in order to the residents and the counselors here.

If you would care to come out in the open, we would be happy to 'explain' the matter to you in greater detail.

Sincerely yours,

Journalists Meet To Talk Formation Of Student Club

The first meeting of journalism majors interested in forming a professional club on campus was held Thursday at the School of Journalism. All majors interested in joining are urged to attend the next meeting tomorrow noon in Dr. Kobre's office.

Six journalism students met with Dr. Sidney Kobre, professor, and Mr. Dan Wozniak, associate professor, to discuss the formation of a recognized organization here. Dr. Kobre emphasized the values of such a club to draw the journalism students together, both scholastically and socially. He also told tha group that once a club had been formed and was functioning it could petition Sigma Delta Chi, the journalism professional fraternity, for membership in the national organization. According to Dr. Kobre such an affiliation would be especially beneficial to journalism graduates in receiving recognition when seeking employment on national newspapers and magazines.

PERMISSION HAS BEEN received from the University to form a journalism club, and plans are now underway to draw up a charter and get much of the work of organizing done before the holidays. All journalism majors are invited to join, and those unable to attend Wednesday's meeting can receive information about the club by contacting Dr. Kobre in the Journalism Building.

Early France Talk Given By Micks

"France in the Early 15th Century" was brought to life in an illustrated lecture by Dr. Wilson Micks, professor of French, last night, in Longmire Auditorium.

The lecture was the second in a Florida State University Modern Language series of five for the 1953-54 year.

DR. MICKS showed calendar miniatures from "The Very Rich Book of Hours" of the Duc de Berry, and discussed customs and manners of early 15th Century France, illustrating his remarks with 12 miniatures.

"The beautiful illuminated miniatures show more clearly than any document from the period what France was like in the middle ages," according to Dr. Micks.

THE MINIATURES were photographed from the original manuscript of the Duc de Berry, a brother of King Charles V of France. The original is in the museum at Chantilly, France.

Dr. Micks joined the FSU faculty in 1948. A native of Seneca Falls, N. Y., he is an honorary citizen of Tulle, France, as well as a distinguished citizen of Tallahassee.

CO-AUTHOR of a number of French textbooks and literary works, Dr. Micks has studied at the Sorbonne and the University of Toulouse where he was awarded a doctor's degree. He served in World War II as U. S. Army Transportation Corps Liaison officer with the Second French Armored Division.

Froternities Join In Central Buying

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (IP) —Fourteen of the fifteen fraternities at Williams College are participating in the Campus Business Management plan this year, in an effort to cut costs through a system of centralized purchasing Under the new program, purchasing is handled by the college's director of dining halls. Each fraternity buys its foodstuffs from a central storage center incorporated in the new $1,400,000 Student Union, under construction.

The fraterenities will continue to operate their individual dining halls and kitchens The college will operate a central dining hall in the Student Union for the use of the non-affiliates and freshmen. The special dining hall is part of a plan to de-emphasize fraternities under a system of deferred rushing.

In the future, no freshmen will be pledged. Only the three upper classes may be rushed. The Student Union will provide dining facilities for freshmen, many of whom would have been pledged by fraternities before the school year began under the previous system.

The central buying plan was suggested last spring following a system similar to that which has been in operation successfully for six years at Bowdoin College (Me.). Most of the fraternities sent representatives there to investigate operation of the system.

Our American Dream

Following is an original work by Eugene Simmons, a student at Florida State University. Simmons wrote the "American Dream" in September, 1952 It is printed here for the first time at the outset of the Christmas season.

OUR AMERICAN DREAM

America . . .
Land of the green toothpaste,
Realm of the king-size smoke ring.
America . . .
Land of bus schedules and press conferences,
Domain of the bridge-teas and the state conventions.
America . . .
Land of the gullible reader,
Worship center of the statistical fact.
America . . .
Land of the purse and the fuel gauge,
Home of big talk and a soft heart.
HOW FAR, G Lord, have we drifted since losing our compass?
America . . .
Land of a God-driven people seeking adventure in life,
Platform of intelligent freedom and the pursuit of happiness.
America . . .
Land of the unwasteful harvest,
Maker of home-made bread, soap, and candle.
America . . .
Land of pioneers blazing new trails to meet new neighbors,
Home of the family Bible and a hymn-sing.
America . . .
Land of crusading countrymen in a new experiment in government,
Challenger of the alert farmer, artist, inventor, philosopher, and those who want a meaningful life.
HOW LONG, G Lord, will it take us to find our compass and fulfill our American Dream?

Home Too Far For Foreign Students; Here Are Alternates At Christmas

By LOUISE HOYER

Buon Natale!

In other words, Merry Christmas expressed the Italian way.

THIS IS just one of the more than 30 seasonal greetings Florida State University students could hear this week from some of the 80 international students on campus.

Speaking of Christmas and international students, just how do they plan to spend the holidays while the rest of FSU's students will be going home?

SINCE THE campus is officially closed during the two-week period the foreign students must either move to town or travel. Quite a few of the students have plans for extensive trips while still others want to stay in Tallahassee and catch up on back work.

Eva Stass, a freshman from the Dominican Republic majoring in hotel and restaurant management, is anticipating a trip to New Orleans with a group of students to observe various hotels and restaurants there. From New Orleans Eva plans to visit an uncle in New Jersey for a week

EZZAT YOUNATHAN, president of the International Students Club plans to stay in Tallahassee during the holidays, tion but to different places Ratana majoring in dietetics will be going to Washington, D. C. in order to submit a special report on her work at FSU while Intira will stay with friends in Gainesville. Intira is a graduate student in business education.

Ezzat comes to FSU from Egypt.

Two women graduate students from Thailand, Ratana Suddharatt and Intira Chaungsuvanji, plan to travel during the vaca-

M. R. PADHYE and V. V. R. Varadachari, both graduate students from India, have no specific plans for Christmas. Padhye is studying chemistry and Varadachari is in the meteorology department.

Another meteorology student, Masamichi Oi, has not yet decided on his holiday plans. Masamichi is a graduate student from Japan.

SALLY ACOSTA from the Philippines is planning an extensive trip to the New England states. Sally will first stop in Washington, D. C. and from there go to New England. On her way back she will visit in Pennsylvania.

A visit to Chicago at the home of a friend will highlight Miriam Mizuno's Christmas vacation Miriam, a graduate student in the School of Social Welfare, comes to the campus from Japan

AQUILAS BERLAS from Pakistan as yet has no definite plans for the holidays but would like to go to South Florida to visit Miami and Miami Beach. Aquilas is a graduate student in home and family life

No matter where they will be or what they will be doing, the international students are looking forward to the Christmas holidays just as much as the students who will be returning home. They may celebrate Christmas in a manner that is a little different to our own custom, but the spirit is still the same

E felice anna nnova! (and a happy new year)!

New Billy The Kid Saga Proves To Be Interesting Character Study

By MACK BROWN

Are you a two gun desperado at heart? Do you like to digest accounts of famous outlaws of the wild west? If so, then lend an ear to a very satisfying experience I have just had.

For lack of something better to read I recently purchased a book entitled "The Saga of Billy the Kid" In doing so I fully expected it to be the run of the mill western That is, galloping horses, flaming six shooters and romantic phrases escaping from the bubbling lips of a dying cowboy. However, much to my very satisfied disbelief I found the book not only factual and engrossing but exceedingly well written.

Written by Walter Noble Burns the book gives a very vivid picture of what kind of person Billy the Kid must have been. It begins with his very early childhood, showing the environment and happenings which shaped the Kid's personality. In doing so the book takes nothing for granted but much to the contrary it breaks the Kid's personality down showing causes and reasons which make a very interesting and readable discussion.

If you read the book you will find that nothing is taken for granted. It is plain from the beginning that Mr Burns has gone to great pain in making his book as factual as possible. He not only interviewed but spent a great deal of time with each and every person still living who knew Billy the Kid. Some of the things they have to say will show you the animal viciousness which run hand in hand with our forefathers' will to exist.

THE BOOK DOES not deal alone with Billy the Kid. As any worthwhile book will do, it brings to life the friends, enemies and just plain people who were a great part of Bily the Kid's history. It makes the situations and locations so real that you can almost visualize yourself on the street of any of the towns or in the room where the Kid spent the last few moments of his life.

A great many of us know that during his 21 years of life the Kid killed a man for each year. A great many of us also know that he in turn was killed by his own friend and companion turned sheriff. But the majority of us do not know of the compassion and viciousness which lay inside the men who shaped the frontier of days gone by. Walter Noble Burns has given you a very interesting chcance to find out.

Read "The Saga of Billy the Kid." I think you'll enjoy it.

Video Executive Tells Group Color T-V In Near Future

Mr Charles Stone, sales manager for Station WMBR-TV in Jacksonville lectured here Wednesday night on the factors which affect advertising in TV and the possibilities of color television in the near future.

Mr Stone appeared on campus as a guest of Alpha Delta Sigma newly-formed professional advertising fraternity on campus. He was initiated as the first professional member of the organization, Wednesday at 5 p m in ceremonies conducted by Al Pierce president, assisted by members of the organization and faculty advisory staff

IN HIS lecture, stressing the importance of the size and type of audiences which television reaches as important aspects of TV advertising, Stone compared the recent increases in audience expansion

He related that 81 per cent of homes having television are in the upper and middle income income brackets Stone compared the data on the professions of the consumers the number of white-collar workers and farmers owning TV sets, the size of the family and the hours at which most men women, or children were viewers These figures, according to Mr Stone, are most important in determining the number of viewers at each set during broadcasting hours, a fact necessary to TV advertisers

STONE asserted that advertising by TV outweighs all other media This he derived from polls and studies which have been conducted to determine which media of advertising the buyers remembered most

Color TV by Christmas? According to Stone, the FCC has not yet approved color television, although they are meeting this week to again review it

LAST JULY, RCA and the National Television Standards Committee petitioned the FCC for color television approval Mr Stone went on to say that on October 15, of this year, a special showing of color television on 13 different sets was arranged for the FCC to view

If they do approve it before Christmas, color TV owners will be able to view the Rose Bowl parade on January 1, as Mr. Stone revealed that the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. is ready to install the necessary microwave equipment for 13 cities in the United States.

ACCORDING to Stone, color TV in 1954 will be largely experimental, but by 1955, it should be broadcasting on a full schedule He also predicted the possibilities of reduction in cost of color TV within the next 4-5 years.

One innovation which he discussed which would reduce cost is the use of color tape instead of film within two years

Debaters Go To Gainesville

KA's Play Santa To Needy Children

Kappa Alpha fraternity played Santa Claus to 30 youngsters yesterday at the fraternity house with the hcapter's fifth annual Christmas party for underprivledged children.

Assisted by their dates, brothers and pledges entertained the children with tricks and games, a short skit based on the poem "The Night Before Christmas," and treated them to heaping plates of ice cream and cake. While seated and quiet enjoying their goodies, the kids saw two children's comedy films and waited for Santa Claus to arrive with his sleigh full of toys

"And up on the roof there arose such a clatter, we sprang to the windows to see what was the matter," and sure enough, in through an upstairs window came Santa Claus, in the person of alumni brother Bill Mote, with a bag full of presents for everyone.The boys and girls gathered around Santa as he talked to each one and gave out the presents.

Children were selected by school teachers as being the most needy in the class.

Busfield Praises Radio Class For Turning in Good Scripts

"We're going to sell some radio scripts," promises Roger M Bushfield, instructor in Radio Script Writing and head of the radio area in the Department of Speech.

"The scripts of the class are far above par and greatly exceed my expectations. We're trying every open market in radio broadcasting from the American networks to the Canadian broadcasting outlets."

Bushfield has required five scripts a semester in the two-semester course. The first assignment was to write for the Dr. Christian Script contest. "We'll be able to enter some of the best amateur scripts I've ever seen," continued Bushfield.

The second script was an assignment for Suspense or a mystery show. Bushfield was high in praise for the scripts which were turned in. "Every script had something new to offer the listener, all they needed was a little revision to bring the point out much clearer."

For the third entry in the class, the Doctoral candidate in Speech asked for a romantic comedy. "Some of these entries," Busfield exclaimed, "might be good for a dramatic series on WFSU-FM Of course' we'll submit them first to "Stars Over Hollywood" and "Theater of the Air." The fourth and fifth scripts are up to the students.

Busfield, a graduate assistant is preparing a dissertation on dialogue for his degree "It's the dialogue in the scripts that seems to baffle the students It's one of the hardest things to write Even professional radio writers have this difficulty."

Busfield has sold many scripts to individual radio stations and came in third in the Elaine Carrington radio script contest for the United States. His play, "The White Lawn" is currently being produced in high schools. One school, Coral Gables High, sent him a letter of congratulations for bringing them an award in a Drama contest where "The White Lawn" was entered.

"Students in my radio classes, I believe are just about as talented as anywhere else in the country. Maybe they're a little more talented"

DAVID FACING GOLIETH! Last Saturday night the West Campus Gym of Florida State University was the scene of a gruelling battle with the touring ex-collegians of Fort Jackson and the "green" boys of Florida State. "Green" because the Seminoles were forced to play without the aid of three of their regular starters. The boys of FSU deserve every word of praise found in the dictionary as they went into the game fifteen point underdogs, but played point for point ball till late in the 4th quarter when, with four minutes left to go, the ex-collegians pulled away to edge the Indians by 8 points.

It seemed like David (FSU) facing Golieth (Ft. Jackson) for the Jacksonites sport such former collegiate stars as Georgia's Zippy Mororco, Bob Terril, N. C. State's captain of last year and FSU's own Bob Hartman, who also coaches the team with the assistance of Terril.

NINETY POINT AVERAGE SPOILED. The men from Ft Jackson, prior to the FSU game, proudly displayed a ninety point average per game over their foes, twice going over the one-hundred mark We held them to a mere 79-71 win.

BURST, POTENTIAL STAR? Tommy Burst, a high school sensation from Batesville, Indiana, came into his own Saturday night as he proved to be a spark plug in the Indian offense by dunking eighteen points through the hoops to share billing with Artie Artmeier, who also connected with eighteen points. Artmeier also starred on defense.

The playing of Hammering Ham Wernke goes without saying. He was a constant threat to steal the ball, he led his club with twenty-one points and set up a good many more buckets with his great ball-handling.

ONE LAST WORD about the game — Gary Wold and Reeves, a senior, both of whom played in place of the injured Rick Benson were admirable in their control of the backboards and Delahan's hard, fast drives contributed much to the great showing of the Seminoles.

TOP PLAYER IN STATE! Bobby Fiveash sure must have been a good boy this year, for Santa's been working overtime. The greatest surprise from the jolly little fat man from up North came wrapped in the form of "Robert Fiveash, Top Player in the State." In our opinion, this couldn't have happened to a more deserving guy. Congratulations Bobby!

Fighting off a late scoring threat by the Georgia State Teachers, the Seminoles paced by Ham Wernke, went on to win their second straight game of the early season last Friday night at the West campus gym 66-58.

Getting to a fast start, the fighting Seminole five built up a 14-lead with three minutes remaining in the first quarter, the teachers seemingly lacking a scoring punch, sent in five freshmen who together scored five points as the first quarter ended with the Seminoles ahead 18-6.

IN THE SECOND quarter the Seminoles went on a tremendous scoring spree and with only two minutes remaining in the first half, led the hapless Teachers by twenty-five points. Before intermission, the Teachers managed to rip four points in, and the score at halftime ended 37-16.

Ham Wernke, brilliant set shot artist and Jim Oler, sophomore sensation, paced the Seminoles in the first half. Wernke sunk 12 points, as Oler followed with ten.

J. B. SEARCE, Georgia's coach, had his boys ready to go in the second half—and how! Led by Chester Webb, the Professor's agile sophomore center, the once hapless teachers scored 25 points to Florida State's 14. The third period ended 51-41, still in favor of a stunned Seminole team.

Free throws missed—Webb 0, Warren 3, Oler 3, Artmeier 1, Gordon 1, Benson 1, Wernke 1.

Jerry Westhafer, 6'4" junior forward, came in before the third quarter ended. His three buckets early in the fourth quarter helped the Seminoles match the Teachers point for point. With only one minute and ten seconds remaining in the game the Seminole quintet went into an effective freeze, and the final score showed FSU winning by an eight point margin, 66-58.

WERNKE LED the FSU scoring with a booming 17 points, while Benson and Oler accounted for 13 apiece. The outstanding player of the contest was no doubt the spark of the Teachers' squad, Chester Webb, who scored a very effective 17 points. Fifteen of those came in the last half during the Teachers' desperate offensive drive.

FORT JACKSON 79, FSU 71

Playing their best game of the season the Seminoles of Florida State matched the ex-collegiate team, Fort Jackson Golden Arrows until the last three minutes when the Jackson team pulled away to win 79-71 in a truly hard fought game at the West Campus gym last Saturday night.

WITH ONLY two of the regular starters, the Seminoles had very reliable Gary Wold 6-7 sophomore at center, Tom Dellahan 6-1 sophomore at the forward, Wernke and Artmeier at guard and forward respectively

The undefeated Golden Arrows were worried all through the game, and in the last quarter the score was 69-66 in the Seminoles' favor, but Hugh Shuttleworth, ex-scoring ace for Muskingum College calmed the threat with two straight field goals.

ALL THROUGH the game the Seminoles threatened. At the end of the first quarter they trailed 23-20, and at the half 44-35 The third quarter the fighting Seminoles notted the score 59-59.

One of the highlights of the game ex-FSU star in 1951, Bob Hartman was the Golden Arrows' coach, who also played and scored seven ponits

HAM WERNKE was the highest scorer of the game with 21 points. Ham has averaged 21 points in three games. Fort Jackson's high scorer was Curt Barclay 6-3 forward from the University of Oregon. Tom Burst hit for 18 and Dick Artmeier sunk 6 field goals and 6 free throws for 18 points.

13-0 Win Seen By Theta Chi's In Charity Bowl

By KEN KINGERY
Asst. Sports Editor

The crafty Theta Chi's rallied in the first and third quarter to battle a hard fighting Lambda Chi team to a decisive 13-0 victory, last Saturday afternoon at Doak S. Campbell Stadium.

KAY KINDERD got the Theta Chi's moving as he made a beautiful run back with the initial kick-off to their 45 yard line. Wally Higginbottom star passer for the Theta Chi's, then faded back and hit Ralph Blynn for the first Theta Chi TD.

In the second quarter the Lambda Chi's stiffened their defense and stopped a long drive on their one yard line

IN THE THIRD QUARTER, with the combined efforts of Bob Scarbough, Jim Trater and Gary Ashley, the ball rested on the Lambda Chi's 10 yard stripe. This was the longest drive of the game and was climaxed by a sweeping end run by fullback Kay Kindred for the second Theta Chi touchdown making it 12-0. Higginbottom passed to LaVern Williams for the extra point add to the Lambda Chi's misery—13-0.

Fred Mansfield and Don Hassferder starred for the Lambda Chi throughout the game.

ANYONE WHO MISSED this game really missed a bang-up football game The proceeds went to the Campus Chest.

Gym Team Meets Syracuse University Reveals Schedule

Florida State University's National AAU Champion gymnastics team swings into action here Thursday night when they meet the powerful Syracuse University team.

The first of four home meets for Coach Hartley Prices' charges, Thursday's affair may well afford a preview of this year's national collegiate meet.

THE NEW YORKERS, a perennial contender for national honors, placed third in last year's NCAA meet while FSU finished fifth. However, Syracuse has five of the six men that competed in that meet back

Workhorses of the Syracuse team are Co-captains John Barkal and Ferdie Fournies. Barkal copped second place in the Eastern all-around and an eighth place in the NCAA last season. Fournies, a sixth-place finisher in the NCAA flying rings event, also excels in the side horse and rope climb.

Another threat is Corky Sebbe, NCAA and Eastern, tumbling champion. He was undefeated in collegiate competition last year.

PRICE, who has directed the Seminoles to four national championships in three years, will band on such tested performers as Co-captains Don Holder, and Pat Signorelli, Jack Miles, Larry Weston, Gill Koslow and Joe Taylor for most of his team's points.

Holder was a member of the United States Olympic team in 1952 and last year won the NCAA club event. Miles is a former AAU flying rings champion.

THURSDAY'S MEET will be the Seminoles last until Jan. 2, when they play host to the University of Minnesota.

Students will be admitted free to Thursdays meet upon presentation of an FSU ID card at the entrance of the gymnasium.

OTHER MEETS scheduled for this year are as follows.

Sat., Dec. 26 Eastern Invitational at Jersey City, N J.

Sat., Jan. 2 University of Minnesota at Tallahassee.

Sat., Feb. 6 Georgia Tech at Atlanta, Ga.

Carothers Appoints Committee On Library Improvements

A move to bring the students of Florida State University closer to the library and its functions has prompted President of the FSU Student Body Milton Carothers to appoint a Student Library Committee.

Cooperating with Dr. Kilpatrick, Library head, the committee will be designed to make and suggest improvements to conform more to student needs here. Carothers said yesterday. A suggestion box has already been installed in the Library foyer to receive suggestions and requests for new books and newspapers not currently carried in the racks.

COMMENTING ON the improvement suggestions, Dr. Kilpatrick said, "The committee also welcomes constructive comments on its functions either in this box or to any member of tha committee."

Chairman of the Library Committee Evelyn Frederickson said today that it contains a representativs from each area of students hare. Men's dormitories are represented by Roy Chapman; women's residence halls by Margaret Neller; fraternities, John Tippin; sororities, Nancy Smith, and town students by Calvin Hasbrouck.

Swimmers Win Opening Meet With Sailors

F.S.U.'s swimming Seminoles opened their 1953-54 season with a rousing victory over a Jacksonville Navy team last Saturday afternoon in the East Campus pool. The final score read F.S.U.—60, Jacksonville Navy—21.

IT WAS A FINE start for Coach "Bim" Stults' eighteen man squad, which faces a rugged 11 dual-meet schedule in the next three months. High point man for F.S.U., and the meet, was Bob Vaclavek who had 10 points.

Other outstanding swimmers and high point winners for F.S.U. were Steve Bailey, Dick Rhoton, Joel Lurie, and Jim Julian.

THE F.S.U. TEAM will face a strong University of Georgia team on Thursday, January 14th. The Georgia Bulldogs placed second in the S.E.C. last year, and they were the only team which beat F.S.U. last season. The defeat was later avenged when F.S.U. beat the Bulldogs 46-38 up at Athens, Ga.

Reid Patterson will be swimming for Georgia again this season. This outstanding swimmer won the N.C.A.A., N.A.A.U., and S.E.C. 100 yard free style events last year. He also won the 150 yard Junior National A.A.U backstroke event and won the S.E.C. 50 yard free style event. Georgia's medley relay team also was tops in the S.E.C and they set a new conference record.

ALL in all the Georgia-F.S.U. meet stacks up to be one of the toughest and most interesting dual meets of the year.

Marching Chiefs See Band Show Movies

Over 90 members of the "Marching Chiefs" turned out Wednesday night to see the movies taken at half-time of their Alma Matera 1953 football games.

During the summer letters were sent to students interested in playing in the "Marching Chiefs," and on Sept 9, over 100 students showed up to begin practice for the season's band shows The band soon grew until it was 121 strong with 20 alternates ready to take the place of any marching member at a practice or half-time show.

ON SEPT. 25, at 7:45 the "Marching Chiefs" went on the field in Miami's Orange Bowl to give the before game show, a new tradition started at F.S.U. by Manley R. Whitcomb, band director.

For 12 weeks the 121 members met together Monday through Friday for a two hour drill on their practice field across from the Student Center, Car-packed spectators could be seen every day for two months packing the patch of turf, bordering the "Chiefs'" practice field.

MISSISSIPPI SOUTHERN at Hattiesburg was next on the "Marching Chiefs" list. For many years this college's band has been called "The Pride of the South," but several band members and friends of that college said, "After seeing the 'Marching Chiefs' in action we are going to have to change our band's title to 'The pride of Mississippi'."

After each band performance letters were sent to Mr. Whitcomb and also to President Campbell praising the "Chiefs'" performances. These letters cama from dormitories, signed by many students, faculty, friends of the University, and many people in other cities where the band performed.

FRIENDS OF THE BAND who followed at their half-time shows will remember formations like 'the doggie in the window,' 'the marching soldier,' 'the flying airplane,' 'beating hearts,' 'the syncopated clock,' and the many variations on the letters "F.S.U."

The "Marching Chief" are not through for the year. They are now practicing in two groups, symphonic and concert band, Both will play concerts this semester and next spring The groups will also play at all the home basketball games.

Bill Dentzer Writes First Of Series About Student Conference In Istanbul

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of four articles on the Fourth International Student conference, to be held in Istanbul, Turkey, in January. The writer, William T. Dentzer, was president of the United States National Student Association during 1951-52 and last year worked in Leiden, Netherlands, in the office of the Coordinating Secretariat of National Unions of Students, an international organization. He is now studying law at Yale university.)

By WILLIAM T. DENTZER

Shortly after New Year's Day, from January 5-12, representatives of National Unions of Students from Europe, Asia, Africa, the Middle East and the Americas will come together in Istanbul, Turkey, for what promises to be the largest representative international student gathering ever to take place

Of what interest and importance is this meeting to American college students

UNITED STATES students generally are not aware that students in other nations especially in the more under-developed areas, play a significant role in the national lives of their respective countries While young Americans have become used to being regarded as immature and presently incapable of intelligent action at a responsible level, university students in foreign lands are causing trouble for shaky government cabinets, stabilizing young nations, and leading the surging movement for political and economic independence.

Some years ago, Bolivia students brought a new president to office by hanging the old one from a lamp post. In more than one Arab country, students have caused old cabinets to fall and potential cabinets never to reach confirmation. In more than one Asian country, June graduates of law schools have been judges by September, and cabinet ministers have attended the inaugurations of new student body presidents

IN AFRICA, students are in the vanguard of movements toward national independence, and these student leaders of today will be the national leaders of a soon-to-dawn tomorrow. Even in Europe, representatives of National Unions of Students regularly badger ministers of education with demands of the national student population.

It seems trite and unnecessary to point out that more fortunate students in further developed areas of the world should be interested in knowing the problems of students in less materially advanced areas; more than that, they should be concerned with assisting them in the solution of these problems. Now, more than ever, it is realized that what affects "them" affects "us" also, that their enigmas have and will continue to have implications in our own lives, and that personal relationships of today can form the basis for valuable international friendships tomorrow.

THE COMINFORM certainly has realizezd the importance of students and their powerful influence in great areas of the world. The Communist-dominated International Union of Students and other Soviet-directed organizations have concentrated heavily on attracting young intellectuals of all countries to their banners. Naturally, their principal focus of money and men has been the underdeveloped areas.

The way to counteract the bad faith spread by Soviet agents and more important, to assist as free agents in resolving the problems faced in these areas, is certainly not to let both the Communists and the problems gain ground by default. To do nothing is to do more than that. It is to retreat from positive responsibility. The good faith of American students will be proved only by working together with students from many countries in the common bonds and for the common aspirations we share with them as young people—the free development of the educational community and the individuals who comprise it, the widening of international understanding and good will, and the promotion of conditions where men and nations can live with freedom and dignity in a world at peace

THIS IS the significance of the January meeting in Istanbul—the Fourth International Student conference of National Unions of Students—and of the projects to be discussed there by Europeans, Asians and Africans, Arabs and Americans.

(The three remaining articles in this series will trace the origin of the International Student conference, examine the issues to be taken up at the forthcoming conference, and analyze the problems of the United States National Student association delegation to Istanbul as they speak for American college students).

Safety Group Asks Caution in Driving

Youth Safety Council of Florida said today everyone except death takes a holiday at Christmas.

Urging safe driving over the holidays, Youth Council continued, death is right in there looking for characters whose actions show they apparently don't care to live much longer"

The Council said there will probably be a "bumper crop" of victims this year They included such examples as Christmas-present-loaded pedestrians in the streets, drivers who "just can't adjust speeds to holiday conditions, and those who "drink and drive themselves to death with one too many toasts."

"Disappoint the Grim Reaper" the Youth Council said "Let him know civilized people can handle themselves safely" The added people can help keep the season happy by avoiding serious traffic accidents.

"Be sensible about the business of driving" "Take special precautions. Don't let Death take your holiday"

EDUCATION DEFINITION

We have been sitting around this office, man and boy, for over five years, and we finally decided that education is a process of deadening one end in order to liven up the other —Cavalier Daily, University of Virginia.

Boughton Disappointed In Results Of Miami Beach Art Exhibit

The oil paintings of Mr William Boughton, assistant professor in the FSU Department of Art, were recently exhibited at the Miami Beach Art Center

Prof. Boughton said that the critics there were not highly enthusiastic over what they saw in his work According to him, they did not seem to understand that he was trying to explore new techniques in art The critics disliked the subjects because some of them were ugly His comment to that was, "I paint the things that I see in the world in which I live, and I think that I am a little too honest for the critics." He explained that most subjects of the famous old painters were ugly too, because they were honest painters

LAST SUMMER Prof. Boughton traveled in Europe and lived in the homes of such old masters as El Greco and Rembrandt. He tried to live exactly as the old painters had lived By walking the same streets, eating at the same tables, and studying their work intensively, he returned to the U. S. with new ideas about painting.

"Many of the modern painters are simply imitating great works, and to someone who knows, their work becomes rather boring." Prof. Boughton said He said that he paints things as he sees them and not as people want them because he feels that his art work is one thing in which he can be honest and free without conforming to the customs of our day

PROF. BOUGHTON works with most of the graphic arts media. They are the works from which prints can be made, including wood cutting, engraving, silk screen painting, and lithography. However, his oil paintings represent his latest approach, resulting from the European study.

In his new style, Prof. Boughton has attempted to achieve a double effect. This effect is achieved by painting and then glazing over the top with thin paint in the old painters' style

THE NEW STYLE is also characterized by mixing the paint as if it were house paint and then dabbing it on. According to Boughton, this double effect that the critics seemed to misunderstand is probably what puzzled them

While his work was not highly praised by the critics, Boughton feels that this is no indication that his work will not receive recognition in later years. History tells us that many artists who were unpopular during their lifetime are today listed among the great masters.

ALTHOUGH everyone likes to have his work praised. Boughton said that when he is honest with himself, he likes to have his work criticized. He feels that this will enable him to have a better chance of becoming a great artist.

The Record I'm most proud of—

Chesterfield is the largest-selling cigarette in America's colleges for the FIFTH straight Year

Again, in 1953, they've made a survey audit of actual sales in more than 800 co-ops and campus stores from coast to coast. And again, Chesterfield tops 'em all.

Only Chesterfield gives you proof of highest quality – low nicotine. Proof that comes from actual "tobacco tests" in which all six leading brands were chemically analyzed.
